SOME NEW YEAR REFLECTIONS.

This issue of the Advocate bears the date of January 1, 1914. The earth has again swung around its orbit, measuring off another segment of time and, of course, another fragment of our lives. By that much our stay in this beautiful world which God has given us has been shortened, and with the passing days has gone a portion of our strength and capacity for achievement. Man is not like a storage battery whose accumulated power can be kept while standing still—he is rather like the hourglass, the sands of which are ever running out until all is gone and it stands depleted. One in youth has possibilities for service which, if allowed to go to waste, can never subsequently be recovered. By the decree of the Almighty, every man is allotted a period in which he may exercise himself to achieve the high ends of human destiny; but that time is ever going, and well may he make the most of it! To a thinking individual the New Year is an occasion for serious reflection. He realizes that another chapter in his life history has been irreversibly written, and that the record that he must finally meet in the judgment is being filled out all too swiftly. The thought of our weighty obligations and our accountability to Him from whom nothing can be hidden, is a tremendous one. It is, indeed, a solemn thing to live; and it is because this is true, that it is a serious thing to die. There is no greater betrayal of a sacred trust conceivable than for a human being to meet unworthily the mighty responsibilities placed upon him by his Creator.

1. The backward glance on this opening day of the New Year—what does it show? Idle hours—spasmodic efforts, with little accomplished for the Master—a neglected Bible—the place of secret prayer too seldom visited—a deserted family altar—a pew in the church too often vacant—the unsaved in your community unspoken to—some kindly deeds, but far more that were selfish? Are these some of the things that rise into view as you retrospect the days and weeks and months of the Old Year? If so, the vision should tend to arouse you from your indifference and bestir you to greater fidelity in Christian service. An old and well established mercantile firm in New Orleans in extending to its customers the greetings of the season, declared it to be its purpose to make it the occasion for trying “to get a better grip on things.” Is not this resolve a commendable one—one that every follower of Christ might profitably appropriate and make his own? Surely, it would greatly help both us and the Master's cause if we would grasp more firmly our religious duties and begin more faithfully and zealously to perform them.

2. But it is not only backward that we need to look—the eye should also at this time of reckoning be turned inward. What do we find in our hearts as we front the New Year? Are they free from selfishness, and pride, and envy, and ill-will?

If not, this should be to us a day of penitence and of prayer for forgiveness and cleansing? What we should have within is faith, virtue, knowledge, temperance, patience, godliness, brotherly kindness, and love. “For,” said St. Peter, “if these things be in you and abound, they make you that ye shall be neither barren nor unfruitful in the knowledge of our Lord Jesus Christ. But he that lacketh these things is blind and cannot see afar off, and hath forgotten that he was purged from his old sins.” Happy the individual whose consciousness discloses unmistakably the evidences that Jesus lives and reigns in his soul! Such an one, so long as that regnancy continues, need fear nothing that the coming years can bring. The universal sovereignty of Him whom he has enthroned in the center of his being is a certain guarantee that all things shall work together for his good.

But suppose one is without this assurance of the indwelling Christ? Then he should immediately seek it. It is the privilege of all to have this, and none should dare go forward into the opening year without it. It is perilous to do so. How luminous in this connection are the following words spoken by our Lord himself and recorded in the fourteenth chapter of the Gospel according to St. John: “He that hath my commandments and keepeth them, he it is that loveth me; and he that loveth me shall be loved of my Father, and I will love him and will manifest myself to him. Judas saith unto him, not Iscariot, Lord, how is it that thou wilt manifest thyself unto us, and not unto the world? Jesus answered and said to him, If a man love me he will keep my words; and my Father will love him, and we will come unto him and make our abode with him.” There is but one explanation of continued uncertainty upon the part of any person as to his relationship to Christ, and that is, that he is not keeping the Master's commandments.

3. But there is yet another direction in which it may be helpful to look on this New Year's day, and that is, upward. It is stated that Humbolt, the great traveler, while journeying in South America, once came within the zone of a tremendous earthquake. All was in commotion, and the question was, Where should he fly for safety? One in describing the scene, says: “He looked to the trees, but they were falling; he looked to the houses, but they were crumbling; he looked to the mountains, but they were reeling like drunken men; he looked to the sea, but lo! it had fled—ships a moment before riding upon its surface were rocking in the sand. Almost in despair, he looked up, and observed that the eternal heavens, and they alone, were calm and unshaken.” So, in the world to-day we are in the midst of struggles, confusion, and manifold perplexities. We often see wrong in the ascendancy, and perhaps are almost driven to the conclusion that corruption wins more than honesty. We need the steady power of the upward glance—to behold God seated upon his eternal throne, holding in his hands the reins of the universe. This vision gives assurance that, though temporarily they may be obscured, truth and right must finally prevail, and that he who stands resolutely for them need not fear the final outcome.

The upward glance also brings into view the glorious reward of the faithful. It is well occasionally to fasten the attention upon this. The contemplation of it has ever been a source of strength and inspiration to the disciples of Jesus. Of our Lord himself while he tabernacled in the flesh, it is written, “For the joy that was set before him, he endured the cross, despising the shame.” With what the future holds in store for him, the Christian, no matter what earthly sacrifice and suffering it may involve, can afford to “war a good warfare,” to be “a hero in the strife.” Thoroughly dependable is He who has pledged us a rich recompense, and never will he fall us.

“Tis God's all-animating voice
That calls thee from on high;
Tis his own hand presents the prize
To thine aspiring eye.”

Thrice blessed is he who at this thought-provoking season can look back over the past year and say, “I have kept the faith;” who can look within his own heart and say, “I know whom I have believed;” and who can lift his eyes aloft and say in the accents of a triumphant faith, “There is laid up for me a crown of righteousness which the Lord, the righteous judge, shall give me at that day.” If we cannot do this now, let us earnestly strive so to live that we shall be able to do so twelve months hence, if God in his infinite goodness and mercy shall spare us so long.

RECUPERATING ON THE COAST.

Worn with months of arduous work and also weakened by a late illness, President Woodrow Wilson decided a few days ago to spend three weeks on the Mississippi Coast, resting and recuperating. Accompanied by his family, he reached Pass Christian on Christmas morning, where arrangements had been made for the distinguished visitors at the Herndon home, a beautiful Southern residence. Since the President's arrival, the weather has been the most unpleasant that we have seen in this section in years, but notwithstanding, he seems to have been enjoying the golf links and automobiling along the coast. The ladies of the party, in addition to using motor cars, have been engaging in horseback riding. The people of this section are delighted to have Mr. Wilson and his family among them and many kindly greetings have been sent them.

The President worshiped at the Presbyterian Church in Gulfport last Sunday, which was his 57th birthday, and heard a practical sermon by the pastor, Dr. H. A. Jones, from the text, “So then every one of us shall give an account of himself to God.” (Romans 14:12.) Miss Eleanor Wilson spent last Sabbath with friends in New Orleans, and attended services at the Napoleon Avenue Presbyterian Church at 11 a. m. It is gratifying to know that the Nation's Chief Magistrate and the members of his household are churchgoers. But why shouldn't they be? They stand as much in need of the benefits which the Church alone can supply as the humblest and poorest family in all the land.

THE CHRISTIAN HERALD.

Ye Christian heralds, go proclaim Salvation through Immanuel's name;
To distant climes the tidings bear,
And plant the Rose of Sharon there.

He'll shield you with a wall of fire,
With flaming zeal your breast inspire,
Bid raging winds their fury cease,
And hush the tempest into peace.

And when our labors all are o'er,
Then we shall meet to part no more;
Meet, with the blood-bought throng to fall,
And crown our Jesus Lord of all.

A NEW YEAR'S SERMON.

By Thomas H. Stockton, D. D.

"What shall I render unto the Lord for all his benefits toward me? I will take the cup of salvation, and call upon the name of the Lord. I will pay my vows unto the Lord now in the presence of all his people."—Psalm 116, 12-14.

I saw the Old Year. He was lying on a bed of gathered leaves. The grass around was brown and withered, save here and there, close by the edge of the snow patches, where it retained somewhat of its greenness. The turf was almost as hard as the pike—the smooth and stony pike, that glared in the lamplight, and rung under the rattling iron hoofs and wheels of the passing mail. Of course, it was a secluded spot—away from the tide, with its ships and steamboats, and away from the wire, the rail, and the whistle. The spring gurgled out from the hillside, but was almost hidden by the long icicles that hung thick from the moss line, on the front of the over-jutting rock, down to the very basin of the fountain; nor was it seen long, for, as it came out between the icicles, it slipped under the ice that covered its channel, and again found itself almost as much in the dark as it was before it escaped from the inner crevices of the hill. Over the rude couch of the dying Year the trees spread their leafless, snow-sprinkled branches, as though they would gladly have sheltered him if they could; and the breeze moaned by his side as tenderly as though a woman's sympathy had touched it into piteous sweetness. The air was very keen and very clear, and the barking of the distant watchdog, startled by that passing mail, sounded loud and fierce, as if on the very border of the glen.

That glen was thronged with an almost innumerable spiritual multitude. The four seasons were there. The twelve months were there. The fifty-two weeks were there. Three hundred and sixty-five days were there. Three hundred and sixty-five nights were there. Nearly nine thousand hours were there. More than half a million minutes were there. And more than thirty millions of seconds were there. The seasons were distinguished by the varied color of their robes—white, green, yellow, and purple. The months had a fillet of silver network on every forehead, adorned with a crescent of shining pearl. The weeks wore a seven-hued girdle, with a brilliant clasp, adorned with an altar, olive branch, and trumpet. The days bore an image of the sun on every breastplate. The nights held a star, downward, on the head of every scepter. The hours, minutes and seconds carried each a miniature diamond chronometer—those of the hours, with an hour hand alone; those of the minutes, with a minute hand alone; and those of the seconds, with a second hand alone.

The pale patriarch, thus surrounded by his immense host of descendants, summoned me into his immediate presence. I passed through the parted lines and knelt by his humble pallet. "I have called you hither," said he, "not for your own sake alone, but for the sake of the Church and congregation to which you minister. I have called you to commit to you, for them, my last and most solemn message. I am only one of the six thousand princes of time. Time is the son of eternity. Eternity is the son of God. Next to His being the Father of the Lord Jesus Christ, the most glorious title the Almighty bears is that of the Father of eternity! From eternity down to the youngest second, all ages and years and seasons and months are His messengers, intrusted with His richest benefits, and commissioned to bear them to man. My mission, like that of my predecessors, is ended. Before their departure they reminded you of God's goodness. Before my departure I remind you of the same. My office has been one of ceaseless love. If you marvel that I am encompassed by such a host, I have only to inform you that they have been my faithful assistants, as well as my affectionate children, and that the reason of their multitude is the multitude of God's benefits to man. A smaller number would fail to distribute His abounding mercies. There is not one in all this array who has not been thus employed.

"Ere I die," he continued, "I will question them in your presence, and you must report their testimony to the worshipers in the sanctuary:

"Seasons, what have you given to man?" And the four Seasons answered, "God's benefits!"

"Months, what have you given to man?" And the twelve Months answered, "God's benefits!"

"Weeks, what have you given to man?" And the fifty-two Weeks answered, "God's benefits!"

"Days, what have you given to man?" And the three hundred and sixty-five Days answered, "God's benefits!"

"Nights, what have you given to man?" And the three hundred and sixty-five Nights answered, "God's benefits!"

"Hours, what have you given to man?" And the nearly nine thousand Hours answered, "God's benefits!"

"Minutes, what have you given to man?" And the half million Minutes answered, "God's benefits!"

"Seconds, what have you given to man?" And the thirty millions of Seconds answered, "God's benefits!"

"Servant of God," said he, "minister of Christ, you have heard their uniform answers. With my own fast-falling breath I confirm their truth. I have superintended their toll. I know that our whole mission has been occupied in the distribution of 'God's benefits.' Return to your charge! The chapel will be open and illumined. The people will be assembled. You anticipate the solemnity of the occasion, and honestly and earnestly desire their profit. Tell them that you have seen the dying Year. Tell them that they themselves must die. Tell them that when their own death time shall come the world will be withered around them, as it is now withered around me. Tell them that they, too, must lie down on the dead leaves of their summer prosperity. Tell them that every garden of pleasure will then be as desolate to them as are now these fields of nature to me—the verdure all wasted, the trees all stripped, the streams all frozen, and the air crisp and cold and still. Tell them that they will then have but one hope, as I have now. See!" said the weary and dying pilgrim, lifting his kindling eye and pointing, with thin finger, to the heavens: "see! though the sphere of my labor on earth is all lighted and drear, no change is there! or if, in that high place of reward, there be any change, it is only for the better. Behold! the blue skies are bluer now, and the bright stars brighter now than they were in midsummer. Nothing withers or declines there! There is the inheritance which is incorruptible and undefiled, and that fadeth not away! That is my hope; that is their hope; that is our only hope. But, thank God, it is a sufficient and glorious hope!"

"Go and tell them that 'God's benefits' begin with life, but do not end with death; that they commence on earth only to multiply in heaven; and that, while they enrich us in time, they will endure throughout eternity! Go and tell them that the Old Year, looking back from his pallet of dry leaves to scenes of freshest beauty and bliss, and looking up from this wasted world to a universe of imperishable grace, glory and rapture, breathes out his last prayer in their behalf, that everyone among them may immediately and solemnly consider the great and pressing question, asking, with the psalmist, 'What shall I render unto the Lord for all His benefits toward me?' and answering with the psalmist also, 'I will take the cup of salvation, and call upon the name of the Lord. I will pay my vows unto the Lord now in the presence of all His people!'"

So ending, the dying Year drew from his bosom a many-leaved scroll and put it in my hand, saying, "Take this scroll. You will find it composed of hundreds of messages, severally addressed to your hearers. Distribute them, as a final token of my regard for them. But, see!" said the fainting Old Year, kindling again as he spoke, "see! they come!"

As he spoke a pale, long-drawn light, as though the Milky Way were settling earthward, descended through the thin air, and rested, like a glimmering mist, on the dusky range of the horizon hills. I rose, gazed, and drew back from the coming of one glowing with angel glory, and yet with the countenance of a younger brother of the waiting pilgrim. He stooped by the humble pallet, and the leaves and grass and snow and icicles and frosted trees and hills all glittered with a golden sheen! Behind him fairer seasons and months and weeks and days and nights and hours and minutes and seconds, in a far-gleaming perspective, dimly waved their line. I saw the New Year kiss the Old; and the Old arose at that token and stood by his brother's side, and acknowledged him as his successor, and resigned the scepter to him and embraced him and blessed him, and bowed to his attendants, and then beckoned to his own, and ascended with them, softly and beautifully as the scintillations of the aurora, vanishing at last among the conscious and welcoming stars. The New Year and his host glanced smilingly at the quick and happy transit, and then dispersed, on errands of mercy, through all the earth, to meet again when another New Year shall hang out his signal in the sky and come to enter on his reign.

The vision has passed! And now I stand here in your midst to discharge my duty. It is as plain and simple as it is solemn. I unroll these messages for distribution, and examine them, and find them duly directed. Not a person is present to whom one is not sent. They are sent to both sexes, to all ages, and to all relations, domestic and social. They are sent to daughters, sisters, wives, mothers, and a few even to grandmothers. They are sent to sons, brothers, husbands, fathers, and a few even to grandfathers. They are sent to servants, apprentices, laborers, masters, mistresses, and employers; to mechanics, manufacturers, artists, merchants and bankers; to students, teachers, physicians, lawyers and officers of the general and State governments; to preachers, pewholders, church members, church officers and Christians of every grade and name. In a word, they are sent to all classes and to every individual in every class.

On looking at them more closely I perceive that, although written within and without, the two sides are in different languages. It is only the language on one side that I can read. This informs me, however, that the characters on the other side will be perfectly intelligible to the person for whom the message is intended. It is the appeal of the Spirit of God to everyone's conscience; and that Spirit, having inspired the Old Year to make the record, will be sure to interpret it as soon as conscience shall look upon it.

On the side that I can read I see at the top of every record this inscription:

The Lord's Benefits Toward Me.

Under this inscription I find a long enumeration of such items as the following—some of them on every message, and others divided among various messages:

1. My Bodily Benefits. The continuance of life; health and strength; preservation from accident, violence, and disease; freedom from pain; my members all sound; my organs of sense, speech and motion still vigorous in the performance of their several functions; a thousand dangers, at home and abroad, in all manner of conveyances, by land and water, escaped without harm; my chief capital and greatest physical comfort, the sense of industry, the energy that animates effort, the ready ability to labor, most mercifully kept from waste and exhaustion.

2. My Spiritual Benefits. Intellect, comprehensive and clear as ever; not only so, but more enlarged, more enlightened, and more thoroughly disciplined. Perception, reason, judgment, memory, and imagination all true to their high trusts. The sentiments, too, still exquisitely sensitive; gratitude, honor, courage, justice, mercy, benevolence, truthfulness, all responsive to every proper claim. The affections, too, ardent as ever, and growing more pure—love, friendship, joy, peace, and all gentle and blissful emotions. Conscience, too, still unseared, quick indeed, and tender as the apple of an eye; and, with it, the free, prompt, decisive, and indomitable will. A thousand temptations, unavoidably arising from my nature, position, and relations, and tending either to undue depression or undue excitement, all graciously restrained and prevented from doing me any essential ill.

3. My Family Benefits. (Here the records vary more. You will know how to apply their points, however, as I proceed—some suiting one family, others another.) Our new home, opened with great comfort. My bride—and a new circle of affectionate relatives with her. My groom—and a new circle of affectionate relatives with him. Every prospect as bright as heart could wish. Again, our old home, happier than ever. My wife still spared to me, and our children. My husband still spared to me, and our children. Again, various birth registers: our first child; our first daughter; our first son; our fifth child; our tenth child. And again, our threshold, safe from spoilers; our hearthstone, ever warm; our table, ever full; our wardrobe, well supplied; our roof, untouched by fire; our group of love, unbroken by bereavement; our children, fond of the week-day school, fond of the Sabbath school, and fond of the church; free from vicious habits and associations, and promising to be the stay and rejoicing of our later years. Our oldest daughter, well settled; our oldest son, well established in business; every room in our house, a closet of prayer; our family altar, still duly supplied with fresh offerings every morning and night; our whole company, always in grateful readiness to repair from the home of love to the sanctuary of piety. A blessed hope always burning in all our hearts that we shall be reunited in a yet happier home in heaven.

4. My Business Benefits. (Here, too, there is no little variation. But a few words will intimate all that is necessary. Hark!) Constant employment; nearly constant employment; increase of wages; good sales; good returns; large profits; brisk seasons; enough to live on; something laid by; relieved from many difficulties; debts gradually diminishing; times more easy; a safe and prosperous establishment; quite independent; extraordinary success; far in advance of my former compeers; nothing now to fear, unless it be the deceitful and corrupting influence of great wealth.

5. My Civil Benefits. An heir of liberty; a native of the noblest land, and a citizen under the best government on earth; a descendant of many generations of freemen, and with their purest blood still beating the pulsations of independence in my veins, like the drums of the Revolution; or an adopted citizen, unable to claim the highest birthright dignities and privileges, but with sense enough to appreciate my acquired privileges, and with spirit enough to unite with the sons of the soil in opposition to all foreign clanship, and in maintenance of genuine American principles and interests in all righteousness and peace; a sovereign, among millions of equal sovereigns; a man, as fully developed as a mere civilian can be, exulting that there is no thrall on my own flesh or spirit, determined that there never shall be any, and praying God with all my heart that, in his own good time and way—to my poor thought the sooner the better—all men may enjoy the same glorious distinction.

6. My Ecclesiastical Benefits. Connected with a free Church, corresponding with our free State; no imposed pastor; no legal tax; no tithes; no dissenters' reproach; a free Bible; a free pulpit; a free baptismal font; a free communion table; a free marriage altar; a free place of sepulture; a free officary; a free membership; a free congregation—all free as the gospel itself, or, if in any respect not yet perfectly free, not quite practically free, still easily made so, practically as well as theoretically, and which ought to be made so, and must be made so. Means of grace, all blessed in my experience. Again, a penitent; a believer; a baptized believer; a communicant believer; a fellow-citizen with the saints, and of the household of God; a child of God; an heir of God; a joint heir with Christ; a lover of the Bible; a lover of prayer; a lover of public worship; a lover of social worship; the fear of death all gone; holiness daily increasing; my hope of heaven in full bloom.

7. My Disciplinary Benefits. Occasional chastenings, for the improvement of my character and destiny; sick for a week; sick for a month; health generally much impaired; business falling off; unjustly and unkindly reproached; injured by some in whom I most confided; difficulties multiplied by the thoughtlessness and carelessness of those who should have diminished them. Again, lost a friend; or lost my father; or lost my mother; my wife; my husband; my child; my brother; my sister. But sickness of my body sanctified to the salvation of my soul. Declension of business followed by increasing confidence in Providence. Man's reproaches make more precious God's approbation. Treachery of friends makes more delightful God's fidelity. Carelessness of friends makes more impressive God's watchful tenderness. Bereavement, notwithstanding all its anguish, has been overruled in mercy to my spiritual advantage. My heart has been carried to heaven by those who have gone before. All things, in fulfillment of Scripture, have worked together for my good.

But further detail is needless! Of these, and similar items, the whole record is composed; that is, the record on the side which I can read. The other side, as already stated, is in a language which none can read for you. It is enough to know that it is a continued and special enumeration of "God's benefits" toward each one of you in particular. I might imagine the meaning in some cases, but will not attempt to do so. You would feel, perhaps, as though I were intruding upon a forbidden sphere. It is a sacred appeal by the Spirit of God, in the sight and hearing of God, to your own consciences. The Lord will assist you in reading it, and notice your thoughts and feelings and purposes while you read it.

But this I may say: Even in view of the benefits already enumerated, how great is the solemnity of this appeal! Think of them again: Your bodily benefits, spiritual benefits, family benefits, business benefits, civil benefits, ecclesiastical benefits, and disciplinary benefits. And now, in remembrance of all, let the inquiry be announced again, and let conscience be called upon to respond to it. I have no doubt it will be a more common response than is generally heard, even during the reading of prayers in some of our sister Churches. I have often felt the solemnity of that; and surely, to say the least of it, this should be no less solemn. Hark!

"What shall I render?" "What shall I render?"

"Unto the Lord?" "Unto the Lord?"

"For all His benefits?" "For all His benefits?"

"Toward me?" "Toward me?"

Is there one person present whose conscience does not thus apply the subject? Is there one who does not feel that it involves the most imperative and pressing obligations? Surely not.

What then? Are you ready to say: Tell us what to do, and, if the message appears to come from God, we will obey it? I cannot do this with the particularity which some might desire. I repeat that the whole matter is an appeal to the conscience of every one among us. You are to answer the question for yourselves. I would not dare to assume the responsibility of a full and minute reply. God forbid that I should ever usurp, or even accept, the office of an absolute and infallible spiritual director. I can only declare, according to my purest honor and clearest intelligence, as a minister of the Gospel of our Lord and Saviour Jesus Christ, the general principles of truth and duty which I believe should govern every one of you in the case before us. These principles are concentrated in the accompanying statement of the psalmist. Imitate him! Hark!—

"I will take the cup of salvation, and call upon the name of the Lord."

See that! There is the first principle. Personal salvation! Devote yourselves, in commencement or in continuance, to the great work of securing your own salvation. Nothing can excuse the neglect of the duties belonging to this great work. Life is wasted, utterly wasted, except as these duties receive attention.

Notice the two points here: (1) I will take the cup of salvation; and (2), Then I will call upon the name of the Lord.

"I will take the cup of salvation." Here is the confession of sin. Here is the exercise of faith. Here is the grateful and hopeful acceptance and improvement of the appointed mediation between God and men. As a sinner, I will not dare to draw near to Infinite Holiness without an appropriate offering. Not one word of prayer or praise will I presume to breathe until I am thus prepared for it. Therefore, "I will take the cup of salvation"—the cup of wine, symbolical of the blood of sacrifice; the cup of wine, commemorating the work of atonement; the cup of wine, which reminds me of precisely the mediation I need, and on the efficacy of which I can repose with perfect confidence.

To us, as Christians, speaking still more plainly, the blood of Jesus is the true atonement; and the sacramental cup, which is now before us, is its duly ordained and most significant memorial. If, therefore, you ask me, "What shall we now do?" I answer thus: First of all, take this cup of salvation. Take the cup, drink the wine. Take even the outward sign of the atonement; but see to it, more especially, that you penitently and faithfully apply the atonement itself to your inmost heart and conscience. In a word, take proper advantage of the mediatorial sufferings and death of our Lord and Savior Jesus Christ; and then—but not till then—sinful as you are, you may acceptably approach the highest.

"I will call upon the name of the Lord." Here are the offices of prayer and praise. The psalmist was remarkable, perhaps above all men, for his ardent devotion to these duties. It is not too much to say that his prayers and his praises have become to a great extent the prayers and praises of the whole world. For twenty-eight centuries they have been constantly ascending day and night to the throne of Jehovah. In the psalm now before us he exclaims, "I love the Lord, because He hath heard my voice and my supplications. Because He hath inclined His ear unto me, therefore will I call upon Him as long as I live." Such ardor is well worthy of perpetual imitation.

Among us, as Christians, there can be no doubt of the essential connection of prayer and praise with the beginning and progress of personal salvation. Sin is pardoned, in answer to prayer; its power is broken, in answer to prayer; peace springs up, in answer to prayer; holiness increases in answer to prayer; all heaven descends, in answer to prayer; and then gratitude requires praise; love, joy, and hope all prompt the tongue to praise. Clearer views, larger views, more glorious views of the divine perfections and government, and the tendency of all things toward ultimate vindication and bliss; such views, ever accompanied, as they are, by a thousand kindling raptures, all heighten and strengthen the impulse to praise. The Bible is full of incitements to these duties. And so is Providence every day bringing occasions for both prayer and praise. If, therefore, I be further asked, What shall we do? how can I answer better than by saying, simply but earnestly, "Call upon the name of the Lord." Pray more! Praise more! Spiritual life is to be secured and perpetuated only by communion with its source. That source is in God. Having taken

"the cup of salvation," come to God without fear; come, even with "boldness;" come close to His throne, for it is now the throne of grace, the seat of mercy, and, so coming, you "may obtain mercy and find grace to help in time of need." Alas, how many, in a dying hour, have regretted the neglect of these duties! but who was ever known to deplore their performance? The Lord help us, that this new year may find us more faithful in all these connections of personal salvation.

But mark the succeeding statement also: "I will pay my vows unto the Lord now in the presence of all His people." See that! There is the second principle. Social salvation! Remember your "vows unto the Lord;" your professional obligations to His house and cause and people. Honor His house. Sustain His cause. Encourage His people. Be sympathetic and co-operative with all. Make your zeal in good works manifest and exemplary in the sight of all. So far as your means and influence extend let nothing languish in this noblest of enterprises. The neglect of the duties involved in this requirement will be almost sure to be followed by the neglect of your own best interests. Give up the cause of God, in the Church at large, and in the world at large, and you will be likely to give up your own salvation.

As Christians, Protestant Christians, evangelical Christians, independent Bible Christians, these duties, in my humble judgment, ought to press upon us exceedingly, and particularly at this juncture. Even in the days of the psalmist true religion extended its relations much more widely than seems to be generally supposed. But in these days our form of it, the highest and best development of it, Christ's own development of it, in all its New Testament purity, simplicity, and glory—why, this is the one grand, peerless interest of the world! There is scarcely a spot on earth which is not, at this very moment, mightily affected by Christianity. And now, as it always has been, and always will be, it is everywhere aggressive! It has enemies, and knows them, and expects to meet them, and is prepared to meet them, and goes forth to meet them, and is happy to meet them, and sure to conquer and destroy them. Never did the battle reach so far, or wax so hot, or bring into action such a multitude and variety of antagonisms as are now, contending against the truth. Never were the disguises of its foes so numerous, so deceptive, or so mischievous. If it be possible they will delude the very elect. Never was pure Christianity more lonely, in the great conflict, than at present. Yet never was the perception of its sovereign majesty—shining like a God through all the clouds of war—more enchanting; and never was there a sublimer heroism than that which is now summoned to follow in its train. Never, moreover, was its triumph so near, or the thought of it so dear. Looking up to the throne of the great Arbiter of the long-protracted strife, we can scarcely restrain the impatient cry, "Come, Lord Jesus! come quickly!"

Now, in this state of things, every man has more to do than attend merely to his own interests; every church has more to do than attend merely to its own interests; and every confederation of churches has more to do than attend merely to its own interests. Our "vows unto the Lord" require that we unite, to the utmost possible extent, in promoting, to the utmost possible degree, "the work of the Lord;" maintaining, at all risks, the truth of the Lord, contending "earnestly for the faith once delivered unto the saints."—New York Christian Advocate.

RUSTON DISTRICT MISSIONARY INSTITUTE.

Beginning on Wednesday night, Jan. 28 and continuing through Thursday night, Jan. 29, the Ruston District Missionary Institute for Preachers and Laymen will be held. The district leader, the church leaders of the various charges, the Sunday school superintendents, and the pastors are specially urged to be present. A suitable program will be rendered. The district secretary of the women's societies is also invited.

BRISCOE CARTER, P. E.

BEGIN THE NEW YEAR RIGHT.

In order to begin the new year right in reference to our missionary obligations, several things ought to be done at once.

1. We must plan definitely and organize thoroughly for the collection of all our assessments in full. To raise all the claims for missions and other benevolences ordered by the Conference would cost the Methodists of Louisiana about $1.70 per capita, an insignificant sum for our people to pay. I am sure we are all ashamed of the fact that we have been raising only a little more than half of this amount, and less than half of our specifically missionary claims. Our failure has been largely due to a lack of systematic planning and organization in the beginning of the year. We, the pastors and our lay leaders, are charged with the responsibility of leadership in planning and organizing. In order to help in this work the Boards of the Church have prepared a plan called "A Financial Method for Methodists," which includes a canvass early in the year of every member of the Church for the support of the local church and the Conference collections in separate pledges, which pledges are to be paid through duplex envelopes in monthly or weekly contributions. The canvass can be made by the Board of Stewards, assisted by the missionary committee, and with the advice and supervision of the pastor. With this plan worked out for us, beginning at the beginning of the year, we can raise these claims in full; and the responsibility is largely on us pastors, if we do not give this plan a thorough trial. Will you not see that this plan is undertaken within the next month?

2. Now is the time to plan for missionary work in the Sunday school. Let us begin the year by appointing a live missionary committee in each Sunday school, set apart a missionary Sunday once a month as the Discipline directs, and select the object to which our missionary offerings shall be directed. These three things the general Board is urging every pastor and Sunday school superintendent to do now. It is better for the offerings of the Sunday school to go to some special cause, than to be merged with the regular collections to place out the assessments.

3. The General Secretaries, in response to pressing needs, have set apart the week, Jan. 4-11 as a week of prayer and self denial to secure twenty new missionaries and the means to send them. This plan recognizes the underlying need for prayer as the great dynamic, and gives opportunity for a free will offering from our people, outside all regular collections, raised by special self-denial, to send out the new missionaries for whom the field is loudly crying.

4. Our own Conference Board, in order to maintain our mission work, including our growing and successful French missions, found it necessary to authorize the Conference Secretary to raise a "French Mission Special" and I earnestly ask all pastors and churches to co-operate in raising it. It has been shown in past efforts that many Sunday schools, organized classes, Leagues and other organizations will gladly take part in this special if brought to their attention. In other cases congregations and individuals will cheerfully make special offerings to this fund. Let us begin the year right by planning to do something for this special that will not interfere with our regular obligations.

These four things ought all to be attended to in the beginning of the year's work; but the greatest of these is the thorough every-member canvass in every charge to secure all our assessments in full.

Will not every pastor, lay leader, Sunday school superintendent and steward prayerfully think on these things NOW?

Will not every pastor and leader in the work of the Sunday school or League plan to do something outside of the regular assessments for the pressing needs of mission work in our own Conference?

Will not individuals all over the State make a New Year Pledge, as a special thank offering, by writing to the Conference Secretary, promising to send in a contribution on the French Mission Special during 1914?

If we will measure up to our full duty in "tithes and offerings" this year, who doubts that God will pour out upon us a great spiritual blessing?

It is worth while to meditate at the beginning of another year, whether there is any connection between the meagerness of our offerings to missions and other sacred causes, and the fact that our reports showed a shameful loss in membership. May God give us a year of great success!

Fraternaly,

W. WINANS DRAKE,
Conference Missionary Secretary.

WHAT WILL THE METHODISTS OF NORTH MISSISSIPPI DO?

The Presbyterians of Mississippi propose to raise $100,000 to strengthen and equip their educational institutions. What are the Methodists going to do? What ought we to do? Ought we not at the earliest possible time to make a whirlwind campaign, followed by a calm and persistent effort to place Millsaps and Grenada Colleges in a position to meet all the demands upon them? Without discrediting the work in the least, we are agreed that both of them need and deserve a more adequate equipment.

With every pastor wide awake to put into effect any plan that those in authority may suggest, there is no reason why $50,000 may not be raised in a very short period of time within the bounds of the North Mississippi Conference. I offer the following plan for consideration:

Leaving out the smaller and weaker appointments, there are 90 pastoral charges in the Conference paying an assessment of $600 and over. These 90 charges pay in the aggregate $53,200 to their pastors; let the $50,000 to be raised be distributed among them approximately on the basis of what each pays its preacher. The results will be about as follows: Forty-two charges, paying to the pastor from $600 to $900, would each receive as its apportionment of the $50,000 to be raised, $366.

Twenty-nine charges paying to the pastor from $1000 to $1200, would each receive as its apportionment, $555.

Fourteen charges, paying to the pastor from $1400 to $1600, would each receive an apportionment of $850.

Five charges, paying the pastor from $1800 to $2000, would each be apportioned $1095.

Summing up, we have the following results:

42 charges, each paying.....	$ 366	$15,372
29 charges, each paying.....	555	16,095
14 charges, each paying.....	850	11,900
5 charges, each paying.....	1095	5,425
Total		$48,792

—THE— Telephone Always on Guard

There is never a moment, day or night, when your Bell Telephone is not a protection.

In the busy hours of the day and the silent watches of the night, the switchboard operator is always ready to answer a call.

The telephone is as much a part of the protective system of each community as the police and fire departments.

There's always a feeling of security in the knowledge that close at hand is the means of calling aid quickly when you most need it.

More than 70,000 cities and towns are protected day and night by the Bell Telephone system; 7,500,000 Bell telephones are on guard. In thousands of rural communities it is the chief reliance in emergencies and times of danger.

Rev. Henry Trawick, a beloved member of the Alabama Conference, died in Montgomery on December 14. He was stricken with illness during the session of the Annual Conference in that city and passed away in the home of his Conference hosts, Mr. and Mrs. F. A. Flowers. Mr. Trawick had just been appointed presiding elder of the Dothan District by Bishop Hendrix. He was a graduate of the Southern University, at Greensboro, Ala., and of Vanderbilt. His remains were interred at Opelika, his former home.

Writing of the recent session of the South Carolina Conference, Rev. A. D. Betts, one of its members, says: "Our Conference continues to grow. We now have 258 pastoral charges, an increase of five over last year. Forty-seven per cent of these charges have new pastors this year. Six districts have new presiding elders and 120 pastoral charges have new pastors. This is the same as last year when there were 126 changes." It is easy to inveigh against the making of so many changes, but the important question is, who is to blame? We have yet to see a Bishop or presiding elder who showed the slightest disposition to move men merely because it was in his power to do so.

We take from the Northwestern Christian Advocate the following: "The latest Oxford movement is an association of learned professors to encourage the campaign for the speaking and writing of pure English started by the poet laureate, Robert Bridges. It is supported by Thomas Hardy, the novelist, and Sir Walter Raleigh, professor of English literature at Oxford University, and other prominent men. The exact objects of the society have not yet been announced, but it is understood that there will be lectures and publications in favor of the purity of the written and spoken language and against the incorporation of foreign words."

President Woodrow Wilson who, with his family, is spending a brief season at Pass Christian, on the Mississippi coast, was last week the hero of a fire in the suburbs of Gulfport. While riding in an automobile he noticed a thin haze of smoke issuing from the roof of the residence of Judge J. H. Neville, and immediately ordered the car stopped, and requesting his companions to bring the fire extinguishers carried in the "auto" he proceeded to the house and informed Mrs. Neville of the danger. Recognizing at once her distinguished visitor, Mrs. Neville invited him into the parlor, but he is said to have stated that he would prefer a bucket to help extinguish the fire. He then went outside where the men who had been riding with him were combating the flames, and took an active interest in their suppression, which had nearly been accomplished when the Gulfport fire company reached the scene. Later Judge Neville arrived and thanked the President for the service which he had rendered, but he modestly replied, "It was only a pleasure, a duty."

AN APPRECIATED REMEMBRANCE.

On Christmas day, as I sat in my lonely home beside the vacant chair, reading the many cards and letters from kind friends expressing good wishes for me, the tears flowed down my cheeks like rain. As I strove so hard to look away from myself, my empty desolate life, and say from my heart, "Though he slay me, yet will I trust him," a messenger came to the door and handed me a box, from a florist in Laurel, Miss. On opening it, I found a beautiful floral offering from the ladies of the Missionary Society of the First Church of Laurel, for the precious grave of Dr. Weems, my deceased husband. Immediately a flood of comfort and peace came into my heart, as I realized, that his influence, is still felt and his memory cherished by those he served as pastor, and that his noble life so bravely lived was not in vain. All that these dear friends could do to comfort my heart and soothe my sorrow, they have done, and to love them and pray for them is my daily pleasure. That God may bless them every one is the sincere desire of their friend, Newton, Miss., Dec. 25, 1913. S. G. WEEMS.

THE MISSING ONE.

By Isabel Lillian Boardman.

In realms of bliss that our poor mortal sight,
Blinded by rays of earth's uncertain light,
Cannot conceive,
She dwells to-day, 'mid joys that never cease,
Happy and free, a blest eternal peace,
No more to grieve.

Removed from sin, no longer tempted now,
Her burdens all laid down, and crowned her brow.
Sweet peace and rest,
After the toilsome journey here below,
Are hers at last; it is enough to know
That she is blest.

Lonely and sad we linger on the way,
And meet life's burdens while each strange, long day
Creeps slowly on.
And oft with aching hearts we wonder why
The sun can shine, so fair can be the sky,
When she is gone.

We scan the heavens when God's lamps on high Adorn with splendor the far distant sky,
And yearn to know
The mystic secret of the birth anew,
That came to her, so spotless and so true,
A year ago.

O tender heart and true, that loved us here,
To-day in fairer lands, O soul so dear,
One thought bestow
On us bereft, and love us just the same,
As when we cheered each other in His name,
A year ago.

A MUCH NEGLECTED POSSIBILITY.

By Rev. J. D. Wroten.

We very often see articles in our church papers on baptism and other such subjects, but very seldom do we see anything on the possibility of living a pure life. To my mind this is a topic on which we should write and preach more than we do. We seem to be afraid of being criticised or of being called, "Holy Rollers." But it seems when the high standard of Christianity as taught by Christ is being lowered by such expressions as, "I can not keep the Commandments," and "All of us sin," that we should forget that there is such a thing as criticism, and set ourselves out as positive forces to uphold one of the fundamental doctrines of our Church, and no doubt a fundamental teaching of Christ.

I do not claim to be sanctified in the truest sense of the word, nor do I claim to know of any one who is, which is, indeed, no credit to us. But I do claim that it is Christ's desire that we set ourselves apart to his service, and that he has made it possible for us to do so. If I did not believe this I would have to discard from my I. Cor. 10:13, Matt. 5:8, and Matt. 5:48, respectively read as follows: "There hath no temptation taken you but such as is common to man, but God is faithful, who will not suffer you to be tempted above that ye are able, but will with the temptation also make a way to escape, that ye may be able to bear it"; "Blessed are the pure in heart for they shall see God"; "Be ye therefore perfect, even as your Father which is in heaven is perfect."

Christ plainly teaches us that no sin can enter heaven, and surely people of all creeds believe so. But some say that we can not keep from sinning, therefore making Christ a tyrant, permitting sin to be here that we can not overcome and then destroying us for not overcoming it. Surely this is not our Christ! Nay, verily ours is a Christ who has never said that we could not live the pure and upright life. He rather teaches us that we can and that he expects nothing less of us. But some one is ready to say that, "If we say that we have no sin, we deceive ourselves and the truth is not in us." He forgets the fact that the sin spoken of here is the Adamic and not actual sin, and that the next verse reads thus: "If we confess our sins, he is faithful and just to forgive us our sins, and to cleanse us from all unrighteousness." Another will say that we all sin, thinking because we all sin that that fact in itself makes a certain amount of sin right in the sight of God. This same person will, no doubt, say that he can not keep the Commandments and that he knows himself to be a Christian. I suppose he overlooks I. John 2:4, which is as follows: "He that saith, I know him and keepeth not his commandments, is a liar, and the truth is not in him."

There is trouble somewhere, and it must be in the fact that a great many people who do not believe in the possibility of living a pure life really do not know the difference between temptation and sin. I have heard people say that even our thoughts are sin, and I will agree with them that some thoughts are sins, but here we must distinguish between sin and temptation. Sin, as we know, is an intentional transgression of a known law, whether in thought, word or deed. So then, the thought that is sin is the one which, when presented to us by the tempter, we get the consent of our minds to yield to. The sin is not in the thought coming to us, for if this were true, then would Christ have sinned when the thought came to him to turn the stone into bread.

This thing of sinning is just a matter of choice, for we are free moral agents. No man will deny that he can resist sinning for one minute, and if he can resist one minute, why not two, and so on? God's Word teaches us to choose whom we will serve (James 4:8), to draw nigh unto God and he will draw nigh unto us (Joshua 24:15), and that, "If any man will come after me let him deny himself, and take up his cross, and follow me" (Matt. 16:24). Yes, we are the choosers as to whether we will or will not live the pure life which God plainly teaches it is possible for us to live. This thought is very beautifully expressed by Sara Beaumont Kennedy in her poem on "Is-carlot," which follows:

Your soul is yours: God gave it you
As pure as are his stainless stars,
And no one save yourself can blur
Its fairness with defacing scars.

By other hands your hope may fail,
By alien acts your heart be rent,
But ere your spirit feel the soil
Unto the wrong you must consent.

The poppy-blooms of sin spring thick
Along the path to each high goal;
'Tis when you pluck them you become
The Judas of your own white soul.

Then, if it be true that it is possible for us to live a pure life, that Christ demands nothing less than a true life of us, and that we owe nothing less than a true life to him, it behooves us as ministers to teach and preach such a life more than we have in the past. And it is plain to us all that we can not teach with effect this kind of a life to our people until we have lived it before them. May God help us then, especially as ministers, that we may choose, both to preach and to live this good life before the "preacher-ob-serving" world!

Tunica, Miss., December 25, 1913.

THE TENDENCY TOWARDS IMMODESTY.

By J. W. Beeson, A. M., LL. D.

The question is often asked, "Is the world growing better?" There are varied opinions on the subject and each one has some reasons for belief. In many respects the world is doubtless growing better.

There can be no doubt that there is a growing sentiment against such evils as intemperance. Much credit is due to the noble women of our country for their persistent crusade against strong drink. But there is another cause that has been growing upon us rapidly in recent years to which our good women might well direct more attention than they as a whole are doing, in as much as it will effect them quite as much as the subject of strong drink if something is not done to stem the tide.

Modesty has always been recognized as one of the priceless jewels in woman's crown; yet in these latter days it is becoming much more rare than in former years. The tendency in dress towards immodesty is growing at a rapid rate. The low neck and short sleeves, the peek-a-boo waists, the drop-stitch stockings, the cobweb cloth, the hobble skirt, the tight skirt, the slit skirt, the short skirt, all appeal to the sensual and were created by low-minded people for that purpose.

These styles originate in the minds of the impure ones of Paris, and our American women are so enslaved that many of them follow these low and vulgar styles. It is one of the curses of this age. In the times of our parents and grandparents, such styles would not have been tolerated among decent people in public places; yet it is so common now that the people sit still and tolerate it, if not endorse it. Ambitious mothers, afraid that their pure daughters will receive no attention in "society," fall in line and sacrifice their innocent young daughters to the goddess of fashion.

The religious press, and even the secular press condemn it at first; city authorities now and then make a feeble attempt to regulate it but soon they quiet down and endure it. Pope says:

"Vice is a monster of such hideous mien,
To be hated needs but to be seen;
But seen too oft, familiar with her face,
We first endure, then pity, then embrace."

Why do not our women rise up in their might and put down this great vice? It is not enough to refrain from it themselves. They need to make active war against it, as they are doing against the saloon and other evils. The trouble is that some of those who are working so nobly against other evils, are themselves being swallowed up by this monster.

Recently a great temperance woman delivered a strong address upon intemperance, while she wore a dress that was absolutely indecent for a pure woman to wear outside of her bedroom. That is where the danger comes to our young people. As long as immodest dress is relegated to the questionable women, our girls are not so liable to follow the style, but when Christian mothers set the example and dress themselves and their children in a manner bordering on indecency, they are doing a wrong that cannot be offset by loud professions or by fighting other evils. The immodest tendency in dress is doing more to encourage the white slave traffic than the barrooms of the country. It is corrupting the boys and the girls of our nation. It is inviting evil thoughts and evil deeds.

Fifty years ago our women and our men had a higher sense of modesty than they have to-day. They did not allow the freedom and familiarity that is common to-day. The South has been longer breaking this barrier between man and woman; but now we are sorry to acknowledge that even in our Southland there is far too great a freedom and familiarity among our young people than is proper. Formerly a young man and young lady would be properly chaperoned when they would go out in the evenings; now most of them go when they please and where they please; consequently the standard of morality is at a low ebb. No wonder the papers are so full of scandals, divorce cases, ruined homes and suicides. Unless our people call a halt somewhere our nation is in peril of coming to ruin as have other nations, when the purity of its homes and of its women have vanished.

Look at the fate of Rome when she was given over to wantonness and debauchery. Her people were corrupted and became degenerate, and she was an easy prey to other nations. In the midst of the bloody French Revolution Napoleon said, "The great need of France is mothers." No nation is better than its mothers. The women of the nation are the pulse of it. If that be true, the next generation will see a decadence as a result of the degeneracy of our women that came from the corrupting influences of the abominable fashions of the times.

Let our godly women rise up in their might and put down this octopus that is closing in upon us! They can do it if they will. It must be done by precept as well as by example. May God help them to do it!

WINTER FASHIONS.

Mr. Bunny, a bit of a dandy,

Went round to his tailor's one day

"That styles have not altered, good sir;

For ears will be worn long, as ever,
And coats made entirely of fur."

NEW YEAR'S DAY IN THE WOODS.

"Do I look nice?" asked the Rabbit.

"Very nice!" said the Chipmunk; "that is, for a person who has no tail to speak of. But, of course, you cannot help that."

The Rabbit looked into the looking-glass pond and saw his little white bob of a tail. "Don't you want to lend me yours, just this once?" he asked. "I would take great care of it."

"No, I cannot do that," said the Chipmunk, "but I can lend you the tail of my late uncle. It is such a fine one that we kept it to brush out the nest with."

"The very thing!" said the Rabbit.

So the Chipmunk brought the tail of his late uncle and tied it on to the Rabbit's stub.

"How does that look?" asked the Rabbit.

"Fine!" said the Chipmunk. "Now tell me how I look!"

"Well enough!" said the Rabbit. "Of course you would look better if you had long ears."

"Dear me!" said the Chipmunk; and he, too, looked into the looking-glass pond. "Haven't you a spare pair that you could lend me?"

"Why, yes," said the Rabbit. "There is a pair that belonged to my grandfather, hanging on the wall at home. I will get those."

So the Rabbit got the ears and tied them on to the Chipmunk's head.

"How do I look now?" asked the Chipmunk.

"Splendid!" said the Rabbit. "Now let us go and make our New Year's calls. Where shall we go first?"

"I wish to call on Miss Woodchuck," said the Chipmunk.

"So do I," said the Rabbit. "We will go there first." And off they went.

They came to Miss Woodchuck's door and knocked, and she opened the door. "Mercy!" she cried. "Who are you, and what do you want?"

"We are Mr. Rabbit and Mr. Chipmunk," said the two friends, "and we have come to make you a New Year's call."

"More likely you have come to steal the nuts!" said the lady, angrily. "I know Mr. Rabbit and Mr. Chipmunk well, and neither of you is either of them. Who ever heard of a long-tailed rabbit or a long-eared squirrel? Get along with you! You are frights, and probably thieves as well." And she shut the door in their faces.

The two friends walked a little way in silence; then they stopped and looked at each other.

"You said I looked fine!" said the Rabbit.

"I—I meant the tail!" said the Chipmunk. "It is a fine tail. But you said I looked splendid!"

"I was thinking of the ears!" said the Rabbit. "They are splendid ears."

They walked on until they came once more to the looking-glass pond. They looked at themselves; then they looked at each other; then, all in a minute, off came the long ears and tail.

"There!" cried the Chipmunk. "Now we look as we were meant to look; and I am bound to say, Rabbit, that it is much more becoming to you."

"So it is to you!" replied the Rabbit. "Now, shall we call on Miss Woodchuck again?"

"Come on!" said the Chipmunk.

So they went to Miss Woodchuck's house and knocked once more at the door, and Miss Woodchuck opened it. "Oh!" she cried, "Mr. Chipmunk and Mr. Rabbit, how do you do? I am so glad to see you. A happy New Year to you both!"

"The same to you, Ma'am!" said the Rabbit and the Chipmunk.—John Strong, in the New York Christian Advocate.

BOTH UNSELFISH.

It wasn't a bit like winter down in Florida where Peter was, for the grass was green, and the orange trees were full of blossoms.

"O!" said Dell, when she saw them.

"Want some?" asked Peter.

"O-oh!" said Dell again.

And when Peter gave her a bunch of the sweet-smelling flowers Dell sighed a happy sigh.

"That's what they're for," said Peter. "The tree says, 'Give,' did you not know it? It says 'Give my blossoms and give my yellow oranges. Give, give, give!'"

It's good to be an unselfish tree, but it's ever so much better to be an unselfish child; so you should remember to give, give, give, and share your good things.—Selected.

THE PONY THAT WAS LOANED.

When Amos Gibson came downstairs the morning of his birthday there was not a single package by his plate where he always found his presents.

"A happy birthday, my son," said Mr. Gibson.

"And many happy returns of the day," was his mother's greeting.

Amos gave them a smiling "Thank you," but there was a puzzled look on his face. His parents had not forgotten it was his birthday, but it was the first time they had ever failed to give him a present. He had felt sure he would get a knife, at least.

Mr. Gibson saw the puzzled look on the boy's face and smiled.

"Look in the driveway, Amos," he requested.

Amos opened the side door and saw a fine Shetland pony. He gave a shout of delight as he rushed to the pony and began to pat him.

"Why, father and mother, how did you happen to get a pony?" he asked, joyfully. "You never could have found anything else I liked half as well. I will call him Star," he went on, without waiting for an answer to his question, "because he has a star in his forehead."

The boy was so excited that he could scarcely eat any breakfast, and he rode most of the day. In fact, a part of every day was spent in riding his pony. A week after his birthday Amos and his mother were going to spend the afternoon with his aunt.

"Mother, I believe I'll let Carrie Nelson ride Star this afternoon," he said, when he came in to dinner. "She doesn't have many things to play with and she always looks as if she would like a ride."

"That is a very nice idea," agreed Mrs. Gibson, "and I would do it, for Carrie's parents can not afford to buy her a pony or many toys."

Carrie Nelson was a very happy little girl when Amos took the pony to her house and told her she could use him all the afternoon. She invited two little friends to share her fun. When Amos put the pony in the barn that evening he came into the house with an earnest look on his face.

"When I go away for an afternoon I am always going to loan my pony to some girl or boy," he announced.

Six months later, Mr. Crandall, Amos' uncle, came for a visit at the Gibson home.

"Amos, I have never known a pony to give as much pleasure to so many little folks as yours does," he said one day. "It is because Star has an unselfish owner."

Amos' face lighted up at the words.

"It's funny, but I enjoy Star more myself the day after I have loaned him to somebody else," he declared stoutly.—Herald and Presbyterian.

THE CROPS OF LOUISIANA.

Louisiana produced bumper crops in almost every product which is raised in this State during the year 1913, according to the report made by the United States Department of Agriculture, issued Dec. 1.

According to the report, 41,800,000 bushels of corn were raised in 1913, against 32,490,000 in 1912, and the value of the 1913 crop is placed at $32,186,000, while in 1912 it was $22,093,000.

Corn appears to be "king" crop in the State, the next crop to it being cotton, which is placed at 400,000 bales in 1913, while in 1912 this crop was 376,000 bales. The 1913 value of cotton is given at $22,389,000, while in 1912 it was $20,678,000.

In 1913 the State produced 990,000 bushels of oats, against 707,000 in 1912, and the value of this crop in 1913 is estimated at $564,000, while in 1912 it was $361,000.

There were 1,750,000 bushels of Irish potatoes produced in the State during 1913 as against 1,460,000 bushels in 1912. The value of the Irish potato in 1913 is estimated at $1,680,000, while in 1912 it was $1,212,000.

The crop of sweet potatoes in 1913 is estimated to be 5,100,000 bushels, and in 1912 it was 4,704,000. The 1913 value of this crop is placed at $3,570,000, as against $3,058,000 in 1912.

The report shows that 270,000 pounds of tobacco were raised in the State during 1913, and valued at $68,000, while in 1912 150,000 pounds were produced, the value of which was $45,000.

It is estimated by the report that 240,000 tons of hay have been raised in this State during the year, which is worth $3,000,000, while in 1912 only 234,000 tons were produced, the value of which was $2,972,000.

The only crop which has fallen off from last year, according to the report, is rice. It is estimated that 11,760,000 bushels were produced in 1913, being valued at $9,878,000, while in 1912 the production was 11,812,000 bushels, and the crop was valued at $10,935,000.

The report does not estimate or fix the value of the sugar crop of the State for this or last year.—Times-Democrat.

FAITH'S CREED.

Frank L. Stanton.

Let us believe

That there is hope for all the hearts that grieve;
That somewhere night
Drifts to a morning beautiful with light,
And that the wrong,
Though now it triumphs, wields no sceptre long;
But right will reign,
Throned where the waves of error beat in vain.

THE EVER-FLOWING STREAM OF PHILANTHROPY.

The private benefactions of United States citizens to various worthy causes, including nothing under the sum of $5,000 and no gift of any company, corporation, or organization, from October, 1912, to October, 1913, according to figures tabulated for the secular press amounted to $80,135,476. This means that with every tick of the second hand of the clock throughout the year designated $2.59 cents was thus applied, and that these contributions averaged $251,208 for every one of its 365 days. The largest gift recorded was that of Mr. Benjamin Altman to the Metropolitan Museum of New York City, which was $15,430,000. The other largest contributors, in their order, were J. D. Rockefeller, Jr., who gave $10,000,000 to suppress the White Slave Traffic; Col. O. H. Payne, who gave $4,500,000 to Cornell University; Ferris H. Thompson, to Princeton, $3,655,000; Andrew Carnegie, fifteen donations to various causes, $3,633,000; Robert P. Doremus, to Washington and Lee University, $3,000,000; Miss J. L. Butterfield, to the Y. M. C. A., $2,350,000; James B. Hammond, to New York Metropolitan Museum, $2,000,000; Mrs. George D. Widener, for a memorial library at Harvard, $2,000,000; Isaac C. Wyman, to Princeton University, $2,000,000. Twenty-eight women gave an average of $190,879.

The aggregate amount of $80,135,476 was distributed among the several leading causes substantially as follows: Education, $25,947,343; Miscellaneous Charities, $20,428,783; Hospitals, Homes, and Asylums, $5,386,800; Specifically Religious Purposes, $3,563,300; Non-Charitable Societies, $3,516,750; Libraries, $2,525,000. One of the queerest benefactions of the past year was that of Mr. Adolph Melzer who gave ten of the States $1,000 each, to be placed at compound interest for 250 years, and then to be used for bettering the condition of dumb animals. It is estimated that this $10,000, at the close of two and a half centuries, will have increased to more than $20,000,000.

All in all, American philanthropists seem to have made a very creditable record during the twelve months ending on the first of last October, and there is much to encourage us in these figures. It is doubtless true that there is much giving that is not inspired by the highest motives, and it is also a fact that humanitarianism and philanthropy are by no means the chief elements of Christianity; but where they so abound we cannot but think that the Spirit of Christ must be actively at work. Rich men did not thus spend their means in the opulent unchristian civilizations of the past.

WELL SAID.

Under the caption, "A Powerful Endorsement," the Nashville Christian Advocate, our ably edited general organ, of December 19, contained the following impressive editorial utterance:

"Last summer, when the excitement over the offer of one million dollars to Vanderbilt University by Mr. Carnegie was at its height, it was not difficult for one to hear in Nashville such expressions as these: "This thing is going to split the Church;" "You are going to bear from the laymen of the Church;" "Just wait for the laymen to speak out." Time has tested these prophecies. More than forty Annual Conferences of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, have met, and every single one of them has passed resolutions strongly indorsing the minority trustees and the bishops. Even the China Mission Conference passed resolutions of this kind. The laymen have taken a very active part. In fact, the laymen have been more than usually earnest in supporting the minority trustees and the bishops. The surprising fact is that, among the more than forty Annual Conferences which have passed these resolutions only seven votes as far as we know, have been cast against the adoption of the resolutions. There are three Conferences in the State of Tennessee. Only four men out of these Conferences have voted against the resolutions.

"The appeal of the majority of the trustees will be heard by the Supreme Court during the second week in January."

This is, indeed, a sweeping endorsement. Nor has it been our Church alone which has with such unanimity condemned the Kirkland-Carnegie transaction; the press of other denominations, so far as it has spoken, has almost without exception taken the same position concerning that procedure. One would think that when thousands of intelligent Christians are so perfectly in accord, the few standing out against them would begin to suspect the correctness of their own conclusions. But we doubt if this almost unanimous pronouncement will have any such effect upon the majority of the Vanderbilt trustees. We rather opine that that the handful of men that have made all this trouble will flatter themselves that they alone are wise concerning the Vanderbilt matters and educational work in general, and will look with pity and commiseration upon the tens of thousands of Methodists and other Christians who are so ignorant as to take issue with them. Indeed, we have seen utterances from some of these gentlemen that clearly implied such an attitude. Remarkable! Isn't it?

SHOULD KEEP HIM BUSY.

Dr. Felix R. Hill, Sr., who at the recent session of the Louisiana Conference took a supernumerary relation, will spend the remaining months of the winter and the early spring in this section. Though he did not feel equal to the task of assuming full responsibility for a charge throughout the year (as the climate here is an unfavorable one for him during the warm season), his health is at present comparatively good and he is quite able to preach and work effectively. Having for so long been busy in the Master's service, he feels ill at ease with the harness off and would be pleased to assist any of the brethren in meetings, or otherwise, who may feel that they can use him.

This is, indeed, a rare opportunity—one that our preachers in this territory should be swift to embrace. Southern Methodism has, perhaps, never had a greater pastor than Dr. Hill. He has shown himself skilled not only in taking care of the various material interests of the Church, but also in winning souls to Christ and in deepening the spirituality of those who are of the household of faith. Wherever he has wrought he has had many seals to his ministry. Why not plan to begin a meeting early in the new year and call this master-workman to assist you? We have long been convinced that many of our pastors defer their revival campaigns too long to secure the best results in the year's work. God's power to save souls is not limited to the summer time; and if a church is spiritually quickened soon after Conference, it will achieve vastly more for the Master during the succeeding months. We should like to see the brethren begin now to kindle revival fires in these parts, and we feel sure that Dr. Hill will greatly help to do this if they will call him into service. His present address is 1421 Constantinople Street, New Orleans, La.

IN MEMORY OF A LOVED ONE.

Elsewhere in this issue of the Advocate, we acknowledge the reception of two gifts to help the young man at Millsaps College for whom we have been asking assistance that were made in memory of the late Mr. Iddo W. Lampton, of Magnolia, Miss.—one by Mrs. Lampton, the widow, and the other by Miss Lucia J. Lampton, a niece. Both in their notes speak beautifully of the departed, without whom they are spending their first Christmas and New Year, and underneath their reserve it is easy to see how sorely they miss him. To the lately bereaved, occasions that tend to bring loved ones together and accentuate family ties are peculiarly trying. Memory, at such times, works busy fingers, and the deeper emotions are stirred and old wounds are often made to bleed afresh. Happy are those who on such anniversaries can look upon the records made by their precious dead and feel that they bore themselves worthily in life's storm and stress, and that it is well with them in the sphere into which they have passed! May the tender Christ be consciously present on this New Year's day in every home into which the Advocate finds its way in which there is a new vacant chair! It was for such lonely hearts that we selected the beautiful poem, entitled "The Missing One," which may be found upon another page, and we pray that it may prove a blessing to all who read it.

WHITWORTH'S WELCOME TO MRS. WILSON.

On December 27, Dr. I. W. Cooper, President of Whitworth College, at Brookhaven, Miss., who has the happy faculty of doing the right thing at the right time and in the right way, wired Mrs. Woodrow Wilson, at Pass Christian, Miss., the following message:

"Members of the faculty and 200 young ladies of Whitworth College give you a most gracious welcome to Mississippi, not as the wife of one of the greatest of Presidents, but as one who represents the very best in Christian womanhood. Welcome, thrice welcome, to Mississippi, the home of noble women."

WHY NOT HELP HIM?

The following amounts have been received for the son of a circuit preacher whom we are trying to help through the session at Millsaps College:

Mr. James Hand, Purvis, Miss. . . . $ 5.00
Rev. R. A. Meek, New Orleans, La. . . 5.00
Dr. W. T. Johnson, Greenwood, Miss. 10.00
Gov. G. D. Shands, New Orleans, La. 5.00
Mrs. I. W. Lampton, Magnolia, Miss. 25.00
Miss L. Jane Lampton, " " 10.00

We desire to increase this amount to $100, and we hope to receive other contributions at once. This student, though his studies are somewhat scattered, is classed as a Junior. If aided now, he will soon be able to take up the work of teaching and thus provide the funds necessary to complete his education. Brother Hand, of Purvis, has written him that he will assist him monthly from now until the close of the session, but he is behind on his expenses from September until January, and urgently needs the additional help for which we are asking.

PERSONAL AND OTHER NOTES.

Rev. A. W. Turner, the Superintendent of the Louisiana Anti-Saloon League, occupied the pulpit of the Methodist Church at Rayville, La., on December 21. It scarcely needs to be said that he delivered a strong and appealing discourse.

Among the brethren who cheered the Advocate office with their presence last week were Rev. P. H. Fontaine, Rev. J. F. Foster, and Rev. E. K. Means. Having been called to North Mississippi on urgent personal business, the Editor, much to his regret, missed seeing this fine trio of Christian gentlemen.

Rev. M. M. Black and family have been given a very cordial welcome by the members of the Broad Street Church of Hattiesburg, and were the recipients of a liberal "pounding" the evening after their arrival. The members of this congregation are noted for their zeal and loyalty, and the work of the Conference year has begun auspiciously.

Rev. Hugh Jamieson preached in Quadrate, La., one of the appointments of the LeCompte Circuit, on Sunday, Dec. 2. On the same day he was in Alexandria, where, he states, Dr. G. E. Cameron, the new pastor, had a great beginning. He reports that Dr. Cameron is delighted with his new charge, and that the people are equally as much pleased.

Mrs. M. E. Joyce, of Millsaps College, Jackson, Miss., in renewing her subscription to the Advocate, takes time to express her appreciation of it. She also ordered it sent to each of her two sons as a Christmas present. Few gifts are calculated to exercise so helpful an influence as a worthy periodical which continues its visits throughout the year.

Rev. O. P. Armour, the new pastor of the Macon (Miss.) Circuit, says: "We reached our new field of labor on Dec. 10, and were given a most cordial reception. We have had one 'shower party' after another until we feel under lasting obligations to this splendid people. We were the recipients of a number of nice Christmas presents. All things point to a successful year's work for our Lord."

In the home of Rev. H. P. Lewis, in Jackson, Miss., on December 23, Mr. F. Jagers, of McComb, Miss., and Miss Emma Stewart, of Canton, Miss., were united in marriage, Rev. Lewis Harvey officiating. The groom is a grandson of two ministers—Rev. H. P. Lewis, at whose home the wedding took place, and Rev. J. E. Jagers, late of Yazoo City, Miss. We extend to the contracting parties our congratulations and best wishes.

Rev. C. A. Battle, pastor of the Felicity Street Church of this city, has lately been on the sick list, but is, we are happy to state, now able to be out.

Rev. C. P. Moss is encouraged by the prospect at luka, Miss., his new charge. We are pleased to know that he is fast regaining his accustomed health and strength.

Why not take up now the work of placing the Advocate in the homes of your people, and let it re-enforce you in your labors for the Master all through the year? It will pay any pastor to do so.

Rev. W. H. Saunders has reached Fernwood, Miss., his new appointment, and writes hopefully of the outlook. This is universally conceded to be one of the most pleasant charges in the Mississippi Conference.

Note the announcement concerning the great rally of the prohibition forces of Mississippi in Jackson on January 5, which appears elsewhere in this issue of the Advocate. Let all who can attend this meeting, and lend the cause a helping hand.

We have received so many Christmas and New Year greetings from kind friends that it is impracticable to make specific acknowledgment of them. We can only say that every message was highly appreciated, and that every good wish expressed is fully reciprocated.

Rev. A. J. Gearheard, who for the past two years has been connected with the Advocate, will hereafter devote his entire time to the work of the pastorate. In addition to serving the McDonoughville Church, he will look after the Daisy Mission, near the mouth of the Mississippi River.

Rev. H. B. Carre, of Vanderbilt University, represents Kentucky, Mississippi, and Tennessee on the Executive Committee of the National Anti-Saloon League. Among Mississippi's representatives on the Board of Trustees of that organization, are ex-Governor E. F. Noel, Rev. J. M. Morse, and Rev. G. W. Eichelberger.

Rev. W. A. Mangum, of Baton Rouge, La., writes: "I was agent for the Missionary Voice at Conference, and I would like to say through the Advocate to those who subscribed, that if they do not receive the January number, I should like to have them drop me a line to that effect, so that I can send in the right address."

We regret to be informed that Sister V. C. Curtis, the wife of Rev. V. C. Curtis of the North Mississippi Conference, has lately been confined to bed with an attack of illness for a week or ten days. We are pleased to state, however, that she was reported to be sitting up some on the 26 ult., and we trust that she will soon be entirely well.

Dr. and Mrs. S. H. Werlein have been heartily welcomed by the members of the First Methodist Church of New Orleans, as well as by their many friends in the city. The Doctor has been in his pulpit for the past two Sundays, and was greeted by large audiences. Four members were received last Sunday—two by certificate, and two on profession of faith.

Rev. R. H. Harper, the new pastor of the Parker Memorial Church of this city, is in place and has made a most favorable impression upon his people. The theme of his discourse last Sunday morning was "Sacrifice," and he handled it in a pleasing and informing manner. He is entering upon his first pastorate in New Orleans, which promises to be fruitful in good things.

The Flora (Miss.) congregation on Sunday morning, Dec. 14, unanimously adopted resolutions expressing love and esteem for Brother G. P. McKeown and his family, and a high appreciation of their work in that community, and heartily commending them to the people in their new field of labor. Brother and Sister McKeown have evidently left many warm friends behind at Flora.

Mrs. Harriet B. Keils, President of the Woman's Christian Temperance Union of Mississippi and formerly one of the Editors of the Union Signal of Chicago, died at her home in Starkville, Miss., on Friday night, December 26. She was born in Jefferson County, Miss., and was 70 years of age. She was an able and ardent advocate of the temperance cause, and was widely known for her good works.

Rev. P. A. Sowell, formerly a member of the Tennessee Conference, but who has recently been transferred to the Louisiana Conference and stationed at Jeanerette, was a pleasant caller at the Advocate office last week. He was accompanied by his son-in-law, Mr. C. S. Williamson, Professor of Industrial and Sugar Chemistry in Tulane University, whose acquaintance we were glad to make. We hope that these gentlemen will come again.

The Press dispatches state that on Tuesday, Dec. 22, Bishop Collins Denny, mistaking it for his medicine, took a dose of liquid poison that made him seriously ill, but from the effects of which he was saved by the energetic use of a stomach pump, applied by members of his family. The Bishop is now said to have completely recovered from this accidental poisoning, which with a treatment less prompt and effective might have proved fatal.

The local paper at Mansfield, La., thus refers to the re-assignment of Brother Morris to the pastorate of the Methodist Church at that place: "We feel that our people have reason to be well pleased, and personally, we feel highly gratified, with the announcement that Rev. T. H. Morris is to remain in our city for another year, for he is an earnest churchman, a talented minister, a good father, and, above all, a good citizen. Without this last qualification, no preacher can measure entirely up to the standard of excellence necessary to fulfill the sacred duties of his position."

We acknowledge the reception of an attractive card bringing Christmas and New Year greetings from the Young Men's Bible Class of Corinth, Miss., of which Miss Elizabeth Kilpatrick is the accomplished teacher. In the same envelope was enclosed a smaller card containing the Editor's name and giving him carte blanche to all the privileges of this fine class for twelve months. We highly appreciate being remembered by this band of choice young Methodists, and we earnestly pray that God may continue richly to bless them, and lead them into still larger fields of usefulness.

The Carrollton Avenue Church of this city has lately been favored by the pulpit ministrations of some visiting brethren. Last Sunday at 11 a. m. Dr. Felix R. Hill, Sr., preached to the delight and edification of a good congregation, and at the close of the service renewed some old acquaintances. At night Dr. J. M. Henry, the presiding elder of the New Orleans District, preached an able sermon. A week before, on the Sabbath evening, the pulpit was occupied by Rev. E. K. Means, now pastor of the Noel Memorial Church of Shreveport, who gave the audience a thought-provoking and helpful message.

Rev. H. A. Gatlin, of Meridian, Miss., writes: "On Sunday, December 21, Rev. Isaac L. Peebles, delivered two inspiring sermons in the Fifth Street Methodist Church of this city. We are fortunate in having Brother Peebles as one of our Conference evangelists. His daily life is consistent with his deeply spiritual sermons, which are a benediction to any congregation." To this commendation of Brother Peebles and his work, we give a hearty "Amen." Both as a doctrinal and revival preacher, he is unusually forceful and effective. The brethren should write him for dates at once and keep him steadily engaged.

Under date of December 20, Rev. W. W. Drake of Baton Rouge, La., writes: "In the notes of the Louisiana Conference in last week's Advocate, your reporter mentions several charges which received more than 50 members, each, during the past year, and comments as though all the others had fallen short of that number. He evidently failed to hear the report of the First Church of Baton Rouge which had 87 accessions." We regret that our reporter failed to note the fine record made by the church of which Brother Drake is pastor, and we thank him for calling attention to this unintentional omission. We have a live Methodism in the Capital City of Louisiana.

The Lincoln County Times, of Brookhaven, Miss., contained the following note last week: "A large congregation at the Methodist Church last Sunday listened with interest and profit to a sermon by a former Brookhaven boy, Rev. Favre Adams. His many friends felt a sense of deep pleasure in hearing his earnest words and in noting the signs of a promising life in his noble calling." This gifted young minister is a son of Rev. T. W. Adams, presiding elder of the Port Gibson District. He did not take work at the recent session of the Mississippi Conference, but will enter Trinity College, at Durham, N. C., after the holidays for the further prosecution of his studies.

In an examination recently conducted to select a Cecil Rhodes Scholar from Louisiana, that distinction was won by Mr. Philip Prentiss Werlein, the youngest son of Dr. and Mrs. S. H. Werlein, now of this city. The test given embraced both the personal and literary qualifications of the applicants, and Mr. Werlein stood first in both respects. One who is awarded this scholarship is allowed to choose which of the several colleges of the great English University he will attend, and is given $1500 annually for three years for his maintenance. Mr. Werlein is a Senior at Tulane University, from which institution he expects to be graduated at its next Commencement.

Mrs. Lizzie George Henderson, of Greenwood, Miss., Chairman of the Central Committee of Woman's Organizations in Mississippi, desires to have a union prayer meeting held in every community in that State on Sunday afternoon, January 11, at 4 o'clock, for the purpose of awakening an interest in better legislation for the protection and development of the childhood and youth of that commonwealth. Two things which she especially desires to see done is the establishment of a school for the instruction of juvenile violators of the law and the raising of the age of consent for girls from 12 to 18 years. We hope that our pastors and people will lend a helping hand to this movement.

After assisting Rev. H. T. Gaines, the pastor, in a gracious revival at Sanford, Fla., which continued from Dec. 9 to Dec. 16, and which resulted in 60 conversions and 40 accessions to our Church, Rev. J. A. Bowen attended the late session of the Florida Annual Conference, which he greatly enjoyed. He is at present stopping at Enterprise in that State for a brief season of rest and Bible study, and he reports that the climate and water there are very fine. Brother Bowen is booked to assist in a meeting in our First Church at Miami in the near future. In a note to the Editor, he says: "Brother Gaines has been sent to Lake City this year—a larger field. These Mississippians are doing well in Florida, as they do everywhere they go."

The Sunday School Field Secretaries of the North Mississippi Conference are already settling down to energetic work. They have issued a stirring address to all the pastors and have prepared and distributed an admirably arranged blank report for gathering the Sunday school statistics of the various charges. Miss Kilpatrick and Brother Curtis are a fine team, and whether we approve of having two secretaries in the field or not, we should give them both our hearty support, since the present order of things must continue until the end of the year. It gives us genuine pleasure to commend Brother Curtis to those who do not know him. He is a good man for almost any task or place. His address will hereafter be Grenada, Miss., instead of Kosciusko, Miss.

From Tunica, Miss., on Christmas day, Rev. J. D. Wroten wrote as follows: "I am now on my new charge and have been to all my churches. I am indeed gratified with the prospects we have for a good year. The people know how to welcome their preacher and make him feel at home among them. The Sunday school work seems to be in first-class condition." That Brother Wroten finds Tunica a promising field is not at all surprising. Rev. J. W. Honnoll, masterful as a preacher and unsurpassed as a pastor, gave his last years to the work there, and since he went home it has been in charge of Rev. L. P. Wasson, than whom we do not know a more capable young minister. Proper cultivation may be depended upon to yield gratifying results in the spiritual, as well as in the physical realm.

From the Rayville (La.) Beacon-News, edited by an Episcopalian, we take the following: "It is of special interest to the members of the Methodist Church of Rayville, and to the citizens of the town and community as well, to learn that Rev. A. Inman Townsley has been returned to the Methodist pastorate here for another year, and that Rayville has been made a station and will have the services of Mr. Townsley every Sabbath. This gentleman has done a splendid work in building up the Methodist Church here, and his return insures a continuance of the healthy growth which that congregation is enjoying. His elevating moral influence is felt outside the church, as well as with his immediate flock, and it gives the Beacon-News pleasure to chronicle the decision of the Conference in returning Mr. Townsley to the work here and arranging it so that this place will have the benefit of his entire time."

SUNSHINE AND SHADOW.

By Mrs. L. M. Lipscomb.

Joy is often tinged with sadness,
There is a thorn with every rose;
Tho the face be wreathed with gladness,
The aching heart nobody knows.

Every sunbeam has its shadow,
Every heart its joy and woe;
Tho the summer bring its roses,
Winter comes with ice and snow.

Thus we tread life's rugged pathway,
Sometimes smiling, often weeping;
But our tears will change to rainbows,
If we're in our Father's keeping.

Let us then press bravely onward,
Helping others on the way,
Till our night of cloud and darkness
Fades into the perfect day.

The subject of this sketch, JOHN C. LEE, departed this life in Stone-wall, Miss., on the morning of December 12, 1913, at the residence of J. R. Burt, where he had made his home for the past sixteen months. Mr. Lee had reached the advanced age of 102 years, 7 months and 8 days, having been born May 4, 1811, in Spaulding County, N. C., where he continued to live until the breaking out of the Civil War. Mr. Lee enlisted in the war between the United States and Mexico, and was a member of Company G, 12th Regiment, United States Infantry, serving as a private through the war, and was mustered out at St. Louis, Mo., at its close. He then returned to his old home in North Carolina, following the life of a farmer, until he enlisted in the Confederate army in 1861. He served as a private all through the Civil War, except while he was disabled on account of wounds received at the celebrated fight at Gettysburg, and was finally mustered out with Lee's army at the close of the memorable struggle. Mr. Lee then removed to Choctaw County, Alabama, where he lived until about eight years ago, when at the death of his wife, he moved to Mississippi, where he continued to live until his death. Mr. Lee is survived by three sons and two daughters, who live in Mississippi and Alabama. While Mr. Lee was not a member of any church, he was of Methodist persuasion. He confessed his faith in God some time before his death, and often gave utterance to his faith and belief that God had provided for him a home in heaven, and urged those about him to meet him there. Mr. Lee was a good citizen and lived well his long, useful life, and in his declining months was tenderly cared for by J. R. Burt and family. His remains were tenderly laid to rest in the cemetery at Stone-wall, Miss., Friday afternoon, at 2:30 p. m., December 12, 1913, the services being conducted by the writer.

LAKE MONROE BIBLE CONFERENCE.

The Florida Christian Assembly Association will hold its third annual Bible Conference on its grounds at Enterprise, Florida, January 16-26, and February 1-16. All sessions of the Conference will be open to the public free of charge. A cordial invitation is extended to all lovers of God's blessed Book to attend its sessions and seek a deeper and fuller knowledge of the Word, whose "entrance giveth light." Among the distinguished speakers who will be present are Bishop John H. Vincent of the Methodist Episcopal Church, two bishops of the M. E. Church, South, Dr. S. D. Gordon, whose "Quiet Talks" on Prayer and Power, and other subjects, have been read by thousands with delight and edification; Mr. John R. Pepper, the distinguished leader of the Layman's Missionary Movement, and Dr. George R. Stuart and Dr. L. W. Munhall, evangelists. Rev. R. McW. Russell, D. D., president of Westminster College, New Wilmington, Pa., will speak daily during the February Conference; Misses Emma and Tina Tucker, well-known Bible readers, will conduct a series of "Personal Workers' Classes."

For rates at Epworth Inn address Mr. John B. Martin, Enterprise, Fla.

The general management of the Conference will be in the hands of a committee, composed of Mr. James N. Gamble, Cincinnati, Ohio; Miss Emma L. Tucker, Enterprise, Florida, and Rev. J. Edgar Wilson, Gainesville, Florida; to either of whom inquiries may be addressed.

MISS EMMA L. TUCKER.

HIGHLY COMMENDED.

At the regular service on Sunday night, December 14, after Rev. T. B. Cottrell had preached his last sermon at Bay St. Louis, the following expression concerning his work and life among the people of that charge was adopted unanimously by a rising vote:

Whereas, Bro. T. B. Cottrell, our beloved pastor for the past four years, has been assigned to another charge and is soon to leave us to assume the duties of his new position, we desire to express our deep appreciation of the great benefit he has been to this church by his faithful ministry and to the community through the example of his Christian citizenship.

We feel that Bro. Cottrell and his estimable wife have been a blessing to us by their consistent lives, and we pray that the choicest blessings from the Source of All Good may attend them in their new field of Christian endeavor.

Resolved, That a copy of this expression of love and appreciation be furnished Bro. Cottrell, and a copy given the New Orleans Christian Advocate and the local press.

GOGGLES FOR AUTOMOBILISTS.

Those who motor should wear goggles, especially if they drive. The glass in cheap goggles is of the poorest quality, and is injurious to the eyes. Various scientific tests have been made by competent experts, showing that almost all cheap, colored spectacles contain waves, bubbles, refractive power and other imperfections that render them unfit for use. If plain glass goggles are desired, they should be perfect in their plainness. Amber goggles are better than smoke or blue, as they protect the eyes from the sun's most irritating qualities; besides this, objects can be more clearly seen through amber glasses than through glasses of any other color. If goggles are worn, they should be large and convex outward, and should fit as closely to the face as possible. The use of colored goggles while automobiling protects the eyes from the sun and also from the irritating effects of the wind, and, furthermore, lessens the liability of foreign bodies, such as sand and dirt, being driven into the eyes. All that has been said of automobilists applies equally well to motorcyclists. If you drive a car or a motorcycle, wear amber goggles (made to suit your vision if necessary), but do not purchase cheap ones. You cannot afford to injure your eyes, and, besides this, cheap goggles will probably cost you an oculist's bill in the end.

Tidings From the Field

Greenville, Miss.

We received a most hearty welcome to our new field of labor here in Greenville. The good women of the Missionary Society have just had a new roof put on the parsonage, and in addition thereto, they have spent about $70 on work on the inside of the parsonage, which makes this a very comfortable home, indeed. We are confidently expecting God's richest blessings on our labors this year. And I feel, too, that I am to have the hearty co-operation of the church membership in the work of the Lord. Brother Lagrone wrought well during his stay here. He has, in Greenville, many loyal friends whose best wishes and prayers follow him.

J. TILLERY LEWIS.

Kossuth, Miss.

We reached our new parsonage home at Kossuth, on December 4, 1913, at 7 o'clock p. m. Quite a number of the good people met us at the home, gave us a hearty hand-shake, and made us welcome. Also they had prepared for us a nice, good supper and left the pantry well supplied with good things for the future. This is a noble people, full of life, and verily filled with the Spirit. They believe in going about like the Master, doing good. I have just completed my first round on this pleasant charge, and I consider the outlook most encouraging. Our congregations bring to us an inspiration that lifts us up to a larger life. It is a joy to tell to them "the old, old story of Jesus and his love." This pastor is happy in his work and has all on the altar, praying and hoping for a great year.

D. R. McDOUGAL, P. C.

Pleasant Hill, Miss.

I filled my appointment at Pleasant Hill, Sunday, December 14. The people at Pleasant Hill received us kindly and made it possible for us to be comfortable till we can get ready to keep house. When I got here Wednesday, at 7 p. m., I found Mrs. Wilson and the children, who had arrived a few hours earlier, in the parsonage, with plenty to eat and beds to sleep in. The people were getting ready for our coming by providing such things as they thought we would need. These included wood, fodder, hay, flour, sugar, sausage, meat, preserves and pickles, and, above all, a warm welcome. This was done for the work's sake. We are under obligations to Bro. Bennett and the good people of this place. The people speak kindly of their former pastors. May we have a great year here and throughout our Conference!

J. R. WILSON.

Flora, Miss.

Dear Dr. Meek: We arrived at the parsonage at Flora on Dec. 19 (Friday). We were met at the depot by a number of the brethren with conveyances, and in a few minutes we were at the beautiful parsonage where a number of the good women were awaiting us. Good, warm fires and a bountiful supper greeted us. Of course, after all the people had gone, we began to look through the parsonage. We soon discovered that enough good things had been left to do us for perhaps two months; and besides this, good things have been coming in every day since our arrival. We have never had a more royal reception anywhere. We like the way these whole-hearted people met us and shook our hands, saying, "God bless you." I had the pleasure of preaching three times Sunday—twice at Flora, and in the evening at Kearney schoolhouse.

The congregations were large and were made up of staunch and loyal people. I never preached to more attentive audiences, and I never felt more like preaching. Our visit to New Orleans, Hattiesburg, and Jackson, while en route here, was enjoyed very much by my wife and children. Now we are ready to get down to work and shall do our best. We are so comfortable here in this beautiful up-to-date parsonage. Surely His hand leadeth us. A happy New Year to you!

M. L. WHITE.

DRS. SEXTON AND CAMERON COMMENDED

We notice in the daily papers that Rev. George S. Sexton, D. D., for four years connected with the movement to erect a monumental Church in Washington, D. C., and long a member of the Texas Conference, was transferred last week to the Louisiana Conference and stationed at First Church, Shreveport. His old Texas friends, and they are numbered by the thousand, will regret to know that Dr. Sexton is no longer identified with our Texas Methodism. He has spent many of the useful years of his useful life with us and we can hardly think of Texas without thinking of George Sexton. No man has done a better work than he and he leaves many tokens of his efficiency in the several charges he has served among us. St. Paul's Church, Houston, is a monument to the successful ministry of Dr. Sexton, if there were no other. But that is not the only abiding evidence of his efficient ministry in Texas. We endorse him to the utmost to our Louisiana brethren. They will find him genial, lovable, and brotherly on all parts of the ground. He will not be among them long until they will learn to love and appreciate him as we do in Texas. Rev. G. S. Cameron, who did three years of most successful work, at First Church, Shreveport, goes to Alexandria. He also went from Texas and has shown his merit by his colossal work at Shreveport. He leaves a great Church building and a well organized congregation, and we wish for him his usual success in his new field of labor further down in the Pelican State.—Texas Christian Advocate.

A WORD FROM BROTHER CURRIE.

To the Brethren of the Louisiana Conference: I wish to express my thanks to you for recognizing my orders as an Elder, and to say that I am ready to go anywhere and work for our Christ. No place is too hard or too poor for me. I have a tent which may be used (this to missionary pastors). May God give us the best year of our lives. As ever,

W. T. CURRIE.

DREAD OF AN OPERATION.

N. Manchester, Ind.—Mrs. Eva Bashore, of this place, says: "I suffered from female misery of every description. Two doctors attended me, and advised an operation. I lost weight until I weighed only ninety pounds. I dreaded an operation, and, instead, began to take Cardui. In a short time, I gained 25 pounds, and feel as well as I ever did. Cardui, I am sure, saved my life." Cardui is to-day used in thousands of homes, where it relieves pain and brings back strength and ambition. It is a woman's medicine, for women's ailments, and you are urged to try it for your troubles. Ask your druggist. He will tell you about Cardui.

INDIVIDUALITY

Is that quality which distinguishes a thing from others—distinctive character.

The beauty of a MONUMENT is often found in its individual character.

SHOES AT WHOLESALE

NEW ORLEANS CHRISTIAN ADVOCATE Readers are SAVING from ONE to TWO DOLLARS a PAIR by Ordering Their Shoes DIRECT FROM FACTORY BY PARCEL POST.

Would the cutting of your FAMILY SHOE BILL one-third or more mean a very big yearly saving to you? Figure it out. The present high cost of shoes is due to two things, the Middlemen's profits which the consumer must pay and the enormous decrease in raw materials. The new Parcel Post System gave us an idea. By selling our shoes direct to the wearer, cutting out the middlemen entirely, we could save the consumer fully a third on every pair of shoes and still make our usual wholesale profit. The plan is a great success. New Orleans Christian Advocate readers are realizing the opportunity of saving and great numbers are writing for our catalog which is sent free to anyone on request. It tells how cheaply high quality shoes can really be bought under this fair method of selling. Every shoe sold is guaranteed perfect in fit, material and workmanship—your money will be refunded if unsatisfactory. Write for your catalog to-day. A trial order will please and result in our getting your entire shoe trade. PARCEL POST SHOE CO., 258 Meeting Street, Charleston, South Carolina. (Advertisement)

To Thee, my Savior and my King,
Glad homage let me give;
And stand prepared, like Thee, to die
With Thee that I may live.

—Anna Letitia Barbauld.

A Happy New Year! As we stand upon the threshold of this new year let us take a backward glance for a few moments. The Christmas-tide has come and gone and all the world is better for its thoughts of Christ. Have you been true to him and to the world for which he died? Have you neglected opportunities? Too few of us have taken advantage of the many chances given us by the Father. Our hearts are filled with pain and regret that we have so neglected his work. Let us spend no moments in idle repinings, but as we start upon the new year, let us look up and see where the horizon is brightest. It contains a motto for you and for me, and it reads, "Be thou faithful unto death and I will give thee a crown of life! Oh, glorious promise! May we each one let it go before us as a pillar of fire; and may we be faithful unto death" in the Master's work.

THE JANUARY MEETING.

The last issue of our Advocate contained a circular letter from our Council Third Vice President, Mrs. J. N. Perry. In this letter she stresses the importance of this first meeting of the year—in fact, the most important one in many respects. It is our "Pledge Meeting," and after prayerfully reading the literature on Christian Stewardship we should be better prepared to make our pledges for the Master's work during the coming year. He stands in the distance and gazes upon you, and your pledge will either gladden or sadden his heart. He sees down into your heart as none other can, and knows whether you are withholding your treasures from him.

A specially prepared card has been arranged for this meeting. It states clearly the facts regarding our funds. These cards can be obtained from Miss Mabel Head, 810 Broadway, Nashville, Tenn. Let each one order at once the number needed—a few extra ones will not be amiss, for you are sure to gain new members during the year, and no one likes to be slighted. See that every member of your auxiliary is invited to attend this first meeting of the year, and not only every auxiliary member, but urge all the women in your church to attend. We need your money, but don't forget that "Christian Stewardship" embraces prayer and service, too. Give of your best to the Master this year.

DAY OF PRAYER FRIDAY, JAN. 9, 1914.

More than a year ago a plan of Federation was submitted to the various Woman's Boards of Missions and approved by them. The general plan proposed that the Boards appoint representatives in four districts of the United States to act as territorial commissions as follows: San Francisco, Chicago, Nashville, and New York. The representatives form the association called "The Federation of Woman's Boards of Foreign Missions of the United States." Each territorial commission elects its president, secretary, and treasurer, and holds an annual meeting.

In connection with this organization is a General Advisory Commission of eleven members, two from each territorial commission and three appointed by the Committee on United Study of Missions. This Commission will meet annually in the various territories in rotation.

"The office of the General Advisory Commission shall be to connect the Woman's Boards and the Territorial Commissions; its purpose shall be to stimulate united prayer and study and a spirit of fellowship of service; to secure a deeper realization of the whole task of Foreign Missions, a clearer understanding of difficulties and problems, a fuller development of resources and a truer conception of the dignity, scope, and purpose of woman's work for missions."

Eighteen Boards have identified themselves with the Federation. A meeting of the General Advisory Commission was held in New York on Oct. 24, at which time a Constitution and By-Laws were framed, officers elected, and committees appointed. Mrs. De Witt Knox of New York was elected Chairman.

The most important feature of the meeting was the appointment of Friday, January 9 as a day of United Prayer for Foreign Mission Work. It is most earnestly urged that there shall be held on this day a union prayer service of all denominations in every town and city of our land.

A Committee should be appointed at once whose business it shall be to arrange for all the Woman's Missionary Societies of the town or city to meet in some central place. A program containing valuable suggestions for this Day of Prayer has been prepared and can be secured from the Secretary of the various Boards of Missions.

Questions of vast import are claiming the consideration of the leaders in the great work of Missions; imperative and urgent calls are coming from every field; the great and rapid changes in many parts of the world brought about by the work and lives of missionaries, constitute a summons to the church, and there is need for earnest united prayer.

Shall there not be a great gathering of the missionary forces on this ninth day of the New Year and a mighty prevailing supplication be made that the women of the Church may get "a vision of their task," and prove equal to their part in the evangelization of the world. Begin at once and plan and pray that this appointed day may result in such a blessing to the home church as will hasten "the coming of the Kingdom" in every heart, and even unto the ends of the earth.

MRS. J. B. COBB,

Nashville Territorial Commission.

NO PROPERTY PURCHASED IN RIO.

Misses Bennett and Gibson have not returned from their foreign trip. No property has yet been bought in Rio. Definite information is anxiously awaited from Brazil as to the price of a second piece of property recommended, terms of purchase, probable cost of improvements, and the approximate amount the Petropolis property will bring. Every one is anxious for the purchase of property if it is possible to arrange for payments.

CORONATION PIN.

A pin with emblems signifying the purpose of our women's missionary organizations to make our Lord Jesus King of kings has been adopted by both the Council of Women for Home Missions and the Federation of Woman's Foreign Mission Boards. It is known as the "Coronation Pin," and can be bought from Miss Grace Walker, 600 Lexington Avenue, New York. Price $1.75. One hundred pins can be secured for $30 if bought in a lot.

When the Hair Falls

Afraid to use hair preparations? Certainly not, if your doctor approves. Let him decide about your using Ayer's Hair Vigor for falling hair or dandruff. It will not color the hair, nor harm or injure the hair or scalp.

A TESTIMONIAL FROM A LADY OF EXPERIENCE IN SCHOOL WORK

During the past twenty years I have been connected with the faculties of six of the very best Colleges in the South, and during this time I resided in these schools. For several years I was Lady Principal of the institution with which I was connected, and so consider myself well prepared to judge of what a school should be. I can say, without mental reservation, that Whitworth compares favorably in every respect with every one of the schools of which I have spoken. I wish specially to commend the Whitworth Faculty, which I believe is unexcelled by any in this section of the country. The atmosphere of both the religious and social life of Whitworth is exceptionally fine. The school is a "home" for girls in the best and truest sense of what a home should be. It affords me great pleasure to recommend Whitworth College.

Dear Mr. Traveler

this road has but one thing to sell
That is Transportation

Transportation Means Getting There—AND ON TIME

THE people we serve do not depend for their time upon the Government Observatory or The Western Union Telegraph Company; they set their clocks by our trains. Traveling is a pleasure when trains are on time, and the conductor smiling—for civil conductors are just as necessary now-a-days as civil engineers. Next to being on time we pride ourselves on the courtesy of our train men. It is their business to answer questions and help you in any way possible. Our double passenger service is dependable. Plan your trips so as to use these "ever on time" trains and ride on the road where there is never a grouch. The ticket agent will be glad to supply you with a folder showing the schedules in detail, and give you any other information you may desire. Trains arrive at and depart from our new Central station in Shreveport and the new Union Depot in Alexandria. Our freight service is equally reliable. Insert in your orders routing c/o L. & A. Ry. You will be pleased with our service. Full information regarding either freight or passenger schedules, rates, etc., will be gladly furnished by any agent of the L. & A. Ry., or any one of the undersigned:

General Agent,

Catarrh

The accompanying illustration shows how Dr. Blosser's Catarrh Remedy reaches all parts of the head, nose, throat and lungs that become affected by catarrh. This remedy is composed of herbs, leaves, flowers and berries (containing no tobacco or habit-forming drugs) which are smoked in a small clean pipe or made into a cigarette tube. The medicated fumes are inhaled in a perfectly natural way. A five days' free trial of the remedy, a small pipe and also an illustrated booklet explaining catarrh will be mailed upon request. Simply write a postal card or letter to DR. J. W. BLOSSER, 234 Wake St., ATLANTA, GA.

The Sunday School.

LOUISIANA NOTES.

Rev. P. O. Lowrey.

Jonesboro has the record of being the only charge in the Ruston District where the Sunday school enrollment is greater than the church membership.

Our Sunday School Board at its recent annual meeting granted a hundred Adult Students to Chaplain H. S. Johns for use in the State penitentiary. There are sixteen schools in this prison group, and the Chaplain testifies that the work there is both effective and appreciated.

Brother J. B. Kent recently had a debate in his Bible class at Lake Charles on the subject as to whether the world is growing better, one lawyer affirming the fact, and another denying it. The occasion proved to be of great interest and no little profit in stimulating thought as to our christianizing social progress.

At the recent Sunday school exhibit of the Shreveport Graded Union at the Louisiana State Fair, it was worthy of note that the visitors gave due attention to the opportunity to study the types of work and helpful books on exhibit. A Sunday school teacher that expects to make "full proof" of his ministry, like every other workman that "needeth not to be ashamed," must ever be on the outlook for the best. Such exhibits should be more common.

A recent speaker suggests that a student in school is like a machine set apart from service for repair that his future usefulness might be the greater, and that his obligation is in proportion to his opportunity. Likewise is a Sunday school scholar in the process of training for a useful life work, and the value of his training can only be judged by the service he gives the world. The effect of the Sunday school as a whole may be judged by its effect upon the community in which it exists.

Mr. H. L. Baker, the chairman of our Sunday School Board is not only a Sunday school man in theory, but is an active worker as well, one interesting thing that he is now doing being the leading of a Teacher-training class each Sunday night for the benefit of the teachers and prospective teachers at his lumber manufacturing plant at Plattenville. He agrees also to go to Donaldsonville this year, eight miles distance, and superintend the school there each Sunday morning until a local superintendent may be found.

With this batch of notes the writer turns over his commission as the Field Secretary of the Louisiana Conference Sunday School Board to enter again upon the work of the pastorate. The study of the Sunday school question for the last three years from the many means at hand, the mingling with our Sunday school workers in all grades of our schools, the study of and contact with child life, the fellowship with our pastors, and the affluence of seeing our schools grow in enrollment and efficiency, these, and many other privileges have made these three years very pleasant ones indeed. And while the anticipation of an unbroken fellowship in the home circle, and the thought of needed systematic desk study are things not to be despised; still, we are beginning already to feel lonely without the companionship of the railroad trains and the constant click of the typewriter in the secretarial work of the office. From the first we espoused the Sunday schools of the Conference as our very own, which interest has ripened into a love for our Sunday school fraternity that has grown into a sense of co-partner ownership. What a power is our Sunday school army! Who can estimate the worth of faithful Sunday school teaching! May our Methodist Sunday schools in Louisiana ever be not one whit behind the best!

In surrendering our work as Conference Sunday School Field Secretary we wish to record our sincerest appreciation for the efficient and faithful work of the Treasurer of our Board, Mr. T. W. Holloman of Alexandria. When a year ago there was a financial crisis and the Board saw no way of continuing the work, he came forward and tided over the crisis, and not only practically supported the Field Secretary for the year, but succeeded in reducing the last year's deficit very near to cancellation. And when the same condition prevailed this year, with the same loyalty, he, with the Chairman of the Board, Mr. H. L. Baker, of Plattenville, agreed not only to support the Field Secretary next year; but also to assume the responsibility of releasing the Board from any indebtedness at the end of the year. This loyal devotion to a cause has no parallel to our knowledge in any work in our Conference, and from the writer's standpoint, our Board greatly erred in not granting these two loyal Sunday school workers the privilege of doing what they proposed to do for the Sunday schools of their Church. Our laymen feel the need of helping our Sunday school workers in handling their problems, and if we can't give them the help through the Church, we can't blame them for getting it where they may. Long live such faithful and devoted laymen as thus espouse the cause of our Methodist Sunday school work in Louisiana.

NEWS AND NOTES.

By Miss Elizabeth Kilpatrick.

Mrs. R. M. Weaver's Young Ladies' Class, of Corinth, will dress, from hat to shoe, four children of a very poor family, making many garments with their own hands—"as ye have done it unto the least of these"—is a happy memory.

Mrs. T. T. O'Bryant, Batesville, has a lovely class of sixteen girls from seventeen to twenty. They call themselves the "Golden Rule Wesley Class," and have that same rule as their motto. They have attractive social activities and do many good things at home and abroad. Mrs. Oliver has here a splendid class of women, with Mrs. Vance as the progressive president and they also are doing good work. These adult classes for men and women can be made the centers of interest and possibility for the entire Sunday school.

The Sunday school in Greenwood, under Rev. J. C. Cunningham's rare leadership as pastor, and under the skilled direction of Mr. R. C. Jones, superintendent, who has not been absent or late for the last six years, is one of great interest and possibility. This same superintendent gives a silver star to those present for six months, a gold star for twelve months, and a gold one set in pearls for three years, and quite a class of lovely girls were wearing these beautiful pins. For ten years' attendance Mr. Pollard offered a gold pin set in diamonds, and Mr. William Sanders will win that pin on January 1st. He is a splendid young fellow, who presided so well at a recent boy banquet held in Greenwood. On December 21st the superintendent will give a dainty rosebud stickpin to all the Beginners present, thus putting his loving interest in each pupil in a very visible and attractive way before them. The school is graded, observes Promotion, Children's and Rally Days, and has an attractive manner which passes from class to class. The heltry has three unfinished rooms in it and after the holidays these will be renovated and three Teen Age classes comfortably placed here. Judge Hughston has a fine Wesley Mission Class of forty members, whose motto is "The Other Fellow," and they support a missionary in Korea. The new class officers are W. H. Stokes, president; Warner Wells, secretary, and C. A. Weston, treasurer. This class is planning a campaign of outlook and conquest.

MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE NOTES.

Teacher-Training.

Our Sunday schools above everything else need efficient teachers; young people are waiting to answer the call to prepare themselves for service; excellent courses are available. Only one thing is required—that the pastor as a local leader and administrator organize the class. Conviction of the need, genuine enthusiasm, intelligent direction, a small amount of time, together, make a combination that will produce a Teacher-training Class. In view of the very wide dissemination of knowledge among the young people of this day, the training of teachers for Sunday school work is not only desirable, it is absolutely necessary. The sacredness of the task is so apparent as to need no argument. Teacher-training is God's answer to a felt need. Its ultimate aim is to lead boys and girls to Christ, but the teacher must know the boys and girls, and must also know God. If trained men are needed to teach the common branches in the public schools, what shall we say of the importance of training for those who teach in the realm of moral and spiritual things, and give direction to the development of lives which are immortal? I believe that the thing of imperative necessity in the teacher, in addition to a divinely guided will and a personality enriched by Christ inspired love and sympathy, is a knowledge of the nature of the child to be ministered to, a knowledge of the Book which is to be taught, and a knowledge of the principles and methods by which that teaching can be most effectually done.

THE RADICALISM OF THE WEST.

By Rev. W. P. Andrews.

Strictures on "The Radicalism of the West," by one of our Conference organs, was prompted by the vote of the Pacific and other Western Conferences on the change of name and the adoption by them of certain memorials to the General Conference, asking for advanced legislation. Really, in relation to our brethren in the Conferences of the South, we are bone of their bone and flesh of their flesh. We are of them, and are descendants and heirs with them of the members (and those they represented) of the most radical General Conference ever held—that held at New Orleans in 1866. We have advanced some on the legislation of that Conference, but not one forward step taken by them has been repudiated. The atmosphere breathed by these forebears of ours was different from that they had inhaled before the war, and this accounted for their advanced position. The fact that their brethren (most of whom went from them) into the border, Western and Mission Conferences, go to record as favoring such propositions as a change of name, it seems to me should convince their critics in the South of the desirability of such action, if ours is to be a Church with a world-wide mission. Of course, the suffix "South" is not a handicap in the South, and if our mission is only to that field, a change of name is not needed. On some others of our "radical" propositions, as full laity rights for women, I note that some of the Conferences in the heart of the South are with us. The loyalty of the Western Conferences is proven by their vote on the Vanderbilt question.

I will give an instance illustrating the radicalism of the West: The first week in December was designated "Ministers' Week" at the University farm, at Davis. This farm is in charge of the Agricultural Department of the University of California. Here the students in that department receive the practical part of their instructions. "Ministers' Week" was for the benefit of the rural clergy of the State, to bring them into closer sympathy with those among whom they labor, and to secure their influence in the University's efforts to better the condition of the farming community. Five hundred clergymen of the various denominations availed themselves of the privileges offered. They were provided with free lodgings, the regular students moving from the dormitories into tents, and the overflow from the dormitories was provided for by the Southern Pacific Company in sleeping cars. They were fed at the farm tables. And the railroad companies furnished free transportation. Fully a month's instruction was crowded into this one week, and the ministers went away, full of enthusiasm. I prophesy that as a result the agricultural trains that are sent out annually through the country, accompanied by lecturers from the University, will be better patronized, and that there will be a large increase in the attendance in the agricultural department by farmers' sons. The University authorities inaugurated this innovation with some misgivings, but these were fully dissipated, and "Ministers' Week" will, no doubt, be repeated annually.

Another innovation was introduced by this same great University at the opening of the fall semester at Berkeley. A course of lectures on the temperance question was made a part of the curriculum. I assure you that these lectures would satisfy the most enthusiastic total abstinence and prohibition advocate. And you will hardly believe it, some time since a young divinity student registered in this school, after having left a large church school in the South because of the higher criticism taught there! Yes, the West is radical, but—

New Orleans Christian Advocate Piano Club

BEGINS ANOTHER YEAR

The Advertising Manager of the New Orleans Christian Advocate and the Manager of the Club take this opportunity to jointly express their appreciation of the confidence and enthusiastic support which they have received from the readers of this paper during the past year. We are glad to be able to report that we are more than pleased with the splendid success of the Club and that we begin the New Year without a single complaint or case of dissatisfaction on the part of the Club members. All have expressed themselves as delighted and this, of course, makes us delighted.

We wish to thank old Club members for the many kind things they have written about the Club, the Club's instruments and the Club's management. Whenever we can be of further assistance to you or your friends, we hope that you will not hesitate to call on us.

A WORD TO NEW CLUB MEMBERS

To those who need a good piano or player-piano for their home, but who have been waiting for some more convenient day, we wish to say that you will find the Club the most convenient and economical means of securing a thoroughly satisfactory instrument. The Club removes all necessity for further waiting. No matter where you live nor what your financial condition may be you should not hesitate to write at once for your copy of the Club's catalogue and full particulars. You will be pleased to find how easy, safe and convenient we have made your road to the possession of a high-grade piano or player-piano.

READ THESE LETTERS FROM OLD MEMBERS

"I have studied the plan very carefully and consider it a very liberal one. As to my piano, I consider it a splendid instrument and am proud to be in possession of it."

MRS. A. BRANNING, Bartow, Fla.

"We purchased one of your Club pianos and are well pleased with it. Would not take anything for it. All who have heard it think it to be one of the grandest they have ever heard. While we were paying for it my husband died. You gave us a life insurance clause, we were still owing $125, which was nicely settled and our note was returned to us marked paid. We thank you very much for your kindness and prompt attention, which you have shown to us. Any one who wants the best piano made should buy one of these. They will be pleased with it and will be treated as we were. We appreciate your kindness very much."

MRS. J. A. BRAMLETT, Ecru, Miss.

"Club piano received in good order. We are well pleased with it. Better and nicer than pianos sold here by agents for from $350 to $500. Our little town is pretty well stocked with pianos of different makes, and it is considered that we have the best piano in town. We thank you for your selection and prompt shipment."

J. R. WILLIAMS, Gaylesville, Ala.

"Your letter received some days ago, and will say that I will be only too glad to recommend my piano to the highest. I could not wish for more in a piano. The woodwork is beautiful and the tone is as sweet as can be. Every day I am prouder of it. I would not do without it for anything. As to your Club plan, I certainly think it is the very best way in which the pianos could be sold, and I feel, by joining the Club, I got a much better piano for the money than I could have anywhere else. Thanking you for your kindness, and for the beautiful calendar I received from you, I am."

MISS ROSA EDNA BROWN, Blowing Rock, N. C.

"I take pleasure in certifying to the excellence of the Ludden & Bates Piano. I can cheerfully and truthfully recommend it as a first-class instrument, the equal of any and the superior of most in the qualities necessary to the accompaniment of the voice, and I believe it to be more than any other suited to withstand the effects of our Florida climate."

F. W. DODGE, Jasper, Fla.

"The Ludden & Bates Piano that I purchased of you continues to give entire satisfaction. Its tones are exceedingly sweet and do not give way under the changes of season and climate, but preserve the same roundness and fullness as at first."

W. E. DEMPSTER, Waycross, Ga.

"I like my piano very much. Am sure I could not have been better pleased with any other."

Editorial

"How sour sweet music is
When time is broke, and no proportion kept;
So it is with the music of men's lives."

A bright contemporary says: "Woman's love for dry goods and man's love for wet goods cause about nine-tenths of the domestic discord that exists in the world."

Wordsworth in his day complained that plain living and high thinking were no more. We think that there is undoubtedly a connection between the two. Luxurious lives are seldom great in any respect. The simple life makes for the development of all that is best in man.

It is better to be right than consistent. The man who does not grow wiser with years of observation and experience and vary his course accordingly, is much to be pitied. Gladstone was the largest figure of the nineteenth century, yet he lacked much of always standing for precisely the same things.

"The Spugs" is an abbreviated name for the "Society for the Prevention of Useless Giving," especially at Christmas time. It was organized about a year ago. As a rule, we are opposed to more organizations, but we are inclined to believe that the sphere of work mapped out by this one justifies its formation. Undoubtedly, the feeling that costly presents must be made at Yule-tide has become a burden to many.

What ought to be said about a delegate to the General Conference who does not take a church paper? If we may believe reports that have reached us there are some such. A clause ought to be placed in the Discipline making such men ineligible to a seat in our great law-making assembly. It is ridiculous to commit to such persons the important task of legislating to conserve and promote the interests of Zion.

Dr. W. L. Watkinson, of England, possibly the most suggestive of living Methodist preachers, in one of his sermons affirms that the chief function of the Church is not that of sowing, but of reaping; that the Holy Spirit moves upon the hearts of the unsaved in advance of Christian workers, and that they may always count upon his having prepared the way for them. This fact should inspire us with courage and expectancy as we go forth to try to gather precious sheaves for the Master. Far oftener than many imagine those out of the kingdom are ready and waiting for some one to come and guide them to its entrance gate. The success of individuals in the noble work of soul-winning largely depends upon the extent to which they have the faith to appeal to the lost with confidence in the name of Christ. We must dare to attempt great things for our Lord if we expect to achieve for him anything of consequence.

THE PREACHER AND HIS WORK.

Great indeed is the minister's responsibility when he stands in the pulpit on the Sabbath. Before him are people, if his congregation be an average one, with important and varying needs. There are perhaps in his audience sorrowing ones whose hearts have recently been lacerated and torn, who have come to the house of God, hoping to hear sweet words of comfort; persons upon whose souls the Holy Spirit has been moving, and who in their strugglings are longing for light and help; the careless and unconcerned who need to be made to think and seek the way of life; Christians whose experiences and attainments are unsatisfactory and who are hungering for the strong meat of the Gospel; the discouraged and depressed who need to be given heart and hope; children who ought to be brought to Jesus before the blighting touch of Satan has polluted them, and the aged who, standing upon the threshold of eternity, need to be steadied and strengthened by renewed assurances concerning the future. The preacher who, in the face of such opportunities as these, can turn aside to speculative and unprofitable themes and waste the appointed hour of worship in an effort to parade his own learning or oratory and win applause for himself, is to be profoundly pitied. We can scarcely conceive of a more awful betrayal of a weighty obligation than this. And yet candor compels us to admit that we fear that instances of it are not uncommon in the modern Christian Church.

If we are truly called to the Christian ministry, we are commissioned to preach the Gospel—not something else. The pulpit is not a lecture platform maintained for imparting instruction of a secular character, or the general entertainment of the public. Least of all is it a place for discussing the canonicity of the books of the Bible and for stating and explaining the views of so-called rationalistic theologians. We are to feed the flock of Christ. The sheep and the lambs are to be given the Word in its purity and strength. And Oh, how they are yearning for it! Nothing is needed in the world to-day so much as the unadulterated Gospel of Christ, and nothing draws like it. It is not outworn, and never will be, for the reason that it alone can meet the deep needs and longings of the human soul in the storm and stress of life and in its inevitable grapplings with the perplexing problems of the future. He who proclaims what Jesus taught need never fear that his message will not be up-to-date. The Man of Galilee is contemporary with all the ages, and the essential truths of his revelation are as unchangeable and eternal as the nature of God himself.

Preach the Word, brethren. Preach it plainly and simply so that a child can understand it. Grasp its great doctrines and so interpret and illustrate them that the ordinary man may see their significance and appreciate their force. Avoid big words as you would a veritable plague. The loftiest commendation that can be given a preacher is to say that "the common people hear him gladly." When the common people hear, one gladly, so will others. Truth is never so powerful as when stripped of all that is superfluous. The noblest eloquence, like the best poetry, must be embodied in a language that appeals to the universal heart of humanity.

Preach the Word. Preach it tenderly, fervently, lovingly. Preach it with a note of authority. A gospel that has to be perpetually debated cannot be expected to stir the people. There is power in the expression, "Thus saith the Lord." If a messenger's utterances or manner show a lack of conviction and certainty upon his part, the audience will catch his spirit. Doubt produces doubt, and faith begets faith. Therefore, no man can preach with the highest efficiency who does not preach out of his own experience. No knowledge is so potent to influence others as that which is certified to by one's own consciousness, which never fails to stamp upon what it approves a label that human intuition can discover.

Strive to become an effective preacher. This is no easy task. To do so, one must live upon a high plane. He must crucify self and spend much time in real communion with God. He must be studious—he must master the Bible and other helpful books. He must learn human nature and keep up his points of contact with men. He must be filled with the Holy Spirit and constantly taught by Him. He must be a man of one supreme aim and one work. He must guard against letting the many demands made upon him convert him into a sort of ecclesiastical piddler. Our high calling is to preach the gospel. Preaching is God's mightiest agency for the conversion of the world. Nothing can take its place. The true preacher preaches everywhere—by the fireside, in the office and shop, and on the street—tactfully adapting his messages to the needs and opportunities of the occasion. But the pulpit, whether in or out of doors, should be the throne of his power.

The theological seminary cannot make a preacher. One of the right kind, rightly used, may greatly help to do so; but wrongly used, it may spoil the workman in the making. Too often the product of such institutions has been the prating pedant, governed by a selfish cultural ideal, rather than by that of a consuming and self-forgetful evangelical purpose. The fate warned against by Milton has overtaken him:

"Who reads
Incessantly, and to his reading brings not
A spirit and genius equal or superior,
Uncertain and unsettled still remains,
Deep versed in books and shallow in himself."

By all means, let our young men seek the best preparation for the ministry, but let them not fail to rate human learning at its true value. It is not the whole, nor indeed the chief part of the equipment of the effective prophet of the Lord. Even of things human it lacks much of being all that is needed. In the field of politics, who can reach and lead the people? The scholar? Nay, usually not so. It is the man who has sprung from among them, who has things in common with them, who understands them, and who has not gotten too far away from them, that they will hear and heed. Should we not learn a lesson from this fact? Then, as we have already suggested, there is the spiritual equipment, which is the first in importance and the most indispensable of all. Paul placed it high above all the wisdom of the world. The only really efficacious preaching is that accompanied by the Holy Ghost sent down from heaven. Every other kind is but as sounding brass or a tinkling cymbal.

WHO IS THE HONEST MAN?

George Herbert.

Who is the honest man?
He that doth still and strongly good pursue,
To God, his neighbor and himself most true,
Whom neither force nor fawning can Unfix or wrench from giving all their due.

Whose honesty is not
So loose or easy that a ruffling wind
Can blow away, or glittering look it blind;
Who rides his sure and easy trot
While the world now rides by, now lags behind.

Who, when great trials come
Nor seeks nor shuns them; but doth calmly stay Till he the thing and the example weigh:
All being brought into a sum,
What place or person calls for, he doth pay.

Whom none can work or woo
To use in anything a trick or sleight,
For above all things he abhors deceit;
His words and works, and fashion too,
All of a piece, and all are clear and straight.
—Methodist Recorder.

AN IMPORTANT CONFERENCE

By Rev. G. B. Winton, D.D.

Though the usual mid-winter missionary institute has been postponed till next summer, Dr. Pinson called a conference of Annual Conference Missionary Secretaries to meet in Nashville Dec. 17-18. The following were in attendance: Frank Siler, Western North Carolina Conference; C. Henley, Illinois Conference; D. L. Blakemore, Baltimore Conference; W. I. Canter, Western Virginia Conference; Clarence Burton, St. Louis Conference; H. M. Long, Northwest Texas Conference; W. A. Russell, Memphis Conference; R. E. Turnipseed, South Carolina Conference; George H. Givan, New Mexico Conference; R. M. Archibald, North Alabama Conference; John S. Jenkins, North Georgia Conference; W. H. Budd, South Georgia Conference; J. D. Bundy, North Carolina Conference; J. J. Stowe, Tennessee Conference. The Secretaries of the General Board were also present throughout the session.

This was a conference in the precise sense of the word. A list of topics had been made out. These were taken up as the delegates sat around a long table in the hotel where they were entertained. There were no set speeches or papers. The discussions were easy and informal. The spirit of the conference was deeply earnest and spiritual. The members were conscious that they were about their Father's business.

Toward the last a committee of four were appointed to gather up the findings of the body, especially for the benefit of those Conference Secretaries who had been unable to be present. The report of the committee was presented at the closing session, which was made the more agreeable by a luncheon taken by the members of the Conference together, and unanimously adopted. Following are some of the principal paragraphs of this report:

As soon as possible after the session of the Annual Conference a meeting of the Conference Board of Missions should be held, at which thorough-going plans should be laid for the year. The presiding elders and lay leaders should be urged to attend this meeting. It should be pre-eminently a business meeting and be given to open discussion of plans and methods with very few, if any, public or set addresses. Special attention should be given to evangelism, missionary specials, missions in the Sunday school and Epworth League, the Missionary Committee and the Every-Member Canvass, Presiding Elders' Institutes and the mission charges in the Conference. (This is the meeting that has usually been spoken of as "the mid-year meeting." We are of the opinion, however, that a meeting at the beginning of the year is preferable to one in the middle of the year.)

The importance of the District Institute, for which the Discipline makes the presiding elder responsible, cannot be too strongly emphasized. It should be composed of pastors, church leaders,

Sunday school superintendents and fourth vice-presidents of Epworth Leagues. Plans should be thoroughly considered and laid out for uniting the forces of the District to carry out the lines of work discussed and provided for in the meeting of the Board referred to above, with special emphasis on Missionary Institutes throughout the District. The Missionary Secretary should co-operate to the fullest extent in these Institutes and put himself at the disposal of the Institute for aiding and carrying out their plans as far as he may be able.

The educational and inspirational value of missionary institutes for churches and circuits has been fully demonstrated. We would suggest a two days' Institute for all stations—preferably Sunday and Monday—or, if during the week, two nights and a day; and an all-day mass meeting with a basket dinner for circuits, but this circuit rally should not take the place of a mass meeting or Institute for every country church as provided for in the Discipline. The Conference Secretary should co-operate with the presiding elder and pastor in arranging and conducting such Institutes, and should offer his services for such itineraries as may be arranged for him by the presiding elders.

The first great need of the home base is a revival throughout the Church. There should be a Committee on Evangelism in every Conference, and an organized effort, by the help of leading pastors, for weak churches and the use of evangelists under the Board of Missions to secure a spiritual awakening in every church.

The movement to raise a quarter million dollars for a building fund for the home and foreign fields, so auspiciously launched at Junaluska last summer, is worthy of the united effort of the entire Church. Conference Missionary Secretaries should earnestly co-operate with the Board Secretaries and with leaders of the Laymen's Missionary Movement for the speedy completion of this important movement.

The growing interest in missions on the part of the Leagues and Sunday schools should be fostered, and Secretaries should urge that amounts contributed in this way be counted as a missionary surplus or special, and thus be made to swell the aggregate income instead of being swallowed up in the meager and altogether inadequate assessment. We greatly recognize the breadth of vision and generous efforts of the Secretaries of the Epworth League Board in making the League a vital missionary force, and rejoice in the increasing income for the budget in Cuba from this source. We indulge the hope that by 1915 the Leagues will reach their goal in carrying the entire budget of Cuba, and we pledge our best efforts to this end.

It is gratifying to witness the increasing disposition of men of wealth throughout the Christian world to give large sums to the cause of missions. This is as it should be since the small giving of the past will neither meet the demands of the hour nor furnish a sufficient opportunity for the accumulations and enlightened liberality of our day. Our leaders should bring the needs and opportunities of the cause of missions to the attention of men and women of means in our own Church for large personal gifts, life annuities and bequests. We should also bend our energies for recruits to the emergency corps planned by our Laymen's Missionary Movement, until they number at least 10,000 Minute Men of Methodism.

We believe the financial plan set forth in "The Financial Method for Methodists" is a well-nigh ideal system for our churches, and shall continue to urge its adoption throughout the Church. The weekly offering, according to the Duplex method, is the best plan yet invented for the solution of our financial problems. In every church a carefully prepared and thorough-going Every-Member Canvass should be made. In congregations using the budget system we would urge a straight member-to-member canvass to secure a free-will offering as a surplus or special for missions.

There is no better medium for reaching our people with missionary information than our Conference organ. We should aid in increasing their circulation and that of the Missionary Voice, and freely furnish missionary matter for their columns. The projection of the Southern Missionary News Bureau we regard as a wise and timely move. Its astounding success and the eagerness with which the secular papers, great and small, are accepting and using the service is a most hopeful indication of widespread missionary interest.

We believe it impossible for the Conference Boards to do their work properly without requiring and receiving regular reports from the men who serve mission charges in the Conference.

After much consideration of the subject we are firmly convinced that every Conference Board, where it is at all practicable, should put a Secretary in the field to give all his time to the carrying forward of a vigorous policy for Conference, Home, and Foreign Missions, provided always that a competent man can be had; but this position should in no case be filled by a weak or inefficient appointee.

Above all, we should put increasing emphasis on prayer. The task before us is too great for human powers. "It is not by might nor by power, but by my Spirit, saith the Lord of hosts." "Ask of me, and I will give thee the heathen for thine inheritance, and the uttermost parts of the earth for thy possession." Our Lord can afford to despise his enemies and have them in derision, but he must wait on the prayers of his friends. The subject of prayer should be emphasized in every Institute, and the great duty and privilege of intercession urged on every occasion. God commands it, the missionaries plead for it, and our success waits on it. If we fail in everything else let us be men of prayer, and call on the Church to "advance on its knees."

CONVERSION OF LEWIS (LEW) WALLACE.

Gen. Wallace has the distinction of being "a soldier, diplomat, lawyer and author." From 1881 to 1885 he was United States' Minister to Turkey. His book entitled "Ben Hur, a tale of the Christ," has been given a high place in the religious literature of this and other countries.

An intimate friend of General Wallace has given an account of his conversion to Christianity, and what led to the writing of "Ben Hur." And we recommend the skeptic to ponder the case and knock at the same door that led Wallace into the temple of truth.

The following is the account:

"Before and for some time after the Civil War General Wallace was inclined to be skeptical on religious matters, particularly as to the divinity of Christ. One day, while traveling he found himself in company with Colonel Ingersoll. Their conversation turned on religious topics, and in the course of the discussion Ingersoll presented his views. Wallace listened, was much impressed and finally remarked that he was not yet prepared to agree with Ingersoll on certain very extreme propositions relative to the non-divinity of Christ. Ingersoll thereupon urged Wallace to give the matter the careful study and research that he himself had done, expressing his confidence that Wallace would, after doing so, fully acquiesce in the Ingersoll view. After parting, Wallace determined to give the matter the most thorough investigation. For six years he thought, studied and searched. At the end of that time "Ben Hur" was produced. I met Wallace at the Denison Hotel, in Indianapolis, not long after the book had been published. The book was naturally the topic of our conversation. After having told me the story he turned to me and said: 'The result of my long study was the absolute conviction that Jesus of Nazareth was not only a Christ and the Christ, but that he was also my Christ, my Savior and my Redeemer. That fact settled in my own mind, I wrote Ben Hur.'"—L. T. T., in The Bible Champion.

AN INFIDEL'S INCONSISTENCY.

A man, seeing a Bible in a Cleveland lawyer's office, not long ago, referred contemptuously to the Book, declaring it to be over-rated and of little real merit or importance; and, on being asked if he had ever read it, replied that he had not, further than a few passages occasionally.

A few minutes later the lawyer asked him his opinion of the commentaries of Blackstone, and he said that he did not consider himself competent to express an opinion on the subject, as Blackstone was universally recognized as the great authority on law. Besides, his reading of Blackstone was very limited, he added.

"And yet," said the lawyer, "you evidently think yourself qualified to pass an opinion concerning the value of a Book that the greatest men agree far surpasses Blackstone and every other literary work the world has known."

Such is the conceit and ignorance of the average skeptic when any question relating to the Bible is under consideration. He speaks ill of the things he knows nothing of, and because he prefers darkness to light is wilfully blind to truths that can be recognized by unprejudiced persons who are possessed of any intelligence at all.—The Bible Champion.

A LETTER FROM MR. J. A. STOCKWELL.

(The following letter was written more than thirty days ago to Mr. A. M. Mayo of Lake Charles, La., and was posted at Grand Bassom Cote D'Ivoire in Fauti, a Province of Guinea, on the northern coast of the Gulf of Guinea, where the steamer "Anversille" made its second stop on the voyage. We publish this interesting communication by courtesy of Mr. Mayo.)

Dear Folks at Home: As we are to have another chance to mail letters to-morrow, I will write you a few lines to let you know that we are still right side up with care.

We have had a very uneventful voyage so far. We are now along the coast, about five miles from land and have been about that close all day. This morning we passed through a great number of "fleets" of natives fishing. There they were, out as far almost as we could see past where we were, and they were in little dugouts, bobbing up and down on the water like corks. There were usually only two to the canoe. I certainly did not envy their means of earning their living, especially as a shark was sedately swimming around our boat, but I see that there is nothing like getting used to a thing.

All the morning we were sailing along the coast of Liberia, and are now opposite French territory; saw the wreck of a steamer that had tried to land at one of these little ports during a fog the latter part of last month. There was a wireless station there but no light house. We have not stopped at any place that was not well supplied with lights.

Dakir is a strange looking place. It is a French port, strongly fortified and has a good harbor, and is quite a good sized town, with paved sidewalks, good streets, electric lights, etc. The natives are mostly Mohammedans. There don't seem to be much there but the things naturally growing out of the French using it as their naval base for this part of the world.

The costumes of the natives were a sight to behold! Most all of them had the Mohammedan dress, which includes every color of the rainbow.

We are just getting into the rain belt. The rainy season follows the sun, so now it is on the south of the equator, but we are getting into the edge of it. It is really quite a relief as it has been pretty hot until the rains began, but I don't see much difference between this and the summer weather in Louisiana, so far. Of course, it is a little too early to make much comment on the weather conditions.

We have begun to study the Baluba language, under Dr. Morrison. He gives a talk on the conditions of missionary life in the Congo one day and the next in Baluba. He is very fine in both positions. In fact, he and Bishop Lambuth are both exceptional men, and we consider it a high privilege to be with them.

We got our guns out of the hold this morning, as when we get to Boma we must have them stamped by the officers, and I think get a license to take with us. With two Winchester repeating shotguns, a Winchester 401 rifle, a double barrel rifle, about 45 calibre, a Winchester 25-20, and one or two automatic pistols, I think we will be able to give a pretty good account of ourselves if any big game should come our way.

Before we left Brussels I bought (for the mission) four dozen plates for my camera. When I told the Bishop about the number he told me that we had better order more; so at the last stop we sent back to London for eight dozen more. He is very anxious to have a lot of good pictures to take back with him, as he must proceed at once to raise more money to keep things going, and he feels that pictures go a long way toward doing the work. Hope that I can get some good ones, and don't see any reason why I cannot as I got the very best materials that I could get—made especially for the tropics.

I have been doing a little figuring on the length of time it takes to get to our station, and as near as I can get it, it takes at least 61 days of actual traveling, not counting any time at all for delays, waiting for boats, etc., which would take, no doubt, a month more; in fact, three months would be making pretty good time.

We will certainly be glad when we can hear from home again, as the further off we get the more we want letters. But I guess we will have to content ourselves with few letters from now on. In my last I told you that my address would be Lusambo, but if there is anything of importance to write about, send one to Luebo also, as it might reach me there first, and anyway there would be a double chance in case one letter was lost. Be sure to put the full address down as I gave it. Will also send both of our addresses with this.

Have found out that pineapples grow wild in our part of the country. Am certainly glad of it as they are the favorite fruit of both Mrs. Stockton and myself. With love, from

LARGEST GAIN OF THE CENTURY.

There will be rejoicing throughout the denomination over the official announcement that the Methodist Episcopal Church made during the past year a net gain of 111,869 in the number of its full members and 37,741 in its probationers. This is the largest increase in the present century, and one of the most striking in the history of the denomination. It is all the more significant when taken in connection with the conditions that have confronted the Church during the past few years. A year ago the gain was 64,190 in the full membership, while there was a decrease in the number of probationers of 1,516. Not only has there been this excellent gain in membership during the present year, but increases are reported in nearly all the statistical columns. The Sunday schools, for instance, show an increase of 420,483 in membership—as against an increase of 89,018 last year—and an increase of 5,241 in the number of officers and teachers, and of 185 in the number of schools. There is also an increase of 150 in the number of ministers. The only decreases are reported in the number of local preachers, which show a falling off of 187, and in the number of senior members of the Epworth League. Here there has been a loss of 11,008. The Junior Leaguers, however, show an increase of 1,045. These figures are published in the Methodist Year Book, which has just come from the press, and which should have a very large sale throughout the denomination. The facts it reveals are for the most part available nowhere else.

A most interesting study of the denomination by episcopal areas has been made. It is found that the largest increase in these sub-divisions was in the Cincinnati area, where there has been a net gain in the membership of the Church of 32,689. There is but one area in this country where there has been a decrease, and that is at New Orleans, where the falling off is 1,124. The Boston area, which includes the six New England Conferences, shows a gain of 2,979.

We are pleased to be able to publish this very encouraging report. There was cause for heart searching in the denomination a few years ago, when the gains fell to 32,116. We believe that the emphasis which has been placed upon evangelism through the General Conference Commission on Evangelism and the work that has been expended in the Sunday schools of the Church have made possible this excellent increase this year. But back of this, it is generally conceded, has been the intensive leadership which has been given the Church through the division of the denomination into episcopal areas. Never before in the history of our denomination has the Church enjoyed the close, personal, and efficient direction and inspiration of the general superintendents that has been the case since the General Conference at Minneapolis. We are beginning to reap the benefit, and we believe that the results will be still greater as the system is further developed.

Let Methodism, as it contemplates these figures, thank God and take courage—thank God for what has been accomplished, and take courage for still greater efforts in order to realize still greater results in reaching men and women for Christ.—Zion's Herald.

BREAD CAST ON THE WATERS.

When Ex-Governor Hanly, of Indiana, was a boy thirteen years old, he heard for the first time in his life a great orator. He walked from his little home village twelve miles to Urbana, the county seat of Champaign County. It was the first time he had ever been at the county seat; it was the first time he had ever seen a great crowd of people. There were several thousand gathered to hear the Lieutenant-Governor of Indiana, William Comer. The Lieutenant-Governor's speech that day made a tremendous impression in little thirteen-year-old Frank Hanly's heart. To him it was a call to the heroic, a call to righteousness, a call to public life. He said to himself as he walked back the twelve miles again that night: "I am going to enter into public life when I become a man." Sure enough he did. The time came when he was sent to Congress; later he was elected Governor of the State of Indiana. That he never forgot the influence of Lieutenant-Governor Comer is shown by the fact that one of the first things he did when he came into office was to secure one of the university trusteeships for the widow of Lieutenant-Governor Comer. This woman had been left with almost no means of support. On receiving her notification of the income which would be hers as a result of the appointment, she went to Governor Hanly and asked him how it happened. She said: "I know you have been greatly embarrassed by applicants for this very place. I made no application. How does it happen that I received the position?" The Governor then told her the incident which is recorded, and said: "I have never forgotten what your husband did for me in the speech he made that day at the county seat when I was but a lad. This is merely some of the bread cast upon the waters which is returning to you."—New York Christian Advocate.

Church News

The resources of Depauw University, at Green Castle, Indiana, have within the past few weeks been increased by donations and bequests amounting to $211,000.

Our two churches in Jackson, Tenn., have increased the salaries of their pastors as follows: Hays' Avenue, $100; First Church, $200. Rev. R. A. Clark is the pastor of the latter.

It is stated that the Mormons are soon to have a church in Washington City. Hitherto their services at the National Capitol have been held in the home of Senator Reed Smoot, of Utah.

Hendrix College, at Conway, Ark., has enrolled 260 students, about 80 more than the usual number up to this time of the year. In the same State about $50,000 has been pledged in the campaign to endow Galloway College (at Searcy).

The volume which gives the addresses delivered at the convention of Methodist men, held some time since in Indianapolis, Ind. (a gathering of the Methodist Episcopal Church), is entitled, "Militant Methodism." It is just from the press.

The North Georgia still remains the largest Annual Conference in Southern Methodism, with the Virginia a close second. The Atlanta District of the first-named Conference reported last year the reception of 1000 members by profession of faith.

The Memphis Conference Female Institute, at Jackson, Tenn., of which Rev. H. G. Hawkins is President, has increased the number of boarding students as compared with the number last year about 50 per cent. The local patronage is also said to be quite encouraging.

From the Pittsburgh Christian Advocate, we take the following: "It is said that John Bunyan is the only great reformer who is known to have had red hair." We suppose that our contemporary meant to restrict this observation to male reformers. If not, we dare say that the testimony of not a few husbands would refute it.

Rev. J. W. Lipsey, A. M., D. D., an esteemed and useful Baptist minister who had been preaching for 55 years and who was well known in Arkansas, Mississippi, and Tennessee, died at the Baptist Hospital in Memphis on December 16. He was the father of Rev. P. I. Lipsey, the accomplished Editor of The Baptist Record (issued at Jackson, Miss.).

Dr. L. F. Beaty, who for nineteen years has been one of the Sunday School Editors of the M. E. Church, South, quietly filling an important position with great acceptability, recently spent a Sabbath in Conway, S. C., where he was born. He occupied the pulpit of our Church in that city both in the morning and evening, delivering discourses which a local paper says made a profound impression. Though his work requires him to reside in Nashville, Dr. Beaty is a member of the South Carolina Conference.

The Northwestern Christian Advocate says: "When Oklahoma's capital was moved from Guthrie to Oklahoma City, the former State capitol grounds and buildings were sold to the Methodist University for a nominal sum. The gift, which was opposed on the ground that the university is a sectarian institution, has been confirmed by the courts, it being held that an institution which is open to all classes and sects is not sectarian." We respectfully call the attention of Mr. Carnegie and all Carnegieized Southern Methodists to this decision.

Dr. J. B. Lawrence, who formerly was pastor of the First Baptist Church of New Orleans and later of the First Baptist Church of Columbus, Miss., has succeeded Dr. A. V. Rowe, as State Missionary Secretary for his denomination in Mississippi. Brother Rowe had held this position for many years and filled it with great efficiency. Dr. Lawrence is a man of fine capacity and tireless energy, and we predict that the Baptists of the Magnolia State under his leadership will show an increasingly aggressive missionary spirit. The headquarters of the new Secretary will be Jackson, Miss.

Through the courtesy of the new pastor, Rev. J. M. Workman, we have in hand the 1913 Year Book of the Winfield Memorial Church of Little Rock, Ark. This church has been in existence for 45 years and now has its second house of worship. The membership numbers over 1000, and the Sunday school enrollment is about the same. The Epworth League is about 200 strong, and a missionary pastor, Rev. W. G. Borchers, is supported in Rio De Janeiro, Brazil. The pastor of this stirring congregation for the past four years was Rev. P. C. Fletcher, who during his quadrennium added nearly 600 persons to its membership.

THE UNITED MISSIONARY CAMPAIGN.

H. Clay Lilly, Field Secretary Laymen's Missionary Movement.

This great campaign, inaugurated by more than fifty of the largest Foreign and Home Mission Boards of the United States and Canada, has been carried on vigorously since early fall. It is estimated that six hundred conferences, in as many cities, will be held during this fall and winter. When it is remembered that each one of these conferences reaches a number of churches, some idea of the breadth of this campaign is apparent at once.

And when it is remembered that each one of these conferences means the adoption of new methods, and a permanent increase in missionary giving on the part of some churches, their value is seen at once. There is very little expense attached to one of these conferences, and this, when shared by all of the churches of a city is inconsiderable for any one of them. Of how much value a conference can be is evidenced by the words of the two pastors quoted below, whose testimony might be multiplied many times over.

One of them says: "Referring to the recent session of the United Missionary Campaign held in our town, I wish to say to you, as I am saying to my friends everywhere, that I have lived in Mt. Carroll fifteen years, during which time many good and great things have happened; but this conference is the biggest thing, and has set in motion a movement which means more to us at home and abroad in the Kingdom of Christ than any other thing our town has experienced during these years."

Another pastor writes: "You don't know how much good your coming to us has done. I believe this Laymen's Conference will touch with spiritual power the various congregations of our city. The meeting has been highly educational, spiritual, interesting, and in every way helpful."

During January, February and March Conferences will be held in the South, in Virginia, North Carolina, South Carolina, Georgia, Florida, Kentucky, Tennessee, Alabama, and Mississippi, and later in Louisiana, Arkansas and Texas.

The Home and Foreign Mission Boards of all the Churches of the South are cordially supporting this campaign and some of their most effective men are heard in these conferences from time to time. It is a great manifestation of the spiritual unity of the Church, and this immense movement, international and interdenominational, goes forward with increasing power.

Nashville, Tenn.

THE WILL OF ANDREW JACKSON.

At "The breakfast" in Washington, December 11, one of the speakers, Senator Webb of Tennessee, told a story of Andrew Jackson. A gentleman asked one of the negro servants of Andrew Jackson if his master was pious. "Doan know, suh," was the answer. "Is President Jackson going to Heaven?" "Doan know, suh; but I knows dis if Massa Jackson am headed dat way, he shu git dar."

Senator Webb then said: "The spirit of Andrew Jackson, the will that will not sleep or listen to defeat, is abroad in this temperance crusade. It is headed for prohibition. It will never acknowledge defeat. The saloon has got to go. God grant it may go in my day."—Central Christian Advocate.

To think about oneself all the while is to turn energy in on oneself continually; that might much better go out in unselfish action. The self-conscious person needs to pour out this force of attention and thought, instead of concentrating it on self and wasting it in awkward embarrassment and hurt pride.—Great Thoughts.

THE LAWYER WORSTED.

We take from the Christian Guardian, of Toronto, Canada, the following interesting bit of humor:

The young lawyer didn't like the minister, and so he thought to corner him. "Now, doctor," he asked, "suppose the parsons and the devil should have a lawsuit, which party do you think would win?"

"The devil, unquestionably," replied the minister.

"Ah!" chuckled the young lawyer. "And will you tell us why?"

"Because he would have all the lawyers on his side."

Telephone Always on Guard

There is never a moment, day or night, when our Bell Telephone is not a protection.

In the busy hours of the day and the silent watches of the night, the switchboard operator is always ready to answer a call.

The telephone is as much a part of the protective system of each community as the police and fire departments.

There's always a feeling of security in the knowledge that close at hand is the means of calling aid quickly when you most need it.

More than 70,000 cities and towns are protected day and night by the Bell Telephone system; 7,500,000 Bell telephones are on guard. In thousands of rural communities it is the chief reliance in emergencies and times of danger.

Secular News and Comment

In the list of those to whom titles of honor were given in England on New Year's day was Mr. James Bryce, formerly Ambassador to the United States, who was made a Viscount.

The number of voters paying their poll tax for the past year in the city of New Orleans is 41,931, which is 800 less than the number in 1912. Only men who have paid this tax can vote in 1914 and 1915.

The number of suicides in the United States last year was 13,106 as compared with 12,981 in 1912. The proportion of suicides between men and women remained about the same, the division being 8,602 males and 4504 females.

In an interview given out last week, Speaker Champ Clark expressed the opinion that the public affairs of the nation are fast assuming such proportions that Congress will soon have to continue its sessions throughout the entire year.

Agriculturally, the past year in the United States was one of unprecedented prosperity. The volume of most of the leading crops fell short of the highest mark, but the prices were such that their value footed up the enormous sum of $10,000,000,000.

The present winter in Europe is said to be the coldest and most disagreeable experienced in many years. Even in Southern France the temperature has gone below zero, Fahrenheit, and the cold in Spain and Portugal has been so intense that it has caused numerous deaths.

The United States Naval Aeronautic School will for the winter be transferred from Annapolis to Pensacola, Fla., and given quarters aboard the Battleship Mississippi, the broad decks of which are said to afford excellent facilities for the handling of hydro-aeroplanes in practical sea work.

The noted astronomer, Professor Seth C. Chandler, died at Wellesley, Mass., on December 31, aged 67 years. He served on the Government Coast Survey, edited the Astronomical Journal for ten years, and received numerous honors for his research work, including a gold medal from the Royal Astronomical Society.

According to the January number of the Review of Reviews, Mr. Garrison, the Secretary of War, estimates the expenditure of the leading nations of the world for military aeronautics for 1913 as follows: France, $7,400,000; Germany, $5,000,000; Russia, $5,000,000; England, $3,000,000; Italy, $2,100,000; Japan (approximately), $1,000,000; Mexico, $400,000; United States, $125,000.

How is the following for a New Year's press dispatch from the Holy City: "Jerusalem, Jan. 1.—General Francois Xavier Bonnier, a French aviator, making the flight from Paris to Cairo, landed near the Pool of Siloam on New Year's Eve. The arrival of Gen. Bonnier's aeroplane, the first ever seen by the inhabitants of the holy city, created great excitement. The entire populace turned out to see the machine and welcome the airman."

The population of New York City is estimated by Dr. W. H. Guilfoyle, statistician of the Board of Health, to be at this time 5,376,966, which is said to be approximately a million more than the population of London, leaving out its suburbs. The rate of growth of the American metropolis is much more rapid than of its great rival across the seas, and it is only a question of a little time when it will be the first city on the globe, if it is not already so.

Fewer births, marriages, and deaths was New York City's record for 1913. The number of births decreased from 135,655 in 1912 to 135,104 last year, and the number of marriages from 51,703 to 51,257. To appreciate the full significance of these figures, they must be considered in the light of the fact that the population of the city is rapidly augmenting. There were 73,901 deaths within the municipal limits, representing a decrease of .35 per 1000 of population. The greatest conservation of life was among children, especially infants.

Rudyard Kipling is said to be practically non-interviewable, but some time since Mr. Irvin Cobb, who had been touring Europe, met him in a social way and recently he gave the New York Evening Post Mr. Kipling's sentiments concerning a number of things. Of the American Civil War, the great Englishman is represented as having said: "It was the greatest epic of the Anglo-Saxon breed—more, it was the greatest epic in the history of mankind. And it hasn't been written—no, nobody has written it yet. It is not yet far enough in the past; you can't get the perspective. But it will be written, and when its written as it should be, a masterwork will be born."

The United Railroads of San Francisco, which also own some of the street-car lines of that municipality, on January 1 presented 1587 of their employees insurance policies aggregating $1,250,000. According to the contract of the laboring men with these companies every employee who has been three years in the service is insured for $250; every one who has served for four years; for $500; and every one has served for five or more years, for $1000. This arrangement between the railroads of the Far West and their workmen strikes us as an admirable one. Surely when capital thus manifests an interest in the welfare of labor the day when they will be more in accord and trust each other more fully is not far distant.

A dispatch from Chicago a few days since told of the supposed theft of a tiny bit of radium which in a small platinum capsule was being used in the treatment of a cancer patient. Noticing that the capsule when placed in the incision made in the arm of the subject had ceased to have any effect, it was opened and lo! the speck of the precious substance was gone. A wonderful thing indeed is this radium! It is said that if it was stolen and the person who took it does not know something of its properties, it may kill him; or if he should secrete it, it would disclose its presence by its effect upon the surrounding objects. The piece lost, which is stated to have been half the size of a pin's head, was valued at $4500. Indeed, so scarce and expensive is radium that it is affirmed that a record is kept of every single particle of it that exists in the world.

MRS. W. R. RAINEY.

Dear Brother Meek: Mrs. Lou Elliott Rainey, widow of the late Rev. W. R. Rainey, who was a member of the North Mississippi Conference for 35 years, fell asleep in Jesus in the home of her youngest daughter at Sturgis, Miss., on December 28, 1913. She was 80 years, 2 months and 10 days old when the Master's summons came. She was converted and joined the M. E. Church, South, at the age of 12 years; in fact, she grew up from infancy under Christian influences, being the daughter of a Methodist preacher. She was strong in the faith, and delighted in encouraging others and in doing good in every possible way. Though not able to attend services very often in her last days, she was always interested in the Church and her pastor.

Several weeks before her decease she was stricken with illness and suffered greatly; but she said through it all that she was trusting in the Lord and that she was prepared and willing to go at any time. She was esteemed and loved by all who knew her. Strength was given to this writer by her sympathetic words and the assurance that she always prayed for him. Her funeral was conducted at Starkville, Miss., by Dr. T. C. Wier and myself. May her loved ones look to Christ for peace and comfort! Her pastor,

B. F. BULLARD.

(The announcement made above will carry grief to many hearts in North Mississippi. As the wife of a faithful itinerant minister, Sister Rainey bore herself worthily, and left behind the fragrance of a good name. That she has passed to a rich and well-earned reward, none who knew her will doubt. We extend sympathy to the bereaved, and pray that the Holy Spirit may comfort and sustain them.—Editor of the Advocate.)

WAR.

The last of the savage instincts is war. The cave man's club made law and procured food. Might decreed right. Warriors were saviors. In Nazareth a carpenter laid down the saw to preach the brotherhood of man. Twelve centuries afterwards his followers marched to the Holy Land to destroy all who differed with them in the worship of the God of Love. Triumphant they wrote, "In Solomon's Porch and in his temple our men rode in the blood of the Saracens up to the knees of their horses." History is an appalling tale of war. In the seventeenth century Germany, France, Sweden, and Spain warred for thirty years. At Magdeburg 30,000 out of 36,000 were killed regardless of sex or age. In Germany schools were closed for a third of a century; homes burned, women outraged, towns demolished and the untilled land became a wilderness. Two-thirds of Germany's property was destroyed and 18,000,000 of her citizens were killed because men quarreled about the way to glorify "the Prince of Peace." Marching through rain or snow, sleeping on the ground, eating stale food or starving, contracting diseases and facing guns that fire 600 times a minute, for 50 cents a day—this is the soldier's life. At the window sits a widowed mother crying. Little children, with tearful faces pressed against the pane, watch and wait. Their means of livelihood, their home, their happiness is gone. Fatherless children, broken-hearted women, sick, disabled and dead men. This is the wage of war. We spend more money preparing to kill each other than we do in teaching people to live. We spend more money building one battleship than in the annual maintenance of all our State universities. The financial loss resulting from destroying one another's homes in the civil war would have built 15,000,000 houses each costing $2,000. We pray for love but prepare for hate. We preach peace, but equip for war.

"Were half the power that fills the world with terror,
Were half the wealth bestowed on camp and court
Given to redeem this world from error
There would be no need of arsenal and fort."

War only defers a question. No issue will ever really be settled until it is settled rightly. Like rival "gun gaugs" in a back alley, the nations of the world, through the bloody ages, have fought over their differences. Denver cannot fight Chicago and Iowa cannot fight Ohio. Why should Germany be permitted to fight France, or Bulgaria fight Turkey? When mankind rises above creeds, colors and countries; when we are citizens, not of a nation, but of the world, the armies and navies of the earth will constitute an international police force to preserve the peace and the dove will take the eagle's place. Our differences will be settled by an international court with the power to enforce its mandates. In times of peace, prepare for peace. The wages of war are the wages of sin and the "wages of sin is death."—Leslie's Weekly.

FOOD FOR THE THOUGHTFUL.

It is when I am told that God is love that I commit all judgment to him gladly. It is when I believe that some one loves me that I am never afraid to be myself.—G. H. Morrison.

If thou neglect thy love to thy neighbor, in vain thou professest thy love to God; for by thy love to God thy love to thy neighbor is gotten and by thy love to thy neighbor thy love to God is nourished.—Quarles.

"We are so accustomed to a chivalrous reverence for women that we are apt to ignore the fact that they owe the position which they hold to-day entirely to Jesus Christ. They have no such place in India nor in the countries ruled by the religion of Mahomet."

The following, from an unknown source, is quite suggestive: "The logbook of Christopher Columbus is said to have borne repeatedly the entry, 'This day we sailed on.' That is all. Behind lay defeat; ahead lay hope; aboard the ship seethed distrust. In the face of fear and suspicion and tradition, Columbus sailed on. The lesson is one that we may lay to heart in our own lives."

It probably never occurs to a young man or woman that he or she is "hard to live with." That is a phrase we always, somehow, use about other people. But why? Why not occasionally consider whether the difficulties we complain of may not be partly the result of our own sharp angles and selfish wills? The art of living with others is largely the art of living for others, and not for ourselves.—The Home Messenger.

WATER BAPTISM A TYPE OR SYMBOL OF WHAT?

In human salvation there are two Divine agents—Christ the Son, and the Holy Spirit. Christ redeems us by his atoning sacrifice. The Holy Spirit re-creates us after the image of Christ, through his sacrifice.

Now Christ has given us two sacred symbols called sacraments—the Lord's supper and water baptism: the one to represent the work accomplished by his death, and the other to signify the work of the Spirit—in the regeneration and sanctification of believers. That the Supper represents the sacrifice of Christ is generally conceded; and it should be equally apparent that baptism by water signifies the work or baptism of the Holy Spirit.

In harmony with this, we find in the Mosaic ritual water used in connection with the blood of the Jewish sacrifices; the blood evidently signifying the work of Christ, and the water—the operation of the Holy Spirit. Also, elsewhere in the Old Testament Scriptures, we find the term water evidently used as the symbol of the cleansing and life-giving agency of the Spirit. Almost at the very beginning of the New Testament we find John the Baptist saying: "I indeed baptize you with water unto repentance, but he that cometh after me is mightier than I, whose shoes I am not worthy to bear; he shall baptize you with the Holy Ghost and with fire." This statement of itself so unites the baptisms of water and of the Spirit that one must needs be the symbol of the other. In confirmation of this, note that when Jesus was baptized by John, immediately the Holy Spirit descended upon him. Now this connection between the Christ's baptism and the descent of the Spirit was certainly not accidental; and the only logical connection between them, must be that of a sign, and the thing signified.

The fact that water baptism symbolizes the work of the Spirit expressed by his baptism is so clear that it would never have been questioned but for certain passages in two of Paul's Epistles, which incidentally speak of baptism—not necessarily water baptism—in connection with the death and burial of Christ. From these passages some have mistakenly inferred and constantly taught that baptism by water represents the burial and resurrection of Christ. Now this position is entirely out of harmony with the teachings, of both the Old and New Testaments, as is clearly set forth above.

And, besides, it makes both of the sacraments represent the work of Christ, and leaves the equally important work of the Spirit unrepresented by any sacramental symbol, which is so inharmonious, that without the strongest possible proof it should certainly not be accepted, even if unrelated by other Scriptures. But these passages from Paul, when carefully studied in connection with their immediate context, do not of themselves warrant the position referred to. Take, for instance, Rom. 6:3-6: here Paul speaks not only of being buried with Christ by baptism, but of being planted together with him, and of being crucified with him, all by baptism, which is understood where not expressed. Now baptism cannot represent a crucifixion; then why should we suppose it to represent a burial, when the two are used in the same connection?

In the other passage referred to, Col. 2:11-12, we read of being circumcised in Christ, and of being buried with him in the immediate connection, while in the Greek text, the word translated in the one case, "in," and in the other case, "with," are exactly the same. Now it is evident that baptism cannot symbolize circumcision; then why should it be supposed to represent a burial? While these passages are complex, there is an explanation which does no violence to the texts themselves and which leaves them in full harmony with other Scriptures. Let me give it in brief. We are buried with Christ, by a spiritual burial—the old man is buried. We are crucified with him by a spiritual crucifixion—"the body of sin," the fleshly nature, being nailed to the cross by his crucifixion. We are circumcised in him with a spiritual circumcision, which is, "the putting away of the filth of the flesh." We are planted together with him by a spiritual planting into the very life of God. We are raised with him from the death of sin—a spiritual resurrection—through his death and resurrection.

And all of this mighty spiritual work in us must be accomplished by the movement of the Holy Spirit, in virtue of Christ's atoning merits—in a word by the Spirit's baptism, of which water baptism is but the type and symbol. So the Spirit's baptism is related to all of this, not as a symbol, but as the sole and sufficient instrument of its accomplishment. And water baptism is related to it only as it is the symbol of the Spirit's baptism. It is merely the symbolic instrument, and not the type or symbol, of any of these spiritual processes wrought by the Spirit.

Now, since water baptism is simply the symbol of the Spirit's baptism, affusion would certainly, to say the least, be an appropriate method of its administration. For we read in the Acts that the "Spirit was poured out," and that He was "shed forth," in his baptism. And in the baptism of fire which he gave on Pentecost, fire in cloven tongues rested upon the disciples. It would certainly seem that the symbol and the thing symbolized should as far as possible correspond in the form of operation. Hence, whatever mode of baptism best symbolizes the Spirit's baptism to any person should be the one preferred.

A BUGLE CALL.

The action taken by many of our Christian denominations in Louisiana during the year just closing is encouraging to those of us who are endeavoring to direct the movement in our State against the licensed sale of liquor, and we desire to reiterate with increased emphasis our relentless opposition to this traffic. We hold that it cannot be legalized without sin. Its only argument is an appeal to greed and appetite. It is in collusion with the White Slave traffic and other forms of evil. Its fruits are cruelty, debauchery, conspiracy, and murder. It is the wholesale despoiler of the race, and is intoxicated with the blood of the multiplied thousands it has slain. As a rising flood, it sweeps away life, property and fortune. It is in a death struggle for mastery in politics, government, and society. The Church of God dare not yield an iota to its murderous march against humanity. It has no rightful place in our modern civilization. It is doomed. The forces that oppose this gigantic evil are in accord as never before. The saloon must be driven out of business. We have started on the next final step, a Nation-wide movement for a Saloonless Nation.

In this final struggle we know no party lines. It is a fact worthy of note that the Webb-Kenyon law passed over the President's veto in the dying hours of the last regular session of Congress, was supported by 32 Democrats and 31 Republicans. Denominational lines have also been lost sight of in this struggle. Catholic and Protestant stand together for the freedom of our people from this awful curse.

Let every friend of temperance in Louisiana stand up and fight for our cause. The Baptist and Methodist Churches of Louisiana by official action have set aside a day to be observed as Anti-Saloon Day. Let every Pastor and Sabbath school worker begin now to plan for this day, that it may be a great day, both in point of education and finances.

We appeal to other denominations in the State to take the matter up at once. Already the Sunday school of the First Presbyterian Church in Monroe, La., has observed the day and sent in a nice sum as an offering to our work. Let those who are in sympathy with our work drop us a line of encouragement, and state whether or not the congregation with which they worship can be counted on in this fight for the homes in Louisiana and of the Nation. Yours to serve.

THE NEXT WORSE LIFE.

The preacher has a hard time. If his hair is gray, he is old. If he is a young man, he hasn't had experience. If he has ten children, he has too many; if he has none, he should have children, for he is not setting a good example. If his wife sings in the choir, she is presuming; if she does not, she is not interested in her husband's work. If a preacher reads from notes, he is a bore; if he speaks extemporaneously, he is not deep enough. If he stays at home in his study, he doesn't mix with the people; if he is seen around the streets, he ought to be at home getting up a good sermon. If he calls on some very poor family, he is playing to the grandstand; if he calls at the home of the rich, he is aristocratic. Whatever he does, some one could have told him how to do it better. He has a fine time living off donations which never came in and promises that never mature. Next to being an editor, it is an awful life.—Fayetteville (Miss.) Observer.

FINE PLANS FOR JUNALUSKA.

By Rev. John M. Moore, D. D.

Five splendid conferences have been planned for Lake Junaluska, North Carolina, next summer. According to the provisional program, which in all probability will be carried out, the Epworth League will open the series on July 15 and continue to July 23. Dr. F. S. Parker and Rev. J. M. Culbreth will be in charge. The Sunday School Conference, conducted by Drs. E. B. Chappell, H. M. Hamill, C. D. Bulla and L. F. Beatty will begin July 24 and close August 2. The Conference of Educators, with Dr. Stonewall Anderson in charge, will be held August 4-6. The Missionary Conference, directed by Dr. W. W. Pinson, and other Missionary Secretaries, will be held August 7-16. The Bible Conference, with Dr. W. F. Tillett as Dean, will be conducted August 16-23. Mrs. R. W. MacDonell and her associates will hold a Conference of Deaconesses August 24-26.

Such is the plan that was agreed upon by representatives of the Southern Assembly and the various connectional boards at a meeting held in Nashville December 30, of which Bishop James Atkins was Chairman, and John M. Moore Secretary. Others present were George R. Stuart, James Cannon, John R. Pepper, E. B. Chappell, W. W. Pinson, Stonewall Anderson, F. S. Parker, Ed. F. Cook, G. B. Winton, L. F. Beatty, C. D. Bulla, B. H. Rawlings, and J. M. Culbreth. During part of the session Mrs. R. W. MacDonell, Mrs. J. B. Cobb, and Dr. T. N. Ivey were present.

The Southern Assembly, of which Bishop Atkins is the President, and Dr. Jas. Cannon the General Superintendent, is an institution of Southern Methodism, having the endorsement of the representative bodies of the Church. The purpose of its existence is to promote the work of Methodism and the cause of Christianity, by providing a place for great mid-summer Church Conferences, at which the various phases of Church activities may be discussed and plans for larger service in those various departments may be formulated. It combines recreation with instruction where both may be sanctified and beautified by a prevailing Christian spirit and an intelligent devotion to Jesus Christ and the study of His Word. The Boards of the Church should, and do, recognize in the Southern Assembly, not only a co-worker, but a vital part of their respective departments of labor. Bishop Atkins, Dr. Cannon, Dr. Stuart, Mr. Pepper, and their associates should have the hearty thanks of the Church for what they have accomplished, and the sympathetic co-operation of all Southern Methodism in carrying to completion the magnificent plans which have been adopted for a great Southern Assembly.

THE FRIENDLY STARS.

I love to see the little stars
That twinkle in the night.
I like to call them angel lamps,
They are so clear and bright.
When I've been good, they seem to say:
"Well done, dear little child!"
'Tis then the pretty angel lamps
Shine with a radiance mild.
But when I've spoken thoughtless words,
O very dim, indeed.
It seems as if those lights grew dim,
O very dim, indeed.
So just before I say my prayer
I always look to see
If all the friendly angel lights
Are twinkling at me.

THIN PLACES.

"There! My darning is done for this week—every hole is mended!"

"And the thin places?"

"Thin places!" Why, Auntie, I never look for thin places! There are always holes enough to keep me busy."

"When I was a little girl," said Auntie, "I had a dear old grandmother who taught me to mend and darn, and with the teaching she slipped in many lessons about higher things. 'Look out for thin places,' she used to say, 'It'll save thee a deal of time and trouble.' A few runs back and forth with the needle will save a half-hour's darning next week. 'There are a few thin places in thy character,' she said one day, 'that thee'd better attend to—little failures that will soon break into sins.' I did not quite understand her; so, sweetening her talk with a bit of chocolate she carried for the children, she said: 'I see thy mother picking up thy coat and hat; putting away the rubbers again and again. I hear thee sometimes speak pretty sharply when some one interrupts thee at thy story reading. I heard thee offer to dust the parlor several days ago, but thee forgot it, and to-day thy mother put down her sewing to do it.' I felt so ashamed that I never forgot about the thin places after that, though I am afraid that I did not always attend to them at once."

"Why, Aunt Mary! If you hadn't said grandma, I'd think you meant me. There are my rubbers under the stove, and I promised mamma to dust the sitting-room this day!"—Christian Intelligencer.

WEE JANET'S PROBLEM.

Everything small and helpless was once afraid of a certain ragged, bare-footed little boy who had recently come to live in the country. His home was the old Perkins' house, in which no one had lived for years; at least no one but wildwood folk, little birds and squirrels. They didn't stay long after the arrival of Pete and his family, because Pete threw stones even at the bluebirds.

Wee Janet was afraid of Pete. All the primer children who attended the country school were afraid of the boy. He used to chase them and threaten to cut off their ears; once he whispered across the aisle to Bessie Saunders that he would like to eat little girls, and she believed it.

The teacher said that Pete was a bad boy. There was never a school day when the child wasn't justly punished for something. It did seem as if no one ever said a kind word about Pete.

Wee Janet was much troubled about Pete. "He'll be a dreadfully bad man," she said to her mother, "unless some one can make him into a good little boy. The teacher says she can't do it—she's tried. She says it's a problem."

"I'll tell you what to do, little daughter," said Wee Janet's mother. "Try to think Pete is the lovely boy he might have been if he had been born in the Perkins' house, and dear old Grandma Perkins was his own grandmother."

"But—but my thinker isn't strong enough," objected Wee Janet. "Besides, that wouldn't make Pete into a different kind of a boy."

"No," agreed Janet's mother; "but if you could imagine Pete is lovely, you would treat him in a different way, and it might make him better."

The following day Wee Janet tried her best to do as her mother suggested. The day after she begged all the little girls in the primer class to treat Pete as if he were a good boy. At last Wee Janet and the primer class gave it up.

"He just gets worse and worse," Wee Janet told her mother.

One Saturday morning the little girl's mother asked her to carry a pail of butter-milk to Aunt Nancy. "You needn't be afraid to go by the Perkins' house this morning," she said, "because your father was told that Pete was fishing to-day."

Wee Janet was half-way to Aunt Nancy's when not far up the road she beheld Mr. Mason's red cow eating grass outside instead of inside the fence.

"Oh, the hooking cow!" exclaimed the child, almost dropping her pail of butter-milk.

At that moment the red cow lifted her head. It is possible that she thought that Janet was a big clover blossom. Anyway, on came the cow, lowing gently. Mr. Mason always persisted that that cow was harmless.

Janet, too frightened to stir, screamed in terror. That scream brought a barefoot boy running over the fields. The boy was Pete.

"What's the matter, Weejan?" he called.

At that moment Pete looked beautiful to Janet. It seemed to her that she never saw a finer looking boy than Pete the ragged, when he picked up a stick and made the cow turn around and go the other way.

"Come on, Weejan," called Pete. "I won't let her hurt yez. I'll drive her back in her pasture and lock the gate. See if I don't."

After the cow was in her pasture Pete insisted upon going to Aunt Nancy's with Wee Janet. "Yer might see a rattler," he explained, as if such a thing were probable.

"Now I'll take yer home," the boy observed when Wee Janet found him waiting at the gate. "Yer too little to be out alone."

Janet's mother thanked Pete for taking care of her small daughter. Then she gave him a piece of gingerbread. After that she showed him Wee Janet's robin's nest and told him all about how the mother robin worked to build the nest, and how long she sat upon the eggs before the little nestlings were hatched.

Father robin scolded the boy so vigorously Wee Janet was afraid Pete's feelings might be hurt.

"You see," she explained, "he knows that you're a stranger. Now, Father Robin, don't make such a fuss. If Pete took care of me, he'd take care of your babies, too. Wouldn't you, Pete?"

"Sure!" Pete replied, with a broad grin.

From that hour there was a change in Pete. He told Wee Janet's mother that he never knew anything about birds before; whereupon he was invited to come every day to visit all of Wee Janet's birds' nests and to read her bird books.

Before the end of the year even the little girls in the primer class forgot, or appeared to forget, that Pete was ever a bad boy. He is in high school now in town and his mother never looks discouraged when she speaks of her eldest son, "Pete."—Churchman.

BABIES IN THE SNOW.

One of the most curious customs of the Laplanders is the manner of taking the babies to church, described in "Ram's Horn." The mothers go regularly, even when they have wee, tiny babies. Sometimes they ride ten or fifteen miles in a sleigh drawn by a reindeer. They all have warm clothes on, the baby in particular; oftentimes it is wrapped in bearskins.

As soon as the family arrives at the little church and the reindeer is secured, Father Lapp shovels a snug little bed of snow, and Mother Lapp wraps it snugly in skins, and lays it down there. Then Father Lapp piles the snow all around it, and the parents go into the church.

Over twenty or thirty of these babies lie out there in the snow around the church, and I never heard of one that was suffocated or frozen. The snow does not make them cold; for when it covers a person all over, if he has clothing enough so that it will not melt and wet him, it will keep him warm. The little babies are not strong enough to knock the snow aside and get away, so they just lie still there, and go to sleep.

When church is out the father goes to where the baby is, and puts his hands down into the snow, and pulls the baby out, and shakes off the snow; then the reindeer trots off a good deal faster than a horse, and takes all home again.—Pittsburgh Christian Advocate.

WHO IS THE TRAITOR?

The editor of a liquor organ, "Current Thought," dips his pen in alcohol and writes: "If any man would attempt to destroy industries that pay one-half of the national government expenses, why should he not be treated as a traitor to his country?"

The answer is simple as falling off a log. He who would abolish drink (and with it must go the licensed saloon) will save the government, through the increased efficiency of its citizenship, a sum of money beside which the saloon license fee would dwindle to a mere bagatelle. Beside that, he would save to the nation a hundred thousand lives now shattered annually by drink. Again, he would start the joy-bells of earth ringing in a hundred thousand homes that now are clouded by the touch of the serpent—drink. Traitor? Pray, who is the traitor?—North Western Christian Advocate.

A GREAT SHOWING.

Elsewhere in this issue of the Advocate we print a statement by Zion's Herald telling of the growth of the Methodist Episcopal Church during the past year. So remarkable are these figures that it may not be amiss to repeat some of them here. The gain in membership was 111,869, and in the number of probationers 37,741. The increase in the Sunday school enrollment was 420,488, and in the number of preachers 150. This splendid record, following the very creditable one of 1912 when the numerical gain in members was 64,190, indicates that our sister denomination is coming into her own again in the way of virility and efficiency. We are very happy to see this. We are deeply interested in worldwide Methodism, and its prosperity anywhere greatly pleases us, while, on the other hand, its failures distress us.

It is interesting to note to what our distinguished contemporary attributes the extraordinary success achieved during the year 1913. Three things are set down as having contributed largely to this gracious result: (1) The increased emphasis placed on the work of evangelism and the great vigor with which it has been pushed; (2) the new energy and intelligent aggressiveness infused into the Sunday school work; (3) the closer and more active oversight and leadership of the Church's chief pastors.

To these, we venture to add, a cheapening of the price and a far larger circulation of the church papers. As will be remembered, about a year ago the Publishing Board of the Methodist Episcopal Church reduced the subscription of all the weeklies owned by the Church, except the New York Christian Advocate, to $1 per annum, backing them up financially, and inaugurating a campaign to place them in the homes of the people. The Bishops threw themselves into this movement and the circulation of nearly all their periodicals mounted up at a rapid rate. The Northern Methodists have every reason to be proud of their press. In our judgment, it surpasses that of any other denomination in the United States, and it is a tremendous power for good.

It seems to us that our approaching General Conference would do well to examine carefully the plans and methods which have brought such signal success to our Sister Church, with a view to imitating or improving upon them. We think there is no doubt but that we need to tighten up our machinery at some points. The call of the times is for greater zeal and aggressiveness all along the line. Every agency should be made to count for the utmost possible, and there should be no wastage of strength anywhere. The conservation of all their energies and the right direction of them, can alone bring to the various branches of the Christian Church the full measure of success that they ought to achieve. Less than this is not perfect fidelity to our Lord.

NOT THE WAY TO HELP THE ENTERPRISE.

For some time there has been considerable talk about an exposition in New Orleans. Whether the agitation in its behalf that has been kept up for some weeks will crystallize into anything of consequence, yet remains to be seen. We are interested in every worthy movement that has for its aim the promotion of the prosperity of the Crescent City, and have been disposed to look with some favor upon this project. But while this is true, we confess that we were pained to note that its promoters saw fit to hold a business meeting in its interest at the Grunewald Hotel last Sunday afternoon, at which they elected officers and proceeded to outline their methods of work. We do not believe that such a profanation of the Holy Sabbath will tend to help this enterprise. The men having it in charge may have no regard for the sanctity of the Lord's day, but there are thousands of God-fearing men and women in Louisiana and the contiguous States, whose assistance they are trying to secure, who entertain quite a different view of the matter. We dare say that these persons will not be much inclined to give their endorsement and support to an exposition, the management of which shows so little respect for the Christian teaching and sentiment of the country.

In this connection, we invite attention to the following words uttered by Cardinal Gibbons, of Baltimore, a few days ago on the occasion of his annual New Year's reception, which are well worth pondering:

I have visited many cities of Europe and I am persuaded that neither in Paris nor in Brussels nor in Berlin nor even in Rome is there so great a regard for quietude and orderly tranquillity on the Lord's day as in Baltimore and other cities of the Union. But a close observer cannot fail to note the dangerous threads that have been made on the Sunday rest in this country during the last forty years. If these encroachments are not checked at once, the day may come when the solemn thoughts of God of eternity, and the soul will be crowded by the pleasures and dissipations of the world.

SOME SCENES AT CHURCH AND WHAT THEY SUGGESTED.

Recently we sat in a church—no matter where. Immediately in front of us was seated a mother with a child on each side of her. There was perfect behavior in that pew. Behind us sat three small boys who were unaccompanied by any other person, and soon they were talking and loud to such an extent that we had to move our seat behind the sermon began. On the front of the middle row of pews were two small boys unaccompanied and two others on the front bench to the right. These little fellows were restless and more than once attracted the attention of the preacher and congregation by the noises that they made.

From these scenes in the house of God during the hour of public worship, which no doubt can be observed on every nearly any Sabbath and in almost any church, there is an important lesson to be learned, namely, that parents should not merely send their children to the sanctuary of the Lord, but that they should go with them. Not to do this is to make a serious mistake. The untrained child may, it is sure, be profited in some measure by the service conducted by the minister, but for the fullest effect, the impressions of the hour would be far deeper and far more lasting with the father and mother present. And they owe it not only to themselves and their children to attend, but also to the pastor and the home, in which they are a part. The family pew, in which the members of the same household are expected to be grouped ought not to be allowed to disappear even amongst us. It embodies a succession of generations, public worship that is sound and valuable, and which ever needs to be emphasized.

In our judgment the most serious defect in the religious teaching and training of this day is the dwindling part that the parents have in it. God assigned them the first place in this essential work, and we do not believe that modern ingenuity can provide any effectual substitute to perform the service that it is their duty to render.

THE CAMPAIGN FOR CENTENARY COLLEGE.

We take it that the naming of Rev. Paul M. Brown as agent for Centenary College at the last session of the Louisiana Conference means that a vigorous campaign will be conducted throughout the State to endow and equip that institution. That this urgently needs to be done, is true beyond question. Centenary has a highly creditable record in the past, and she is fortunate in the personnel of the men who are to-day directing her affairs. Any boy is specially favored to be under the care of such instructors as Dr. R. H. Wynn, Rev. H. T. Carley, Prof. Johnson, and the others who make up her teaching force. We doubt if there is a faculty of equal size anywhere in all the land that is doing better work than this one.

But while this is true, the time has come when Centenary must be placed upon a better basis. She cannot at all meet the future demands that will be made upon her without this. A college cannot merely stand still—it must either advance or retrograde. Some progress is necessary even to maintain its present relative rank, for the whole educational world is swinging forward.

The future of Louisiana Methodism—the Methodism that has given the Church McTyeire, Keener, Parker and a number of others not less worthy—is largely centered in Centenary College. From its walls must chiefly come the recruits to fill our pulpits in this State and to do the work that needs to be done in this trying and difficult field. Not to strengthen this historic institution would be a stupendous and well-nigh unpardonable blunder. The task of raising the money so imperatively needed will not be an easy one, but we believe that it can be done, and that Paul M. Brown is the man to do it. Let him and Dr. Wynn lead the way, and let every preacher and every Methodist in Louisiana actively co-operate with them. We pledge the full and unceasing support of the Advocate to this movement. In our opinion, as far as possible, this undertaking should this year be given the right of way in the State. Certainly, no other cause is more worthy or more pressing than this, and there is nothing that we can do that will count for so much in the coming years as to carry it forward to success.

MUCH WORK YET TO DO.

This is rather a trying time on optimists. The man who reads the newspapers these days and can yet affirm that the millennium is about to dawn certainly has the sense of hopefulness marvelously developed. For our part, we are rather inclined to the view that the battle between right and wrong is just beginning to get well under way. It is popular for one to prate of the glories of one's own age and land, and persons who come with a different message are always derided and discounted. The task of the true prophet has never been a pleasant one on earth, and perhaps never will be. Yet such men are the hope of the world. The preacher who carries no burden on his heart cannot be counted upon to do much toward the salvation of men and the elevation of human society.

CENTENARY COLLEGE CAMPAIGN EXPENSE FUND.

In order that the Centenary College campaign may go forward as rapidly as possible, it is very important that those who subscribed to the expense fund at Crowley pay their subscriptions as soon as possible. As treasurer of the Board of Education of the Louisiana Conference, I have been designated to receive payment of these subscriptions. Let those who have not already paid, send the money to me at the earliest possible moment. My address is Shreveport, care of Centenary College.

H. T. CARLEY.

Treasurer of the Board of Education.

PERSONAL AND OTHER NOTES.

The new district parsonage at Baton Rouge, La., has been completed, and Rev. H. W. Bowman, the new presiding elder, is now residing in that city. Let his correspondents take notice and govern themselves accordingly.

Rev. H. N. McKibben reports a pleasant reception and a good beginning at Camden, Miss. He is quite hopeful of being able to accomplish substantial results for the Master among his new parishioners.

Rev. C. W. Baley, of Paris, Miss., in a business note to our office, says: "December 13 found me and my family in our new home here. The people received us very kindly, and gave us a 'pounding' which we appreciated very much."

President J. R. Countiss, of Grenada College, in a personal note to the Editor, says: "All has gone well with the school thus far, and I am expecting all that we can accommodate at the opening after the holidays, even if several old pupils fail to return. We must have that new dormitory."

In a brief note to the Editor, Rev. D. L. Cogdell, of Shelby, Miss., who recently has been bereft of his beloved wife, who was one of the noblest of women, says: "Our hearts are torn. The people have been so kind. I profoundly thank the North Mississippi Conference for its sweet remembrance."

Rev. Thos. H. Milis writes cheerfully of his work—Southside, Corinth, Miss. He states that he is putting his whole heart into his labors, and that he is trusting the Lord for results. With such activity and such a spirit, we dare say that our brother will not fail to accomplish much for the Master in his charge.

Dr. S. H. Werlein was greeted by fine audiences again last Sunday at the First Methodist Church of this city. Three members (one on profession of faith) were received at the 11 o'clock hour, and the service closed with the Sacrament of the Lord's Supper, which was administered to quite a large company.

Among those who attended the Student Volunteer Convention in Kansas City, Mo., last week, was Dr. F. S. Parker, General Secretary of the Epworth League of the M. E. Church, South, and Editor of the Epworth Era. Dr. Parker delivered an address at the Conference of Editors which was highly commended.

At the home of the bride's parents, in Zachary, La., on Dec. 31, Mr. S. Putnam Woolfolk, of Columbus, Ga., and Miss Clara Virginia Harper were united in marriage, Rev. J. D. Harper, father of the bride, and Rev. R. H. Harper, her brother, jointly officiating. We extend to the happy couple our congratulations and best wishes.

In a business letter to our office, Rev. D. Scarborough, formerly of the Mississippi Conference, but now stationed at Santa Ana, California, makes the following reference to his family and work: "We are all well and are getting along splendidly in the West. I have been reappointed to this delightful charge for another year."

In connection with his work at Shreveport, La., Dr. Geo. S. Sexton will still have charge of the subscriptions made for the Representative Southern Methodist Church in Washington City. All persons desiring to pay what they have pledged to that enterprise may continue, as heretofore, to make their remittances to him.

In a letter bearing date of January 1, Mr. Robert Somerville, of Greenville, Miss., says: "Rev. J. T. Lewis has been with us since Conference. He has preached two Sundays and Brother Spragins, the presiding elder, one. Brother Lewis is a fine man and a good preacher. He has been cordially received and is making new friends here rapidly."

Dr. J. T. Sawyer is a sort of a general supply pastor for the Methodists and Presbyterians of New Orleans. He preaches somewhere nearly every Sabbath, sometimes occupying a pulpit both in the morning and evening. And it seems to be the universal opinion that he is one of the most suggestive expositors of the Divine Word in the city.

Rev. W. L. Broome is very much pleased with his new appointment, Konowa, Oklahoma. He says that his church seems to be in fine working order, and that he considers the outlook quite encouraging. We regret to know that Brother Broome has recently been down with an attack of typhoid fever, but are glad to learn that he has recovered and is again at work.

Mr. E. C. Brewer, of Black Hawk, Miss., who is now a law student at the University of Mississippi, sent us the following message from Kansas City on January 2, while attending the Student Volunteer Convention assembled there: "This is the greatest religious gathering that I have ever seen. There are in attendance about 8000 delegates from all parts of the world."

Mrs. S. C. Taylor, of Cleveland, Miss., has our thanks for a subscription secured for the Advocate a few days ago, as well as for some kindly words of commendation. Sister Taylor attended the recent session of the North Mississippi Conference, but missed a large part of the proceedings because of illness. She takes a deep interest in all the work of the Church.

Rev. H. T. Carley, one of the professors of Centenary College, at Shreveport, La., writes: "Brother Coleman, our new presiding elder, is here and is taking hold of his work vigorously. Dr. Geo. S. Sexton and Brother Means have both preached to their congregations and have made fine impressions. On the whole, the Church outlook here seems very bright."

Col. J. G. Hamilton, whose home has long been at Durant, Miss., in renewing his subscription, writes from South Pasadena, Calif., and orders his paper sent to that place. We infer from this that he will remain in the Far West for some time, at least. There is no finer gentleman anywhere than Col. Hamilton, who is also a stalwart and well-informed Southern Methodist.

The Wesley Bible Class of the Algiers Church, this city, observed watch night on the 31st ult. in an appropriate and helpful manner. The program consisted first of the usual study of the Bible lesson, then of interesting addresses, and included also an enjoyable social hour. This fine class numbers 81 and is planning to make its influence felt widely for good during the coming year.

Rev. Thos. J. Martin, Sr., of Ringgold, La., brought us under obligations a few days since for some subscriptions to the Advocate and a kindly expression of appreciation of our paper. We are grateful to him for taking care of the interests of the Conference organ in his rounds, and we earnestly pray that God may crown all of his labors this year with a large measure of success.

The work has opened favorably at the Rayne Memorial Church of New Orleans and the outlook is bright for a year of activity and progress. The pastor, Rev. Felix R. Hill, Jr., has been cordially welcomed back for the second year. There is not much splash and spangle about Brother Hill, but he is a man of depth, solidity, and strength—the kind that wears well and accomplishes things that endure.

A note just received from Brother Charles A. Knoll, of Buukie, La., brings news of the death of Brother B. W. Sewell, who passed to his reward on Dec. 26, 1913. He had been a life-long Christian and a subscriber to the New Orleans Advocate for 50 or 60 years. A true and worthy citizen and a faithful disciple of the Master, he will be much missed. We extend sympathy to the bereaved.

Miss Kate Williams, of Hattiesburg, Miss., in renewing her father's subscription to the Advocate, states that he has been taking it more than forty years, and that in their household it is considered not merely a weekly visitor, but a member of the family. We are pleased to receive the kindly greetings of these long-time friends of our paper, and we pray Heaven's richest blessings upon them in these opening days of the new year.

Rev. E. P. Craddock, of Mt. Olive, Miss., who about a year ago withdrew from our Church and entered the Presbyterian ministry, seems to be giving a good account of himself in his present field of labor. The Mount Olive News speaks in high terms of his pulpit work and his general bearing as a Christian gentleman. Brother Craddock continues to read the New Orleans Christian Advocate, which he says he regards highly.

Rev. T. H. Morris, of Mansfield, La., writes: "Your Conference reporter evidently did not hear all the reports of the preachers, judging by his comment on those who did and did not receive as many as 50 into the Church last year. I received at Mansfield 54 members and reported a net gain of 38. We start off encouragingly our third year, having had the most cordial reception we have had since we were appointed to this charge."

In a note received some days ago, Rev. A. H. Williams stated that he was in place at Shannon, Miss., his new appointment, and that he was pleased with the outlook. Brother Williams left the Black Hawk charge in better condition in many respects as a result of his labors there. He is a forceful and interesting preacher and has the reputation of always meeting every engagement promptly. We wish him much success in his new field.

Rev. T. B. Holloman, of Port Gibson, Miss., under date of Jan. 5, 1914, writes: "Brother E. S. Drake died at his home in Port Gibson, Miss., Sunday night, Jan. 4, after a long illness. He was a son of Rev. B. M. Drake, one of the pioneer preachers in this Mississippi territory, and a brother of Rev. J. P. Drake, late a member of the Mississippi Conference, and was a life-long member of the Church, and for forty years the superintendent of the Sunday school at this place."

We acknowledge the reception of a pamphlet written by Dr. S. A. Steel, now of Columbia, S.C., explaining why he objects to the terms "rebel" and "rebellion" as applied to the Southern soldier and the "war between the States." This statement was first made in a letter to a gentleman in Illinois and was afterwards published in the Columbia State. It is a most interesting discussion and ought to be read by every man, woman and child in the broad land of Dixie.

The people of the Prentiss (Miss.) charge a few days since adopted a series of resolutions highly commendatory of Rev. W. D. Dominick, their retiring pastor, as a man, and as a preacher, and as a worker. He is given by them the chief credit for the liquidation of the debt on the Prentiss church, and is heartily commended to the people of New Augusta, to whom he was assigned at the last session of the Conference. Manifestly Brother Dominick has done some high-class work in the field which he has just left, and he will long be held in loving remembrance by the members of the church there.

A correspondent at Lecompte, La., says: "Brother Neill's work here is moving along nicely. The good people of Le Compte showed their appreciation of his services on Sunday, December 21, when at the Christmas exercises he was presented by the Bible Class with a large box, which upon opening he found to contain a second box just a little bit smaller, and inside this was a third one slightly smaller still, and so on until the sixth box was reached, and when the last one was opened there was in it a nice bill-book containing $23. Of course, this made the pastor's heart glad. Everything here points to a good year."

From the Texas Christian Advocate of Jan. 1, we clip the following: "Rev. Walter G. Harbin, at the Tabernacle Church, Houston, has struck that town on a dead run and it will not be long until he has a spiritual speedometer on everything in his charge capable of acceleration, and from this time on there will be dust in the air along every street that passes his place of business. He has a record for doing things and his present field will give him a wide swath. That congregation has already come to the conclusion that there is something going on at the Tabernacle Church."

Dr. W. H. Huntley, the accomplished presiding elder of the Seashore District, under date of January 2, writes: "Our District Property Trustees met this morning, and as a result of the session a contract will be given to improve greatly the parsonage—indeed, practically to rebuild it. This is very comforting news to recite, for we have not now a comfortable home, and the presiding elder who is so much away can do better work when he knows that all is well with the loved ones whom he sees only occasionally." We are pleased to hear of this goodly enterprise. In more ways than one, Gulfport Methodism seems to be giving a fine account of itself.

In a business communication bringing us some subscribers, Rev. G. W. Bachman, of Winona, Miss., says: "Since the Conferences I have been kept busy filling orders for books and getting things in shape for the new year. All goes well with me except my eyesight, which is no better." We regret to know that our esteemed friend continues to be afflicted with an impaired vision, and we trust that soon the surgeons may be able to give him perfect relief, which, we understand, they think that they can finally do. There is no more faithful toiler among us than Brother Bachman, and we hope that he may be able to continue his valuable service to the Church for many years yet.

In a note written from Altura, Texas, on December 26, Rev. J. J. Golden, an esteemed member of the Mississippi Conference who was forced to go out West for his health, says: "We have been here two months and each week we anxiously look forward to the coming of the Advocate with fresh messages of truth and news. I am gaining in strength and weight, and I hope to be able to do some supply work in five or six months." Brother Golden's many friends in Mississippi, who ever hold him in appreciative remembrance and who do not forget him in their prayers, will be delighted to know that he is improving physically. We trust that he will let us hear every now and then how he is getting on.

From an appreciated personal letter from Dr. B. F. Jones, of Moss Point, Miss., we take the following: "At this place I am following in the tracks of some of the very best men that our Conference has produced. Among those who have gone to their reward, I note the names of J. P. Drake, C. A. Powell, John A. Ellis, H. R. Singleton, R. W. Bailey, and W. B. Lewis. Good men and true—none better. May the spirit of the departed ones rest on their successors! If it is legitimate to covet the best gifts, then I would covet inspiration from the consecration of Lewis and Drake, the eloquence of Black, the scholarship of Mounger, and the joyous, rippling spirit of Cooper. This place is attractive in many ways. It is the home of piety, refinement and wealth. I am anticipating a year of prosperity in everything that tends to the building up of the kingdom of our Lord. Rev. W. M. Sullivan, my immediate predecessor, and who succeeds me at Shubuta, is held in high esteem by his friends here. The people of all circles are saying exceedingly kind things about him. I get great pleasure from this. He left me a lion's share of the pecans from the parsonage trees, a pile of splendid wood and a square of fine turnips, all of which are being appropriated and enjoyed."

Mrs. JANE DEAR was born near Selma, Dallas County, Alabama, April 21, 1831, and died in her home at Enterprise, Dec. 25, 1913. While quite young her home was in Pickens County, Alabama, then in Clarke County, Mississippi, and in 1842 her parents moved to Enterprise. She was twice married, first to Mr. John F. Hand, on Oct. 21, 1848, and twenty-four years later to Mr. D. P. Dear on Oct. 21, 1872. She was the mother of five children by her first marriage—four sons and one daughter. One son and the daughter survive her, and were at her bedside to comfort her till death claimed her spirit. Her second union was blessed by the birth of two sons, who are still living. She was a devoted mother. She was one of the seven charter members of the First Baptist Church at Enterprise, having professed faith in Christ and united herself with the Baptist Church in Alabama before the Church at Enterprise was organized. She was faithful to her Church and constant in attendance. Her remains were laid to rest attended by a multitude of loving friends in the Odd Fellows' Cemetery, at Enterprise, Miss., on Dec. 26, 1913.

N. T. HANNA was born July 16, 1831, and died November 15, 1913. He first saw the light in South Carolina (Fairfield District). And came, with his parents, to Mississippi when he was about one year old. After reaching his majority, he was married to Miss Angeline Barrineau, on March 23, 1854. This union was blessed with fourteen children all of whom, except one—whom the Lord called home at the early age of two years, survive him. Eleven of the thirteen children are married and have homes of their own. The other two are living in the old home with their brother, and are yet single. It was during a revival meeting, held in his community, the last week in September, 1867, that he joined the M. E. Church, South, in company with his oldest son, now A. M. Hanna, of Kosciusko. For forty-six years, he was a faithful servant of Salem Church, where his funeral was preached on the third Sunday in November by the writer. It was attended by a large concourse of people, which attested to his popularity. After the service, his remains were laid away, in the Salem Cemetery, with Masonic honors, to await the resurrection morning.

E. C. SULLIVAN.

JAMES A. MONTEGUDO was born near Port Hudson, La., East Baton Rouge Parish, Jan. 1, 1844, and died at Zachary, in the same parish, on Nov. 18, 1913. His parents were Joseph Montegudo and Mary Burskey. He was married to Mrs. Mary Smith on Oct. 11, 1866. They united with the M. E. Church, South, at old Pipkin's Chapel in 1876, and later they moved to Zachary, where they resided till his death. He was a quiet, peaceful man, tender and gentle in his conduct, and always faithful to his duty. When a mere youth, he enlisted as a Confederate soldier, and for four years fought bravely for his native State. For many years prior to his death he was postmaster, faithful in the discharge of his duty, and much beloved by the public who miss his cheery smile and hearty greeting. He was a most devoted husband. His bereaved wife said: "We lived together forty-seven years and he never spoke harshly to me. We never quarreled." He was a faithful attendant at Church, and preacher and congregation alike sorely miss his face in the pew he always occupied. His death was sudden, but he said: "I am not afraid. I am ready to go." I asked him if he was fully trusting in Jesus alone for salvation, and he said: (in a whisper) "Yes," and passed to his reward.

J. D. HARPER.

MRS. SALLIE WALKER Mc-CLAUGHERTY.

Mrs. Sallie Walker McClagherty was the daughter of Rev. J. B. Walker, D.D., and Jane Ridley. Although her father held pastorates in Tennessee, Mississippi, and Texas, he spent the major part of his ministerial life in Louisiana, being a leading member of the Louisiana Conference. He was in his prime at the time when the four-year time limit was removed from the pastorate in New Orleans, on account of the yellow fever. In consequence, he spent the best years of his ministry in New Orleans. Mrs. McClagherty was born in Jackson, Miss., but moved with her parents, when a child, to New Orleans, where she spent her girlhood and young womanhood. The friendships formed in that old city, which she never ceased to love, she cherished to the day of her death.

She married Mr. M. A. McClagherty, a prosperous merchant of Nashville, Tenn. After living in Tennessee a few years, they moved to Mississippi. They had no children, but she played the part of mother to the three orphan children of her sister, Mrs. Fauquier. The last few years of her life were spent at Montegale, Tenn.

She died in Nashville, at the home of her step-daughter, Mrs. Frank T. Welburn, surrounded by her husband, loved ones, and friends. Although she had been in poor health for some months, it was not until a few days before her death that the end was seen to be near. About forty-eight hours before it came she passed into a state of coma, from which she did not rally.

She was a life-long member of the Methodist Church, and found comfort and joy in its service. Her religious life was characterized chiefly by devotion to duty and by untiring service to others. HENRY BEACH CARRE, Vanderbilt University.

TAKE NO RISK!

When you pay five dollars for a pair of shoes and they go to pieces within two weeks you naturally expect the Shoe merchant to refund your money or give you a new and perfect pair. But if you buy a guaranteed piano or player-piano and it goes bad in five or ten years, as at least half of them do, have you any assurance that the dealer from whom you buy will be alive or in business at that time?

That is why we selected the oldest and one of the largest piano houses in the South to conduct the New Orleans Christian Advocate Piano Club. We wanted a guarantee that would not die, from a house that would not move away or go out of business. We have thus permanently secured Club members against all defects in workmanship and material and if your piano should ever go bad you will have an old and reliable house to make it good or give you a new one.

It is an easy matter for a temporary dealer to guarantee any piano, no matter how bad it may be; but when a house intends to remain in business permanently at the same old stand it must put the quality into your instrument so that it will last indefinitely. For nearly half a century that has been the policy of the house which we have selected to conduct the New Orleans Christian Advocate Piano Club.

But this is only one of the many attractive and economical features of the Club. Write for your copy of the illustrated catalogue and get full particulars of the big saving in price, the convenient terms, the binding guarantees, etc. Address the Managers, Luden & Bates, New Orleans Christian Advocate Piano Club Dept., Atlanta, Ga.—Advertisement.

Tidings From the Field

Haynesville, La.

We have been cordially received upon our return to this charge. The Lord helped us to do a good work last year, and we feel that we will have his presence with us in this year's labors. Last year we brought one church nearly to completion, began another which will soon be ready for occupancy, and repaired and painted two others. We received 42 members into the Church; took 77 subscriptions to the New Orleans Christian Advocate, and had good Sunday schools, and fairly good Leagues and Woman's Missionary Societies. We had very good meetings. We are hopeful for the future. Wishing all a happy New Year, I am cordially,
W. W. PERRY.

Hermanville, Miss.

We arrived here yesterday and found a large number of our ladies, and also men, awaiting the arrival of the train we were to come in on. They carried us to the parsonage and set us down to one of the best banquets I ever saw. They had the parsonage in good order, and gave us a very cordial welcome. My wife, who has been so seriously ill for such a long time was assured of the profound sympathy of the ladies; they also told her that they would see that she had their tenderest care during her illness. We are delighted very much over our new field of labor. Pray for us. I think that my wife is improving slowly. Your brother,
G. G. YEAGER.

Rolling Fork.

Dear Dr. Meek: We are beginning our second year on the Rolling Fork charge. We have been heartily received by this good people and are most hopeful for a year of large service. These people are so very kind and thoughtful of us that it makes us more determined to be helpful to them. We have had a fine Christmas. All we needed was sent to us, such as meats, cakes, fruits, nuts, candies, toys, groceries, etc. Such generous expressions of kindness do much to lighten a pastor's heart. I would be negligent not to speak of the excellent work the women are doing. "Woman's rights" are not questioned here, they are settled. Our women do things for God's cause. Our Sunday schools are doing fine work. The mud is preventing a full attendance just now. We will be glad to have you come to see us, Doctor. The weather is fine. Best wishes for the Advocate.
—J. S. Purcell, P. C.

NOTICE TO FORMER TOPISAW PASTORS!

Not knowing the address, just now, of all the former pastors of the Topisaw charge, I take this method of informing them that the Committee on Ministerial Aid for the Topisaw Camp Meeting for 1914 have enthusiastically and unanimously agreed that we want those who are still members of the Mississippi Conference, to be with us at the said Camp meeting this year to take an active part. We will pay your expenses to and from the Camp. The date is August 7-14. We want a re-union of all the former pastors of Topisaw in our Conference; so please notice the date and begin now to make preparation to be with us.

Later we want to send all of you a personal letter going more into detail relative to the nature of the proposed meeting. This note will suffice for the present. All of the pastors, and also the presiding elder of the Brookhaven

District, are cordially invited and their expenses to and from the railroad will be paid also.

We would certainly appreciate it if all who think they can come will notify the pastor of the Topisaw charge at their earliest convenience.

Yours fraternally,
J. A. WELLS,
J. C. HOFFMAN,
W. D. BEACHAM, Committee.

Sunday School

NEWS AND NOTES.

By Miss Elizabeth Kilpatrick.

Even the smallest rural school can have three grades—elementary, intermediate and adult.

Attractive Christmas announcements have been received from Miss Elie Willingham's Class and also from Mrs. R. P. Neblett's Class. Both of these Wesley organizations are doing an unusually high grade of work.

Some one has lately given a good definition of the Sunday school as the great organization built upon the thought of making an organized attempt to answer the question, "Who is my brother?" and of carrying the spirit in the Christ-type of Brotherhood into the wide, wide world, and to people of every age and station.

That which we expect to find in the church life of to-morrow, we must build into the child life of to-day. The truth we plant in the heart of a child will blossom in the mature life of the man or woman. For $1.50 you can purchase a model of a Japanese garden, with a knock-down Japanese house, Japanese dolls, pillows, chopsticks, etc., and then use twelve good stories which accompany the outfit, and there are twenty more that can be woven out of the really helpful missionary material. There are similar outfits representing the American Indians and Africans.

No greater, grander or more beautiful responsibility can be imagined than that of a real Christian Sunday school teacher in this beginning of 1914. Why? Listen to the words of Mr. Marion Lawrance, that veteran Sunday school expert, in his book on, "How to Conduct a Sunday School." He says: "The teacher is the best evangelist. It is his sacred duty and privilege to bring his scholars to Christ." We need method-training; we need all of the pedagogy we can sensibly assimilate; we need hours in psychology—but none of these valuable necessities to Sunday school teaching will avail, if we do not have Christ in our hearts, our voices, our footfalls, our handclaps, and are able to give to our pupils just that all-comprehending Christ. Caleb explained how he had won his success, and no better rule could be written on the tables of our hearts and lived than his brief statement, "I wholly followed Jehovah, my God."

The grand, and, indeed, the only characteristic of truth, is its capability of enduring the test of universal experience, and coming unchanged out of every possible form of fair discussion.—Herschel.

Do your best loyally and cheerfully, and suffer yourself to feel no anxiety or fear. Your times are in God's hands. He has assigned your place. He will direct your efforts if they be faithful.—F. W. Farrar.

MIGHT BE DEAD TO-DAY.

Garden City, Kas.—In a letter from Mrs. James Hamner, of this city, she says, "I firmly believe that I would not be alive to-day if it were not for Cardui. I had been a sufferer from womanly troubles all my life, until I found that great remedy. I feel that I can't praise it too highly." Are you a woman, suffering from some of the troubles to which a woman is peculiarly liable? If so, why not try Cardui, the woman's tonic? You can rely on Cardui. It is purely vegetable, perfectly harmless, and acts gently but surely, without bad after-effects. 'Twill help you. Ask your druggist.—Adv.

WOMAN'S CITY BOARD OF MISSIONS.

The City Board of Missions of the Methodist Church, South, held its regular meeting Tuesday afternoon in St. Mark's Hall. Mrs. S. A. Montgomery presiding, and every committee and department of the Board gave encouraging reports of the work. The meeting was opened with the customary devotional exercises, led by Miss Nutt, the head resident of the mission. Noting the presence of Dr. Werlein, after an absence of two years, Mrs. Montgomery expressed her pleasure at his return, to which Dr. Werlein responded that he was equally delighted to be among old friends, and was ready to assist the Board of Missions at all times.

It was stated that Mr. Romana was expected to arrive this week from Tampa, Fla., to fill the place made vacant by Mr. Pagani, the former pastor of the Mission, who has been transferred to Texas. Mr. Romana comes to New Orleans very highly recommended, and is expected to accomplish much good in the settlement.

It was reported that from fifteen to twenty patients are cared for daily in the free clinic. In making her report, Miss Nutt said: "Those around us are coming to us for various things. We are trying to serve them in every way that we can. More than 90 persons came here during the month asking help in some way, and these do not include the great number who visited the nurse, the pastor or the clinic. We never leave the house unoccupied at any time, so that we may be constantly ready to respond to every demand."

Miss Nutt reported that she had made nearly fifty visits in the neighborhood trying to get in close personal touch with those who might need St. Mark's, and that she had explained its aims whenever possible to do so.

A Christmas tree gave joy to eighty children, and five baskets were filled for families who needed them. The baskets were made possible by a gift from one of the members. The Sunday school held at 4 o'clock every Sunday afternoon was reported thriving, and the preaching service immediately following was growing in attendance.

The welfare committee reported that 189 babies were under observation, and that every one of them was brought weekly to be weighed and its condition thoroughly noted.

The addition of a drug store is a source of much gratification to the Board, and it is expected some one will soon be in charge of this pharmacy, which has been fitted up at a cost of more than $300. The free dispensing of medicine is made possible by the Sickles fund, which was left for this purpose.

Mrs. W. S. Norwood, of the W. C. T. U. announced that a meeting would be held Thursday, Jan. 15, in the First Methodist Church in the interest of prohibition work and urged a good attendance.

NOT YET FULLY REALIZED.

Lessing once said: "Christianity has been tried for eighteen centuries. The religion of Christ has yet to be tried." This is one of those brilliant epigrammatic deliverances which conceal as well as reveal truth. We do not know what Paul of Tarsus "tried," what Augustine "tried," what John Huss "tried," what Wesley and Whitefield "tried," what D. L. Moody and Gipsy Smith have "tried," if it was not Christ's religion. They were not perfect men, but they got at the heart of Christianity's secret, they lived close to the Cross, they had as their dominant mood, their overmastering passion, the mind of Christ. Yet if Lessing means to remind us that after eighteen—now nineteen—centuries Christianity is for multitudes a name rather than a life, a theory rather than a deed, a sentiment rather than a sacrifice, he is right. Moreover, no man, not even Paul, has tried out to the very utter-most all the possibilities of the Christian life.—Zion's Herald.

To be despised may be no ill-fortune, but the real ill-fortune is to be despicable.—John Ruskin.

ARE YOU A WOMAN?

Baltimore, Md.—Mrs. W. H. Ison, at 1419 East Madison street, writes, "For several years I suffered, off and on, from female troubles, until finally I was taken down and could do nothing. The pains I experienced I shall never forget. I lost weight till I was only skin and bones. I believe I would have been in my grave if I had not tried Cardui. I shall praise it as long as I live." Many women, like Mrs. Ison, are weak and discouraged, on account of some painful ailment. Are you one of these sufferers? Cardui will help you. Try it to-day. Any druggist.—Advertisement.

Each day, each week, each month, each year, is a new chance given you by God. A new chance, a new leaf, a new life—this is the golden, the unspeakable gift which each new day offers to you.—Cannon Farrar.

GOD'S TENTH.

In touching the question of giving, we touch the most vital point pertaining to the consecration and spiritual power of the Church. In saying this we speak from experience, as we certainly speak according to Scripture. "Bring ye all the tithes into the storehouse, and prove me now herewith, saith the Lord of Hosts, if I will not open you the windows of heaven, and pour you out a blessing that there shall not be room enough to receive it." Here, plainly, the giving of tithes is made the condition of an abundant outpouring of the Spirit.

Prayer, testimony, effort, self-denial—how often do we hear these duties mentioned as summing up and fulfilling the requirement of tithes? But "tithes" mean money or other property of equivalent value and the effusion of God's spirit is here made contingent upon bringing in these tithes and paying up these dues to God.

If any Christian who has never tried it will make the experiment, conscientiously following it through to the end in prosperity and in adversity, we predict for him two surprises. First, he will be astonished at the increased amount which he is enabled by this method to give to the Lord; and, secondly, he will be astonished at the increased spiritual and temporal prosperity which the Lord will give to him. For, observe that here is an instance where the Lord actually makes a challenge to his people, and sets up a test case, saying, "Prove me now." Taking this scripture in connection with others, we find that there are two points to be demonstrated:

1. That faithful and proportionate giving will be rewarded with superabundant spiritual blessing. The statement does not require proof, since experience has stamped it already as an axiom. Other things being equal, that Christian who opens the broadest outlet for charity, will find the widest inlet for the Spirit. The health of a human body depends upon its exhalations as well as upon its inhalations. Woe to the Christian who gets so gold-leaved over with his wealth that the pores of his sympathy are shut, and the outgoing of his charity restrained. He is thenceforth dead spiritually, though he may have a name to live.

2. That faithful and proportionate giving will be rewarded with abundant temporal prosperity. This is a saying hard to be received, but it has the emphatic support of scripture. "Honor the Lord with thy substance and with the first fruits of all thine increase; so shall thy barns be filled with plenty, and thy presses shall burst out with new wine." This is but one specimen of many from the Old Testament. "Give and it shall be given unto you; good measure, pressed down and shaken together, and running over, shall men give into your bosom." Do we believe these words of our Lord, and can we question that they refer to abundant temporal returns in recompense for abundant giving?—Rev. A. J. Gordon, D. D., in Missionary Survey.

WITH OUR MISSIONARIES.

Miss Alice Waters, of the Susan B. Wilson School, Sunkiang, China, has reached her home in Kentucky, for a much needed rest.

Miss Laura Summers, from Songdo, Korea, who is in Louisville, is improving under the skillful treatment of Dr. J. D. Trawick, chairman of the Medical Board of the Board of Missions.

NEW MISSIONARIES TO CHINA.

Miss Attaway, of South Carolina, is at the Laura Haygood, Soochow; Miss Laura Mitchell, of Florida, is at Sunkiang; Miss Blier has charge of the finances at the Mary Black Hospital, and is thus giving relief to the two young physicians, Drs. Polk and Love.

Misses Moling, Alfter, and Cunningham are quietly at work in San Luis Potosi, Mexico. Miss Varner is at Guadalajara, and Misses Wilson and Harper of Chihuahua, although that city has been the seat of war. Misses Booth and Massey have returned to Guadalajara, and the school opened on December 8.

Miss King, fresh from a trip in the Shanghai District, writes: "There are so many open doors and so many hungry hearts among the women of China. There must be more put into our outstation work; not so much more in money, but in strong Christian women to lead the young Christians into strong Christian faith and to carry the light to these hopeless lives."

Miss Laura Edwards writes that the country schools in the Choon Chun District, Korea, are greatly hampered by lack of buildings. What is done in educational lines for that district will be determined entirely by what is made of the country school.

On the evening of Nov. 6 a beautiful service was held in Brussels, Belgium, in honor of the missionary party bound for Congo, Africa, with Bishop Lambuth and Dr. Morrison of the Presbyterian Church, U. S. A. It will be several months before they reach their destination. Pray daily for this party who through God go to meet the dangers and glories of the African Mission.

ENGLISH FOR IMMIGRANTS.

The Fireside League, organized for teaching English to immigrants, has been transferred to the Council of Women for Home Missions. This means that any organization can secure a teacher's outfit and some instructions by ordering the same from Miss Grace Walker, 600 Lexington Avenue, New York. Price $2.50. This outfit consists of the book, "Early Stories and Songs for English" by Mrs. L. C. Barnes, for the teacher; a leaf for the pupil's use which corresponds to the page of book used by the teacher; charts hung by the teacher for the class with pictures of lessons taught. While classes may be thus taught, home mission women are urged to get into the homes of the immigrant women and teacher the individual. The system is so simple that any woman with a sister's love can do this work. There are fifty-one cities in eighteen States reporting the use of this plan of teaching immigrants. The women of the South ought to begin this work before we are dismayed by the great numbers who will need help.

JANUARY 9—DAY OF PRAYER.

This first week of the new year is being observed by Christian workers everywhere as a Universal Week of Prayer. We are to pray for an outpouring of God's spirit not only upon the workers, but upon those instrumental in keeping the workers in the different mission fields.

COUGHING?

Coughing these days? Throat tender? Lungs sore? Better take the 75-year-old cough medicine—Ayer's Cherry Pectoral. Ask your doctor about this medicine. Then do as he says. J. C. Ayer Co., Lowell, Mass.

Diversified Farming Is Making the South

Planters are finding that it pays to rotate crops. Corn, hay and cotton follow each other with a sure profit. Besides raising diversified crops, more planters use fertilizers containing enough to balance the phosphoric acid.

Enough Potash means at least as much Potash as phosphoric acid.

To get full value out of your fertilizer, insist on high-grade goods. If your dealer doesn't carry such grades, buy Potash separately. Potash Pays.

Friday of this week has been set apart as the special day to be observed for united prayer by our women for our women. Many subjects have been outlined for the different hours of the day, chief among them being a prayer for unity; for a vision of the task before us; for our missionaries throughout the world; for faithfulness in stewardship; for our native Christian converts; for plans for united effort in foreign lands through colleges, hospitals and preparation of literature.

Pray for a great increase of student volunteers, for young women who will lead in foreign mission work in the churches at home, and for others who shall train our children in missions.

Pray earnestly, fervently, and intelligently.

MARRIED.

At the home of B. M. Barkhead, on Dec. 29, 1913, at Dover, Yazoo County, Miss., by Rev. M. S. White, Mr. CLAUD F. SKILLMAN of Memphis, Tenn., and Miss LEILA C. NOLAN of Dover, Miss.

At the residence of the bride's parents, on Jan. 1, 1914, Mr. WILLIE B. HARRISON and Miss LUCY N. SCHACK, both of Rankin County, Miss., Rev. R. E. Rutledge officiating.

"Happiness is a roadside flower, blooming on the highway to usefulness."

"Because love hopes ever, it can ever endure; and if its hopes can be realized, love will realize them."

Dr. Blosser's Catarrh Remedy.

Trial Package Mailed Free to Any Sufferer.

If you have catarrh of the head, nose, throat, if catarrh has affected your hearing; if you sneeze, hawk or spit; if you take one cold after another; if your head feels stopped up; you should try this Remedy discovered by Dr. Blosser, who has made a specialty of treating catarrh for over thirty-nine years.

This Remedy is composed of herbs, flowers and seeds possessing healing medicinal properties; contains no tobacco, is not injurious or habit-forming; is pleasant to use and perfectly harmless to man, woman or child.

Catarrhal germs are carried into the head, nose and throat with the air you breathe—just so the warm medicated smoke-vapor is carried with the breath, applying the medicine directly to the diseased parts. If you have tried the usual methods, such as sprays, douches, salves, inhalers and the stomach-ruining "constitutional" medicines, you will readily see the superiority of this Smoking Remedy.

Simply send your name and address to Dr. J. W. Blosser, 204 Walton St., Atlanta, Ga., and he will send you a free package containing samples of the Remedy for smoking in a pipe and made into cigarettes, together with an illustrated booklet which goes thoroughly into the subject of catarrh. He will send by mail, for one dollar, enough of the medicine to last about one month.

The Quickest, Simplest Cough Remedy

Easily and Cheaply Made at Home. Saves You $2.

This plan makes a pint of cough syrup—enough to last a family a long time. You couldn't buy as much or as good cough syrup for $2.50.

Simple as it is, it gives almost instant relief and usually conquers an ordinary cough in 24 hours. This is partly due to the fact that it is slightly laxative, stimulates the appetite and has an excellent tonic effect. It is pleasant to take—children like it. An excellent remedy, too, for whooping cough, spasmodic croup and bronchial asthma.

Mix one pint of granulated sugar with ½ pint of warm water, and stir for 2 minutes. Put 2½ ounces of Pinex (fifty cents' worth) in a pint bottle, and add the Sugar Syrup. It keeps perfectly. Take a teaspoonful every one, two or three hours.

Pine is one of the oldest and best known remedial agents for the throat membranes. Pinex is a most valuable concentrated compound of Norway white pine extract, and is rich in gualacal and other natural healing elements. Other preparations will not work in this combination.

The prompt results from this mixture have endeared it to thousands of housewives in the United States and Canada, which explains why the plan has been imitated often, but never successfully.

A guaranty of absolute satisfaction, or money promptly refunded, goes with this preparation. Your druggist has Pinex, or will get it for you. If not, send to The Pinex Co., Ft. Wayne, Ind.

AN OVERSIGHT.

Dear Dr. Meek: Some time last year, at the request of the Editor of the Natchez Democrat, who was preparing a "Booster's Edition" of his paper, I hurriedly wrote a historical sketch of Methodism in Natchez, basing it very largely on Dr. W. C. Black's little book, "A Centennial Retrospect." This article, just previous to our Annual Conference, was copied in the New Orleans Advocate. My attention was then called to the fact that in giving a list of the men who had served Jefferson Street Church, I had omitted the name of Rev. R. D. Norsworthy; and as I wrote the list from memory (a rather poor one at that), I may have omitted others.

I considered the omission of Brother Norsworthy's name as peculiarly unfortunate as his continued residence here, up to last fall, for the several past years, has kept him even in more intimate and affectionate touch with this city and this church than others whose subsequent paths have carried them in other directions.

Sister Norsworthy's membership just now is with us and they are both highly esteemed here, both for their influence in the past and present. It has been interesting to me to note what different pastors with their different "make-ups" have stood for so as to peculiarly impress the congregation. I have studied the men who have preceded me here. It is a goodly company—the real apostolic succession. Not one of them has failed to make a good contribution to the life of this community. As one studies these men he prays to be worthy of them.

Brother Norsworthy stood with especial firmness for the living of Methodist ideals and the violation of life rules peculiarly dear to Methodists pained him beyond measure. Our people need to remember his example and his precepts.

He lives now with his son, Rev. T. J. Norsworthy at Yazoo City, Miss., and while feeble, is an interested, eager, watchman of the ongoings of Zion's army. May his path be brighter and brighter, until the perfect day shall dawn! H. B. WATKINS.

Natchez, Miss., Dec. 29, 1913.

John Wesley reminds us that God "will be a strong tower to all that trust Him, from the face of your enemies. What is there either in heaven or in earth that can harm you, while you are under the care of the Creator and Governor of heaven and earth? Let all earth and hell combine against you; yea, the whole animate and inanimate creation: they cannot harm you while God is on your side; his favorable kindness covers you as a shield."

DID IT SAVE A LIFE?

"While playing around the house," writes Wm. Buchli, of Nashville, "I stuck a rusty nail in my heel. The doctors lanced it three times. One said my leg was so drawn up that it never would be straight. For four months I could not get about—only on crutches. A friend brought me some Gray's Ointment, which I began to use at once, and in four weeks I was sound and well, out playing ball. Gray's Ointment can always be depended upon to prevent serious blood poison, and to relieve malignant skin diseases, such as Ulcers, Boils, Carbuncles, Old sores, Festered Wounds, Poison Oak, etc. For a free sample, write Dr. W. F. Gray & Co., 316 Gray Bldg., Nashville, Tenn. See a box at drug stores."

Editorial

A SOUND UTTERANCE FROM A HIGH SOURCE

"A good religion is the real basis upon which all law, all business and all pocketbooks must rest. Without a heart, what good is a mind? Give a man a sense of responsibility to God and you can wipe off all the laws from the slates. Conscience is the greatest force of which man has knowledge from the cradle to the grave. Conscience rears about us stronger walls than walls of stone."

These ringing words are from the Hon. W. J. Bryan, our brilliant Secretary of State. Some years ago ex-President Roosevelt said to a group of gentlemen, "Bryan ought to have been a preacher." Though not professionally so, he is a preacher. We know of no living man who can state the great practical truths of Christianity more impressively than can he; nor does he hesitate to do so when opportunity offers. He is a force for righteousness not only in his own land, but in all lands. And he is perhaps to-day the world's most eloquent and influential advocate of international peace.

PLAN AND PUSH YOUR WORK.

The best work is never done in a haphazard way. He achieves most who has a well-formed plan and labors systematically to carry it out. We think it would be well for every pastor in these opening days of the new year to study carefully the conditions in his charge, determine what is most needed to promote its true prosperity, and to direct his efforts accordingly. Of one thing he may feel fully assured, and that is, that no department of the church will run itself. If the prayer meeting is to be made to flourish, time and attention must be bestowed upon it both in the way of securing an attendance and of making the exercises interesting. And the same is true of the Sunday school, the Epworth League, and the regular preaching services. Perhaps there is nothing that so stimulates all the different activities of a congregation as faithful pastoral visiting upon the part of the preacher. Scarcely any sowing may be expected to yield so quick and plentiful a harvest as that done by the fireside in the homes of the people. Only the preacher who is intelligently diligent may hope to win the richer and larger prizes of the Christian ministry. Without the right kind of planting and cultivation, there can no more be a full and joyous reaping in the spiritual than in the physical realm.

THE EDITOR SUSTAINED.

Some months ago in discussing the question of college theatricals, we ventured to suggest that they are more harmful than helpful in the real work of education. We noticed in the New Orleans States of last Saturday an endorsement of our position which came from a wholly unexpected quarter. Dr. Donald B. V. Dixon, the president of Sophie Newcomb College, is reported to have stated that his faculty is opposed to allowing the young ladies of that institution to join the young men of Tulane University in giving their accustomed annual play, on the ground that the excitement of the rehearsals interferes with their studies.

Among other things, Dr. Dixon is quoted as having said: "I personally am not against the plan to have the young ladies take part in the play, but on behalf of the faculty, I am going to oppose the idea. The months of preparation which the play entails disrupts their interest in school matters, and we wish merely to protect the educational interests of the girls."

This conclusion reached by those in charge of Newcomb, the wealthiest and one of the most fashionable colleges for young ladies in the South, ought, it seems to us, to carry some weight with it. We respectfully commend it to the careful consideration of the instructors in our church institutions who are given to insisting that public amateur theatricals are a necessary part of the best educational training.

SHALL WE RETREAT, OR ADVANCE?

There is scarcely a State in the South that is more fearfully cursed by the liquor traffic than Louisiana. The Southern part of the commonwealth is largely in its grip, and with hundreds of barrooms in New Orleans shipping intoxicants in every direction, there is not a parish anywhere that does not feel its awful effects. The supreme call of the hour to our moral and patriotic citizenship is to rise up and strike down this monster iniquity, which more than anything else bars the pathway of all worthy progress. The most effective agency with which to fight this gigantic evil is the Anti-Saloon League. That organization has wrought wonders in other States, and it is our only immediate hope. We must support, strengthen, and co-operate with it if we would redeem this fair portion of the American Union from the blighting sway of the open dramshop.

Unfortunately we are not doing this as we should. We have it upon good authority that the Anti-Saloon League in this State is being seriously hindered in its operations by a lack of funds. The Louisiana Conference has given to this important work one of its best ministers, and we must not abandon him in the struggle. We owe it to him to sustain him and the noble cause which he so ably represents. Not to do this, thereby defeating his efforts and entailing hardships upon him and his family, would be a positive reproach to us. We must AT ONCE give this matter attention, and provide the shows of war to carry on this urgently needed campaign. Let every friend of temperance, clerical and lay, send immediately to Rev. A. W. Turner, Box 22, Shreveport, La., a remittance for this purpose. Let our pastors bring this cause to the notice of all sympathizers with it in their communities and ask them to give it financial assistance.

Never was the outlook for the prohibition movement over the State brighter than it is now. We only need to press the battle vigorously to achieve substantial results; but this cannot be done without money. Shall we retreat, or go forward? This is the question that now squarely confronts us. Shall we let our lack of liberality prolong the reign amongst us of the saloon, with all of its attendant woes and vices? How shall we meet our Lord in the judgment if we do?

PAYING THE PASTOR.

This is the time when the assessments for ministerial support are being made in the various pastoral charges. The law prescribes that after conferring with the preacher, the stewards must determine in each instance what amount is to be raised for his maintenance during the year. Oftener than otherwise these estimates are agreed upon and placed on record at the first quarterly conference. This is a most important matter and should never be hastily or carelessly dealt with. Much depends upon making such provision for the minister as will enable him to secure the best facilities for conducting his work and keep him free from financial worry. Otherwise he cannot render the best service of which he is capable. The cost of living at present is exceedingly high, and official boards should not be unmindful of this fact. Wherever it is possible, unless it is already quite adequate, it would be well to increase the pastor's salary in some measure, to offset the skyward trend of prices for the necessities of life. But under no circumstances should a minister wrangle with his stewards over the question of the assessment for his support. Such action upon his part almost invariably hurts more than it helps. To make a respectful and dignified statement as to his needs, when requested to do so, is quite as far as he should go.

But it is not enough for an official board to place an assessment upon the membership of the church for the maintenance of the preacher—they should go further and devise some plan of collecting the money that will enable them to furnish him promptly and regularly the means necessary to meet his current expenses. Perhaps the best way is to pay him on the first day of every month; but if this is not feasible, a vigorous and faithful effort should be made to settle with him quarterly, according to the plan of the Discipline. Few ministers have any collateral upon which to borrow money, and it is a grave injustice to force them to ask for unsecured credit in a community where perhaps they are almost strangers. The extent to which our preachers have had to do this on the poorer charges has long been one of the most trying hardships of the ministry, and it is high time that we were instituting a better system of caring for them and their families. Let us do our utmost to make progress in this direction during the year 1914, whose days are already so swiftly fleeting by.

A man who lives right, and is right, has more power in his silence than another has by his words. Character is like bells which ring out sweet music, and which, when worked, continually give, resound with sweet music.—Philip Brooks.

THE PASTOR-EVANGELIST.

I always have recognized the high office of the evangelist. I believe the office to be the appointment of God and that the evangelist has a place in the work of the kingdom that none other can fill. But I also believe that every pastor can be an evangelist.

The degree of a pastor's success in special soul-winning will depend largely upon the degree of his passion for work, and his passion for souls will depend on his intelligent conception of the awful condition of a lost soul. If he will realize that there is an awful hell, and that every lost sinner is hanging just over it, and the only thing between him and it is death, and that that brittle cord may be snapped at any moment, he will find himself in an avalanche of passion to win him to Christ Jesus the Savior, who alone can change this fearful condition.

I find altogether too many pastors who are perfectly satisfied to turn the special work of soul-winning over to the few who seem to be especially called of God to this work. This is a fearful mistake. Some men are more apt in soul-winning than others, but every preacher called of God may be a soul-winner in a special way.

Dear brother pastor, what has God called us to do if it is not to win men to Jesus Christ? Surely this is the great commission, the great evangelism.

The pastor can be an evangelist if he will get the work upon his heart and exercise confidence in himself and his God in the work. No pastor can rightfully excuse himself for the lack of evangelistic power because he is strong in the pulpit as an orator, or is a good financier, or is at home in the commercial world, or is a good mixer in the social circles, or is a good pastor to take care of the sheep already in the fold. All these are above price, and will help him to be the better evangelist among his own people and in his own community, if he will but add evangelistic power.

Who could be better informed as to the need of the church and community than the faithful pastor? He is, or should be, the best prepared to discover the conditions and apply the needed remedies. It is said, and often is too true, that a stranger can come into a church and community and say and do things which ought to be said and done, but which the pastor would not dare say or do. Why is this so? Ought this to be true in any church or community? Is there anything which really ought to be said from the pulpit, which the pastor, in the spirit and love of the Master, can not say or ought not say? Is there anything which an evangelist can do which the faithful pastors ought not do? Brother pastor, would you allow a stranger to come among your people and say and do what you would not say and do, and think it all right? If the pastor has obtained the confidence of his people, that is his privilege. To them, what he says and does is right. In the evangelistic meeting it may take him longer to awaken a deep conviction and an active interest; but, when it does come, it will last longer.

How may the pastor become evangelistic, or receive evangelistic power? By meeting the conditions and paying the price.

1. He must realize that his first and highest calling is to win men to Jesus Christ.

2. He may need to separate himself from many things he now holds dear—perhaps from the pulpit he now occupies. Many a pastor is hedged in and short of evangelistic strength because he occupies the wrong place, for him.

3. He must consecrate himself to this work with persistent determination to succeed, and never give up until success comes. I find that too many pastors give up and close a meeting just when victory is at the door.

4. He must study and use the best methods of evangelistic effort. What is necessary for the success of a general evangelist may be necessary for the pastor's evangelistic success.

5. He must know how to organize his church so as to use the largest number possible in definite and special work.

6. He must know his singers, and know how to organize the largest number possible into a chorus, with a good leader at the head. I would recommend a good evangelistic singer when at all possible. It is too much for the pastor to direct the music or lead the singing; but he must keep his hand on this department if he would win.

7. He must prepare faithfully and preach evangelistic sermons. Every sermon must be intended to convince, convict, and persuade, and then it must be delivered with such courage, love, and earnestness that every word will burn its way into the heart of his audience.

8. He must know when to make an appeal, and how to draw the net. Much tact is needed at this point. It is one thing to get a fish in the way of the net, but altogether another thing to land him. So it is one thing to get a man convinced that he ought to be a Christian, but altogether another thing to get him to be one. To lose at this point, is to lose all. Hence, the great necessity of knowing how to get men to definitely decide for Christ.

9. He must learn the art of advertising, and not be too modest about it. Many pastors fail as evangelists by not letting themselves and their meeting be known. A good advertising committee is a great help in a meeting. The same advertising and preparation necessary to the success of a meeting under the leadership of a general evangelist will be necessary under the leadership of the pastor-evangelist. Many pastors fail because they do not advertise enough, and do not hold preparatory meetings. If the pastor can not be present to hold the preparatory meeting, he should organize his church to do it.

For ten or more years I have used as nearly as possible the methods used by most of the general evangelists, and find that they work well. I am fully persuaded that the pastor-evangelist can succeed under the same conditions and with the same methods with which any other evangelist succeeds. Dear brother pastor, throw yourself into the work with a determination to win. Make every preparation possible. God will help you. Believe you can do it, put the Master to a test, and see what he will do for you and through you. Pray, plan, push, and persist, with a consuming passion for souls, and you will break through all hindrances to a glorious triumph in soul-winning. Read Prov. 11:30 and Daniel 12:3, "He that winneth souls is wise," and "they that be wise shall shine as the brightness of the firmament; and they that turn many to righteousness as the stars forever and ever."—Religious Telescope.

PALMETTO LETTER.

It takes about fifty years, Meek, for a man to catch on to things in this world. The longer I live the more wisdom I see in the example of Jesus, who took thirty years to prepare to work three years. We don't start with the very thing we need most—experience. How foolish the conduct of twenty often appears to the eye of fifty! Of course, it is all for the best, and our Maker was not indifferent to our highest welfare when he started us in the kindergarten stage of existence. But for this plan of life we would have no memories of the past, and I find these are among life's most precious treasures. Their value enhances with the flight of time, and when the snows of age whiten our heads they make us in our hearts contemporaries of our youth. I have made my full share of blunders, but I wouldn't swap the glorious memories of the journey along which I made these blunders for a life without memories. No, sir! I learned some of my best lessons through my blunders. It is a great world, and I can't suggest any improvement on the Divine plan of it.

I think what is true of my own life is true of the universe. What we know to be defects and imperfections are the unavoidable conditions of moral development. The glorious fact about the universe, Meek, is that the Good is militant, and contends with Evil always and everywhere. And we are fighting a winning battle. Sometimes the cause seems lost, and we are ready to give up, and take to the woods as Elijah did. But if we are as true and earnest as he was God deals gently with us, sends an angel to give us a square meal, shows us the inner workings of his Spirit in the "still, small voice," reasons with us, and then utters the heroic, "Go, return!" and sends us back to the front to carry on the fight. No room for pessimism in this world as long as we can see the blood-stained banner of the Cross flashing through the storm and hear the great guns of God's judgments booming in the chaos. A new world will be lifted into light before we are through, wherein righteousness and peace will reign.

I have been getting some good books lately. The bright young authors whose pens are as polished as their tongues are eloquent have sent me the luscious fruit of their vineyards. When I was holding forth at McKendree in Nashville, there was a young man among the Vanderbilt "theologues" whose bright face was often seen in my congregation. Whether my preaching or the charms of the college girls drew him would not be a fair question—he was there. He has "made good." To his laurels as an eloquent and useful preacher, he has now added the distinction of authorship. Dr. Frank M. Thomas, of Louisville, Ky., has sent forth in his book, "The Coming Presence," a most intensely interesting and helpful message. It is an able discussion of a subject that has always been close to the heart of all true followers of Jesus. Dr. Thomas brings to the discussion not only the contribution of original thought, and a spiritual insight that enables him to grasp the truth, as well as a deep moral sympathy with the subject, but the rich resources of a fine scholarship. He seems to have mastered the whole literature of his theme, which is now immense, and uses it to unfold the truth as he sees it. The beauty about the book is that it is not a compilation, but the output of a mind that has convictions. Whether you agree with the author or not, he tones you up. This book will shove you heavenward. If you read it through, you find at the close a strong current bearing you on, and, from somewhere, the fragrance of flowers that bloom in the gardens of God filling the air all about you.

When we launched the game little torpedo craft called "The Epworth Era," and it was cruising around in Methodist waters, carrying consternation to all the coasts of sombre conservatism, I chanced to enlist a gallant young officer, the sparkle of whose polished blade added new lustre to our fame. He, too, was from Kentucky—Oh, yes, the "Bluegrass region," of course! Did you ever see a Kentuckian from any other part of "the dark and bloody ground"? He has written a book, and sent his former captain a copy. How felicitous the title, "When Sainthood was in Flower." It is a charming volume of Bible portraits, just the sort of book our young people ought to read. Without robbing them of their antique aspect, without divesting them of the Hebrew robes they wore, Dr. Henderson has made Daniel, and Rebecca, and Joseph, and Ruth almost appear in a modern role. They certainly afford admirable examples for us to emulate. What a fine book this would be to put in the Epworth League Reading Course. Harry's pen still keeps its diamond point—his cimeter its Damascus edge.

And here is another. It, too, is from a Kentucky source. It bears the names of two registered Blue-grass thoroughbreds sure enough, the Rev. John R. Deering, D. D., and Rev. E. L. Southgate. It is the report on "Laity Rights" made to the Kentucky Annual Conference, and adopted by them at their last session. It is a brief tract, but it is multum in parvo, which used to mean, much in little! If I were rich enough to afford it, I would print a million copies and send them out over America in the interest of Christian womanhood. Respectful and conservative—Kentucky gentlemen, born again at Methodist altars could be nothing else—it is a ringing assertion of the Scriptural truth about woman. The time has come, Meek, when we have to make an earnest effort to save Christian ideals from the disintegrating and destructive influence of modern radicalism. God grant that Southern Methodism may stand firm for the old against the new here! The Kentucky Conference honored and did the cause of Christ a great service. When it adopted this strong statement of the case on this vexed subject. When you go to Chatham, bury the Lally Rights monster ten thousand fathoms deep so that nothing but the upheavals of the judgment day will be able to reach it again. Thank God it is only a noisy "howl" among Southern Methodist women who want "lally rights." Maternal rights are the concern of Southern womanhood. May it be so till Christ blows his trumpet!

You owe this letter to a touch of grip. "Bleeged" to stay in my room. Yet it is bright and balmy as spring out of doors. This is a delicious climate. We had a house ready for Brother Wilson; but he went right by us to Pass Christie-Aunt! Well, I tell them over here that a little strip of Eden escaped the ravages of Satan; and that strip was the Mississippi Gulf Coast. Amen.

STONEWALL JACKSON.

(Editorial in the New York World of May 2, 1913.)

Fifty years ago to-night there fell mortally wounded at Chancellorsville one of the great captains of the English-speaking races.

Lee, who called Stonewall Jackson his strong right arm, once said that he would have won Gettysburg if Jackson had been there. Be that as it may, the almost uninterrupted victories of the Army of Northern Virginia ended when Jackson passed away. Chancellorsville marked the flood-tide of the Confederate arms. Two months later came Gettysburg, and from thence on to Appomattox Lee's forces, despite all their marvelous courage and tenacity, were never again invincible.

Jackson's place in military history is unique. Most great reputations were made by long years of service. His career was compressed into a scanty twenty-two months, from that day in July, 1861, when Bee pointed to him "standing like a stone wall" at Bull Run, to the early May day in 1863 when he marched his corps around the front of Hooker's army, smashed in its right flank and gave the Confederacy its most brilliant victory, only to fall under the fire of his own men.

A terrible partnership was that between the Cavalier and the Puritan; between Lee, who embodied the chivalry of Virginia, and Jackson, who was a direct spiritual descendant of the men that fought with Cromwell at Naseby. In all crises the two men seemed to fight with a single brain and a single purpose destitute alike of the jealousy and intrigue that all but wrecked the Army of the Potomac.

Jackson presents a strange, appealing figure on the pages of history. He was as gentle and gracious as Lee, as silent and taciturn as Grant, as daring and audacious as Stuart or Sheridan, as relentless as Sherman, and with it all there was an intensity of religious fervor that belonged to the seventeenth century rather than the nineteenth. The war to him was a holy war. He went to battle with a prayer on his lips, and he went from battle to give thanks to God who had crowned his army with victory—

Appealing from his native sod

In forma pauperis to God,

"Lay bare thine arm—stretch forth thy rod, Amen!" That's Stonewall's way.

Even the bullets that struck him down he regarded as providentially directed by a definite divine purpose. There is no more mendacious phrase than that of "a born soldier," but here was a man who was beyond question a born soldier—a soldier who hated war, who was dazzled neither by ambition nor glory, who fought for principle and principle alone, and whose military genius was elemental. Peace to his ashes! A united nation can be proud that he was numbered among her sons.

THE BATTLE FOR THE CHURCH PAPER.

By Rev. W. H. Jordan.

Was it a dream or was it a real vision? I saw a Christian home and in it a center table groaning under the load of secular magazines, trade and fashion journals, farm papers, local and metropolitan dailies. Above them all was the bulky, gaudy Sunday daily, apparently pompous and proud because of the universal attention accorded it in the home. It made little difference what this gossiping, irreverent, muck-raking scavenger, a very god of this world blinding the people's eyes, proscribed in England, preferred in America, uttered, all that it uttered or pictured was received by young and old with open eyes and ears.

I looked farther and saw that the house was thoroughly fortified. Other secular papers were heaped against the doors and windows, as though some terrible enemy sought to enter.

Looking outside the door, I beheld a mighty force for righteousness, a valiant soldier, the Christian paper, the denominational weekly, and the missionary monthlies trying to break in. It reminded one of Bunyan's siege of Man-Soul. The forces of the religious press on the outside called and pleaded. They even threatened that a life or a home without a Christian paper would grow more narrow, would stultify. They proclaimed their worth. They showed the goods. The wind blew the leaves about and page after page, department after department demanded its right to do good in that home. Each paper offered to come each week or month like an inspiration. But there was no response. The papers pleaded and good people sought to help and to advocate their cause.

During the siege, in one of the fiercest attacks, the man of the fortified house was cornered by a flank movement and a tremendous effort was made to accomplish the seemingly impossible. The man had been a member of the Church for many years (some said he had even been an officer, but I cannot believe this to be true, for no man would think of holding such a position and not read a denominational paper), but declared himself too busy to read the church paper. The church paper endured the insult and recalled the Teacher's portrait of the man, how that "the cares of the world and the deceitfulness of riches choke out the word and it becometh unfruitful." Then the fellow pleaded poverty, but the comforts of his home and the apparent prosperity of his business all belied his words. He had money evidently for secular papers, why not for a religious newspaper that could be read without one's feeling the necessity of a bath or a confession. Think of it. There stood that man, the husband and head of the house, between his family and the finest Christian literature in the country. His children were growing up without forming the acquaintance of that wonderful agency for good, the weekly denominational paper.

But the stalwart weekly denominational paper was not to be put off lightly. "How can you call yourself a loyal or intelligent Christian and neglect me?" The man was cornered, blushed, and the inquisitor went on: "Think of our large church membership, and what do you know about the great agencies of the Church, educational, social and missionary? How can you pray 'Thy Kingdom Come,' and not watch the mighty movements in the world to-day? Let us in and we will keep you informed. Is it more necessary to read on farming and politics than it is on the mighty movements and modern triumphs of the Gospel? I should be first in your home; let in and kept in. More than half a hundred people have contributed heart and brain to prepare me for the mighty work I have to do in your home. Cost? I cost less than the church member's cigar, or the children's gum, or the ice cream cones. Come across, now, open up and let us in!"

But all this time the church paper was interrupted by voices from the center table and in different parts of the house: "We have a religious column!" "We carry the Sunday school lesson!" "We have a syndicate sermon by—!" The man who was cornered seemed to think now that deliverance had come, but the forces who had laid siege would not give up, but persisted until he capitulated, and opened the door. I thought the money he let loose of was the biggest he had ever seen. I even thought I heard a little scream from the bird of liberty.

But no sooner was the church paper inside and swept its eye over vast forces within than it feared it would be crushed in the conflict, beneath the load of magazines and papers, most of whom cast sinister and envious glances at the new-comer as a most unwelcome invader.

Only gradually did the attractive looking weekly paper get the attention of the various members of the family, but a wide-awake exhortation one morning, from the pastor made many friends for the paper, and to-day the church paper, so long neglected, despised and excluded, holds the fort and both parents and children find it a friend worth while, full of life, entertaining, instructive, inspiring.

I started in my reverie, and lo, my church paper was waiting in its accustomed place, eager to pour out its wealth of thought, its contributions from many minds in many lands.—Christian Intelligencer.

GUARDING THE GIRLS.

"Fifty thousand girls drop out of sight every year," a famous newspaper announces in huge type. A mere student would ask what percentage this is of all girls between, say fifteen and twenty years, and whether such loss is possible. The article apparently is based on the fact that 600 girls disappeared in twelve months between New York and Chicago. This is bad enough surely. The remedy recommended is to copy after an English association which publishes protective rules beginning as follows:

1. Girls should never speak to strangers, either men or women, in the street, in shops, in stations, in trains, in lonely country roads, or in places of amusement.
2. Girls should never ask the way of any but officials on duty, such as policemen, railway officials, or postmen.
3. Girls should never loiter or stand about alone in the street, and if accosted by a stranger (whether man or woman) should walk as quickly as possible to the nearest policeman.
4. Girls should never stay to help a woman who apparently faints at their feet in the street, but should immediately call a policeman to her aid.

Possibly these restrictions are colored by the moral overstrain apt to characterize a reformer's zeal, but it is fair to ask whether a land in which they are necessary is either civilized or Christian. Nothing Bernard Shaw says of English hypocrisy and sensuality is half so striking as this proposal to put everybody in social quarantine. If the facts sustain such contentions, the sooner we have an ironclad etiquette the better. But what a ghastly commentary on our "progress," how our cities sink their pride and become mere traps of lust and death! What is the truth of all this?—Collier's Weekly.

Church News

As a result of a recent campaign directed to that end, $150,000 has been added to the endowment of the Randolph-Macon Woman's College at Lynchburg, Va.

Mrs. Cyrus McCormick is planning to give buildings to Presbyterian mission colleges at Tsinan and Nanking, China, at a cost of $750,000.

There were 28 additions at the Scruggs Memorial Church of St. Louis on the first Sunday of the new year. Rev. H. R. Singleton is the pastor of this congregation.

It is stated that Evangelist G. A. Klein, of Nashville, Tenn., and his singer, Mr. P. M. Boyd, will spend the first three months of the year in revival work in Florida.

Four theological seminaries in Montreal—Presbyterian, Methodist, Episcopal and Congregationalist—have united. The "Record of Christian Work" says the public approves. Probably so. But is "public approval" the standard?—Florida Christian Advocate.

Dr. R. D. Smart, one of the best known pastors in Southern Methodism, died at Charlottesville, Va., on January 4, after a protracted illness. He had filled leading pulpits in the Little Rock, Memphis, St. Louis, Louisville, and Virginia Conferences. He is stated to have been about 67 years of age.

Bishop E. E. Hoss spent Sunday, January 4, in St. Louis. He occupied the pulpit of the Cabanne Church at 11 a. m., delivering a sermon that was up to his usual high standard. He was en route to Nashville to be present when the Vanderbilt University case was argued before the Supreme Court of Tennessee.

Bishop W. F. McDowell, of the Methodist Episcopal Church, was operated on for infection of the gall bladder on December 24. He stood the operation well and is reported to be making satisfactory progress toward recovery, but his physicians have advised that all of his engagements for the next two months be canceled.

An effort has lately been made to overcome the resonance in our beautiful St. John's Church in St. Louis, which was said to be quite a detriment to its acoustics. The brilliant pastor, Dr. J. W. Lee, states that the work to remedy this defect was a perfect success and that one can now be heard in this fine auditorium without difficulty.

Rev. T. W. Lewis, pastor of the First Methodist Church of Memphis, Tenn., which has a membership of more than 1,800, has recently sent the Nashville Christian Advocate a list of 20 subscriptions and the Midland Methodist, his Conference organ, a list of 61. Brother Lewis is one of the most effective pastors in Southern Methodism, and he knows the value of the church paper in the homes of his people.

Rev. J. Edgar Wilson has been chosen Editor of the Florida Christian Advocate, succeeding Rev. D. B. Sweat, whose ill health forbade his continuance on the tripod. We welcome Brother Wilson into the field of church journalism, though we give Brother Sweat up with not a little reluctance. An assessment of $2,500 was levied on the Florida Conference for the maintenance of this journal during the current year.

Rev. H. M. Ellis, Agent for the Methodist Hospital at Memphis, Tenn., has secured for that enterprise subscriptions amounting to more than $100,000, of which amount more than $30,000 is in cash. Considering the length of time that Brother Ellis has been at work and the conditions existing in the co-operating territory, this is a most remarkable showing. Our pastors everywhere should swing the doors wide open to the Agent for this urgently needed institution and give him their hearty co-operation. The presentation of this worthy cause will not hurt the local interests in any charge.

Writing of the press of the Methodist Episcopal Church, the Central Methodist Advocate, of Kansas City, Mo., says: "During the last quadrennium our official press; that is, the presses of the Book Concern themselves, put out more than five billion pages, which, could they be placed end to end, would make a noose of light more than a million miles long. And, to repeat our favorite comparison, when we remember that it is but twenty-five thousand miles around the earth at the Equator and but two hundred and forty thousand to the moon, we get some idea of the output of our presses every year, and this output was never so large as now, and never was growing so rapidly."

THE STUDENT VOLUNTEER CONVENTION.

(We are indebted to Mr. F. P. Turner, the General Secretary of the movement for the following interesting account of the recent Student Volunteer Convention in Kansas City, Mo.)

Nearly four thousand students, professors and other representatives of seven hundred and fifty-five institutions of higher learning of the United States and Canada met at Kansas City, December 31 to January 4, in the Seventh International Convention of the Student Volunteer Movement for Foreign Missions. Two hundred and seventy-nine secretaries, missionaries and other representatives of the Foreign Mission Boards of North America; fifty-three editors and special correspondents of the religious press; three hundred and sixty-five special delegates and guests; and three hundred and fifty laymen representing the Laymen's Missionary Movement, made a total registration of five thousand and thirty-one, exceeding by nearly eight hundred the attendance at any previous Convention of the Student Volunteer Movement. The number of institutions represented was also in excess of any of the earlier quadrennial gatherings, while the presence at the Convention of nearly two hundred oriental students—Chinese and Japanese for the most part—contributed a new and unique element to the Convention personnel.

The purpose of the Convention, as of its predecessors, was to bring together the leading Christian students and professors of North America and the leaders of the foreign missionary enterprise for helpful association and conference; to consider unitedly the problems of the evangelization of the non-Christian world; to gain inspiration and a vision of the foreign missionary responsibility of the Church, and to pray and earnestly to resolve to enter with greater consecration upon the work of extending the Kingdom of Christ among the non-Christian nations.

The general sessions of the Convention were housed in Convention Hall, seated to accommodate six thousand, thus providing for a thousand Kansas City patrons and hostesses whose generosity and hospitality helped so much to make the Convention possible. Afternoon Section Conferences were held for the most part in churches of the various denominations.

The great themes of the Convention turned upon the larger discovery of God; a greater appropriation of the spiritual resources available to every worker in the Kingdom; the tragic and compelling needs of the nations of the earth, especially those pre-eminently non-Christian; the characteristics, equipment and training of worthy workers for foreign service; the message they are to deliver; the development of an adequate financial base at home; and the significance of the general out-reach of North American social, intellectual and commercial life as well as that distinctively missionary.

Among the notable speakers at the main sessions were Dr. R. F. Horton of Great Britain; Bishop L. L. Kinsolving, of South Brazil; Dr. Robert E. Speer, perennial inspirer of North American students; Dr. W. D. Mackenzie, of Hartford Theological Seminary; Dr. S. M. Zwemer, Cairo, Egypt, Christian apostle among the Moslems; Prof. Charles R. Henderson of the University of Chicago, Barrows lecturer in India last year; G. Sherwood Eddy, student evangelist in Asia; Hon. H. B. F. Macfarland, the great layman of Washington; J. Campbell White, of the Laymen's Missionary Movement; Dr. Shailer Mathews, president of the Federal Council of the Churches of Christ in America; J. A. Macdonald, editor of the Toronto Globe; Hon. William J. Bryan, Secretary of State of the United States, and Dr. John R. Mott, Christian leader of students throughout the world.

Each afternoon the Convention broke up into sections, once for the consideration of specific fields, again, into denominational groups, and a third time for consideration of special problems pertaining to the promotion of missionary intelligence and activity on the part of the students. Two special groups held most interesting afternoon sessions each day—the editors of college papers, and the Chinese students, the former about 75 in number, and the latter 160 including not a few young women.

Between sessions the students interested themselves in a large and comprehensive exhibit of literature and accessories for use in up-to-date mission study classes.

More interesting and impressive than any speaker, longer to be remembered than any one feature of the program, however great, was the Convention presence itself. Probably never before in Christian history has there been so large a number of Christian college men and women together, and among these were the largest number of intending missionaries—student volunteers—ever assembled at one time. Slow indeed must have been the imagination of any delegate or visitor which was not set aglow by the sight; ideals of life service already high were being heightened; consecration already genuine was being deepened; views of world need and world opportunity were being broadened; the lives to be devoted to foreign service, already significantly numerous, were being added to hour by hour. In such a presence and amid such processes, significant for the extension of the Kingdom to earth's farthest bounds, were the days spent.

At the farewell meeting on Sunday night there was read the honor roll of several volunteers who had died during the four years since the convention of 1910; a large number of volunteers who are expected to sail during 1914 stood while in prayer and song they were commended to the Father's care; and farewell charges were delivered by Mr. Eddy and Dr. Mott.

DOES NOT LOOK WELL.

In the face of the fact that the matter is in the courts, and that the great majority of the annual conferences of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, have officially spoken with the greatest plainness and emphasis against the acceptance by Vanderbilt University of the million-dollar gift of Mr. Carnegie, the Board of Governors of the medical department of that university, organized under the provisions of Mr. Carnegie's offer, has met and taken active measures looking to the carrying out of the plans. This looks to outsiders very much like a bold defiance of the action of the Bishops of their Church, of the will of the Church, and of the very courts in which the case is still under consideration. It looks, too, as if the conviction prevails in the minds of the advocates of the reception of the Carnegie gift that the amount of the latter is so great that in the end all opposition must break down. Shall money rule?—Presbyterian of the South.

Telephone Always on Guard

There is never a moment, day or night, when your Bell Telephone is not a protection.

In the busy hours of the day and the silent watches of the night, the switchboard operator is always ready to answer a call.

The telephone is as much a part of the protective system of each community as the police and fire departments.

There's always a feeling of security in the knowledge that close at hand is the means of calling aid quickly when you most need it.

More than 70,000 cities and towns are protected day and night by the Bell Telephone system; 7,500,000 Bell telephones are on guard. In thousands of rural communities it is the chief reliance in emergencies and times of danger.

It is estimated that 674 persons were killed by automobiles at street crossings in this country last year.

Of 558 immoral women examined before the Chicago morals court, the education of 28 equaled the eighth public school grade, of 296 the fourth grade, of 186 the third grade, and seventy-eight could neither read nor write.

According to report, the cotton mills of the United States consumed 5,786,330 bales of cotton in the year 1912-13, as compared with 5,367,533 bales for the year previous. This was the largest consumption in the history of the industry in this country, exceeding the average for seven years by 351,253 bales.

Orville Wright, the inventor of the aeroplane, is said to have invented a stabilizer for aeroplanes in flight, the value of which may be very great. It is supposed to reduce the danger of flight to a minimum and make it comparatively safe and practical. We may expect much more rapid progress in aviation in the next few years than in the decade just passed.

In addition to the large dry dock to be built near Quebec, we are shortly to have another of about equal size on the Atlantic Coast at South Boston; both are to be built to accommodate the largest steamers. The latter dock is to cost $3,000,000, and the International Mercantile Marine, the Cunard and the Hamburg American Lines have agreed to pay $50,000 a year for twenty years in compensation for its use.

The gross earnings of all American railroads for the first two weeks in December, 1913, was $16,793,962, which is a loss of $980,532, or 5.5 per cent less than the gross earnings for the same two weeks in 1912. Nearly all of the roads in the West and Southwest report decreased earnings while the railroads in the South show no decrease. Among the roads showing important increases are the Southern Railway, the Louisville and Nashville, Mobile and Ohio, and the Cincinnati, New Orleans and Texas Pacific.

Marked progress has been made during the past year by the Playground and Recreation Association of America. The total expenditure for this service during the past twelve months has been $5,700,000, an increase of $1,500,000, or 33 per cent over that of 1912. New playgrounds for children were established in seventy cities during the year. We are glad to note that good progress has been made in New Orleans in this essential part of the child's education and welfare.

In his discussion of the high cost of government in the Saturday Evening Post of January 3, Senator Burton of Ohio makes the assertion that we spend more in one day now than we did in one year in 1790. He says, that "our national budgets have flourished with tropical luxuriance," and that, "during the last four years of 'unbroken peace we have spent $829,000 more than during the four years of frightful warfare between the States.'" The presentation of this subject is instructive and interesting and should be widely read.

In the judgment of a high canal official, the Panama Canal will be in condition to pass vessels across the isthmus in about seventy days. It appears to be impossible to fix the exact date for the opening. After the removal of the Cucaracha slide, which blocks the cut at Culebra, and the other smaller slides in the same locality, it is estimated that it will take several months to train the operating force before the waterway is formally opened to commerce. Thus it seems that this wonderful gateway which will open up to us the new South America with its almost fabled resources, is now nearing completion.

We quote from the Commercial Appeal of January 6 some startling census facts and figures, given by William F. Feagin, Superintendent of Education, to the county superintendents in conference at the Alabama Capitol. Among other things he showed that within the past decade the value of farm lands increased 116 per cent in Alabama as against 118 for the entire Union; that the excessive cost of transporting crops, due to bad roads, is more than a billion dollars; that 83 per cent of Alabama's citizens live in rural communities, compared with 88 per cent ten years ago; that 30 per cent of the children in 429 country schools, representing 37 counties "show physical defects of sufficient gravity to retard seriously their development," and that less than one-fourth of the 429 rural schools are found to have sanitary arrangements which meet the minimum requirements, the inevitable result being a heavily polluted soil actually constituting a part of the children's playground. We agree with Superintendent Feagin, in his declaration that "ere long the most valuable of all arts will be the art of deriving a comfortable subsistence from the smallest area of soil," and that our supreme need, if our economic, sanitary, social, educational and spiritual status is to be materially bettered, is an organization in each community that will eliminate every hurtful agency, inhibit every negative one, and stimulate every positive one into harmonious co-operative relationship through some systematic plan for social betterment.

SOME OBSERVATIONS ON BAPTISM.

Mr. Editor: Brother Sharbrough makes quite a blunder when he says that our "English Bibles" (King James translation, I suppose he means) say that Jesus "went down into the water." No such statement is made by Matthew, Mark, Luke or John, and they tell us about all we know concerning the baptism of Christ. I have never known an intelligent, well-informed immersionist to make that claim. That is the claim that our modern Methodists and Presbyterians are making for them. I took an itinerant Methodist preacher and a Presbyterian lady to task on that statement just a few months since. The preacher was so sure that the Bible says that Jesus "went down into the water" that he drew his sword and made fight, but he soon retreated in defeat from the field.

Brother Sharbrough also shows a serious lameness when he says that Christ might have gone down into the water and received baptism by affusion. There could have been no occasion for Christ to have gone down into the deep, muddy, cold waters of the "rushing Jordan" if he was baptized by affusion. If he went down into the water, he went down into it to be immersed, and he was immersed.

If Brother Sharbrough will examine the American Standard he will read in Matthew that Christ came "up straightway from the water," and no foot note is given, which shows that all the members of the committee were agreed that that is the correct translation. Also in Luke 3:16 and Acts 11:16 they inform us that John the Baptist baptized "with water." In both instances all the members of the committee were agreed that John the Baptist, according to St. Luke, baptized with water, and not in water. On the contrary, where they render in, into water, or in or into the Holy Spirit, they give the foot-note "or with," which shows that they entertained considerable doubt concerning the doctrine of immersion and that the preponderance of verbal evidence is in favor of affusion. They were sure that John baptized by affusion; they were not sure whether he or any other person baptized by immersion. Two-thirds of this committee, I am informed, were immersionists.

While I am on this subject, Mr. Editor, I will give two concrete examples of how easy it is to put to confusion an exclusive immersionist.

To a Baptist who was pressing the contention that not anything except immersion in water is Christian baptism, I put the question: "Where did Philip find water in the city of Samaria to immerse his converts?" A perplexed and confused frown is the only answer that I have yet received. Jacob, as you remember, had to dig a well there to get drinking water and water for his cattle.

Another exclusive immersionist was rather boastfully contending that Christ's burial was given by St. Paul as the true symbol of Christian baptism, and that, therefore, immersion in water alone is Christian baptism. I said: "If I were to dig a pit, put a Christian convert in it, dip water with a bucket and pour on him until he was covered with it that would be a complete symbol of our modern burial by interment; but would you accept it as a case of immersion?" No answer was returned except a look of confusion, which forcefully expressed the weakness of the doctrine of immersion when viewed in the light of its strongest arguments.

Christ was not buried by interment—interment is the most complete likeness to immersion that we can find—but burial by interment is burial by affusion. Throwing dirt on a dead human body with spades and shovels, is more like affusion than immersion.

CALLED HOME.

Dear Dr. Meek: My precious mother, who was 90 years old the 13th of October last, peacefully passed away last night at her home in Gallatin, Tenn. She had been a Christian since her childhood and a member of the Methodist Church for more than 70 years. My wife and I visited her immediately after the session of our Conference. She reared eleven children of her own and had been a widow since August, 1869. God was good to spare her to such a ripe age, but oh, how sad it is even now to give her up! JNO. W. BELL.

January 10, 1914.

(Our heart goes out in tenderest sympathy to Brother Bell in his bereavement. The passage of one's mother into the sphere invisible is one of the greatest earthly losses that one can sustain. We pray that the Holy Spirit may comfort every one who has been made to feel lonely and sad by the home-going of this faithful servant of the Master.)

A PASTOR COMPLIMENTED.

One of our North Dakota pastors who had given special attention to the prisoners and outcasts in his town was recently intercepted by one of the community's worst while on his way to the station to attend Conference. "You are not going to leave us, are you, preacher?" he asked with some concern. "I cannot tell," replied the parson. "No Methodist preacher knows where he will be next year. 'I may not come back. I cannot tell.'" With a serious look of deep concern the poor fellow asked next, "What will us poor bums do then?"

What a compliment to this preacher! We have since learned that he went back (to Rugby, N. D.) and among those to welcome him, we trow not, is the "hum" who felt that his removal would be a personal loss.—Northwestern Christian Advocate.

PORT GIBSON DISTRICT.

The district stewards, lay leaders and pastors of the Port Gibson District will please meet in the Methodist Church in Port Gibson at 3:30 p. m., January 27. The meeting will continue overnight and a good part of the following day. Let us have a full attendance. Pastors are urged to be present. Dr. Holloman will make ample provision for the entertainment of all. Come praying for the presence of the Holy Spirit.

OUR WORK IN BRAZIL.

By Dr. John T. Sawyer.

Not much is known by our people about Brazil. One writer says of it: "Physically, Brazil is one of the most remarkable countries in the world. Its shape suggests a huge fan. Its handle is the narrow strip that slips down between the Atlantic Ocean and the Argentine Republic. The body of the fan spreads out northwestward toward the Andes Mountains and northeastward along the Atlantic shore. It comprehends the heart of South America. It would take another Texas added to the United States to make this country as large as Brazil."

Bishop Lambuth says of it: "South America has been called the neglected continent. It is a fact that the unpenetrated area in the center of Brazil is greater than that yet unexplored in Africa. Some heroic man like David Livingstone is needed who will penetrate the recesses of the forests and trace the tributaries of the Amazon until he shall have mapped out that vast territory and discovered its populations. It is estimated that there are 2,000,000 Indians in this section, one tribe of whom are cannibals, and another are head hunters like the aborigines of Formosa." Speaking of the Amazon River, which runs through the northern section of Brazil, he says: "This river may not be the longest in the world, but it is the greatest, and empties two and one-half times as much water into the ocean as the Mississippi. It drains a basin containing a million miles more territory. A United States gunboat has entered the mouth of the Amazon and traveled one thousand miles to the city of Manaus, and then steamed fourteen hundred miles farther. Adding the tributaries of the Amazon, we have a grand total of 27,000 miles of navigable water, or a distance greater than the circumference of the globe."

The Republic of Brazil, with its twenty States and its nearly 20,000,000 inhabitants, is a heathen land, the vast majority of its inhabitants being grossly ignorant, superstitious and immoral. They have no open Bible; the Virgin Mary being substituted for Christ, the people worship at her shrine. Protestant Christianity entered Brazil in 1860. The M. E. Church began work there in 1874; and the Southern Methodists, with Rev. J. J. Ransom of the Tennessee Conference as missionary, started work in 1876 with three American and no Brazilian members. Our Woman's Board entered Brazil in 1881, sending out Miss Mattie H. Watts of Louisville, Ky., who opened work in Piracicaba. We learn from the Annual Report of Board of Missions published last May that we have in our two Conferences in Brazil 18 men and 22 women in the Brazil Mission Conference and 6 men and 4 women in the South Brazil Conference, making 50 missionaries. The native workers are 17 traveling preachers and 10 local preachers in the Brazil Mission Conference and 6 traveling preachers and 10 local preachers in the South Brazil Conference, making 43 traveling and local preachers. There are 5 districts and 45 pastoral charges in the Brazil Mission Conference, and in the South Brazil Conference 3 districts and 13 pastoral charges, making in all 7 districts and 58 charges. The statistics of last year showed a membership of over 7,000 in the two Conferences and the number must have been increased by some hundreds up to this time. There were reported 124 Sunday schools, 344 officers and teachers, and 5,083 scholars; also 64 Epworth Leagues, with 2,333 Epworth League members. There are at least 5 self-supporting churches, and there was last year about $17,000 collected for the support of the ministry, and for missions nearly $6,300, and for Church Extension within 34 cents of $4,000. Those statistics show that there were 43 church buildings, 9 missionary residences and native parsonages and 6 school buildings, making the estimated total value of mission property about $475,000. The increase since on this item may now make the estimate considerably greater. One of the school buildings is valued at $15,000. Bishop

Lambuth at the Junaluska Conference said that "in addition to the splendid showing made by these figures there should be mentioned Granbery College, one of the leading Protestant schools for young men in the Republic, and the six boarding schools and colleges for young women under the auspices of the Woman's Missionary Council. Our women have shown great wisdom as well as zeal in the development of an educational work which is reaching hundreds of the youth of the land, touching scores of homes, and helping in an intelligent way to intrench Christianity in the centers of population and of activity."

The South Brazil Conference was organized in 1910, and it is declared of our people there that "their liberality and zeal know no bounds. One congregation paid all of its assessments, voluntarily increased its assessment one hundred per cent, and made a thank offering at Christmas of $400 for evangelistic work. These people contributed ten dollars per capita during the past year."

The last report of our Mission Board states as follows: "Of our Latin-American fields, Brazil has now taken first place—a position once held by Mexico, where recently political disturbances and other obstacles have checked the march of progress. Like most of our mission fields, Brazil is feeling keenly the need of more churches of the better type. We have reached a stage in all of the fields where, to do our work as it should be done, we must rise up and build. Granbery College, the Collegio Piracicabano, the Collegio Uniao, and the People's Institute at Rio are typical institutions. Their influence and that of the schools at various other points will more and more be felt as the people of Brazil come more and more to recognize their own need and the contribution which these institutions can make toward meeting it."

Bishop Lambuth wound up his report on Brazil at the Second General Mission Conference, held at Lake Junaluska, N. C., June 25-29, 1913, with these words: "A vigorous type of Christianity is needed for Brazil. Given such a type, working with the leaven of the Gospel, we may confidently expect to see the forty per cent of illegitimacy and the eighty-five per cent of illiteracy wiped out and a general toning up in morals. The Republic needs thoroughly trained Christian teachers and preachers—Americans and Brazilians—who will do honest work, hold up the highest standards, and live what they teach. This is one of the most hopeful fields in the world. When one thinks of the growth of Protestantism, nearly fifty thousand strong, in the face of Romish misinterpretation, opposition, and abuse, one concludes that it has been one of the most fruitful. The common people hear the Gospel gladly. To them it brings freedom from bondage, comfort in sorrow, and a new and larger life. To them we must go or be untrue to the command of our Lord."

In the list of American Missionaries in Brazil, I find the names of the following three who are accredited to Louisiana: Rev. George D. Parker, Petropolis, Brazil, appointed in 1901 and Miss Helen Johnston, Ribeirao Preto, Brazil, also appointed in 1901; and Frank M. Long, Juiz de Fora, Brazil, appointed in 1913. Brother Parker was, in his boyhood, a member of Felicity Church, New Orleans, during my pastorate there, and was a glorious helper in the church work and an enthusiastic Epworthian; and, since he has been in Brazil, he has accomplished much, being a divinely approved and tireless worker for the spread of the Master's kingdom among the Brazilian millions of heathen. Miss Johnston's record is also one of thorough devotion and eminent success. Brother Long has doubtless thrown himself deep and altogether into the battle for souls in Brazil.

A quarter-million of dollars is certainly needed to be put into the Brazilian field, and our great Church with its immense membership could send that amount to Brazil this good year, and have many millions left. May Southern Methodism make a mighty effort to send money, men, and women in abundance, and may the prayers of faith and the baptism of the Holy Spirit go with them! Where does the money go anyhow? I saw a list not long since headed "How Americans spend their money." Here it is:

Our Church, you see, is next to the foot, not averaging 50 cents per head. Let us pray over this showing and, God helping us, do greatly better than this. One dollar a head would move us up considerably in the column.

I cannot close this paper without a direct reference to our dear women; and I have this to say, that without the great work they are doing—you know they have not the purse strings and are called the weaker sex, which is not true in the matters relating to church and Christianity—our showing would be much smaller and many a wheel of progress would have to stop. Our women in Brazil have nearly, if not quite, as large a part in our work there as have our men. A 1912 leaflet has the following in regard to the work of Miss Watts, the first missionary sent out by the Woman's Board: "Twenty-seven years ago a lone woman in a rented room struggling for three months with a single pupil; to-day in the same city on the ground formerly devoted to bull-fighting is a college that makes the enemies of truth tremble. It is considered to be the source of all that is best in the public schools. It is acknowledged by health officers to be one of the most hygienic buildings in the State. Collegio Piracicabano is feared and hated by its enemies and loved by those who love mankind. This college and seven more like it have grown from the sowing twenty-seven years ago, and the sower is seeing the harvest. Many who sent out the lone missionary have gone to their reward; but God has answered their prayers and rewarded their self-sacrifice in a measure greater perhaps than their faith and with results greater and more far-reaching than their successors comprehended. There are now eight flourishing stations under our Board in Brazil, with twenty-four missionaries doing splendid work."

One, writing of Miss Watts and her work, had this to say: "Then, too, there is the story of a blessing not accorded to every worker in the Master's vineyard—the story of how he allowed her to see the fruits of her labors and one day to stand surrounded by a great multitude of her own spiritual children and with her own hands to seal the corner-stone of the school building which was to bear her name and to give to the girls of Brazil that which she had given her best years to secure for them—a chance to know her Lord and their Lord—and to see in the place of the old bull-ring the beautiful college of her desire—The Piracicabano with the Martha Watts Annex." Not many women may be favored as are our missionary women in Brazil, but all of the sisters who have to stay at home may pray the prayers of faith daily for those who have gone thither, and they may give of their substance liberally to support the sisters at the front. One soul is priceless—planets of solid gold would be outweighed by one soul—and there are many millions in Brazil and all over this world who must perish unless we personally carry or send by others the glorious Gospel of the blessed God, telling of Jesus who "came to seek and to save the lost," and who is "able to save unto the uttermost" all who come unto God through him.

The Home Circle

BEFORE I GO TO BED.

Each evening as the clock strikes seven,
Directly after tea,
My mamma gets me dressed for bed,
An' then she cuddles me;
Sits down in her own rocking-chair
An' takes me on her knee.

She tells me then such lovely tales,
How all the stars and flowers
An' clouds are splendid castles grand
With shiny rainbow towers.
I find that I would like to stay
An' listen there for hours.

An' fore she kisses me "good-night"
She softly strokes my hair,
While I kneel down beside her knee
An' say my evening prayer.
An' when she tucks me safe in bed,
She says I'm in God's care.

So I'm not frightened in the dark,
'Cause mamma says it's clear
That children who have trust in God,
Need never have a fear;
For angels watch them as they sleep,
And God is always near.

THE CATCHING SMILE.

"Everybody smiled at me. They were all nice people that we met out walking," delightedly reported the tot who had just returned from the park.

"Bless the child, it was her own sweet little smile, ready for everybody, that made them all smile back," laughed the maid who had been along.

If you give good will, you will receive good will in return. Most people will respond to your good opinion of them by thinking well of you. And not the least pleasant thought will come with the knowledge that your smile is helping others, quite as much as their smiles help you.—Comrade.

THE WAYS OF TWO MOTHERS.

Two boys, John and Henry, were caught by their mothers reading "The Boy Burglar of Chicago." John's mother took her boy's copy away from him, threw it into the ash-pan and forbade him to read any more such books under penalty of "a good sound thrashing." That afternoon the mother went out, and John, of course, got the book out of the ash-pan and finished reading it, as any normal boy would do.

Henry's mother suggested that they read the book together. Mother read it out loud, and somehow it didn't sound right to the boy when the story came from his mother's lips. "It isn't much, it is true," said the mother, "but let us finish it." But the boy protested. "Well," said the mother, "suppose we read a story like it, but which I think is better." The boy was interested, and the mother read "Robin Hood." The boy voted it "great," and asked John to come over the next day and listen to it. Then the mother continued with "The Boys' King Arthur" and Fenimore Cooper's "Leatherstocking Tales." Meanwhile "The Boy Burglar of Chicago" lay on the library table where Henry could get it, but it was never taken up nor finished.

It was simply two ways that two mothers handled the same situation, but secured different results.—Southern Churchman.

A STORY OF LAFAYETTE.

During Lafayette's visit to America in 1824, he was everywhere honored. Once, when passing through a village where the entire population turned out, he saw an old soldier in Continental uniform. The old veteran drew himself up in the stiff fashion of the old-time drill and gave the military salute. As Lafayette made the return signal, tears started to his eyes. The tattered uniform, the ancient flint-lock, the silver-haired soldier, even older than himself recalled the dear past.

"Do you know me?" asked the soldier.

"No, I can not say that I do," was the frank reply.

"Do you remember the frosts and snows of Valley Forge?"

"I shall never forget them," answered Lafayette.

"One bitter night, General, you were going the rounds at Valley Forge. You came upon a sentry in thin clothing and without stockings. He was slowly freezing to death. You took his gun, saying, 'Go to my hut. There you will find stockings, a blanket and a fire. After warming yourself, bring the blanket to me. Meanwhile I will keep guard.'"

"The soldier obeyed. When he returned to his post, you General Lafayette, cut the blanket in two. One half you kept; the other half you presented to the sentry. Here, General, is one half of that blanket, for I am the sentry whose life you saved."—Herald and Presbyter.

"SUNNY BOBBIE."

"Sunny Bobbie" was the pet name given him in the home, where he was, indeed, the sunshine of a shut-in mother and careworn sister. No matter how gloomy the weather, his cheerful whistle could be heard as he went about his work at home, and when on his way to and from school.

"Mother," he said one Sunday night, as he leaned against her hair, "teacher talked a long time to-day about doing things to make other folks happy. She said there were always things we could find to do, if we tried, to brighten some life or make glad some sad heart. I have wondered what I could do. You know I can't give money, and haven't time to spare to work away from home. Of course, I am counting on doing big things when I am a man, but I would like to begin right now."

"My dear little son," said his mother, tenderly, as she drew him down and kissed his rosy cheek, "you have already begun. You bring joy to our hearts every day, and both sister and I long for the merry whistle which tells of your coming, and which sounds so cheerful as you go about your work."

"Why, mother, I just naturally love to whistle and sing," said Bobbie; "but I never thought of its helping anybody, and I am sure glad if it helps you, dear mamma, shut up in this room so long."

He did, indeed, sing naturally as a bird, with a sweet, if untrained, voice.

On his way to school, Bobbie had to pass the shop of a blacksmith, whose heart and conscience had become hardened and seared with sin. One morning Bobbie passed, singing "How firm a foundation," and as the blacksmith was not busy just then, he listened. This, he remembered, was his mother's favorite song, and tender memories began to stir in his hard old heart, and thoughts of the long ago came trooping in to soften the hard crust formed by selfishness and indifference. How often he had heard his mother's voice uniting with the congregation in singing this grand old hymn in the country church near his boyhood home! When the dying hour came, she had asked them to sing this song, and had tried with feeble voice to join in the last two verses. Tears began to roll down the furrowed cheeks of the old man, and as Bobbie's voice died away in the distance, he buried his face in his toil-hardened hands, and wept bitterly.

In the afternoon Deacon Haley came to have his horse shod. He noticed the subdued manner of the old blacksmith, and the absence of the profane language he habitually used. The horse shod, the deacon still lingered, hoping he would tell him his trouble, and he had not long to wait.

"Deacon," said the old man, "you have been praying for me these many years, I know, and you have tried time and again to talk to me about my soul's salvation; but it seemed my old heart was so hardened, and I had wandered so far away from my mother's teachings, that nothing could reach me. But this morning something happened to make me think, and I am a miserable man, deacon, and I want you to pray for me right now."

Together they went into his house, and the deacon prayed earnestly and talked long with him, quoting the precious promises in God's Word for such as he, if they will repent and seek him with their whole heart. After a while the light of peace flooded his heart, and joy gleamed in his eyes, and his friend left him rejoicing in his new-found happiness. The following Sunday he united with the church, and in the afternoon he went to the home of Bobbie's mother, and told them how his singing had been the blessed means of bringing this new-found happiness. We may be sure the mother's heart sang for joy, and Bobbie was a happy boy when his mother told him the good news, saying: "You see, my dear boy, there are ways of accomplishing great good, even if we don't have money and time to give. Just go on being brave and cheerful, and God will bless my Sunny Bobbie in bringing good to others."—Baptist Boys and Girls.

Editorial

THE VANDERBILT SUIT.

The Vanderbilt lawsuit was argued before the Supreme Court of Tennessee, in Nashville, last week, Mr. C. C. Trabue and Mr. J. J. Vetrees appearing for the majority of the trustees, and Messrs. Fitzhugh, Biggs, and Judge E. C. O'Rear for the Church. The case is now in the hands of the Court, but it is thought that two or three weeks may elapse before a decision is rendered. What the verdict will be we have no means of knowing. There is no doubt at all but that equity and right are on the side of the Church, but unhappily the technicalities of the law do not always coincide with justice. The recalcitrant trustees appear to have kept up to the very last their reprehensible manipulating tactics; but of the latest of these, we shall not speak specifically now, though we may do so later.

We take from the Nashville Tennessean the following paraded utterance of Major Vetrees, who made the closing speech for Dr. Kirkland and his followers: "When you unite Church and State, you do not make the State any more religious, but you make the Church more secular. When you unite the Church with an educational institution, you do not make the Church any more enlightened, but you make the educational institution more 'churchy.'" The latter sentence certainly embodies a remarkable outburst of logic! Think of men claiming to be good Methodists standing sponsor for such an utterance!

The argument of Mr. Fitzhugh, who closed the case for the Church, is said to have been one of the ablest and most eloquent ever heard at the historic Tennessee Capital, where great legal giants have so often clashed. Referring to his masterful discussion, the Tennessean said: "Mr. Fitzhugh, in his address, alluded to the fact that the Methodist Church had been criticized in the brief of the trustees for not having given more funds to the University. He denied that the Church had been niggardly, but he said that he had never witnessed any example of liberality on the part of the Board of Trustees. 'When,' he asked, 'did they ever give a penny to this institution?' He resented the attacks made upon Bishop Hoss in the brief of the trustees. He said that these attacks had come because the Bishop had had the courage to take up the gage of battle when the rebellion began and to stand like a faithful sentinel for the rights of the Church."

As we have said before, that Bishop Hoss, because of his unwillingness to see the rights and property of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, wrested from her, should be singled out and have such indignities heaped upon him by the hired counsel of the trustees, is a crying shame. His colleagues in the episcopacy, almost to a man, are standing with him on the issues involved, as are also an overwhelming majority of the rank and file of Southern Methodists. It is true that in nearly every Conference there is a little band of bushwhackers who, lacking the courage to come out in the open and confess their real sentiments, are discreetly sneering and striking at Bishop Hoss and those who have stood with him, as opportunity admits. But they dare not let the great body of our preachers and people know the true secret of their hostility to those who have championed the cause of the Church in this great contest. Compared with the course of those who have pursued this policy of cowardly and underhanded antagonism, that of the trustees, bad and indefensible as it has been, is far preferable.

Nor is it difficult to foretell what these bushwhackers will do in case the Church should lose in the lawsuit. They will come quickly from under cover and loudly declare: "I always thought so; Bishop Hoss and those who have co-operated with him are responsible for the loss of the University." But nothing would be more untrue. But for Bishop Hoss and others who have stood resolutely with him, the University would have been alienated from the Church without even an effort to save it. Bishop Hoss has done his duty nobly and grandly, whether we win or lose. He who battles courageously for truth and right and unselfishly suffers in the conflict, does not need victory to make him a hero. The fame of Lee as a man and as a soldier was not lessened because the flag of the stars and bars went down at Appomattox; nor will the place of E. E. Hoss in the hearts of our people or in Methodist history dwindle to any appreciable extent if the cunning machinations of lawyers shall succeed in spoliating the property of the Church. The story of the brilliant and fearless fight that he has made will forever command for him a high rank among the bravest of the brave and the knightliest of the knightly.

"COURAGEOUS CHRISTIANITY."

Under the above caption, the Lincoln (Neb.) Journal recently contained the following utterance:

"A man without the courage of his convictions is no man at all. He who is not willing to suffer for the sake of the truth is no friend of the truth. Two weeks ago three converts, under the ministrations of a local evangelist, gave testimony to the faith that was in them by cheerfully submitting to the ordinance of baptism in the good old-fashioned way of complete immersion. Near the boat landing at Lake Sisseton a section of ice was sawed out, and about this forbidding gap a considerable number of people gathered to witness the solemn ceremony. Some may question the efficacy of baptism as a saving ordinance, but we doubt if this occasion and experience will ever be forgotten by those who took part in it."

We quite agree with our northwestern contemporary that these converts are entitled to admiration for their splendid adherence to their convictions, no matter what one may think of their views. Persons who were willing "to go down under the water" under such circumstances certainly must have been tremendously in earnest, and that is what it takes to make a good soldier of the Cross. There was nothing easy-going in the manner of getting these candidates into the Church—a criticism that we often hear passed upon our modern methods of securing additions to our flocks. Though we differ from them radically on some points, there are many things about our immersionist brethren, particularly the Baptists, that we sincerely admire. They usually stand for something, and they work with a zeal and vigor that are well worthy of emulation.

THE VALUE OF PRAYER.

A writer sets down some of the benefits of prayer in the following impressive manner:

"Are you full of peace? Pray! Prayer will preserve it to you.

"Are you tempted? Pray! Prayer will sustain you.

"Have you fallen? Pray! Prayer will raise you.

"Are you discouraged? Pray! Prayer will reassure and comfort you."

THE HOME.

"Whereas there are to-day many and strong forces, commercial, professional, political, social and ecclesiastical, tending to break down the power and influence of the Home, therefore, be it

"Resolved, That we will do all in our power to defeat these hurtful tendencies, and to re-establish the Home in its rightful and royal place, by preaching from the pulpit, by personal appeal in the homes of our people and by so arranging our church services as to afford the Home a better chance.

"Resolved further, That we call on all ministers of the gospel and all Christian people everywhere to join us in this effort in behalf of the sanctity and supremacy of the Home."

The foregoing resolutions were adopted by the Mississippi Conference in its recent session at Natchez. This utterance was a needed and timely one, and it sets up a banner in the right direction. The well-regulated Christian home is the mightiest agency for righteousness on our planet, and should it ever wholly cease to exist, not much of value will be left in our civilization. In our opinion, the thing which to-day is most menacing the Christian home is the feminist movement. If any one thinks that we have no foundation for such a statement, let him read the article entitled "Feminist Intentions," by Mr. W. L. George, of England, which appeared in the December number of the Atlantic Monthly. The truth is, the agitation in behalf of so-called woman's rights is being viewed far too superficially. Our leaders and legislators need to study this question and see what it really involves before they undertake to deal with it. They should not let gallantry thrust reason aside and influence them to aid in bringing disaster upon the nation and the world.

PERSONAL AND OTHER NOTES.

Rev. H. C. Morehead, of Sidon, Miss., has been spending some days at Jackson, Miss., in the interest of prohibition legislation. He is a wise and tactful leader in such matters.

Bishop W. B. Murrah spent a part of last week in Nashville, Tenn., where he attended the trial of the Vanderbilt University case in the Supreme Court. He is one of the committee of three appointed to represent the College of Bishops in the management of that suit, the other two being Bishops Candler and Denny.

We acknowledge ourselves indebted to Mrs. Mattie L. Lee, of Monticello, Miss., for three subscriptions sent in on the 9th inst., and some generous words of commendation. The Advocate is fortunate indeed to have such friends as she. It is they who constitute the real strength of our paper, and who keep it going.

The Delhi (La.) Progress of January 10 says: "The new Methodist minister, Mr. V. D. Skipper, comes to our town with the most glowing recommendations. He is said to be one of the strongest preachers in the Louisiana Conference, a good mixer, and a real church builder. He will preach his first sermon here to-morrow."

Rev. J. A. Poe, of Sidon, Miss., was in Jackson, Miss., last week looking after some humanitarian legislation, in which he is interested. It gave us pleasure, while in that city, to grip his hand and exchange greetings with him.

Rev. A. J. Gearheard has recently spent about a week in the extreme southern portion of the State in the interest of the mission work which he proposes to project in that section. He reports the field to be a needy, but promising one. The Rayne Memorial Church of this city will largely aid in financing this missionary enterprise.

Sister J. A. Randolph, the wife of Chaplain Randolph of the United States Army, and her daughter, Mrs. McDonald, are now in New Orleans and will remain here until June. They came to be with Mr. V. P. Randolph, Brother and Sister Randolph's only son, who is taking a medical course in Tulane University. They are residing at 1508 Conery Street.

The Algiers Methodist Episcopal Church, South, is showing commendable activity under the leadership of the present pastor, Rev. R. M. Brown. A vigorous effort is being made to bring the Sunday school up to a high standard of efficiency, and the other departments of the work are not being overlooked. There are some choice people in this congregation.

Rev. S. B. Myers, of Senatobia, Miss., writes: "I am pleased with this work and am hopeful of a good year. We have been most cordially received and everything so far has been favorable. Congregations have been good in spite of the inclement weather. The church feels that a great revival is needed, and we are planning and praying for it."

The Protestant Ministers' Association of New Orleans has appointed a committee to try to secure the services of "Billy" Sunday for a revival campaign. It is composed of Bishop Thirkfield, Dr. George Summey, Dr. J. M. Henry, the Rev. Mr. Brengle, and Rev. F. D. Macey. We should like very much to see Mr. Sunday come to the Crescent City and conduct a meeting.

It was our pleasure to spend a day in Jackson, Miss., last week. In the evening we called on Major Millsaps and spent a delightful two hours in his home. We never saw him looking better or found him in a more genial humor. We were also pleased to meet on the street Dr. A. F. Watkins and Professors Swartz and Burton, who reported things to be in fine condition at Millsaps College.

Rev. L. A. McKeown writes: "We are delighted with Byhalla. We have found a good, kind people, who have given us a cordial reception. My health is improving, and I am at work for the Master." We are pleased to have this good news from our long-time friend, than whom the North Mississippi Conference has never had a truer or worthier member. Brother McKeown is already interesting himself in the circulation of the Advocate.

Dr. I. W. Cooper, President of Whitworth College, spent Thursday, Jan. 8, in New Orleans, having come to the city to transact important business, which he did not get to do, however, as it was the anniversary of the day on which Old Hickory won his famous victory over the British here, and a holiday. He favored our office with an appreciated call, but, much to our regret, we were away and missed seeing him.

Rev. Waights G. Henry, the pastor of the Galloway Memorial Church at Jackson, Miss., has begun work in his new field, and has made a most favorable impression. The new house of worship which this congregation is constructing is going steadily up, and a splendid structure indeed, it promises to be. It is thought that the Sunday school room of the new building will be ready for use in about six weeks.

In a letter to our office, Rev. Robert Selby, the accomplished presiding elder of Brookhaven District, says: "The work is starting off in good order, and everything points to a prosperous year."

Rev. G. P. White, of Plaquemine, La., in a letter bringing us some subscriptions, says: "Our people are exceedingly kind in their treatment of us. Many good things came to the parsonage during the Christmas season."

Rev. A. C. Seever, pastor of our Seventh Avenue Church of Meridian, Miss., requests us to state that he is open for several engagements to sing in meetings during the present year. Brethren desiring his services would do well to write him at once.

We are indebted to Brother T. M. Babington, of Franklinton, La., for a club of six subscribers, forwarded on January 9. Brother Babington is one of the leading business men of his town and a Methodist without reproach. It is nothing unusual for him to lend the Advocate a helping hand.

Of his new field, the Wheeler Circuit, North Mississippi Conference, Rev. M. L. Ward says: "We have reached our new charge and settled down to work. We find a very kind and thoughtful people, who are interested in the work of the Church. We feel that the outlook is encouraging."

No charge in the Louisiana Conference is more fortunate than Leesville, where Rev. R. W. Tucker is pastor. Sound in the faith and consecrated to his calling, Brother Tucker is a workman that needeth not to be ashamed. A flock with such a shepherd ought to go steadily forward to larger things.

Brother D. W. Heidelberg, of Shubuta, Miss., has presented Mr. W. C. Putvoe with a year's subscription to the New Orleans Christian Advocate as a prize for the best record of attendance upon his Sunday school class during the past year. We trust that our paper will prove helpful to this faithful Sabbath school student in many ways.

And still they come! Rev. W. W. Holmes writes: "Like Baton Rouge, Ruston does not want to be left off the list of charges in the Louisiana Conference that received more than 50 members last year. We had 97 accessions. We have made a good beginning in the work of the new year."

We are indebted to Bishop E. Cottrell, of the C. M. E. Church, for an attractive calendar, ornamented with pictures of the buildings of the Mississippi Industrial Institute, at Holly Springs, Miss. Bishop Cottrell has been the most influential supporter of this institution ever since its foundation. We feel an interest in its work, and we are glad to have this constant reminder of it upon the wall of our office.

A note from Rev. W. H. Saunders, our pastor at Fernwood, Miss., announces the arrival of a fine baby girl in the parsonage at that place on January 9. We extend congratulations, and pray that the Heavenly Father may have both the mother and the little one in his gracious keeping. This makes the fifth daughter that Brother and Sister Saunders have in their home. Rich indeed are they.

Dr. C. F. Reid, secretary of the Laymen's Movement in our Church, has recently been meeting some engagements within the bounds of the Brookhaven (Miss.) District. He spoke at Fernwood to a good audience last Friday night, where he was accompanied by the presiding elder, Rev. Robert Selby. Brother Selby held the first quarterly Conference of the Fernwood charge the next morning, January 10.

Rev. L. C. Wilson, of Mer Rouge, La., writes as follows: "We arrived here on December 25 and were given a cordial welcome. We have now settled down to work and the outlook is hopeful. The good people of Franklinton, with whom we lived and labored for four years, showed us much kindness before our departure, and they have our hearty thanks, as well as our best wishes for a successful year under the ministry of Rev. J. A. McCormack."

The mail brought to us a few days since a tiny envelope containing in attractive form the following announcement: "A little stranger arrived in the parsonage at Rolling Fork, Miss., on January 4, 1914; weight, seven and a half pounds; name, Leslie Harper Purcell; parents, Rev. and Mrs. J. S. Purcell." We congratulate the happy father and mother, and pray that a favoring Providence may watch over the child and bring him to a worthy and useful manhood.

Through the courtesy of the pastor, Rev. M. L. Burton, we have received a post-card picture of our splendid new First Church at Gulfport, Miss. It is indeed an imposing and attractive looking structure, and Brother Burton and his fine flock deserve to be heartily congratulated upon having brought it to completion. The erection of such a house of worship in the chief city on the Mississippi coast means much for the Methodism of that section.

As will be seen elsewhere in this issue of the Advocate, Rev. John F. Foster, of Amite, La., who is the Publisher of the Louisiana Conference Minutes, desires to have any of the preachers who have changed their addresses since the annual meeting at Crowley to inform him of the fact, and also if there are any errors in the dates of ordination, etc., in the Minutes of last year, he wishes to have his attention called to them. This is a matter of importance, and should be given immediate attention.

We acknowledge the reception of a program of the service conducted at the First Methodist Church of Mansfield, La., on the evening of January 4, when the officials of that congregation were formally installed. The exercises arranged for the occasion were exceedingly appropriate, and we doubt not that they were quite impressive. Brother Morris and his wide-awake flock also observed the Week of Prayer and Self-Denial at the time designated by our Missionary Secretaries at Nashville—January 4-11.

Brother George S. Weems, of Shubuta, Miss., has been appointed agent for the Mississippi Methodist Orphanage at Jackson for the Meridian District. This district has pledged itself to pay $105 every month—$5 for every charge—for the maintenance of this noble institution. Brother Williams, the manager, calls attention to the fact that if the other districts in the State would pay a like amount, it would give the Orphanage a monthly cash income of approximately $1,600. Why shouldn't they do so?

We deeply sympathize with Rev. I. D. Borders, our pastor at Aberdeen, Miss., in the loss of his mother, who died at the home of her son, Mr. John M. Borders of the University of Arkansas, at Fayetteville, on December 23. She was the widow of the late Dr. John M. Borders, a physician, and lived for a number of years at Brooksville, Miss. Brother I. D. Borders and Prof. Borders are the only surviving children. We pray that the Heavenly Father may graciously comfort and sustain them in their sore bereavement.

Master Thomas Lawson Porter, of Olive Branch, Miss., writes: "Mother has just written a letter to Dr. Ivey for me telling him how I enjoy his page for the boys and girls, and I want you to know how much I appreciate what you have for us, too. Mother reads your 'Home Circle' selections to us every week, and we are greatly disappointed when we get crowded out, or when the same stories appear in both Advocates." We are pleased to have these appreciative words from this young reader. In making up the contents of our paper we always try to keep the children in mind.

The meeting of the Winona District Stewards at Greenwood, Miss., on January 29 was an occasion of much interest. Referring to it, Rev. B. P. Jacob, the capable presiding elder, says: "Bishop Murrah came up to be with us and preached two great sermons on Sunday; but was forced to leave early Monday. The pastors met with the district stewards, and in addition to apportioning the assessments, we had a good program embracing discussions and plans for aggressive work for revivals, Sunday schools, missions, and finances. It was decided to hold the next District Conference at Tintwiler."

The Woman's Missionary Society, at Franklinton, La., some time ago adopted resolutions highly commending the work of Mrs. L. C. Wilson, during her four years' stay among them and expressing regret at having to give her up as a member of their auxiliary. They also affirmed that any community receiving her as a resident should count itself most fortunate. It is not our pastors alone who win their way into the hearts of the people whom they serve; the wives of our itinerants are often loved equally as much, and leave behind them, when the Church bids them go to other fields, memories fully as enduring.

Be sure to read the article, entitled "The Battle for the Church Paper," which appears on another page. It deals with an important matter in a unique and most impressive manner. No home is complete without a religious journal to tell of the ongoings of Christ's increasing Kingdom. What are the petty things of politics and society compared to the activities of the Church and the triumphs of the Gospel? It is the moral movements of the world that will sway the future and fix the destinies of nations. A church member who does not take and read the organ of his denomination is too indifferent to amount to much as a worker.

Writing from Greenwood, La., on January 3, Rev. C. F. Staples calls attention to the fact that the Ida charge reported 65 accessions at the last session of the annual Conference. We are pleased to know that there were so many appointments in the State that went beyond the half-hundred mark in the number of members received last year. This tends to confirm the view that the reported numerical loss in the Louisiana Conference during the year 1913 was due to incorrect statistics, rather than an actual decrease. It seems well-nigh impossible to get all our pastors to exercise proper care in filling out their report blanks.

We are requested to state that on next Monday evening at 8 o'clock the official board and congregation of the First M. E. Church, South, of New Orleans will tender a reception to Dr. and Mrs. S. H. Werlein, their newly appointed pastor and his wife, in the church. All Methodist ministers, their wives, and congregations, and also all pastors of other Protestant Churches in the city and their wives, are cordially invited to attend.

From the Lexington (Miss.) Advertiser of January 9, we take the following: "Sunday was observed as re-opening day by the Methodist congregation here. The church was filled with worshippers at both services. In the morning the pastor, Dr. H. G. Henderson, preached a New Year's sermon on 'Times's Question,' which the Advertiser publishes for its readers. At the evening hour the other churches united in the service and the pastor preached upon the subject: 'A New Year Motto.' The improvements upon the church, which have cost about $1,500, add very much to the looks of the interior, and give two Sunday school classrooms and a pipe organ alcove. The next step will be to purchase and install a new pipe organ."

In renewing her subscription, Sister J. F. Evans, now of Tupelo, Miss., whose husband was one of the noblest ministers that we have ever known, and under whose guiding hand we found our way to the Master, writes as follows: "The Advocate has been a part of my most valued possessions from early childhood. During the editorial management of Bishops McTyeire, Keener, Parker and Galloway, and on down to the present time, its visits have brought me pleasure. No wonder that I must keep in touch with it. That it may go on in its good work, standing firmly for the right on all questions, conveying joy and comfort to every home it enters, is my sincere wish at the beginning of this new year." We are most grateful for these kindly words, and we pray heaven's richest blessings upon our esteemed sister, whose strength has been so freely spent in the Master's service.

We have received a neat card which reads as follows: "1864-1914; Major R. W. Jones—Elizabeth S. Sprately; Pleasant Shade, Va., January 6th." This simple announcement means, of course, that Dr. and Mrs. Jones celebrated the fiftieth anniversary of their wedding on the day designated above. Dr. Jones was the first President of the Mississippi Industrial Institute and College and was for many years a professor in the University of Mississippi. He has been one of the South's really great educators, as well as one of the most useful laymen in our Church. For some years his health has not been good and he has been residing quietly at Laurel, Miss. We extend congratulations to Dr. and Mrs. Jones, and pray that they yet may have many recurring anniversaries of the day when their lives were so happily linked together.

We have on our table the Minutes of the North Mississippi Conference for the year 1913. They are well arranged, neatly printed, and tastefully bound, making quite an attractive pamphlet. As a Conference Secretary, Rev. J. R. Countiss ranks with the best, being quick, accurate, and thoroughly informed as to every detail of the work. Nor is he less skilled as a publisher of the Conference proceedings. We cannot say that this latest journal is superior to any of its predecessors; but it is fully equal to the best of them. Brother Countiss is to be commended for the promptness with which he has brought out this publication, which is valuable for the information that it contains, and indispensable as a working manual. We do not appreciate as much as we ought the large amount of gratuitous labor that our Annual Conference Secretaries are called upon to perform.

Mrs. LOTTIE M. FERGUSON departed this life January 3, 1914. She was a member of the Methodist Church in Hollandale, Mississippi, and was a sincere Christian, and loved, trusted and served Christ, who reigned in her heart and life. Now, while her body sleeps in some quiet, faraway spot, her sweet spirit has passed from earth and its cares and lives with her Savior, "in a city not made with hands, eternal in the heavens." It was God's plan to take her, and his plans are allwise. She was a good and faithful friend, merciful, kind and pure in heart—true in all the relations of life. Just before she passed away, she sang with a strong voice, "Jesus, I my cross have taken," then said: "I feel better, lay my down." So the end drew near; 'twas as though His voice said in tenderest tone, "Lo, it is I, be not afraid, your task is complete, well done"; and then her eyes closed in death.

A FRIEND.

Mrs. SARAH ANN THOMPSON was born July 31, 1838, in Copiah County, Miss., and died May 28, 1913, in Jena, La., where she had lived for 22 years. She was one of the truest and best women I ever knew, and she spent her whole life in being an angel of mercy to those around her. Her children will rise up and call her blessed. She was the mother of six children—three only of whom are living, viz.: Dr. B. L. Thompson and Mrs. N. P. Parker, of Jena, La., and Mr. E. R. Thompson, of Biloxi, Miss. She was a kind and indulgent mother and grandmother, and so modest that very few knew her real worth. She was a member of the Methodist Church and has been a sincere Christian all her life. She fought the battle of life and won the victory, and has doubtless, safely reached that beautiful shore, where she is free from sorrow and suffering. She was laid to rest in Nolley Memorial Cemetery, in Jena, La., where we paid our last respects to one we have known, have loved and have "lost awhile," the obsequies being conducted by her pastor, Rev. W. D. Kleinschmidt.

ONE WHO LOVED HER.

RESOLUTIONS OF APPRECIATION.

Whereas, on November 23, 1913, the death angel claimed the spirit of our beloved friend and co-worker, Miss Bertie Taylor, thereby causing deep grief among her friends; be it therefore,

Resolved, by the Woman's Home Missionary Society of Mt. Olivet Church, Sartoria charge, Miss.:
1. That, while we humbly bow in submission to Him who doeth all things well, we are sorrowing because of our great loss.

2. That since our dear friend and sister, Miss Bertie, has been a faithful worker with us since her childhood, her presence will be sadly missed; but we pray that the memory of her lovable character may be an incentive to us in our future work.

3. That a copy of these resolutions be sent to the grief-stricken parents, and that a copy be spread upon the minutes of our society.

Signed: Mrs. H. W. WILLIAMS,
Mrs. W. T. STEVENS.

NOTICE.

To the Members of the Louisiana Conference:

Dear Brethren: Kindly forward me by return mail any change in your appointment since Conference, also your postoffice address. Should there be any error in the chronological roll with regard to date of ordination, please inform me, that proper correction may be made.

JOHN F. FOSTER,
Editor of the Conference Annual.

AN UNUSUAL INCIDENT.

Dear Dr. Meek: In the year 1894 (I was only a licensed preacher at that time) I went to assist an unordained Methodist preacher in a meeting, who was in charge of a circuit. The place where we held the meeting was a union church with a Methodist and a Baptist congregation. We had with us the Baptist pastor. We had a very fine meeting, and there were a great many people who joined the Church. While the good Baptist pastor was making the necessary preparations to carry his candidates to a creek to immerse them, the Methodist pastor was lamenting the fact that he had no one with authority to baptize his new members. The Baptist pastor said: "If you will allow me to do so, I can settle this matter for you. So the Methodist preacher took his Discipline and administered the vows of the Church to them. The Baptist preacher took a pitcher of water and baptized them while they knelt in their places.

"CATCH MY PAL."

Several months ago a man described by the newspapers as a "red-cheeked, blue-eyed little Irish minister" arrived in this country from the city of Armagh. He was the Rev. R. J. Patterson, and his errand was a total-abstinence campaign. He wore a button bearing the legend, "Catch My Pal," and was himself the founder of the "Catch My Pal" movement, which places the responsibility for the reform of drunkards on their reformed comrades. The movement started four years ago, when six men in Armagh signed the temperance pledge which also required that each should go out and get at least one other man to do the same. The method worked so admirably in Ireland that within four years 150,000 persons who have kept the pledge were enrolled. During Mr. Patterson's stay in Detroit, he delivered sixteen addresses in churches, Young Men's Christian Association and at the noonday meetings at the automobile factories, where the factory hands gave him an enthusiastic reception. His itinerary took in the cities of Chicago, Omaha, Denver, Salt Lake City, Boise, Ida., and Portland, Ore. Although it is rather early to judge of the success of his campaign, it promises to bear fruit as in Ireland, for the heart of the movement is the humility and sympathy of the reformers, who count themselves no better than those they would reform.—The Congregationalist.

Life is short and we have never too much time for gladdening the hearts of those who are traveling the dark journey with us. O! be swift to love, make haste to be kind.—Amiel.

Tidings From the Field

Pickens, Miss.

We are beginning this our third year with bright prospects. Our people have received us very kindly and are showing their appreciation in many ways. We have put electric light and fixtures in the church at a cost of seventy-five dollars; and since Conference have paid an old debt on the parsonage. We are expecting a good year.

J. D. SIMPSON.

Bogalusa, La.

Dear Dr. Meek.—Our church at Bogalusa had more than fifty additions last year. This was done in nine months, as the pastor was out of his pulpit for three months on account of illness, during which time the pulpit was filled but few times. So I think we should be added to the list of distinction as well as Baton Rouge. We had 150 accessions in 1912.

L. I. McCAIN.

have a great spiritual uplift—at least we are praying and working to this end. My people are signing a card and returning it to the pastor, which reads: "At least one hundred conversions, and everything in full; together with a greatly increased spiritual life, is our motto. By the grace of God I promise to pray and work to this end." When all our members begin to pray and work as they should for a great spiritual uplift, something will happen that will surprise many. I am going to make an effort to put the New Orleans Advocate in the homes of all my people, for this will help us in our work for the Master. You are giving us a great paper. God bless you. Remember us in your prayers. Before I close I want to thank the members of the Calhoun City church for the many good things to eat which they brought to us. That this may be the greatest year in the history of Southern Methodism is my prayer.

J. E. GAULT.

Leakesville, Miss.

I was appointed by the Bishop to the Scotland Circuit, but since then I have been changed to Leakesville. My wife and I arrived here Friday about 12:30, after two days of travel. We are very pleasantly situated and were given a very warm reception, despite the fact that it was raining and the short notice the people had of the change. The outlook is fine for a good year. The people are ready for work and we are going to do our best to accomplish something for the Master. Pray for us, and may God's richest blessing be upon you. I am going to do what I can for the Advocate.

Yours in the work,

H. E. CARTER.

SUCCESS.

What is success? The amassing of money? Dives did not find it so. Is it power? Herod did not find it so. Is it knowledge? Paul did not find it there. No! Success lies in the simple service of God. Success lies in stewardship, in receiving the facts of life, money, influence, intellects as loans from God to whom the account is daily to be rendered.

"The longer I live," wrote Samuel Chapman Armstrong, "the less I think and fear about what the world calls success; the more I tremble for true success, for the perfection and beauty of the inner life, for the purity and sanctity of the soul, which is as a temple."—Central Christian Advocate.

A SIGNIFICANT VOTE.

A significant vote was taken not long ago at the State Agricultural College at Ames, Iowa, on the question of smoking. The ballots allowed a choice of three phases: (1) Unrestricted smoking; (2) abolishment of campus smoking; (3) restricted to smoking rooms. Thirteen hundred and eighty-five students voted. A few ballots were defective. The results were as follows: (1) Abolishment of smoking, 908; (2) unrestricted smoking, 449; (3) limited to smoking rooms, 95.—Pacific Methodist Advocate.

NOT A HARD MASTER.

But how easy it is to please God! A tear, a sigh, a cry of penitence; a prayer for his mercy on the sinner; a hunger for holier things; a tender kindness to another; a cup of cold water, a word, a look, a hand of sympathy and help; confiding trust in his wisdom, power and love when dark days come; a song of praise in the night; self-denying service of the needy ones. Such things please him very much, as do all efforts to be more like his Son and to extend his kingdom. God makes great promises to those "that choose the things that please" him.—New York Observer.

Houston, Miss.

Dear Dr. Meek: We are getting well into our fourth year. Our first quarterly conference was held on December 19, being the first the presiding elder held for the new Conference year. Our finances are up to date. We have had 14 accessions since Conference; our Sunday school is booming; we have plans for more rooms perfected and the work upon them will begin soon. It is our honor to have with us Rev. J. M. Massey, a superannuate of the Mississippi Conference, who, with his good wife, are now making this their home, with their daughter, Mrs. W. J. McWhorter. Rev. J. A. Bowen, of Birmingham, Ala., is to be with us in March for a meeting. Our people are looking forward to his coming with great joy and expectation. Mrs. Neblett entertained the "official board," the presiding elder and the pastor at a six o'clock dinner on the evening of December 19. We had a right royal good time.

R. P. NEBLETT.

Calhoun City, Miss.

We have entered upon our second year's work on the Calhoun City charge, with everything pointing to even a more successful year than the one just closed. Both the people of the charge and I were delighted when the Bishop read: "Calhoun City, J. E. Gault." I am sure the people were, for they have visited the parsonage and brought many of the good and necessary things of life. There is not a better, more loyal people in all the world than we have within the bounds of this charge. The pastor's salary has been raised over that of last year, and everything seems to be taking on new life. I truly believe we are going to

A COMMENDABLE WORK.

Jacob A. Riis in the Century tells of the many improvements in recent years in the conditions in the New York tenements. He says: "Into the homes of the people light and air have penetrated, and they have acquired legal claims. The first census taken under the new tenement house law found 361,000 dark and airless rooms in houses unfit to live in, half of them without any windows at all. There are still more than sixty thousand windowless rooms left in Greater New York; but they are going. When the last of them is gone we shall be able to fight tuberculosis, and win. The dark halls have been lighted. Life in the tenements has been made measurably endurable and safe. Not in the ten years since the new law was passed has a human life been lost by fire in any of the hundred and odd thousand houses, for lack of means of escape or other faults of construction. In the ten years preceding 1894, 256 persons perished in tenement house fires, not counting the firemen who died in efforts to save them."

GET THE GREAT BOOKS.

May heaven have mercy on the man whose reading is only in petty books. The prodigal son filled his belly with husks, but even he got tired of it. "He began to be in want." It would seem so.

If it is a species of madness for men and women to read alone trash which has no proper place but the garbage can, what shall we say of the men who are leaders, the preachers, the journalists, the club women, who fill themselves with meaningless books, superficial, self-evident, good-for-nothing books, which have no grip, no vision, no magnificent uplift. Better a book like a crowbar than a book like Cologne water or like a cookery.

There are great books; books that will make a man jump to his feet and pace the floor, books that open the world and the wonders that shall be, books that soar to heaven and catch the purposes of God. Get such books, friend, particularly you, preacher and leader. Get their flames on your own altar, it will smoke and choke no longer.—Central Christian Advocate.

EAT

What You Will—When You Will—
Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets Will Digest the Meal Easily and Surely.

Food in itself is harmless. The reason stomach troubles arise is due to faulty digestion brought about by overworking the body or brain, sickness, overeating, late hours, etc.

"Eat? Why, That's My Middle Name Now, But I Always Take a Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablet After Meals to Play Safe."

The only way to correct faulty stomach troubles and digestive mistakes is to do what nature wants. All that nature needs is a little assistance to do this work. This is why doctors tell you to diet. By not eating nature is compelled to aid herself. You do not then overwork her when she is already exhausted.

Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets go into your stomach just like food. They help digest this food. Then they enrich the blood, and thus when the next meal is eaten the system is better prepared to do its work without assistance or at least less harmfully.

By following this natural habit you will in a short time correct stomach trouble, do away with indigestion and remove all danger of fatal digestion troubles.

Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets are the best tablets made. They are composed of the very best natural ingredients, one grain of one element will digest 3,000 grains of meats, fish, vegetables, grains, soup, etc.

Always take a Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablet after meals or just before bed time. By doing this you will be acting wisely and playing safe.

Go to your druggist anywhere and buy a box now. Price 50 cents.

SHOES AT WHOLESALE

NEW ORLEANS CHRISTIAN ADVOCATE Readers are SAVING from ONE to TWO DOLLARS a PAIR by Ordering Their Shoes DIRECT FROM FACTORY BY PARCEL POST.

Would the cutting of your FAMILY SHOE BILL one-third or more mean a very big yearly saving to you? Figure it out. The present high cost of shoes is due to two things, the Middlemen's profits which the consumer must pay and the enormous decrease in raw materials. The new Parcel Post System gave us an idea. By selling our shoes direct to the wearer, cutting out the middlemen entirely, we could save the consumer fully a third on every pair of shoes and still make our usual wholesale profit. The plan is a great success. New Orleans Christian Advocate readers are realizing the opportunity of saving and great numbers are writing for our catalog which is sent free to anyone on request. It tells how cheaply high quality shoes can really be bought under this fair method of selling. Every shoe sold is guaranteed perfect in fit, material and workmanship—your money will be refunded if unsatisfactory. Write for your catalog to-day. A trial order will please and result in our getting your entire shoe trade. PARCEL POST SHOE CO., 258 Meeting Street, Charleston, South Carolina. (Advertisement.)

THE BOOTHS RECONCILED.

It has always been a cause for regret that the brothers, Bramwell and Ballington Booth, have been separated, heading two different and somewhat antagonistic organizations for doing the same work, the Salvation Army and American Volunteers.

Lately these brothers have met, and been reconciled. This is what we expected, and in it we all rejoice. The Salvation Army represents English ideas, and the Volunteers, American ideas. For this reason it may not be practical to formally unite them. But they can co-operate and labor in unison. And the time may come when one will take care of the field in England, and the other in America.—
 The Presbyterian.

TO MINISTERS.

The Meridian Colleges give free tuition and a liberal deduction in board to sons and daughters of ministers, and to young men studying for the ministry and for Mission fields. For particulars write Pres.

WORKING TOGETHER.

That religion and society, the Church and the community, have values to exchange becomes clearer in the consciousness of those working for each. Indeed, it becomes more and more evident that work truly done for one serves the other. Though not identical in aim or method, the church and community cannot be separated.—Graham Taylor.

WOMAN PAST HELP.

Chandler, Okla.—In a letter from this place, Mrs. Ella Flowers says, "I hardly know how to thank you for the good that Cardui has done me. Before I tried Cardui, I thought I was past help, but after taking it, I was relieved at once, and gained at least 10 pounds. Everybody says I look so much better. I am still improving greatly." Many women are completely wornout and discouraged, on account of womanly weakness. Are you?
 Have you not tried Cardui? It only needs a few doses to convince you that Cardui is just what you need. Try it to-day. It will cure your pains.—Ady.

Woman's Missionary Work

"Go break to the needy, sweet charity's bread,
'For giving is living,' the angel said,
'And must I be giving again and again?'
My peevish and pitiless answer ran.
'Oh, no!' said the angel, piercing me through,
'Just give till the Master stops giving to you.'"

AN APPEAL FOR THE BILOXI WESLEY HOUSE.

In a recent letter from Mrs. R. E. Johnson, our Conference President, she states that the plans and specification for remodeling the Wesley House are in hand—but what about the funds to put into execution these plans? We cannot say the same about them, for they are lacking. A few months before the close of the past year a day of prayer was set apart, and all of our women were urged to observe it. We were asked to pray fervently for a gift of one thousand dollars, with which to make the necessary changes in the Wesley House. Either we did not remember the day or our faith was "too small." We need this sum as urgently to-day as we did then. Our work is handicapped unless we can make these needed improvements, and right now. We must practice some self-denial. Have you read about the girls at Vashti and Virginia K. Johnson Home? During the week of prayer they did without meat and butter in order to give a thank offering unto the Lord. What are we willing to do without that we may make an acceptable offering to this work which is the only means of bringing joy and sunshine into lives destitute of both? "For God so loved the world that he gave his only begotten Son." Wonderful gift of his love—have you ever thought of the great sacrifice on the part of the Father? It was the greatest love-gift the world has ever known, and can we be satisfied to give to him that which we have left over after we have satisfied our personal wants? Can we give to him that which costs us nothing? The widow of old gave all, and should we be content to do less? The story is told of a missionary among the Indians, who was compelled to tell one who came to him that the mission could not be enlarged for lack of funds. The Indian asked how many Christians were in the land and was told they numbered more than 1,000,000. He could not understand it and pondered for some time, then said to the missionary, "If the Christian people are in numbers as the leaves on the trees and they truly love Jesus, why is it they get behind with their Jesus money? It ought to be easy to get money for Jesus when there are so many people who loved him." Yes, it ought to be easy to get money for Jesus! We have the numbers; it must be the love which is lacking. Don't let those who are being benefited by our Wesley House in their midst bring such a reproach against us. Let us show that we really love our Master; make the sacrifice now, and send the love-offering promptly so the work will not be retarded. This delay may cause us to lose ground, or more appalling still, may mean the loss of souls.

A LETTER FROM MISS LIZZIE WILSON.

Chihuahua, Mexico.
The Times-Democrat, of Sunday, Jan. 4, contained a letter written by our Miss Lizzie Wilson of Chihuahua, Mexico. It was dated Nov. 12 and was sent by auto to El Paso, thence to our Home Board in Nashville. It gives a graphic description of the tragic times through which they have passed. While the fighting was around the city, every precaution was taken to protect the girls under their care. A shell burst over the college but left it unharmed. Preparations were made to guard against fire and an ample supply of water was on hand lest the water supply be cut off. "The windows which were most exposed we had filled with adobe, lest the battle should get closer; but it did not. The Master said: 'Thus far and no farther.'"

"The fiercest of the battle was fought around my little house in the country, 'The Haven,' and not one shot touched it. I feel that the kind Father sent an unseen guard to take care of it. Just a little way above it three cannon bombs struck a new building and almost destroyed it, and just a little way in front, a lovely home was fairly pounded to fragments. I went out there this afternoon, and not one thing is hurt, and not a mark is on the house. The flowers are just lovely. I brought home a basketful—the loveliest chrysanthemums and roses, and the geraniums are the gayest of the gay. I wonder at the tender, watchful care of our heavenly Father. Truly, he taketh care of the little things. When I went there this afternoon and saw the place untouched and the garden in such bloom my eyes filled with tears at the thought of our Father's tender care for his own. I wonder why we ever doubt and fear when we have such a God to love us." Miss Wilson says the school was only closed two days and when it opened it was with a full house. All thought of fear seems to have been banished from their minds. God had protected and cared for them and they felt he would do it again if necessary; but should death come to them they wanted "to be found in the way of duty."

Tavists, Mohammedans, Buddhists, Roman Catholics, and Protestants in Peking, China, have formed a league to prevent the adoption of Confucianism as the state religion of China.—Wesleyan Advocate.

AN ORIENTAL QUESTION.

If your children were like Oriental children,
Unwelcomed at birth,
Untaught in childhood,
Unloved in widowhood,
Unprotected in widowhood,
Uncared for in old age,
Unlamented in death,
Without hope of heaven, would you be satisfied for your Christian sisters to put forth just the effort to help that you have put forth this past year?

A SOLEMN FACT.

This is the age of greatest missionary opportunity—the age of open doors. Prayer opened the doors; indifference cannot shut them, but it may keep Christ out. The life of great nations is being molded for good or ill. Half-hearted service cannot shape them wholly for God. The kind of mothers, the kind of homes, the kind of children there are to be in the Orient during the next generation is being determined by our attitude toward the present crisis in the East. Whether the Latin countries are to become more Christian or more pagan depends upon whether we will so increase the little leaven that it may leaven the whole country. In the greatness of our missionary opportu-

MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE.

Last Sabbath, January 5, at 11 a. m., we observed an installation service for our Sunday school teachers at Crystal Springs. A large and appreciative audience was present and participated. The program was an appropriate and very impressive one. During the past twelve months the working force of the Sunday school at this place has increased 300 per cent—going from 12 to 30, while our average attendance has about doubled. This school raised for all purposes between $400 and $500 last year, and several of our scholars were converted and joined the Church. Wishing you a happy New Year,
B. F. LEWIS.

Paint Without Oil.

Remarkable Discovery That Cuts Down the Cost of Paint Seventy-Five Per Cent.

A Free Trial Package is Mailed to Everyone Who Writes.

A. L. Rice, a prominent manufacturer of Adams, N. Y., has discovered a process of making a new kind of paint without the use of oil. He calls it Powderpaint. It comes in the form of dry powder and all that is required is cold water to make a paint weather-proof, fireproof and as durable as oil paint. It adheres to any surface, wood, stone or brick; spreads and looks like oil paint and costs about one-fourth as much.

Write to Mr. A. L. Rice, Manuf'r., 138 North St., Adams, N. Y., and he will send you a free trial package, also color card and full information showing you how you can save a good many dollars. Write to-day.

Dr. Blosser's Catarrh Remedy.

Trial Package Mailed Free to Any Sufferer.

If you have catarrh of the head, nose, throat; if catarrh has affected your hearing; if you sneeze, hawk or spit; if you take one cold after another; if your head feels stopped-up; you should try this remedy discovered by Dr. Blosser, who has made a specialty of treating catarrh for over thirty-nine years.

This Remedy is composed of herbs, flowers, and seeds possessing healing medicinal properties. It contains no tobacco, is not injurious or habit-forming; is pleasant to use and perfectly harmless to man, woman or child.

Catarrhal germs are carried into the head, nose and throat with the air you breathe—just as the warm medicated smoke-vapor is carried with the breath, applying the medicine directly to the diseased parts. If you have tried the usual methods such as sprays, douches, salves, inhalers and the stomach-ruining "constitutional" medicines, you will readily see the superiority of this Smoking Remedy.

Simply send your name and address to Dr. J. W. Blosser, 204 Walton St., Atlanta, Ga., and he will send you a free package containing samples of the Remedy for smoking in a pipe and made into cigarettes, together with an illustrated booklet which goes thoroughly into the subject of catarrh. He will send by mail, for one dollar, enough of the medicine to last about one month.

THE MISSIONS IN THE PHILIPPINES.

The churches and hospitals that are founded by foreign missions in the Philippines have done much to raise the standard of comfort and reduce the suffering among the people.

No man can realize the great influence for good that the churches can exercise until he exercises executive authority at the head of a government like that of the Philippine Islands, as I did for four years. This experience completely changed my views of the benefit of foreign missions and their usefulness in the spread of Christian civilization. Therefore, when I am called upon in any proper way to express my opinion upon this subject, I gladly seize the opportunity to aid in a cause that is working not only for the Christian religion as a religion, but for the better condition of men and women all over the world.—Ex-President Taft in The Youth's Companion.

Sunday School

NEWS AND NOTES.

By Miss Elizabeth Kilpatrick.

Rev. E. B. Sharp organized a new Sunday school at Sumner, on the Webb charge, Winona District, on January 4. This is a fine beginning for the New Year. At Webb he has 50 church members and 50 in Sunday school—a most unusual record.

Some active older boys' classes are giving $10 for six months to support neglected Sunday schools in the Northwest, thus furnishing lesson helps, papers and maps for people unable to do it for themselves. A class with such a definite social service aim will prosper in every way.

In September, 1907, the first certificate was granted an organized adult class. Today there are 38,798 such classes, with a membership of nearly one million. It is easily recognized that this movement has been instrumental in bringing between 3,000,000 and 4,000,000 adults into vital connection with the Sunday school in the past seven years.

Said a very sincere Christian not long ago: "I have always felt as if Palestine left the earth when our Lord ascended into heaven." No land is so well worth a thorough study as this setting to Biblical history, song and story. This year we have another rare opportunity to vignette its every geographical and archeological detail upon our minds as we re-study the life of Christ.

The Charleston Sunday school, under Rev. D. W. Babb's wise leadership, has a membership of 162, with 4 adult Bible classes and 3 teen age classes, organized, with 19 on the cradle roll and 20 in the home department. At Oak Grove there are 40 in the Sunday school, with three organized classes. The Charleston Sunday school will be graded as soon as more commodious quarters can be arranged.

To-night, when quitting whistles blow throughout the United States there will file forth from shop, office and factory 59 per cent of all the girls in the land between the ages of 16 to 20. What a great opportunity the Sunday school has to organize these girls into adult classes and give them a sweet and clean social life, a Christian experience to lighten their toil, and physical relaxation to relieve the grind of this rushing commercial age.

SELF-SEEKING WEAKENS.

While Christianity welcomes to its society the great as well as the small, and has in every century been served by illustrious personages as well as by peasants, its true power never resides in mere greatness as such, but in consecration to the service of the Christ. It was St. Anselm who said: "God often works more by the life of the illiterate, seeking the things which are God's, than by ability of the learned, seeking the things that are their own." Self-seeking vitiates and weakens any life, but in the consecration of even the poor or unlearned who have the mind of the Master is found a power that, given a fulcrum in the divine world, will move the world.—Zion's Herald.

MIDAS IN THE CHURCH.

All things that Midas touched turned into gold. It was a fatal gift. Some men still have it. Touch what they will, it turns to money. They coin their ideals. Their education and ability become valuable merely as these are capable of becoming coin. They estimate the very salvation of the souls of men in terms of what it costs to support churches and to carry the gospel to the heathen. Alas for Midas! He is a member of the Church in good and regular standing, and still the curse of that touch is on him. He is incapable of thinking of anything in terms of anything but cash. There is a certain rare gift, possessed by few men, of reversing the touch of Midas. They are able to touch gold and transform it into other and wonderful forms. In their hands it becomes the means of erecting churches, of supporting the preaching of the gospel, of transforming character. These men of vision see all these things in that much despised vessel, the contribution box. Not every one has that prophetic gift. It is much more rare than that of Midas. And as the gift of Midas was poor, and vulgar and a curse, the gift of those who reverse the process is glorious.—The Christian Century.

GOD'S WAY.

Remember that your work comes only moment by moment, and as surely as God calls you to work, he gives the strength to do it. Do not think in the morning, "How shall I go through this day? I have such-and-such work to do, and persons to see, and I have not the strength for it." No, you have not, for you do not need it. Each moment, as you need it, the strength will come; only do not look forward an hour for what you expect. At any rate, you will be borne through each needful and right thing "on eagles' wings." Do not worry yourself with misgivings; take each thing quietly.—F. D. Maurice.

AN EXPOSITION OF THE BIBLE

"By far the best commentary on Genesis"—The Churchman, New York.
"Full of spiritual truth and instruction."—Christian Work.
"Young ministers will find it a mine of treasure."—New York Evangelist.
"Unusually fresh and bright."—Presbyterian and Reformed Review.
"Delightful and instructive reading."—Continent.
"Rich imagery and elegant diction."—N.Y. Christian Advocate.
"The preacher who can not derive very material assistance from these volumes must be a difficult person to help."—The Living Church.
"It easily takes its place in the front rank of works which have for their object the understanding of the Bible and the application of its teachings to practical life."—The Outlook.
"The plan is most admirable, being in the nature of expository lectures rather than conservative and verbal comments, and its carrying out by foremost preachers and theologians secures scientific and scholarly thoroughness along with popular and practical interest."—The Christian Intelligencer.
"The series is proving that the exposition of the Scriptures need be neither dry nor wearisome, and preachers will do well to study these volumes, as examples of expository style and method."—The Watchman.

FOR THE PREACHER

It affords endless material to enrich his sermons, both in history, criticisms, and exposition.

FOR THE TEACHER

It provides overwhelming resources of attaining or communicating Scriptural knowledge or answering questions.

FOR THE LAYMAN

It spreads a matchless feast of instruction and comfort.

This great work consists of seven large volumes solidly packed with thousands of the most practical and valuable helps for the preacher, teacher and Bible student. Unlike the ordinary commentary with its details and technicality this vast library of Bible helps actually expounds the Word of God. The contents are made up of scholarly, suggestive and intensely interesting expository lectures on all the books of the Bible, contributed by the foremost preachers and theologians of the day—men whose very names are the highest assurance of the far-reaching value of their contributions. The work has won universal praise from the entire religious press and pulpit.

SEVEN MASSIVE VOLUMES averaging 876 pages each, 10 3/8 x 7 1/4 inches, strong handsome buckram binding, (including indispensable New Index Volumes) Containing nearly 1,400 chapters, 5,261 pages, exhaustively illuminating every topic and every phase of each chapter and book of the Old and New Testaments.

"The tissue of the life to be
We weave with colors all our own;
And in the field of destiny,
We reap as we have sown."

The best teaching is that done by example. If you wish others to be a burning and shining light in the Kingdom, be one yourself. The world is weary of verbal theorists whose ambition is to direct; what it needs is doers to lead the way.

We notice that a committee in arguing to show "Billy Sunday's" efficiency as an evangelist states that he converted several newspaper reporters in his great meeting at Columbus, Ohio. If this be true, there is no need for any additional evidence.

Ready obedience is the only real obedience. Christ called his disciples to himself but once. None of them needed a second call. So has it always been since. His best and greatest followers have been those who yielded most promptly to this call.—Presbyterian of the South.

The New York Independent calls itself a "forward-looking" magazine. Such it may be—there are bad things as well as good things ahead. We prefer an upward-looking periodical; but that The Independent could scarcely claim to be while championing the tango and other kindred dances.

Do not lose sight of the good people about you. Rare indeed is the community in which Christ has not his witnesses. Learn to know them and hear their testimony, and it will strengthen you. If Elijah had not lost sight of God's faithful ones, the chapter relating his juniper tree experience would never have been written. There is blessing and inspiration in the communion of saints. It was never intended that the path to glory should be trodden alone.

It is announced that Chicago is to have a "flirting squad of policewomen." We dare say that such a force will be able to accomplish much good. Satan is continually inventing new devices to ensnare and destroy humanity, and we need to oppose him with modern methods. We must be alert and resourceful, as well as aggressive. If we would cope with the great enemy of mankind, who is a most masterly strategist. There is never any telling what the devil will turn up next.

In an "efficiency meeting" held for several Annual Conferences of the Methodist Episcopal Church in Columbus, Ohio, a short time since, a resolution was adopted deploring the lack of business principles in Church management and the fact so few contribute to the support of the Church. A plan was outlined for securing subscriptions from every member of the family belonging to a congregation, instead of merely from the head of it. We think that this is aiming in the right direction. We need to train all our people, including our children, in the noble grace of giving. There is no telling what the Church could achieve if every communicant would lend a helping hand both in the way of financial support and work.

GOVERNOR PATTERSON'S CASE AND WHAT IT SUGGESTS.

The conversion of ex-Governor Patterson of Tennessee is attracting attention in all parts of the country. Those who have been associated with him or who have heard him on the platform seem to entertain no doubt whatever as to the genuineness of the change which he has undergone. Though he was formerly a patron and earnest advocate of the saloon and aggressively sought when he was the Chief Magistrate of the Volunteer State to perpetuate its reign in that commonwealth, he has now become one of its most ardent and active opponents. He is a brilliant and forceful speaker and calls for addresses are now pouring in upon him in such numbers that he cannot begin to respond to them; and there is some talk of his closing his law office in Memphis and giving his whole time to a vigorous warfare on the liquor traffic.

Mr. Patterson ascribes his conversion to the influence of a higher power. As is usual, however, in such cases a human agent was used to assist in the accomplishment of the work. The instrument in this instance was Dr. J. L. Weber, pastor of the Madison Heights M. E. Church, South, of Memphis, who describes what took place as follows:

"He (Mr. Patterson) was surrounded by influences that made him the champion of the liquor interests of the State. He was forced into close and intimate relations with men of convivial habits, and sometimes of low ideals. He made compromise with his home training, and while never an habitual drinker, he was often overcome and led into debauchery that was repulsive to his best nature. It was while he was on one of these debauches that he was humiliated by arrest and exposure. That humiliation was God's opportunity. It was during this humiliation that my acquaintance with him began. I had always opposed his political ambitions and had never spoken to him; but my heart went out to him in great sympathy in his public shame. I was divinely led to approach him through a letter in which I urged him to seek the favor of God, and assured him that honest repentance would bring him to his Heavenly Father. I tried to show him what Jesus Christ is to the man who realizes himself a sinner. I received a courteous and appreciative reply. This led to other correspondence and interviews. He made a bold decision and took his stand for God." After this experience Mr. Patterson connected himself with the Presbyterian Church, the denomination to which his parents belonged.

There are two lessons in connection with this remarkable occurrence which, we think, ought to be emphasized. One is, as Dr. Weber rightly says, that "the same power that operated during apostolic days is operating to-day"; and he might have added, in the same manner. As Peter was sent to Cornelius when he was ready for the message, and as Annanias was sent to Paul when he needed a teacher, so apparently did the Holy Spirit influence Dr. Weber to do what he did at the opportune moment. There is, beyond question, such a thing as being directed by the Divine Spirit in our work. If we are fully consecrated and will seek his guidance. And we ought to be very careful how we resist the impressions that he makes upon our hearts. When he leads the way, there can be no such thing as failure in our efforts.

The other thing in connection with this incident that should impress us is the extent to which the Christian people about him had neglected to try to save this gifted and needy man through the antecedent years of his life. On this point, we quote the Bible Magazine, of New York (the January number), which makes upon it the following suggestive and searching comment:

"The astounding fact in the whole dramatic episode is revealed in Mr. Patterson's reply to the pastor's note, 'You are the first man who has ever spoken to me about my soul.' Here was a man who was personally known to thousands of Christian men, who had been reared in a Christian circle, who had met and talked with hundreds of Christian ministers and leaders. And not one of them had felt and shown any sense of individual responsibility for his soul! They had labored to keep him out of office or to help him into office, but had shown no zeal nor anxiety to save him from moral defeat and spiritual ruin, or to persuade him to make his calling and election sure as a son of the Lord Almighty. May not much of the weakness of the Church as a winner of souls be traced to its neglect of personal effort in dealing with men? The moral cowardice that dares not, or the moral indifference that will not, reveals the fact that the people of God are not profoundly stirred either by their solemn commission from God as the messengers of his grace or by their Lord's conception of the infinite value of the human soul."

A DECADE OF PROHIBITION.

The following testimonial from the Caldwell (La.) Watchman is well worth reading and meditating upon:

"Ten years have elapsed since the passing of the saloon from our midst; a decade has gone by since there dwelt among our business enterprises the dispensary of red eye and its bosom friend and ally, the knight of the green cloth and round table. Happily do we review the change from our not-distant yesterdays. We now have Christmas Days without the grewsome scene of men wobbling everywhere—on the streets and in our homes—with a type of blind staggers. No longer do we hear the clank of the poker chip or the rattle of antes mingled with loud guffaws tinged with profanity. Dead are the old contaminating influences that used to lure the youth astray. The ten years past have wrought many changes for the better."

INFLUENCE OF GOOD MEN.

The world is upheld by the veracity of good men; they make the earth wholesome. We call our children and our lands by their names. Their names are wrought into the verbs of our language, their works and effigies are in our houses, and every circumstance of the day recalls an anecdote of them.—Emerson.

"HE MUST INCREASE."

By Rev. Joel Schwartz.

He must increase; no swaddling bands,
No arms of love, no mangled stall,
Nor courts, nor temples built with hands
Can circumscribe the Lord of all;
He is the promised Prince of Peace,
Whose reign on earth shall never cease.

He must increase; he is the sun
That comes with healing in its beams;
Earth's long millennial day begun,
Shall grow with ever-brightening gleams.
Till darkness, sin and death shall cease,
And earth be glorified with peace.

He must increase; no outward strife,
Prevailing in the world around,
Shall overwhelm the Prince of Life,
Or His eternal realm confound;
He shall the slaves of sin release
And cause the cry of wrong to cease.

He must increase; from lowliest birth,
The child of Bethlehem shall rise
Until His presence gird the earth,
And with new glory gild the skies;
Beneath His law of love and peace,
All war and strife on earth shall cease.

He must increase; He is the Vine
On which all heavenly graces grow;
And as the virtue of its wine
Shall through our human currents flow,
We shall in Him find life and peace,
And share the parent stem's increase.

O, grow in us until, at length,
We rise to Thy sublime estate,
And clothed with Thy immortal strength,
We stand 'mid storms of scorn and hate,
As soldiers of the Prince of Peace
Till sin and strife on earth shall cease.
—Southern Churchman.

MISSIONARIES COMMENDED.

Many books have been written that contain criticisms of missionaries. Naval officers, and sometimes even foreign ministers, have felt called upon to assert that missionaries are unsafe as counselors, and that they are tactless in their efforts to substitute an alien religion for one with which people have been satisfied for thousands of years.

I do not wish to pronounce perfect everything that missionaries have done. No doubt there are among them emotional persons and persons of little judgment. But with very considerable opportunity to judge, from four years' experience in the Orient, and from contact with many missionaries in the Philippines, I feel justified in saying that they are generally persons of high character, high intelligence, high standards of living—persons who are willing to make every sacrifice for the cause they represent. They are men who know well the characteristics of the people with whom they deal. They learn their language, they study their peculiarities, and they train themselves to conciliatory methods. The very history of their broadened activities shows their practical methods. The Bishops, and the heads of missions in the various countries, are trained diplomats, and have learned much of statesmanship in their study of native conditions. I know of many instances in which the greatest self-restraint and tact have been exercised in order to prevent an outburst that would make such a cleavage between governmental authority and the representative missionaries as could hardly be closed for a decade.—Ex-President Taft in The Youth's Companion.

SOME STRIKING SENTENCES.

(We are indebted to The Bible Magazine of New York City, for the following utterances of the noted physician, Dr. Key, who is an authority on radium and its medicinal uses.)

In his address, "Radium and Religion," at the Bible Teachers Training School on Founder's Day, January 8th, Dr. Howard A. Kelly pointed out the singular, even striking analogies between the properties of this newly found wonder-working element, and some of the great principles of religion.

These are indicated by a few of his sentences below:

In this era of light therapy what a meaning we see in such passages as, "But unto you that fear my name shall the Sun of righteousness arise with healing in his wings."

What has radium to do with religion? What has any gift to do with the giver?

Radium was found by being obedient to its laws. We learn of Christianity the same way. The laboratory method is the way in Christian truth. "If any man willeth to do his will, he shall know of the teaching."

Radium always retains its nature unchanged; extreme changes of temperature have no effect on it. It is different from everything else; so the Christian ought to be.

It is the gentlest of all things when rightly used—simply light. Misused, it is capable of terribly destructive effects.

The patient must accept radium by faith; he cannot see its work, but soon the benefit is seen.

Radium has the singular power of producing secondary rays in other substances. So great good comes to the world indirectly from Christianity.

THE PREACHER'S BIBLE-READING.

By John J. Ransom, D. D.

At the late session of the Tennessee Conference Bishop Denny addressed the Conference each morning in connection with the opening devotional services of the day. His topics were of varying importance and timeliness, but his selection and memoriter reading of Scripture were always suggestive.

One morning he remarked that it was almost criminal for any man who could read his New Testament in Greek to lose that ability by disuse. Of course a man who can read the Greek New Testament ought to do so. With many of us Methodist preachers, however, the "reading" of the New Testament in Greek has never passed into the realm of real reading; it has remained a sort of academic exercise more or less compulsory and by no means joyous, and yet, like all discipline, productive of rich fruitage to them who are exercised thereby. But even so, blessed is he who readeth the words of this little book, even though it be with the tedious aid of lexicon and grammar. If to this reading and these appliances he shall add the daily use of Schmidt's "Greek Concordance," which will comfortably fit into the pocket of his top-coat, or of Schmaller's smaller, much thicker "Handcordanz," he runs the risk of acquiring a working vocabulary of New Testament Greek and possibly an acquaintance with the personal use of words by the various authors of the New Testament books.

Not many of the tribe of Wesley have adventured far enough to really recognize their kinship to that polyglot, Adam Clarke, or that earlier prodigy, Thomas Walsh, of whom Mr. Wesley told wonderful things to the effect that he knew the special shade of meaning of each Hebrew word wherever occurring in the Bible and could tell from memory where and how often it occurred.

As for those of us who have not learned Greek or who have mislearned somewhat of it, I commend Macaulay's account of how he learned languages: "My way of learning a language is always to begin with the Bible, which I can read without a dictionary. After a few days passed in this way, I am master of all the common particles, the common rules of syntax, and a pretty large vocabulary. Then I fall on some good classical work. It was in this way that I learned both Spanish and Portuguese, and I shall try the same course with German." That was written in "Calcutta November 26, 1838," at thirty-eight years of age.

But the Bishop might have said a more practical thing or a thing with wider application if he had said that it was almost a crime for a Methodist preacher to fail to read, as far as possible, every translation of the Bible into his mother tongue that has been put forth by the serious scholarship of individuals, Churches, or literary associations. Of course the accessibility of such translations depends on financial and other considerations, and the amount of other work upon a minister may somewhat limit the extent of such reading. But for a man whose business it is to know from various points of view the sacred Scriptures to make a fetish of the King James translation, as Saintsbury does in his wonderfully helpful volume, "The History of English Prose Rhythm," amounts almost to a literary tragedy. Why should I not read the Latin Vulgate if I can? and why should I not read the Douay version? and why not the Baptist version, or Weymouth's "New Testament," or Ferrar Fenton's "Complete Bible in Modern English," or any other that rises to the dignity of a scholarly attempt at an independent translation of the Bible?

Some years ago I opened a Quarterly Conference with a reading from Hebrews ix. in Weymouth's classic rendering. Among the members of that Quarterly Conference was a young lawyer of brilliant parts whose father is an international personality. Getting hold of my Weymouth during roll call, the young lawyer read several chapters, oblivious of the business of the Conference, till a friend challenged his behavior. Then, laying down the book, he said: "Well, that's the first time I ever saw any sense in that writing. Why, that man knew law. I must have this translation."

Just now Ferrar Fenton's "Complete Bible in Modern English" has been absorbing my attention for some weeks. Fenton's translation represents the most heroic work in Bible translation into the English that has ever been done. The complete work represented at first completion fifty years of consecutive labor. Ten years were spent in part "in getting at the varied measures of the Psalms and prophets and the division of each ode in them to its proper beginning, end, and stanzas." The New Testament represents nine editions of the Gospels and thirteen editions of St. Paul's Epistles. When Westcott & Hort's Greek Text appeared, he made a new translation of the entire New Testament to conform to it. To me the terrible ferocity of some of the prophetic utterances of the Old Testament never stood out in their rugged force as in this translation, till I have thanked God that he had not given the utterance of the gospel of our Lord to men of that spirit.

One of our Bishops said to me recently that he had enjoyed to a certain extent the reading of Moulton's "Modern Reader's Bible," but that he did not have a high esteem for the "Twentieth Century New Testament." My reply was that I had worn out two copies of Moulton's "Modern Reader's Bible" and was without a copy at present; that as to the "Twentieth Century New Testament" I had bought three copies in all, one of which had been specially interleaved and bound in two leather-backed volumes. By the way, Moulton has surely shown how to print the 1911 Revisers' edition of the King James Version.

No translation is faultless, whether it be made by one man, as Ferrar, or by any number of scholars whose appointment represents any part or all of Christendom. Everything is approximate in a matter like this; and even if we could get the precise and indubitable equivalent of the original writings, we should still have to make allowance for the earthen character of the original writers whom the Holy Spirit had stirred up to reproduce the divine message that had first burned within their own hearts.

Of course every man has or should have his own favorite translation, and it is well for him if he sometimes tires of any or all of them. With myself, the music of my mother's long silent voice is still to be heard in the cadences of the King James, notwithstanding its many recognized defects; and from time to time I grow weary of all other voices, just as when a child my heart turned with loving pain to the big old red farmhouse where my mother was born.

ARLINGTON PARSONAGE.

Nashville, Tenn.

AN ACTOR'S SERMON ON THE THEATER.

The English actor Cyril Maude delivered an address before the students of Barnard College a few days ago which deserves wide publicity and which should inspire solemn reflections. Had a clergyman given utterance to some of the sentiments which this distinguished player expressed he would have been regarded as narrow and unintelligent. As was to be expected, the lecturer said much in behalf of dramatic art and sang the virtues of his vocation, but he also gave a serious homily on the perils of the stage to young women, and therewith administered most wholesome advice. If it were heeded by all who are likely to become acquainted with it through the press, thousands of stage-struck girls would be saved from ruin, for the temptations of a theatrical career were faithfully described.

Our reason for referring to the address, however, is not to emphasize the evils which imperil the actress, for these are sufficiently known to most people. The significant passages in Cyril Maude's address were those dealing with the indisputable influence of women on the stage itself. "It is the women who keep the theaters open; it is they who therefore rule the theater," he said. Proceeding in this vein he declared:

"It is the women who choose what styles of play shall be a success in New York; it is the women, not the men. Here is really a case in which you all have indeed the suffrage, the power of deciding what type of play shall succeed. There has been a great outcry lately, too, in New York against a certain type of distinctly unpleasant play. Play after play of the same kind was produced, however, I hear. It was, I fear, it must have been, the women's vote that did it. And now I hear every one is sorry that the city was flooded with such stories upon the stage."

After remonstrating with his auditors that it was their duty to determine that unfit plays should have no admission to the modern stage, he continued:

"You have heard it said that the hand that rocks the cradle rules the world. So it does, God bless it, the dear, dainty hand, and it also passes the dollar over the box-office counter. Take care to make it hand them over for worthy plays, not sordid, miserable, diseased dramas, the medicine-chest drama, the operating-room drama. They are not good for all of us to watch."

We have long known that women were fixing the quality of the finer institutions of society and have always been ready to applaud them for the incomparably worthy contributions they were making to our civilization. Had we ventured to charge them with responsibility for the current decline in the purity of the stage, however, we should have been met by a perfect chorus of protestations that we were inspired by a churlish temper toward women. But when a famous actor says what we have just quoted it is time for all of the easy-going apologists of the stage to take notice.—New York Christian Advocate.

THE METHODISTS MISREPRESENTED.

Dear Doctor Meek: I sometimes wonder if there is the amount of ignorance on the part of the ministry of other denominations as to what we as Methodists teach, as some things they say in the pulpit would indicate to those who know better. What shall we call it—ignorance or straight out misrepresentation? Not being willing to brand any minister of the Gospel as being untruthful, I prefer to call it ignorance. And if it is ignorance, it is because they have read only one side of what the different Churches teach, and that is their side.

It has been preached all over this country that the Methodists teach salvation by works. Some of this has been done in my present territory, and I have said it is utterly untrue. Of course, I am aware of the fact, that those doing this, as well as myself, are not the descendants of Solomon, and that there is lots that they do not know. Is it not true that the Methodist Church comes as near teaching that salvation comes through faith and by grace as any other Church in the kingdom of our Lord?

I do not preach salvation by works, nor have I ever heard a Methodist preacher preach it. Our presiding elders do not preach it; our Bishops do not preach it; John Wesley did not preach it; St. Paul did not preach it, The Lord, our Christ, did not preach it, and the New Testament does not teach it. Our Church does not hold any such view. And how can any honest minister of the Gospel, study our theology—our cardinal doctrines—and say that it does? But, as I have said, they do not read but the one side (their side), and some of them have never heard half a dozen Methodist sermons in their lives, and hence, they are ignorant as to what our preachers bold and teach from the pulpit.

But while we preach salvation by faith, we do not preach it to the exclusion of good works. Wesley did not do so, Paul did not do so, and Christ did not do so, and neither does our Church hold any such view. We, with James, believe in works following faith. We believe that whatever God does for us, is nothing but the loving heart of a father lavishing its mercies upon us, and is called "grace." And whatever we do for him is not done to repay him for the salvation he has given us, but is simply the return of gratitude for his fatherly goodness, and is doing a son's duty.

While James says, "Show me your faith without your works, and I will show you my faith with my works," he did not intend to teach that salvation came by works, but was only discussing the practical side of the Christian life. He was teaching works as an evidence to the individual that his faith was a live faith, and not a dead faith. He was teaching that it was as unreasonable, for a man to have faith not followed by works, as it was for a house to stand without a shadow on a beautiful summer day. No, we have never preached, and do not now preach salvation by works. And the little egotistical, ecclesiastical demagogue who preaches such untruthful things must have a wonderful amount of confidence in the ignorance of the people to whom he preaches, if he expects them to accept such stuff without demanding authentic proof, which they ought to know they can not give. We do not believe that salvation can be bought by man in any way whatever.

CHURCH EXTENSION AID.

The Annual Meeting of the Board of Church Extension will be held about May 1. This is the meeting when applications for aid are considered. That those interested may know exactly how to proceed, the following is submitted:

1. All applications must be made upon the printed form provided by the Board for that purpose. These application blanks may be had without cost by applying to this office.

2. After the application has been properly prepared, it should be sent at once to the Secretary of the Annual Conference Board as the following rule provides:

"Every application for consideration at the hands of the General Board must first receive the approval of the Board of Church Extension of the Conference from which it comes, and said approval must be given at the regular meeting of said Board or of its Executive Committee held in the month of March. Said Boards or Committees shall consider all the applications from their respective Conferences and forward such as they approve so as to reach the Board's office at Louisville, Ky., by April 1 of each year. Each application so approved must have the action of the Conference Board written therein, certified by the President and Secretary, and all the applications from a given Conference must be, by the Conference Board, graded and marked in the order of their relative importance, and the Secretary is hereby directed not to put on the Calendar any application not in conformity with this rule."

3. The mid-year meetings of the Conference Boards or their Executive Committees are held in March. Do not fail to have your applications in the hands of your Conference Board Secretary by March 1.

4. Personal representation in the interest of applications by other than members of the Board is not permitted, as the following rule declares:

"The Board has not time to hear oral arguments or statements in behalf of applicants, and while considering applications for aid, its doors are closed. Representations other than those contained in the application can be made in writing or through members of the Board. A different rule would be obviously unfair to applicants too far away or too poor to send representatives."

5. The demands upon the Board have been so numerous and so urgent that over appropriation has resulted. The fiscal year will close with many unpaid grants on the book which must be taken care of out of next year's receipts. The Board at its closing session last May, having knowledge of this fact, adopted the following:

"In view of the fact that the conditions which have confronted the Board at this meeting have caused us to make appropriations largely in excess of the amount of money likely to be available during the coming year; and, in view of the fact that the next annual meeting of this Board will be the last for the quadrennium for which we were elected to serve; and, in view of the further fact that the Board is not a self-perpetuating organization,

"Resolved, That we hereby declare our purpose to limit the appropriations at the next meeting to the amount of money that is then reported by our Executive Committee as probably available for that purpose, to the end that the new Board, which will be elected by the next General Conference, may not be embarrassed in the beginning of its administration by the necessity of carrying over large grants which have been made by this Board.

"In order that we may be able to carry out this purpose without injury to the building operations of our Church, we earnestly request our Bishops, Presiding Elders, Pastors and Conference Boards of Church Extension to discourage applications for aid except in cases where serious injury would result from delay.

"In view of the fact that 192 out of the 327 applications of this year were by churches which have heretofore received aid through assurances that the grant would make possible the completion of the enterprise free from debt, be it hereby declared to be the policy of the Board to refuse to make grants in such cases, unless it can be clearly shown that the failure to carry out the assurances has been due to uncontrollable circumstances.

"And in view of the fact that we are constantly asked for large sums to relieve emergencies, occasioned by large debts, be it hereby

"Resolved, That we urge all in authority to carefully guard against extravagant enterprises, and to enforce more strictly the law provided in paragraph 447 of our Book of Discipline."

For further information, application blanks, etc., address W. F. McMurtry, Corresponding Secretary, 1025 Brook Street, Louisville, Ky.

A SPLENDID GIFT TO THE MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE ENDOWMENT BOARD.

To the Methodists of the Mississippi Conference:

Dr. W. C. Black has given to the Conference Endowment Board his book "IS MAN IMMORTAL." This book will cost 25c postpaid. The proceeds will go to the Conference Endowment Board for the widows and orphans and superannuated preachers of the Mississippi Conference. The volume will be kept for sale by Rev. T. J. O'Neil, President of Montrose College, Montrose, Miss.; Rev. N. B. Harmon, Yazoo City, Miss., and Rev. J. M. Morse, Jackson, Miss. This book is one of the best from the gifted pen of Dr. Black. Its value cannot be estimated. Order at once—get a good book and help a worthy cause. J. M. MORSE.

Governor Major of Missouri has appointed Bishop E. R. Hendrix a member of the World Peace Commission.

Bishop W. A. Candler left Atlanta on January 16 to make his annual official visit to Cuba. He is holding the Cuban Mission Conference at Camagiey this week.

On the evening of December 5, Dr. H. B. Johnston, the progressive presiding elder, held a quarterly conference for the entire city of Memphis, Tenn. There were 175 officials present.

Of the total population of Germany which is said to be 61,720,529, it is claimed that 38,374,648 profess adherence to the Evangelical Church, 22,540,485 to the Catholic Church, and 566,999 to the Jewish Church.

Prof. Schweitzer, who held a chair in the University of Strasburg, Germany, and who is the author of "The Quest of the Historical Jesus," and a graduate in medicine, has resigned his chair and volunteered for mission work in Central Africa.

The Salvation Army of Chicago some three months ago organized an Anti-Suicide Bureau, the first thing of the kind in the United States. It is now claimed that this department has already prevented more than 100 persons from taking their lives.

Dr. Biedewolf, who has recently been appointed Secretary of Evangelism by the Federal Council of the Churches of Christ in America, has announced that he will give six months of his valuable time to the Evangelistic Commission each year without one cent of remuneration.

Dr. G. C. Rankin, Editor of the Texas Christian Advocate, has declared in favor of having the next General Conference enact a law requiring all candidates for the ministry in our Church to refrain from the use of tobacco. This proposal came before the last General Conference and was lost by less than a half dozen votes.

Dr. Washington Gladden, who is 78 years of age, after an incumbency of 31 years, has resigned the pastorate of the First Congregational Church of Columbus, Ohio. He will, however, remain pastor emeritus. Rev. Carl S. Patton, D. D., the present associate pastor, will now become the active shepherd of this congregation.

Thirty missionaries, speaking twenty-four languages, have been employed for the past year by the Chicago Tract Society, to work among the foreign population of that city. These workers held 1,170 public meetings, visited 72,770 homes, and distributed more than thirteen million pages of literature. The work was done at a cost of $20,376.27.

Southern Methodism is making great progress in Florida. The net gain in membership last year was 3674, more than 10 per cent. Bishop Morrison states that substantial new church enterprises are now being carried forward at various places, as follows: Miami, $70,000; Orlando, $50,000; Jacksonville, $27,000; Palm Beach, $20,000; Kissimmee, $25,000; Tampa, $25,000.

The Educational progress of the M. E. Church, South, within the past few years is indicated by the following figures: 1896, number of colleges, 44; 1913, 50; increase, 14 per cent. Value of grounds and buildings 1896, $3,580,000; 1913, $9,322,400; increase 160 per cent. Endowment, 1896, $2,190,000; 1913, $5,960,000; increase, 172 per cent. Number of students, 1896, 6,844; 1913, 11,000; increase, 60 per cent.

A few days since President Williams of Gallogay College, at Searcy, Ark., announced a gift of $10,000 to that institution for the construction of a science hall. The name of the donor, by request, was withheld from the public. A new gymnasium was recently constructed and equipped on the campus of this college at a cost of $8,000, and the subscriptions to the endowment fund secured by Rev. W. C. Watson, the financial commissioner, now amount to about $65,000.

Following the example of William E. Gladstone, Premier Asquith of Great Britain, read a selection from the Scriptures in the parish church of Easton Grey on Christmas day. It is stated that the passage was from the ninth chapter of Isaiah, and that as the Prime Minister pronounced the words, "The people that walked in darkness have seen a great light," the sun, which had been behind a cloud, suddenly emerged and poured in through the windows a flood of light upon him.

Prof. James Chapman, one of the leading personalities of British Methodism and for eighteen years Principal of Southlands College, died on Dec. 18. Dr. Chapman delivered the Cole Lectures at Vanderbilt University in 1904, and was one of the Secretaries of the last Ecumenical Conference, held in Toronto, Canada. Among other things, the Methodist Recorder says of him: "He was one of the loftiest and loveliest spirits in our Church, or in any Church. There was probably no finer mind in our Church."

CONTENDING FOR THE FAITH.

(An editorial by Bishop Charles B. Galloway in the New Orleans Christian Advocate of August 24, 1882.)

We are exhorted to "earnestly contend for the faith which was once delivered unto the saints." The faith—that is, the oracles of God, the Scripture of truth—has been committed to the Church. It is a sacred trust, and should be guarded with ceaseless vigilance. With this "faith" untouched and untarnished, every precept, principle, prayer, prophecy, parable, promise, penalty kept inviolate and hid in the heart, the Church is invincible even against the gates of hell. For, however formidable the enemy, this is an all-sufficient defense. It is only when this Word is assailed, its infallible authority called in question, and a restless, ruthless hypercriticism indulged, that the Church indicates weakness and failure. The ark is not to be touched without suffering the penalty.

The "faith" was once delivered—or as a better rendering has it, "once for all." Therefore, as has been well said, it is "not to be repeated; not to be superseded; not to be enlarged, for it is complete; not to be abbreviated, for it is the Spirit's own work; and not to be altered in any way by man or angel." It is ours, to keep it, read it, pray over it, incarnate it, declare, and contend for it. We are neither to add to nor take from on penalty of having its plagues added to us, and our parts taken out of the book of life and the holy city. It is the priceless treasure and sacred heritage of the Church.

To contend for it is a solemn duty and an apostolic injunction. If this exhortation was needed in the early days, much more now. We have again upon us the struggle for the Bible. The old battles must be refought, but on different fields and with improved weapons. Much is involved in this attack upon the supernatural in the Bible. When it is surrendered every cardinal doctrine of Christianity is given up. They stand or fall together. The Philistines are upon us. In the August number of the North American Review, Henry Ward Beecher has a characteristic article on the "Progress of Thought in the Church." Not as emanating from his erratic pen, but as indicating the drift of modern opinion, the paper is significant, if not alarming. The following quotation bears on the subject in hand: "In an important sense the sacred Scriptures are of God. They contain precious truth. By their moral unity, and by their accord with human reason and intelligent moral consciousness, they justly hold authority over men's conduct and character. But they claim no such mechanical perfection as has been claimed for them. They have authority only concurrently with educated human reason and rational sense."

The words italicized evidence the progress Mr.

Beecher has made—a movement toward extreme liberalism that has been, in his case, rapid and perilous. In our latitude his followers are few, but his readers are many. Outside the ranks of the clergy, among the liberal professions, these sentiments are finding disciples and advocates. They must be met with boldness, resisted, and overcome. Again we have necessity to repeat the Scripture admonition: "Beware lest any man spoil you through philosophy and vain deceit, after the tradition of men, after the rudiments of the world, and not after Christ."

What, then, is our duty? As custodians of this priceless treasure and contenders for its purity and authority, what measures are we to adopt? We are to redouble efforts and zeal for the conversion of souls. A renewal of heart by the Holy Spirit never falls to silence all cavils about "naturalism" and "liberalism," and scatter the fogs that becloud and obscure the truth. With a consciousness of divine pardon rejoicing the soul, there will be no disposition or taste for vain speculation and the traditions of men. It was the great spiritual revolution of the eighteenth century, under the leadership of the Wesleys and Whitefield, that saved England from the infidelity which now threatens the Christian world. Then, as now, skepticism wore a mitre, and occupied the professor's chair. But when that revival of Scriptural holiness swept over the land a wondrous change resulted. The atmosphere of the universities became purer and more orthodox; the pulpit was filled with an evangelical spirit, and echoed a gospel of peace and joy; all Christendom caught the enthusiasm and everywhere Zion put on her beautiful garments. When the heart is aglow with God's love there will be no toleration for Mr. Beecher's "advanced views" on Bible inspiration.

Our children should be taught with painstaking care the supreme and infallible authority of God's Word. It is the Book—not to be handled with the familiarity of other volumes, but studied with a reverent, dutiful spirit. It was written by holy men as they were moved by the Holy Ghost. This must be ever remembered; never forgotten. An irreverent comment on the Scriptures, even in the pulpit, is to be deplored. Though not to be locked up in cloisters and hid away from the eyes of men—though we are exhorted to "search the Scriptures"—it must be with the thought that we are reading what God has written. When men begin to quibble over the authority of certain books and passages, because not concurrent with their "educated reason," we have no hope of their escape from absolute infidelity. Away from the old evangelical moorings, on that subject, there is no place to cast an anchor. The vessel becomes a prey to winds and waves, without rudder or compass, and no harbor in which to find shelter. We were not a little shocked, some time ago, to hear a young clergyman depreciate the canonical authority of the Epistles as compared with the words our Lord himself uttered, but were not surprised at his subsequent change of denominational relation.

Our theological schools and Conference Examining Committees should see that the "faith" is held without doubt or reservation. We must be assured that the teachers of our congregations contend for the faith with all earnestness and intelligence. Mr. Beecher's progress is backward. Such teachings do not flourish in our Southern atmosphere, and we pray it may be ever kept as pure. To this end we have written, and again repeat the apostle's exhortation.

Every noble life leaves the fiber of it forever woven into the works of the world.—Ruskin.

Though this splendid institution is less than two years old, its capacity is already overtaxed.

Dr. C. C. Bass, of New Orleans, was given a medallion commemorating his discovery of the malaria plasmodium at the meeting of the Orleans Parish Medical Society in this city on Monday night, Jan. 12. On one side of the medallion is a picture of the apparatus which Dr. Bass used in making his discovery, and on the other is a likeness of the physician himself; on the edges are marked off the five important stages of the fight against this disease, together with the names of the men who have made valuable contributions to the profession's knowledge of it.

The Lambert collection of Lincoln's autograph letters and relics was sold publicly in New York last week. The note book in which he pasted newspaper accounts of his speeches relating to the negro question brought $2250; the letter he wrote to Mrs. Orville H. Browning about the rejection of his proposal of marriage by Miss Mary S. Owen sold for $1250; the letter he wrote to Gen. Grant only eight days before he was assassinated, went for $1375, and his 22 letters to Lyman Trumbull commanded an aggregate price of $10,555. If any one regards these sales as remarkable, let him ascertain what something really connected with Shakespeare or Napoleon could be purchased for.

The National Geographic Society is authority for the statement that our Government has now in its possession 8000 islands, supporting a population of 10,000,000, which is more people than there were in the entire United States a century ago. Their commerce exceeds $300,000,000 annually, which is larger than that of the whole nation any year prior to 1850; they ship to our country $100,000,000 worth of products, and take in exchange products of about equal value. Most of these islands, particularly Porto Rico, Hawaii, and those in the Alaskan group, have shown steady advancement under American rule. For instance, when we acquired Porto Rico fifteen years ago, there was on the island but one building that had been erected for school purposes; to-day there are 1200 such structures. The first year that we administered its affairs there were in the public schools 25,000 pupils; now there are 175,000. The production of sugar has grown from 65,000 tons to 365,000, and the island's foreign commerce from $20,000,000 to nearly $100,000,000. Then we sold the Porto Ricans products to the amount of about $2,500,000; now they purchase nearly $40,000,000 worth of our productions. This does not look much like our so-called colonial policy has been bad either for our colonies or the governing States.

A MINISTER'S READING.

By the Rev. Fred Whitlo Hixson.

A minister's library is not a workshop; it is a retreat. It is not a factory in which materials are gathered and fashioned into discourse for public utterance. The minister's study is, first of all, a place where by conscientious and steady effort he promotes his own soul's health and growth. The compulsion that drives him to the study ought not to be the necessity for the forthcoming sermon, but eagerness for life. Good sermons are not made; they are born. Sermon preparation is not the art of arranging homiletic matter to be spoken by a human voice; it is the process of life coming to saturation with a knowledge of the truth, mastered by moral urgency and rising to prophetic boldness. Before there can be an efficient minister, there must be a man of rich personality. Before he can be an inspiring teacher, the truth must pass through his own life, and must bear the color of his own soul. If his own life is rich, his utterance will be lofty, not trivial. If the plummet of moral earnestness plunges deep into his own heart, his utterance will be with natural and compelling fervor. If his own faith is well grounded in personal experience and is buttressed by good scholarship, he will preach helpful, wholesome sermons.

There are books by the carload with homiletic material gleaned, condensed, formulated, ready-made; but no right thinking man, with serious regard for his intellectual health, will be tempted by their low prices and monthly installment terms. The books that will be of best utility to the minister will not be those that contribute always to the immediate task of sermon preparation, but those that answer the deep hunger of his own life. His best books are those which give him to feel himself settling with personal comfort into fundamentally great ideas, and which lift him to a point of outlook from which he can see not merely one new sermon in the distance, but landscapes of sermons. At this place the prophetic mood will master him and hold him in rapturous captivity. —From New York Christian Advocate.

FAMILY RELIGION.

Family religion has been peculiarly approved and blessed of God. It is a remarkable fact that most men eminent in life had in childhood a religious home. Bishop Haven, after careful investigation, says: "Three-fourths of the most prominent scientists, authors and merchants are not more than two generations removed from the manse. They are either sons or grandsons of ministers." A French author has collected similar statistics. If you were to have read to you a list of the sons of clergymen who have attained honorable distinction you would be surprised to find how near to religious homes are the eminent men of the modern world. There are three good reasons why this is so: one is that such homes have the blessing of God upon them; another is that the atmosphere of a religious home is best suited for the formation of character; a third is that the atmosphere of a religious home is best suited to the highest development of the mind. And these three things are the great sources of success in the world.—Christian Intelligencer.

TO THE PASTORS OF THE JACKSON AND BROOKHAVEN DISTRICTS:

At the request of Dr. I. W. Cooper and with the consent of my presiding elder, I have accepted the position of Financial Agent for Whitworth College in the Brookhaven and Jackson Districts. If you will open your charges for my coming, I shall appreciate it and any other courtesies you may extend to me. Also, in connection with my work for Whitworth College, my presiding elder has so arranged my work that I shall have considerable time for evangelistic work, and while my evangelistic labors will not be confined exclusively to these two districts, if any of the brethren in them can use me in their revivals, I shall be glad to come to them, and request that engagements be made as early in the year as possible.

Yours fraternally,

JOHN W. RAMSEY.

OF LITTLE CONSEQUENCE.

Dear Dr. Meek: I recognized the mistake which "Westerner," in your last issue, calls a blunder, the moment my attention was called to it, and I wondered how it happened. I suppose it grew out of the fact of the use of the Greek preposition "eis" in connection with the baptism of the Ethiopian eunuch, and of the translation of the same in the King James version by the word "into." For the sake of accuracy, the correction was all right and is duly appreciated. However, I do not see how the general question of the mode of baptism was seriously affected by the mistake; for the preposition "eis" has the same meaning in the baptism referred to as it would have had, if it had been used as was supposed in my article in connection with the baptism of Jesus; and my argument against its translation is just as applicable in the one case as it would have been in the other.

Chinese Converts Building Churches.

As Chairman of our Mission Building Committee I went to one of the out-stations in the Huchow District in October to arrange, with the other members of the Committee, for the building of a church. This church is made possible by an appropriation of the Board of Missions, supplemented by contributions from the membership of the church. We let the contract, and work is to begin next week. More churches and larger churches is the one constant demand of this day for missionary work in China. We hardly finish a building before it is too small. For years we have only had converts from the poorer classes who were unable to do much toward helping in the work of building their own churches. Now, I am glad to say, we are reaching more and more the merchant classes, who are able to contribute toward this cause. The members of this particular church have contributed about $1,000 U. S. currency toward this enterprise.—J. B. Fearn, Shanghai, China.

Japan Not Yet Evangelized.

Approximately 80 per cent of the total population of Japan, or above 40 millions, reside in rural districts, of which number—so far as our data indicates—96 per cent constitute an entirely unworked field. Of the remaining 20 per cent of the total population residing in cities and towns, about one-fifth is still unprovided for, thus giving us the result that above 80 per cent of the population of Japan are not being directly reached by the evangelistic forces. A gigantic and yet most inspiring task, therefore, still lies before us in the Christianization of Japan, which calls, first of all, for renewed humiliation, deeper consecration, and a larger spiritual life.—Committee on the Distribution of Forces, Japan (Mrs. W. A. Willson.)

Days of Preparation in Africa.

Every day for the past three days we have met in one of the cabins and spent half an hour in prayer, after which Dr. Morrison gives us a half hour on the Baluba language, and the alternate day on missionaries and their relation to Government officials, to the natives, and to other Missions in the Congo. In this way we are availing ourselves of his large and helpful experience. It is a gracious providence which has permitted his being with us.—W. R. Lambuth, enroute to Africa.

An Overflowing Hospital.

With the exception of a short while during the China New Year and the revolution this summer, the hospital has been full all the time and has been forced to turn away many patients. More room has been made for patients and quite a number of new beds bought. In fact, all the available space in the building has a bed in it. We have had a record year in patients, an increase of 227 over last year, which was a very large increase over all former years. The opium patients increased by 211 and the surgical by 112. At the present time the third-class opium ward has two patients in every bed, so heavy is the demand to break this habit.—John A. Snell, Soochow Hospital, China.

"Making Character."

The work at the college is going on with the same satisfactory result. The boys have recently set to work to increase our library, and have added more than 200 books. A good deal of excellent literature, much of it translated by Brother Price, is published each month in the little magazine. A cultured patron of the school recently came from Alegrete to visit us, and before leaving said, "Now I understand your catalog and what you are trying to do. You make character here."—Anderson Weaver, Uruguayana, Brazil.

The Word in Cuba.

A sign very favorable to Protestantism in Cuba is the increased circulation of the Scriptures during the nine months of the year up to September 30. In spite of scarcity of money and abundance of lottery ticket sellers, the colporteurs and agents of the American Bible Society, aided by the pastors, have circulated over 23,000 copies of the Scriptures. The circulation for the year will easily pass thirty thousand, a record breaking circulation for Cuba. "The word of God is not bound."—S. A. Neblett, Santa Clara, Cuba.

Answering God's Call in China.

There is a most encouraging turning of our students towards the ministry and teaching. Presiding Elder Lea, who is also pastor of the local church, has recently conducted revival services for two weeks with the students. As a result a class of fifteen young men are meeting daily for special study and prayer looking to church membership. Two of our graduates who are now teaching in non-mission schools on good salaries have recently written the presiding elder their decision to enter the ministry.—W. B. Nance, Soochow University, China.

Textiles in Korea.

In the Industrial Department everything is moving on finely, and I think I am right in saying that we have a brighter prospect for the future of this work than of anything on the field. We are concentrating on the Textile Department, as it is the one that is attracting the students and that seems to be the most useful to the people. We have no trouble in selling our products. We are trying to put out goods for the Koreans, and not for an artificial trade to which the students will have no access after leaving school. Next to this we try to meet special demands on the field, like the demand of the missionaries for foreign style goods, and third, we are trying to develop things that might sell in foreign markets, such as silks, etc. We have all the students we can handle on our present equipment, but with the power loom from America, and the "Jaquard" loom from Japan, and the first quarter of equipment money for the new year, we can provide considerable equipment for the opening in April. A loom can be made for six or seven dollars, but with the best we can do we shall be short, for the prospects are that we shall have 50 or 75 new students next year, and that means we shall need that many looms. We must meet the demand on us, and make this department the best of the kind in Korea.—C. H. Deal, Songdo, Korea.

The Harvest in Brazil.

A building at the cuartel is becoming a greater necessity every day. Since Conference we have put in electric lights, opened a parochial school (with 25 children at the first roll call), received three members and some twenty odd candidates; are preaching to 70 or 80 attentive listeners that fill the little hall, the back room, the three windows and the door, and last Sunday administered the Sacrament to the largest number in years. Our Sunday school has some 40 members; the infant class recites in the garden, our hall being 3x4 meters. As to our Church in Bello Horizonte, we have received 17 members; have a good list of candidates under instruction; Sunday school has reached 120; number of communicants four times what it was fifteen months ago; all collections up to date; a fine spirit of fraternity and activity; 1,000 tracts and 500 invitation cards ready to distribute at the door and elsewhere.—J. M. Lander, Bello Horizonte, Brazil.

SUNDAY SCHOOL WORK IN THE NORTH MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE.

There appears in the Advocate of December 25 an article under the head of "Progress in Practical Church Work," written by Hon. Geo. J. Leftwich, in which he strongly commends the forward movement of the North Mississippi Conference in Sunday school work as provided for at its last session.

The article is timely and worthy of careful consideration by all who feel an interest in this great work of our Church, but there is one point in it which, if left alone, is misleading, which of course was unintentional upon the part of the writer.

In reviewing the past history of special Sunday school work by the Conference he begins with the action of the session held in 1902, and speaks of the young man then employed as field worker as "a pioneer in the work," when as a matter of fact such a work had been in operation during the preceding fifteen years. It is true that during this period the Sunday school agency was provided for in connection with the colportage work in order primarily to make the latter possible. But it was never considered either by the Sunday School Board or the Agent as merely nominal, but a de facto work, as is shown in the Conference records and can be verified by many living witnesses.

The Agent was in evidence as a field worker throughout the Conference, visiting almost every pastoral charge, a large majority of the churches, and many unoccupied communities, using all diligence to promote the Sunday school cause.

The apparent results of these labors were not all that was desired, but, for the most part, they were very gratifying and received from year to year the approval of the Sunday School Board, as their reports show.

Thus it may readily be seen that the action of 1902 was not the beginning of a new work, but a forward movement, with provision for greater efficiency, of the one that had been in progress for years before under the same supervision.

This is written for the sole purpose of setting in order some facts that belong to the history of the Sunday school work in the North Mississippi Conference, which are necessary to be known in order to a full and correct understanding of the same.

Rev. R. P. Neblett, who was appointed in 1902 Sunday School Secretary, with characteristic diligence and fervor for a few years, rendered effective service in the cause. More recently Miss Elizabeth Kilpatrick as Field Secretary has been doing work that will be fruitful of good—especially in organizing Adult Classes. And now for this year a greater forward movement has been launched and more liberal things devised than ever before, looking to more thorough and efficient work and to the development of a still larger interest in this great cause than ever before.

This responsible work has been assigned to Rev. V. C. Curtis and Miss Elizabeth Kilpatrick—two most capable persons for the business. They are worthy of all confidence and support, and for the work's sake should have the hearty co-operation of the entire Church throughout the Conference.

"We are laborers together with God. One planteth, and another watereth, but God giveth the increase." Let prayers to God be made daily for this and every other Christian work.

WATCH YOUR STEP.

An interesting speaker related recently, in an effective address, that at the subway stations in New York a man was placed whose business it was to repeat "Watch your step," as passengers were coming to and passing from trains, for a misstep might mean a serious accident if not certain death. This man receives a salary of $75 per month for the performance of this simple but important duty. Many an accident might be prevented by watching one's step. It is a true saying, "that it is the first step that costs." Why? Because many persons have been started on the road to ruin by carelessness in taking the first step. After the first step downward is taken it is much easier to take the second, third and so on. The cost of the first step is difficult to estimate, because so many individual interests are involved.—Unidentified.

The Home Circle

JESUS, THE CHILDREN'S FRIEND.

"Jesus loves you, little children,
And He listens when you sing;
He accepts the grateful praises
That your little voices bring.

"Jesus sees you, little children,
When you fold your hands to pray
And, however softly whispered,
He can hear each word you say.

"Jesus kindly watches o'er you,
Kindly leads you day by day,
Safely guides your little footsteps,
That they may not go astray."

HIRAM'S DOLL.

"Oh, oh!" cried Kitty, running into the barn.
"Oh, dear, I am so scared!"

Jack was making willow whistles, but he looked up.

"What's the matter?" he asked.

"Oh!" said Kitty, again, "I was coming across the cornfield, and there was a horrid man there; and he tried to catch me."

"A man?" said Jack.

"Oh, yes. A great, horrid, ugly man, like a tramp, and all in rags."

"Don't you be scared, Kitty," said Jack, who was a brave little fellow. "Father and Hiram are over in the east meadow, getting the hay; but I'm here, and I'll go and see what he wants."

Kitty begged him not to, for fear the man might hurt him; but Jack said stoutly:

"He might be after the chickens or the new calf, and I must look after things when father is not here. I'll take Towser."

He whistled to Towser, and ran off to the cornfield. Kitty was afraid to stay alone, and so she followed him, but at a safe distance. Baby Dick trotted at her heels. Just as they were getting under the fence, they heard a ringing shout from Jack, who was in the middle of the field, and, when they came in sight, they found him shaking the arm of the "tramp."

"O Kit, you goose!" he cried. "It's only the scarecrow Hiram made yesterday to keep the birds away from the corn."

"Why," said Baby Dick, "he's noffin' but a drate big dolly."

"Yes, that's what he is," said Jack. He's Hiram's doll."

Hiram's doll stood in the field all summer, and the children went often to see him.

And so, when things frighten you, if you can only be brave, like little Jack, and go right up and look at them, you will very often find them only scarecrows.—Our Little Ones.

IN JACK'S WORKSHOP.

"Cre-a-k cre-a-k!" complained the old grindstone noisily, and after the fourth or fifth turn Lucile looked up at her cousin, whose nose was very close to the hatchet he was grinding.

"Why don't you oil it, Jack?" she asked.

"Goin' to soon's I find time," he answered briskly. "Too busy just now."

There was a small oil can on the deep window shelf within reach, and still turning the crank with one hand Lucile reached out the other and attempted to oil the dry sockets, but the can was empty.

"Haven't you any oil?" she asked.

"Yes, in the jug on the bench there, but I'm in a hurry; I'll try to find time for it tomorrow."

Lucile let go the handle and walked resolutely to the jug. Not more than two minutes were required to fill the can and put a few drops in the complaining crank sockets, but Jack waited with his hatchet still pressed to the stone and his face wrinkled with impatience.

"I'm in an awful hurry, Lucile," he exclaimed impatiently.

"All right, that's what I did it for, and to save the crank; father says when our carriage wheels creak they are wearing out for want of oil and the carriage has to go slower. Now see," and grasping the crank she turned it more rapidly than before. After the first revolution the creaking ceased. She looked at him brightly. "It turns lots easier," she exclaimed.

Jack smiled a rueful acquiescence. "I suppose you're right," he acknowledged, "but it really did seem like wasting time." "There!" a few minutes later, "that's done. Now I'll get out some boards and start on a new boat."

"Is the edge all right?" asked Lucile doubtfully. "You've only been sharpening it a few minutes, and you said the edge was awfully dull."

"Oh, I guess it'll do, and anyway, I can give it a few more touches in the morning. But what do you know about edges?"

"That's what a hatchet's for, isn't it—the edge?" she asked, seating herself upon a basket of shavings and clasping one of her knees in her hands. "Father says, nothing can do its best unless it's at its very best, and that means tools and everything. But wasn't it too bad your boat wouldn't go yesterday? What was the matter?"

"Oh, the old thing leaked, though I made it just as the book said to. I'll build one more, and if it doesn't sail right I'll know the man who wrote the book didn't understand what he was writing about. And I worked all day yesterday on the old thing too." He dropped upon a box and began to lace one of his shoes, looking ruefully at Lucile as he did so.

"Did you use that hatchet in making it?" asked Lucile.

"Of course; that and the drawing knife and the planes and saw on the bench beside you, and hammer and nails and such things."

"The hatchet was awfully dull," said Lucile, pointedly. She reached around and took the planes from the bench and examined their knife edges critically; then she took down the saw and touched her fingers cautiously to the teeth. "What made your boat leak Jack?" she went on; "was it the shape of the boat, or just cracks?"

"Why, I wouldn't wonder if it was cracks," he confessed frankly, but smiling a little lugubriously at her questions. "The water came in where the pieces were put together. I couldn't seem to fit the joints very tight."

"You couldn't very well, I suppose, with dull tools," conceded Lucile, sympathetically. She handed him the saw, and he took it with a protesting grimace.

"I know it's abominably dull," he said; "in worse condition even than the grindstone. No you needn't show me the planes," as she made a motion with them toward him. "I know just how they are, for I've been using them. But you see I've been so awfully busy I really couldn't find time to sharpen them. I guess I'll have to take tomorrow to clean house and fix things—that is, after the new boat is finished." The shoe was laced now, but he made no attempt to rise. Indeed, he seemed to have forgotten his hurry of a few minutes before.

"Maybe it might be a good idea to sharpen up the tools first," suggested Lucile. "It took you all day yesterday to make the boat, you know, and two hours would have sharpened the tools nicely. The two hours would have been well spent. And—"

"If the tools had been sharpened nicely the edges that made the joints of the boat that Jack built would have been all right, and a whole day saved whereas," springing suddenly to his feet, "if experience is to be made of use, the said Jack must begin this forenoon to sharpen tools instead, of commencing on another boat. Thank you Lucile; are you open to another engagement at turning grindstone?"

"Indeed I am," springing merrily from the basket of shavings, "and I'm going down to the dock to see the new boat launched. I don't believe she will leak."

Nor did she. As soon as the tools were sharpened Jack went to work on the boat, and Lucile, instead of going off to her books and playthings, as usual, remained with him in the little workshop, holding the pieces of board while he planed and nailed them, and after it was built painted most of the boat herself, and then, at his peremptory command, lettered in her own name, "Lucile," on the stern.

Then they took the new boat down to the dock and sailed it for an hour, where, as Jack said, it proved itself "as tidy a little craft as ever cut the waves." When they took it out the little boat was just as dry inside as when launched. But that was not all. Before Lucile's visit ended, a month later, Jack's workshop looked like a new place. All the tools were sharp, the oil can was kept filled, and the grindstone didn't squeak, and as Jack himself confessed, he was able to get a good many more things done, and still had time to spare.—Boys and Girls.

A BEAUTIFUL INCIDENT.

(The following incident, for an account of which we are indebted to the Times-Democrat, occurred during President Wilson's recent stay at Pass Christian, Miss.)

Miss Willa Green, the little girl who gave President Wilson a box containing a dove to be released upon his return to the Herndon House while he was on his way from the golf links during his recent vacation here, is the proud possessor of a letter from the President. Little Miss Green had found a wounded dove, nursed it back to health and asked the President to release it. His letter to Little Miss Green follows:

"My Dear Little Friend—I am afraid that I did not understand what was intended by the dove being handed me to-day as I passed the school children. I infer that you wanted me to set the bird at liberty there. As it was, I did not have a chance to read your note until after I had passed the group of school children, and so I waited until I got to the house here where we are stopping in Pass Christian and released it from the front piazza in the presence of my family. They all agreed with me in thinking your note a very sweet one and your whole action about the dove very sweet and admirable. We thought of you as I released the bird, and now all unite in sending you our warmest regards and our most cordial wishes for the new year. Sincerely yours,

"WOODROW WILSON."

The dove is apparently satisfied with the trees about the Herndon House, as it has never left the vicinity.

Editorial

DO NOT FAIL TO READ IT.

We reproduce this week an editorial written by Bishop Galloway in 1882, when he was the brilliant Editor of the New Orleans Christian Advocate. It is even more pertinent now than it was then, and it is well worth a careful reading. Perhaps there are some who are disposed to think that we are somewhat of an extremist and alarmist in our opposition to the latitudinarian teaching of this day; but we respectfully submit that we have never written anything that was more aggressively hostile to a lax and irreverent handling of the Holy Scriptures than this ringing protest from the gifted pen of Southern Methodism's great leader.

The truth is, an examination of the past files of the New Orleans Advocate will clearly show that the present Editor has not gone far afield from his distinguished predecessors on any question. Some may say that this shows that he is a "standpatter," rather than a progressive. But that designation does not at all frighten us. We do not know much, but we know enough to know that truth in its fundamental relations is eternal and unchangeable. There will never come a time in the world's history when two and two do not make four, or when there are not ninety degrees in a right angle. Nor will the great basal facts of Christianity—the Trinity, the incarnation, the atonement, repentance, justification by faith, regeneration, and the inspiration of the Scriptures—ever become obsolete or vary in any essential particular. The last man of the race will doubtless have to come into the divine kingdom by precisely the same process as the first man who entered it after the primal fall. God did not make to humanity a mystical revelation which could not be understood. Its elemental principles were comprehended by the disciples of Jesus in the outset and will continue to be grasped by the humblest of them until the end of time. They may not be able to follow some of these transcendent truths in their infinite reaches, but they can see enough into them to discover the path that leads to God and to glory. The light that flashes upon them may not be adequate for exploration, but it is sufficient for them to travel by.

Nor can we, when men assail the authenticity of the Scriptures, view the issues that they raise with a careless complacency as if they were merely academic questions. There is too much at stake for that. The Gospel of St. John, for instance, is perhaps humanity's most priceless piece of literature; were it discredited or destroyed, the race would be immeasurably impoverished. Therefore, we cannot look on with indifference when its trustworthiness is being challenged by persons who, though they profess the Christian faith, bring into the discussion the irreverent methods of the rationalists.

We sometimes hear it said that there is no use to bother about these attacks—that these assailants can not overthrow the Bible. To be sure, they cannot; but they may befog the minds of thousands of people and cause them to be lost, or they may sow the seeds of skepticism in the Church until, for a time at least, she is stripped of her power. Look how infidelity held enlightened England, and indeed nearly the whole world, in its paralyzing grip when Wesley appeared upon the scene. Well may we heed the injunction of St. Paul to Timothy: "Hold fast the form of sound words, which thou hast heard of me, in faith and love which is in Christ Jesus."

A SUNDAY IN GULFPORT.

It was our pleasure to spend last Sunday in Gulfport, where we went in response to a cordial invitation extended some weeks ago by the pastor of the First Methodist Church of that city, Rev. M. L. Burton, to come over and see his beautiful new house of worship and preach to his people. Upon our arrival Saturday evening, we were met at the train by Rev. W. T. Griffin and young Mr. Tlppin, and were conducted to the residence of Mr. and Mrs. P. H. M. Tlppin, where we were most delightfully entertained. The Sabbath dawned bright and fair, and at 11 a.m. we were greeted by a magnificent congregation which about filled the spacious auditorium of the church. The music and singing were excellent, Rev. H. W. Van Hook, who is a fine performer, having come over from the Seashore Camp Ground to play the sweet-toned new pipe organ. In the absence of the regular organist, he has been rendering this service for several Sabbaths.

At the close of the service we were motored to the charming home of Mr. and Mrs. W. H. Favourite, where we dined, and at about 3 o'clock we boarded the east-bound street car for the residence of Hon. E. J. Bowers, to call upon Mrs. Robert Kemp, who makes her home there, and who was too ill to be out of bed. Sister Kemp was formerly a member of our Church at Greenville, Miss., when we were the pastor, and has long been included in the list of our valued friends. Though weak and thin, we found her bright and happy and spent a profitable hour conversing with her. While on Mr. Bowers' beautiful premises, we had the privilege of walking through his orange and grape-fruit grove, which is said to be the finest on the entire Mississippi coast. It was indeed a pretty sight to see the green trees literally burdened with their ripe and luscious fruits. President Wilson stopped to see this orchard while on his recent visit to Pass Christian, and was presented with a single branch of one of the trees that had on it forty well-developed grape-fruits.

Upon our return to the city, we stopped at the parsonage to see Brother Burton, who had been quite sick for two weeks and whose condition is still serious. He is suffering with neuritis, which causes him considerable pain, and his improvement has been very slow. But he is cheerful and hopeful, and is being shown every possible attention by the people who seem thoroughly devoted to him. Let the brethren pray that he may be speedily restored to health.

At the evening hour it was again our pleasure to preach to a fine audience. Our new church in Gulfport is a thing of beauty. Indeed, we do not know of a house of worship in Mississippi that is superior to it, either in appearance or in completeness of equipment. The architectural design is admirable, the materials used in its construction are of a superior quality, and it seemed to us to be unmarred by a single defect of any kind. The main auditorium is especially fine. It is circular in form, has a gallery extending nearly entirely around it, and is surmounted by a splendid dome that is ornamented by impressive Biblical scenes and suitable inscriptions. Its seating capacity without bringing the side rooms into requisition is about 800, and with them in use, about 1500. There is a superb assembly room for the Sunday school and eighteen classrooms, some of which are very large. The cost of this edifice, including the lot, was about $48,000, and all this amount has been provided for except about $10,000. Its erection was a great achievement, and too much cannot be said in praise of those who have brought this splendid enterprise to completion. The people give the chief credit to Brother Burton, who is universally beloved and of whose work we heard enthusiastic commendation on every side.

Methodism in Gulfport is virile, alert, and growing. Our First Church has a membership of approximately 600, which embraces many of the leading business men of the city, and many active and faithful workers. The Sunday school is one of the best organized in the State. It has an enrollment of about 400, and a regular attendance ranging from 300 to 350. We also have in the city another live church—Twenty-eighth Street, of which Rev. W. T. Griffin is the pastor—and the Seamen's Bethel, which is doing a great work. It made us really proud to see our Church in the forefront in looking after the sailors who come to this excellent port from all parts of the world. This field of service has not been left entirely to us, however. The Norwegian Lutherans have also established a mission in the place and are, to some extent, sharing the honors with us. But Southern Methodism, under the efficient superintendency of Dr. W. H. Huntley, the capable presiding elder, is leading all the other Protestant denominations in the work along the gulf coast. It was to us a matter of genuine regret that we did not get to see Dr. Huntley on this visit; but his name was not forgotten in the circles that we touched, and it was evident that his impress was upon the community. After our strenuous Sabbath in this progressive young city by the sea and the unpleasant experience of hustling out of bed at the first flush of the dawn on Monday to catch an early train, we were soon back at home and pegging away at the hum-drum task of getting out another issue of the Advocate. Such is the glory of being an editor.

A PHILOSOPHER.

The following from The Weekly Witness (New York) is quite pithy and suggestive:

"Query: If lawyers' fees and court costs make it more profitable for a man to surrender his rights than to protect them, what is the use of having laws to protect property rights?"

"Here is a pointer on this subject from the Atchison Globe:

"When asked why he didn't go into court over a horse that was stolen from him and sold to John Carter, Jack Spencer said: 'I paid $101 to Mr. Carter to avoid a lawsuit. A man loses even when he wins a lawsuit.'"

So, for more reasons than one, it seems that there is wisdom in that clause in our General Rules which enjoins one brother not to go to law with another.

SOME WHO NEED TO GROW IN GRACE.

The Editor of the Louisiana Democrat manifestly believes in a practical Christianity. In a recent issue of his paper he says, "The people who need more religion are: The man who lets his horse stand all day in the rain without a blanket; the man who growls like a beast with a sore head when his wife asks him for money; the woman who whispers it around that some one else is not just what she ought to be, the preacher who is always looking for an easier place and a higher salary; the man who walks the streets with his hands in his pockets while his wife carries the baby, and the man who keeps a dog and says he can't afford the home paper."

Our confrere should have added one other person to this interesting group—the church member whose center-table is loaded down with all kinds of trashy literature, but who is too poor to subscribe to his denominational organ.

PERSONAL AND OTHER NOTES.

Rev. J. I. Hoffpauir, presiding elder of the Lafayette District, requests us to state that hereafter his address will be Rayne, La., instead of Indian Bayou, La.

We are indebted to Rev. C. H. Ellis, of Moscow, Miss., for a club of five subscribers, forwarded on the 14th inst. It is the habit of this faithful pastor to look carefully after all the interests of the Church.

The address of Rev. W. T. Woodward is still Sicily Island, La.

Rev. L. A. McKeown, of Byhalia, Miss., favored us a few days since with a club of six subscribers. He has our hearty thanks for looking after the interests of the Conference organ among his parishioners.

Rev. and Mrs. E. N. Evans, who for a number of years have been residents of New Orleans, are spending the winter at the Seashore Camp Ground. They attended services at the First Methodist Church of Gulfport last Sunday evening.

Rev. J. E. Craig, of Chatham, La., in a note to the Editor, says: "I have made about half a round on my new charge. I find that there are some excellent people on this work. I have long and muddy roads to travel to reach my preaching places, but am well pleased so far."

Rev. J. W. Ramsey, of Mendenhall, Miss., was heartily welcomed upon his re-assignment to that charge, and many things of a substantial nature have found their way to the parsonage since Conference. All the signs are auspicious for a successful year within the bounds of this growing work.

Under date of the 16th inst., Rev. W. F. McCrory, of Marksville, La., wrote as follows: "I have reached my new field of labor and I find things in a very good condition. Peace and harmony are reigning among us, and many of the people seem burdened for the unsaved. We are hopeful of accomplishing much for the Master this year."

In forwarding us some subscriptions from his charge, Rev. B. P. Fullilove, of Rienzi, Miss., says: "The outlook is very promising with us. We have many things to encourage us." It is not surprising that the work has opened well in Brother Fullilove's new field. He generally brings things to pass wherever he labors.

Rev. A. H. Williams, of Shannon, Miss., sends us the following note: "Married, on Dec. 28, 1913, on the highway, at the 'White Hills,' near Shannon, Miss., by Rev. A. H. Williams, Mr. Alex Stewart and Miss Yeddie Griffin, both of Lee County, Miss. This was a novel, but all right, wedding, and I hope for these noble Christian young people a great future."

Bishop W. B. Murrah occupied the pulpit of the First Methodist Church of Gulfport, Miss., both in the morning and evening on Sunday, January 11. It scarcely needs to be said that he delivered two impressive and helpful sermons. The Bishop has been kept quite busy since his return from the Orient, and is making his influence widely felt in his home State.

Brother J. W. Thomas, of Shelby, Miss., in renewing his subscription to the Advocate, speaks encouragingly of conditions in the upper Mississippi Delta. We thank him for an invitation to attend the dedication of our attractive new church in that little city when it takes place. The date when it will thus be formally set apart to sacred uses has not yet been determined.

Rev. W. B. Waldrop, of Braxton, Miss., says: "This is rather early to have made a round on a charge consisting of seven appointments, but this I have been able to do by starting to work on the third Sunday in December. I have been given a very cordial welcome at every preaching place. There is plenty of hard work to do in this field, but I am pleased with the outlook."

Rev. J. Lloyd Decell, of Waynesboro, Miss., says: "We are happily situated on our new work, and the outlook for a successful year is most hopeful." We are indebted to Brother Decell for a very interesting account of the recent District Stewards' and Pastors' Meeting of the Meridian District, which reached us too late for this issue of the Advocate, but which will appear next week.

A press dispatch from Crowley, La., to the Picayune on Jan. 18 reads as follows: "Rev. A. W. Turner, Secretary of the Anti-Saloon League, spoke here to-night. All the Protestant churches suspended their services, so as to give their members the privilege of attending. An earnest effort is being made in this parish to develop another general movement against the liquor traffic."

From Mount Olive, Miss., Brother H. R. Caldwell writes as follows: "My general health is good, but I am feeble in strength. I am now in my eightieth year. We live among as choice people as can be found anywhere; they are indeed very kind and thoughtful of us." We are pleased to have this cheerful message from this worthy veteran, and we pray he may have increasing light as the even-tide wanes.

Rev. J. A. Bowen, writing from Enterprise, Fla., states that the beautiful Epworth Inn at that place will give to all ministers and missionary workers a special rate of $1 a day during the Bible Conferences to be held there Jan. 16-25 and Feb. 1-10. We do not doubt that Christian workers who wish to have a brief season of rest and study where the winter climate is delightful would find it pleasant and profitable to attend either of these meetings.

We acknowledge the reception of an invitation from Mr. and Mrs. L. B. Hines of Clay, La., to the marriage of their sister, Miss Minnie Hines, to Rev. R. W. Tucker, which took place on January 7, 1914. The bride is said to be a most superior woman, and Brother Tucker, who is at present stationed at Leesville, is one of the most worthy and useful members of the Louisiana Conference. We join their many friends in extending to them our hearty congratulations and best wishes.

From the Donaldsonville (La.) Chief of December 17, we take the following: "Dr. J. M. Henry, presiding elder of the New Orleans District, conducted services at the local Methodist church last Sunday forenoon and delivered a scholarly and forceful sermon, which was greatly enjoyed by the large and appreciative congregation. Rev. T. D. Lipscomb, the pastor, officiated at the services in the evening and preached in his usual vigorous and interesting manner."

We are in receipt of the following note, bearing date of Jan. 15, from Rev. James V. Bennett, of Monticello, Miss.: "Methodism here sustained a severe loss yesterday morning when the spirit of Dr. Jerre B. Cotton (a dentist) took its flight. He was about 22 or 23 years of age. He was carried to Brookhaven about the middle of the night before his decease, where it was thought the special treatment that he needed would be available. But, alas! the Father said, 'It is enough.' We regret to be informed of the decease of this worthy young man, and we extend to the bereaved our sympathy."

Representatives of the Gideons are in New Orleans and are addressing themselves to the task of placing Bibles in the rooms of all the leading hotels of the city. At a meeting of the Protestant Ministers' Association last Monday night this movement was strongly endorsed, and a resolution was passed calling for a mass meeting of all pastors, Sunday school superintendents, and representatives of fraternal bodies on next Monday at 10 a.m., at the Y. M. C. A. building, for the purpose of planning a "Gideon's Day" in all the churches. It is probable that a parade to be participated in by all denominations will be arranged in connection with this work.

Mr. James Z. George, Jr., spent several days in New Orleans last week and paid our office an appreciated call. He is the son of the late Mr. A. H. George, of Carrollton, Miss., and a grandson of United States Senator J. Z. George. Mr. George is a civil engineer, and has the distinction of being a member of the American Society of Civil Engineers. He is at present employed by the Alabama Power Company, which is erecting near Clanton, Ala., a huge hydro-electric power plant for the purpose of supplying Birmingham, Gadsden, Talladega, and other near-by points with electricity. Mr. George, as was his father, is a loyal Methodist and takes an interest in all the work of the Church.

The reception tendered Dr. and Mrs. Werlein by the congregation of the First Methodist Church of this city last Monday evening was quite an interesting and enjoyable occasion. The meeting was presided over by Mr. W. W. Carré, who first introduced Rev. Felix R. Hill, Jr., who on behalf of the ministers of the city extended a felicitous greeting to Dr. and Mrs. Werlein, and the same service was performed for the laity by Dr. Luther Sexton. To these addresses of welcome Dr. Werlein made a very happy response. Among those in attendance were Dr. George Summey and Dr. J. C. Barr of the Presbyterian Church and one of the Jewish rabbis of the city. After the exercises were over light refreshments were served and a delightful social hour was enjoyed.

Rev. J. L. Neill, pastor of the First Methodist Church of Laurel, Miss., writes: "The indications point to the best year's work that we have ever had. The congregations continue to grow larger. We had a packed house yesterday morning, Jan. 11. This is indeed a fine people. The pastor's salary this year has been fixed at $1800, an increase of $600 over last year. We also have an increase of $30 in our assessment for the presiding elder and of $105 in our apportionment of the connectional claims. The Sunday school is growing; it has accepted for this year a $300 special for the Huchow Hospital. Dr. E. H. Moulton and Rev. C. C. Evans have been at their posts for some weeks. They both were given a royal reception, and the outlook in their charges is encouraging."

Rev. J. M. Morse, the efficient pastor of our Capitol Street Church, of Jackson, Miss., writes enthusiastically of the prospects in his fine field. He says: "The outlook is bright for the most successful year in the history of this congregation. Our board of stewards, than whom no larger-hearted set of men can anywhere be found, are standing loyally by the pastor in every enterprise. We will dedicate our new church free of debt in the fall. Twelve members have been received since Conference. The Sunday school, led by Mr. I. C. Enochs and Mr. C. R. Ridgeway, is making splendid progress. Miss Vida Gilleylan, the very efficient president of our Epworth League, together with her associates, is planning for more work and a greater League. Our men's class, numbering 140, under the leadership of Prof. O. H.

Wingfield, is doing the best work since its organization. Our Woman's Missionary Society has enthusiastically adopted the tithing system. The president, Mrs. Wood, has all her committees organized, and we expect all our ladies to become enlisted in this work."

CROWNED TEETOTALERS.

First and foremost there is the young and pleasure-loving King Alfonso, of Spain. Though fantastic stories have been published from time to time describing his alleged excesses when in his cups, as a matter of fact he does not drink wine or spirits, nor does his mother, Queen Christina.

King Ferdinand, of Bulgaria, forswore beer, wine liquors and stimulants of all kinds some years ago, on the advice of his clever mother, who he always declares was his most sagacious political adviser. Thanks perhaps to this policy his nerves are always under perfect control; he never loses his temper, never displays any signs of irritation under the most trying circumstances, and this gives him a tremendous advantage in dealing with the hotheaded races of the south-east of Europe.

Queen Emma, of Holland, is a blue ribboner, and she instilled her temperance ideas into the mind of Queen Wilhelmina. Neither the mother nor daughter touches any kind of liquor on any occasion.

The two queens of Sweden and King Gustavus Adolphus are all abstainers. At family dinners water and lime juice are the only beverages.

The Dowager Queen Sophia, of Sweden, is really the influence back of this temperance of the royal family, and no wine is ever served at her own table. She has for forty years been the most powerful supporter of the total abstinence movement in Scandinavia, and has devoted much of her wealth as well as her time and influence to the cause. Her favorite son, Oscar, who is the chief heir to her fortune, although he sacrificed his place in the line of succession to the throne to marry her maid of honor, has for several years been the president of the Total Abstinence Society of Sweden.

The Kaiser has done everything in his power to encourage temperance because, as he declares, "the next war will demand healthy men; war calls for strong nerves, and victory will crown the colors of the nation which consumes the least alcohol."—The Tribune.

IN HIS STEPS.

Some one said to Dean Stanley, who had just returned from the Holy Land: "That was a glorious privilege you had, Mr. Stanley, to walk in the very footsteps of Jesus Christ." "Yes," said Mr. Stanley, "it is always a glorious privilege everywhere to walk in the footsteps of Jesus Christ." The vision came to the young prophet Isaiah in the temple, who saw that the whole "earth is filled with the glory of God," and every place may be a holy place to the man who walks with God. We need not journey across the sea to find the footsteps of the Master, but here and there, in fact, wherever duty lies, may also be seen the blessed print of his feet.—Living Water.

JESSE LEE BRANNON was born at Jackson, La., on February 5, 1871, and died at his home in Shreveport, La., May 22, 1913. It was my privilege to be associated with Mr. Brannon for a short while before his death. I was given the joy of leading him to the Savior and receiving him into the Church before his death. He was a barber by trade also a fraternity man. He had many friends, a large number of whom followed him to his last resting place. He leaves a devoted wife, daughter and son to mourn his early demise. To his wife he was considerate, kind, and devoted. To his children he was that which only a loving parent could be. He was buried in Greenwood Cemetery and the mound was covered by the loveliest flowers of spring, which spoke of the true affection of his sorrowing friends. His pastor, T. J. McCOY.

The earthly pilgrimage of Mrs. ELIZABETH YELVERTON (nee Pickett) began at Pascagoula, Miss., June 20, 1835, and ended Nov. 1, 1913, at the home of her granddaughter, Mrs. J. W. Read of Wool Market, Miss. She was of that true type of Southern womanhood of ante-bellum days whose ranks, like their comrades in arms, are fast thinning. She joined the M. E. Church, South, at the age of 20 years, and lived therein until her translation to the Church triumphant. She gave evidence of her peace with God. Being her pastor two years, I learned she was the preacher's friend. She was hospitable and careful to make home pleasant; the happiness of others was considered before her own; she loved little children, and was attentive to the sick and needy. Her husband's death preceded her own only a short while. She leaves to mourn her departure, a sister, Miss Alice Pickett of Wool Market, a daughter, Mrs. Eleanor Myers, of Gulfport, and several grandchildren. We shall miss her but we hope to meet again. We bow in submission to the will of our heavenly Father. We would not call her back. The toils and sorrows of life are o'er and she is at rest with God, "in whose presence is fullness of joy, at whose right hand there are pleasures forever more." Her cousin, R. T. PICKETT.

A NOTE FROM BROTHER CURRIE.

Dear Brother Meek: On December 27, I left home for this place, Piedmont, S. C., where I began a meeting on Sunday, Dec. 29, at the 11 o'clock hour. Our God has given us a great victory in Jesus' name. Drunkards have been converted to God and infidels have given their hearts to him. The power of God has been very great at times. This is the third week of the meeting, but the people don't want it to stop. Oh, I wish our people down there in Louisiana could see these women wrap up their babies and older children and put them in a wagon or buggy and bring them through the snow and cold to the meeting. The little fellows seem to enjoy it and so do the mothers. I know I like it. There is a song that runs: "It is better further on," and I believe it is. We had a great time last night. I don't know how long I will be out here. If any of the brethren want me, write me at Clinton, La. Don't wait for summer time to have a meeting. Now is the time to begin. God bless the Advocate.

In Jesus,
W. T. CURRIE.

FROM BROTHER NORSWORTHY.

Dear Doctor Meek: Here I am away up in the Ozark Mountains, conducting a meeting in the little city of Corridon, Missouri. The month of November, 1913, I spent very delightfully and profitably in Florida, the land of flowers and sunshine, conducting very successful meetings at Alton and Perry. Much of December was given to a glorious campaign in Greenville, Mo., and now I am assisting in a campaign here. In a few weeks I will be back in Mississippi, ready to aid any of the brethren who may desire my assistance. My address is Yazoo City, Miss.

You will be gratified, I am sure, Mr. Editor, to learn of the splendid outlook which Methodism has in Yazoo City. Brother Harmon was most graciously received by his congregation upon his re-appointment to the charge for the year 1914. He is planning, and most wisely I think, for a general forward movement in his charge. His congregations are always good and the prayer meetings are most delightful and largely attended. The outlook for First Church, Yazoo City, is encouraging.

Brother Frazier, the new pastor at Lintonia (a suburb of Yazoo City) has taken hold of the difficult situation there, and has won all hearts. On the first Sunday morning of the new year, the writer had the privilege of preaching for this congregation, and at night at First Church. Brother Hardin, our presiding elder, is abundant in labors and greatly beloved in this end of the district.

With all good wishes for you, Mr. Editor, and for the readers of your good paper, I am, sincerely,

THOS. J. NORSWORTHY
Corridon, Mo.

NOT EVIL.

Let us cultivate and reverently cherish the honest indignations of our nature, for they are the life and fire that is in us. God has given them, and the man is most happy who has them the warmest, the truest, the least wrenched by prejudice, the least dulled by sense and sin.—Phillips Brooks.

Tidings From the Field

Topisaw, Miss.

My heart is rejoicing over the fact that the Lord is blessing us greatly in the Topisaw charge; especially is he blessing us in the work of the Sunday school, to rehabilitate which an earnest effort is now being put forth. In making my first round since Conference I found evidences on every side of victory among those of the household of faith, and while there are hindrances and opposition from the ranks of the enemy, we feel confident of a glorious victory throughout the year. Amen!—J. A. Wells.

Melville, La.

We arrived here on the last day of December, 1913, and were met at the train by Dr. Joseph, who is one of the stewards of the church, and were taken to the parsonage where we found a good fire. A very fine old Christian lady awaited us. As it was almost night, this good woman carried us off to dine with her, which we were glad to do. Then, on New Year's night the members of the congregation gave us a small "pounding;" this, of course, was very much appreciated. I want to ask the readers of the Advocate to pray for me and my people, that this may be a fruitful year in this part of the vineyard.

Yours in Christ,

C. B. POWELL, P. C.

Central Church, Columbus, Miss.

Dear Dr. Meek: Enclosed I send you a list of 12 new subscribers and 2 renewals, and will send several more soon. I am making a house-to-house canvass for our Advocate and I hope to get this splendid church paper into every home in my charge. Our work in Central Church is starting off splendidly. We are now moving every stone to pay for our new lot and we intend to begin the new building just as soon as we free the lot of debt. Our Sunday school is numerically almost double what it was last year at this time, and is growing in numbers and interest every Sunday. We have one of the finest superintendents and some of the finest teachers in the State. We have a fine Senior League and a splendid Juvenile Missionary Society, and our Woman's Missionary work is doing more than ever in its history. We have a big task on our hands and we need your prayers and help in every way. May God bless you.—J. H. Bass.

Fernwood, Miss.

Last Saturday we held our first quarterly meeting. All three of the churches composing the charge were represented and the reports were the best it has ever been my privilege to have at a first quarterly conference. The Fernwood church reported quarterage paid up to date, or rather for the first quarter, and the conference collections paid in full for the year. The other two places made good reports and everything seems to be in first-class condition. We will dedicate the new church at Kokomo (built during the latter end of last year under the pastorate of Brother W. B. Hogg) some time in the early part of the year; and we will build a new church at Knoxo during the year, and add largely to our church at this place for the accommodation of the Sunday school. With a band of men like these to stand by the church with their means and their lives, one feels like something can be accomplished. Brother Selby, our presiding elder, gives careful attention to all the interests of the church, and draws the laymen and pastor into closer sympathy with each other and the Church. On Sunday at 11 a. m. he preached a strong sermon on the use of money, and how to pay what we owe the Lord. The sermon produced a good impression on all the congregation and provoked many expressions of hearty commendation. Such preaching will surely result in good to the cause. Dr. C. F. Reid was present at our quarterly meeting on Saturday and made this remark to the pastor after the conference was over: "If all the presiding elders in the Church would give the attention and careful consideration to the cause that yours does, and if all the charges would pay up as yours does, the Board of Missions could put at least ten new missionaries into the field without increasing the assessment one cent. It was one of the best quarterly meetings it has ever been my pleasure to attend." Dr. Reid took a day off and spent the time with us and was carried out to see the country surrounding Fernwood, and to Magnolia and McComb.—W. H. Saunders.

Flora, Miss.

Our first quarterly conference on the Flora Circuit was held on the 14th inst. Every church was represented. Brother Hardin was present and in fine spirits. He presided with dignity and showed his interest in the work. The stewards made a splendid report and are very jubilant over the outlook for the Flora charge. Our women were out in numbers and are much interested in the work of the Church. They have a splendid Missionary Society, and we also have a Senior and Junior League. The people here can not be excelled for their love and loyalty to their pastor and Church. Bentonla is certainly one of the most liberal churches I have seen and the people at that point are also hospitable and good to their pastor. We are looking for good results there. Livingston, though it is small in numbers, has perhaps the pluckiest band of all. The preacher and his family were never more comfortable and happy. Through the help of our heavenly Father, we hope to repay these people for their kindness to us. I shall try to look diligently after every interest of the Church. I hope that you will give us in your paper the full statistics of churches gotten out by H. K. Carroll.

I am glad to see communications like those of Brother Sharbrough. What we believe, and why, should be set forth clearly in our paper. Our people want to know about baptism, close communion, and the heresy that past, present and future sins are atoned for in regeneration, which is being preached all over the country. The teachings that God is not the father of children and should not be taught the Lord's prayer; that the Roman Catholic and Missionary Baptists are the only two real Churches, one standing at one extreme and the other at the opposite; and that all are bound to sin, and that God will burn up an individual's sins, but save him, also needs to be combated. I believe that the vicious doctrines that are being preached are largely the cause of the condition of our State to-day.

The use of our paper this year to confute these errors would I think do much good.—M. L. White.

The Sunday School.

LOUISIANA NOTES.

A Statement.

The Sunday School Board of the Louisiana Annual Conference, meeting at Crowley in December, decided, on account of the severe financial strain and the depleted condition of its treasury department, to retire its Field Secretary, Rev. P. O. Lowrey. Accordingly, Brother Lowrey was assigned a pastoral charge.

Brother Lowrey has been conducting in an efficient manner the Louisiana Conference part of the Sunday School Department in the New Orleans Christian Advocate. At Conference the Sunday School Board thought as it was not able to maintain Brother Lowrey as its Field Secretary that it would not impose upon him the task of writing for the paper each week. Accordingly I was asked to write these notes for the Advocate.

After Conference, however, in thinking the matter over I saw it would be quite a task for a new man to take immediate hold. I wrote Brother Lowrey and asked him, that since he was so successfully doing this work and knew how to gather the Sunday school news from experience, if he would not continue to write this column. After some hesitation he has kindly consented to do so, provided a full explanation be made in the Advocate.

I therefore offer this statement of explanation, and ask that our pastors, superintendents, and officers in the Sunday school work co-operate heartily with Brother Lowrey in this matter and send him all the news that will be interesting to the public for this column. His address, as most of us know already, is Kentwood, La.

C. A. BATTLE.

MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE NOTES.

By R. A. Maddox.

The Teacher-training Class at Purvis is doing good work, they have finished one book, and are working on the second. They can finish the course this year.

Honestly, are you as a teacher doing the very best for your pupils? Do you always know your lesson? Have your pupils found out that you love them?

Have you a definite plan for looking after missing pupils? The cashier of the bank must show vouchers for all the missing money. Let us show vouchers for the absentees in our Sunday schools.

The superintendent and teacher should look ahead. The bicycle rider who looks at the ground his wheel is going over, invites disaster, and it comes—he soon goes into the ditch. Sometimes we find a Sunday school in the ditch.

Mr. Superintendent: If you need teachers in your Sunday school, train them, by organizing the young people from 16 to 25 years of age into a Teacher-training Class. This class can use the Sunday school hour for recitation in the place of the Sunday school lesson. In twelve months they will finish the first, or Legion of Honor Course. Try this.

The Field Secretary has just returned from a tour of two weeks, visiting Purvis, Lumberton, Natchez, and Rockie, having splendid success at each place. Lumberton is planning a Teacher-training Class of Young people in the Legion of Honor Course.

The schools at Pearl Street, Natchez, and at Rockie will take on new life.

Honor Roll.

Purvis Sunday school is on the Honor Roll. They have paid their 5c assessment, and $2.15 over. Who will be the next?

NEWS AND NOTES.

By Miss Elizabeth Kilpatrick.

The Durant Sunday school has 150 members, 18 on the Cradle Roll, 40 in the Home Department, is graded, and is planning for a Workers' Council. Mr. Coffey Mayfield is organizing a Young Men's Bible Class, which will doubtless be very helpful to all the school.

The Brooksville Sunday school has a commendable record. In a church of 150 members there are 120 in the Sunday school, 15 on the Cradle Roll and 5 in the Home Department, and the school is graded. This school has been doing unusually good work for some time.

Look at that teacher with a class of eight, when by using his eyes and brain he could have a class of twenty-eight or even eighty. No, this is not fairy talk; this has been done in thousands of adult classes where the difficulties in the way were as big and as bad as any could well be.

Okolona has a full report: 200 Sunday school pupils, 35 on the Cradle Roll, a small Home Department; a graded school, and a Workers' Council. Every school would double its efficiency not only in its teaching force, but in its results as well, if a Workers' Council should be organized.

"GET TOGETHER" is the slogan of the day in commercial, industrial, social and educational circles, and after all is there anything better? This is the idea we seek to introduce into religious circles when we urge the organization of men's and women's classes. The plan looks good in theory, is sound in principle, and is practicable.

Tupelo has a most unusual record: 535 church members and 785 in the Sunday school. There are 68 on the Cradle Roll, 8 organized Teen Age Classes, and 3 organized Adult Classes, headed by the great Alpha Wesley Class. The school is graded and a Workers' Council lends its aid to Mr. Ledyard's efficient and resourceful teachers.

Dr. Porter's Sunday school record, at the Water Valley, Main Street Church, is among the best along the line of numbers. There are 120 on the church roll and 169 in Sunday school; they have three organized Adult Classes and four organized Teen Age Classes. Rev. W. J. O'Bryant has been emphasizing the Sunday school work for sometime, with good results.

"Don't treat the class organization idea like a seed of dandelion which, if dropped carelessly in any kind of soil will bring forth results, thirty, sixty, or a hundred fold. This is a lazy man's way and will bring no returns. Organization is not a weed to be thus treated. Rather give it the same careful attention the farmer gives his corn and you will have occasion to rejoice."

Miss Daniels, Corinth's capable and appreciated Deaconess, has taken charge of a mixed class at Southside. She has 16 in the class. "True Blue" is its name, "In honor preferring one another" its motto; the officers are Sam Richardson, President; Irene Madden, First Vice-President, and Mary Davis, Secretary and Treasurer. They have all the necessary committees appointed; and all arrangements made to screen their church in order to give separate classrooms. They have their social meetings at Friendship House, with Miss Daniels as leader.

Rev. V. C. Curtis, is doing good work for the Sunday School Board. On last week he spent Thursday in Corinth, spoke at Shuqualak, Friday night, at Artesia, Saturday afternoon, and at Mayhew at 11 o'clock on Sunday; drove out to Curtis' Chapel 4 miles distant in the afternoon and spoke to a full house, and addressed the young people at night at Mayhew. He then spent one day in Grenada, his home, and was off to the District Stewards' meeting of the Aberdeen District the next morning. Mr. Curtis has been very busy along these lines ever since Conference.

PIANOS THAT ALL CAN PLAY.

The invention and perfecting of the Ludden & Bates Player-Piano, the Piano that everyone can play no matter whether they have ever studied music or not, has increased the usefulness of the Piano ten fold and more, for it enables every member of the family to produce and enjoy the finest music. It also cultivates the taste for good music. The Player-Piano is the greatest of all entertainers and is indispensable to the Twentieth Century home.

Write for your copy of the catalogue of the New Orleans Christian Advocate Piano Club and see how easy and convenient we have made it for you to secure a high grade Piano or Player-Piano. Address the Managers, Ludden & Bates, New Orleans Christian Advocate Piano Club Dept., Atlanta, Ga.—Adv.

NOT A DAY IN BED.

Gramling, S. C.—In a letter from Gramling, Mrs. Lula Walden says: "I was so weak before I began taking Cardui, that it tired me to walk just a little. Since taking it, I do all the housework for my family of nine, and have not been in bed a day. Cardui is the greatest remedy for women on earth." Weak women need Cardui. It is the ideal woman's tonic, because it is especially adapted for women's needs. It relieves backache, headache, dragging feelings, and other female misery. Try Cardui. A few doses will show you what it can do for you. It may be just what you want.

in men and things, but there is one thing that has remained the same for nearly a century—that's Gray's Ointment, the great preventive of blood poison and remedy for boils, bruises, burns, carbuncles, ulcers, old sores, etc., originated in 1820 by Dr. W. W. Gray. Family pride in maintaining its high curative powers and standard of excellence has kept it unchanged, and it is today what it was 93 years ago—the best remedy in the world for skin troubles. Get Rid of Pimples---Quick

By Using Stuart's Calcium Wafers—
 Natural Little Blood Purifiers
 That Work Like a Charm.

Don't despair if your face is covered with pimples, blotches, liver spots, or your body is covered in spots with tetter, rash, boils, etc. Just use Stuart's Calcium Wafers for a short time and see how quickly you will clear up your skin.

"It is Simply a Constant Joy to be Rid of Those Horrible Pimples."

Pimples and eruptions of all kinds come from the inside. The blood casts out the impurities it contains and thus pimples, boils, etc., appear. Cleanse the blood, stop the poison from developing in the blood tissues and pimples will vanish as if by magic.

Stuart's Calcium Wafers contain in a natural manner the greatest blood purifier—Calcium Sulphide.

Calcium Sulphide and the other ingredients of these remarkable little wafers are just what impure blood needs. You must know that the blood is rushing through your veins very fast. It takes less than a minute for our blood to cover the entire body.

You can thus readily see that Stuart's Calcium Wafers, when they enter the body, have an almost instant effect upon all impurities no matter where located, whether it be the tip of the nose or the ends of the toes.

By the use of Stuart's Calcium Wafers your complexion will take on a fresher hue and a more natural series of tints than ever before.

Impure blood is blue or black. Purify it and it becomes ruby red. This color showing beneath the skin is the secret of all beautiful complexions.

Stuart's Calcium Wafers are sold by all druggists everywhere. Price 50 cents a box.

LETTER FROM BROTHER HARRIS.

Dear Brother Meek: For the past two years I have been a supernumary member of Central Texas Conference. At my request Bishop Atkins has just written me transferring me back to the North Mississippi Conference. As most of my effective ministry has been in North Mississippi, I trust that the brethren of that Conference will agree with me that this is the proper step.

I shall ever appreciate the fact that the Board of Finance of the Central Texas Conference have been very considerate. At their hands I have received the kindest treatment. I desire, just here, also to gratefully record the fact that during these two years many friends in Mississippi and some in Texas, have remembered us most kindly in a personal and substantial way.

Now the thing that I regret to say, and hesitate to say, and yet feel that perhaps I ought to say, is this: notwithstanding all of this kindness, on account of the necessarily heavy expense of renting a house, and supporting, in the most economical way, my large family, I have become badly involved in debt. Really, I need $200 just at this time to meet obligations now due. If among my friends, there are those who are disposed to help me, and that are able to do so conveniently, I will very much appreciate their help. With this $200 out of the way, I feel that with the help of the children, who are getting to where they can assist some, I can a little later begin to pay my other debts.

Now let me ask that if any one reads this, and thinks it ought not to have been written, that he will kindly forgive me this blunder. Somehow I felt that I ought to let my friends know the situation. My wife's health is still not at all good. Personally, I am doing very well, but I shall need to be very careful of my health for at least another year.

W. C. HARRIS.

ROSY AS A GIRL.

Summit, N. C.—In a letter received from this place, Mr. J. W. Church, the notary public, says: "My wife had been ailing for nearly 12 years, from female ailments, and at times, was unable to leave the house. She suffered agony with her side and back. We tried physicians for years, without relief. After these treatments all failed, she took Cardui, and gained in weight at once. Now she is red and rosy as a school girl." Cardui, as a tonic for women, has brought remarkable results. It relieves pain and misery and is the ideal tonic for young and old. Try it. At druggists.

PORT GIBSON DISTRICT.

The district stewards, lay leaders and pastors of the Port Gibson District will please meet in the Methodist Church in Port Gibson at 7 p.m., January 27. The meeting will continue overnight and a good part of the following day. Let us have a full attendance. Pastors are urged to be present. Dr. Holloman will make ample provision for the entertainment of all. Come praying for the presence of the Holy Spirit. T. W. ADAMS, P. E.

YOU WILL WRITE A LETTER LIKE THIS

I wish that I knew which one of the thousands of letters I receive would have the most weight with you, my friend. I can't quote all of them here, but I am going to ask you to read this one carefully and then give me a chance to make you write me one very much like it. Here is the letter:

701 Barnard Street,

Savannah, Ga., Dec. 28, 1910.

Mr. N. F. Shivar, Shelton, S. C.: Dear Sir—As you are aware, in 1909, I was suffering with indigestion, stomach and liver disorders, and all its train of horrifying phenomena for several months. I had lived on milk, soft eggs, shredded wheat, a very insufficient diet for an active working man, and, of course, from disease and starvation, was in a very low state of nervous vitality and general debility. I ordered ten gallons of your Mineral Water, which I used continuously, reordering when necessary, and in four months from date I began drinking it gained twenty-nine pounds, was strong and perfectly well, and have worked practically every day since. It acts as general renovator of the system. I prescribe it in my practice, and it has in every instance had the desired effects. It is essential to use this water in as large quantities as possible, for its properties are so happily blended and in such proportion that they will not disturb the most delicate system. It is purely Nature's remedy.

A. L. R. AVANT, M.D.

This is not a selected case, nor is the result unusual. It is only one of the thousands I receive. They come from physicians, ministers, lawyers, merchants, farmers, manufacturers, and every conceivable profession. I want the satisfaction of receiving such a letter from you. No matter what your complaint may be, dyspepsia, indigestion, rheumatism, gall stones, kidney or liver disease, or any chronic ailment due to impure blood. I invite you to match your faith in the Spring against my pocketbook. If the water fails to benefit you simply say so, return the empty demijohns and I will promptly and willingly refund your money—every cent. Sign below: Shivar Spring.

Box 17 B, Shelton, S. C.

Gentlemen: I accept your guarantee offer and enclose herewith two dollars for ten gallons of Shivar Mineral Water. I agree to give it a fair trial, in accordance with instructions contained in booklet you will send, and if the results are not satisfactory to me you agree to refund the price in full upon receipt of the two empty demijohns, which I agree to return promptly.

WOMAN'S MISSIONARY WORK.

The real emergency is in the United States rather than in China—the emergency which calls us to seize for God the marvelous opportunities he is placing before us. We need to rise to a realization of the fact that our missions are not small and feeble, but powerful in their influence upon the national life of China.—Bishop Graves of Shanghai.

MARY BLACK HOSPITAL.

The past year has been a busy one in the Mary Black Hospital, in Soochow. Many patients have been turned away for lack of room, and yet the number is larger than the previous year. Every bed is occupied and major operations are performed every week. The Chinese nurses are getting plenty of practical experience and meet well the responsibility placed upon them. The work is being better done because of the trained nurses, and our hospital is considered better kept and more up-to-date than any hospital in the interior. Some who have visited hospitals in many parts of China say that ours is the best in China outside of Shanghai.

The cost of keeping up this Hospital.

Dr. Margaret Polk who is in charge of our work at this hospital writes: "The expense of the year (1912) has been rather alarming; but when it is remembered that the hospital and two schools are included and that we have housed, fed, clothed (the hospital furnishes clothing for all ward patients and uniforms for nurses), furnished bedding, all medicines and laundry, as well as fuel and light for six hundred and twenty-five sick people, two schools, and all the helpers; that the salaries of foreign help for half the year and Chinese helpers and servants for a full year are included; that we have put in some waterworks, some electric lights, bought new operating room furniture, a new expensive throat and nose apparatus; furnished four new bedrooms and three school rooms; built a new kitchen, dining room, bathroom, coal house, and porch; laid some new pavements in yard and on street, and bought new books for the library, it will not be difficult to know how we used more than ten thousand Mexican dollars and find ourselves a little in debt at the end of the year." The difficult part to understand is how so much was accomplished with that amount.

An interesting Ward Case.

Miss Mary Culler White has charge of the evangelistic work done in connection with the hospital work. Many and varied are her experiences with the patients in the wards. She tells of one girl whom the Door of Hope rescued and turned into a probationer. She went to the hospital and was told she could remain there as long as she should live. Five months she lingered in the midst of great suffering; but in spite of the suffering, she rescued a fellow patient who was afterward sent to the Door of Hope. On Chinese New Year day this first girl was baptized and received into the Church. "Although very weak and unable to rise from her bed, she led in a prayer which could be distinctly heard all over the ward. Twelve days later she passed into heaven with words of triumph and of exhortation on her lips. The exhortations were directed toward a fellow patient who had been extremely kind to her. This patient in turn has now been baptized and is working earnestly among the patients who are in the same ward with her." This girl's father, after having placed her in the hospital announced that he was unable to pay her bills and that he would not return to take her out so she belongs to the hospital. She is now earning her living by serving for the hospital.

MISSIONARY LITERATURE.

Magnify the literature. It is prepared at great cost of time and money and sent forth with prayer. Use it in connection with the programs, so that its message shall reach the women who attend the meetings and carry it personally to those who do not attend. It will be a lost force unless used.

KOREA—THE QUAINTEST COUNTRY.

The many reforms which the Japanese have introduced into Korea since their annexation of the country after the Russo-Japanese war, have made little if any impress upon its ancient and old world traditions. The "Land of the Morning Calm" remains to-day the quaintest country on the face of the globe, a country full of picturesque people, with many strange and curious customs.

This is more than wonderful when we remember all that Japan has done to modernize and develop this country. All the principal Korean cities contain large settlements of the Japanese. Wide streets, fine buildings and up-to-date shops mark all the places which they have invaded; but the moment you get away from these purely foreign quarters you are in old Korea where everything is as quaint and non-progressive as it is possible to imagine.

Seoul with its broad streets, electric trains, electric lights and modern buildings still possesses this old world atmosphere. "The Korean still appears in public in the costume of his ancestors, the kaftan—a flowing white robe of linen, surmounted by an absurd-looking black horsehair top hat. The custom which allows the women of the upper classes to take out-door exercise only at night is still observed, though men are no longer excluded from the streets at such hours, as was the case before the coming of the Japanese. The natives still worship the god of the mountains, and every village and mountain pass boasts of its shrine, where sacrifices are offered."

ALLIGATOR AUXILIARY.

North Mississippi Conference.

Alligator comes to the front with a splendid report for the year 1913. Mrs. Burbridge says: "We have eighteen members enrolled, three new ones for this year. Our collections are fairly good. We sent our pledge of ten dollars to Mrs. Wilburn. Have also sent $2.00 to Scarritt Bible and Training School. Our Week of Prayer collection was $7.50. Our usual Thanksgiving box was sent to the Orphanage and $12.00 in money. Our contingent fund and all assessments are paid up to date. Our literature and Bulletins have been received promptly."

A STARTLING COMPARISON.

One and one-half billion dollars is spent annually in the United States in the unholy traffic in woman's life and virtue. Three hundred million dollars is spent annually by all Protestant Christians for their church work in this country.

LIVER PILLS

Ayer's Pills are liver pills. They increase the flow of bile, and the bile is Nature's great laxative. They also increase the flow of the digestive juices, and this brings prompt relief in cases of indigestion, dyspepsia, sour stomach. Sold for over 60 years. Ask your doctor about using them. Do as he says.

J. C. Ayer Co., Lowell, Mass.

Do you raise early or late potatoes?

There's a difference between early and late varieties that should be considered in fertilizing. For the early kind use 1,000 pounds per acre of a fertilizer containing 10%

POTASH

5% ammonia and 8% phosphoric acid. Under average conditions, 800 pounds of 3-6-8 is the most profitable for late crops. Some growers double these amounts, for they are convinced that Potash Pays.

Caution: Be sure your Potash for potatoes on heavy soil is in the form of Sulfate. Write for Potash prices and for Free books with formulas and directions. We sell any amount of Potash from a 200-pound bag up.

ARE AUTOMOBILES OF MORE VALUE THAN HUMAN SOULS?

It would seem so, for in 1912, $160,000,000 was invested in automobiles by Church members in the United States and Canada; while $11,600,000 was given by all Protestant Christians for Foreign Missions during the same year. "Will a man rob God?"

SPECIAL SCHOOL FOR FEEBLE-MINDED CHILDREN.

Parents and guardians of children of arrested mental development will be interested in the work of the Stewart Home and School, a private institution for the care and training of children of backward mental development. The School accepts children any age above five years and provides mental and physical training under teachers who have been specially trained for this particular class of work. Each child is under the daily supervision of a medical specialist who has devoted his entire professional life to the study of the physical and mental defects of these unfortunate children.

Home influences are thrown around each child and every means known to science is employed to develop them in mind and body to a point where they will be a pleasure both to their parents and to themselves.

The annual catalogue shows the splendid facilities afforded by the School and contains much information that will prove interesting and instructive to parents. Interested parties should address the Superintendent, Dr. John P. Stewart, Box 19, Farmdale, Ky.

Make This and Try It for Coughs

This Home-Made Remedy has no Equal for Prompt Results.

Mix one pint of granulated sugar with ½ pint of warm water, and stir for 2 minutes. Put 2½ ounces of Pinex (fifty cents' worth) in a pint bottle; then add the Sugar Syrup. Take a teaspoonful every one, two or three hours.

This simple remedy takes hold of a cough more quickly than anything else you ever used. Usually conquers an ordinary cough inside of 24 hours. Splendid, too, for whooping cough, spasmodic croup and bronchitis. It stimulates the appetite and is slightly laxative, which helps end a cough.

This makes more and better cough syrup than you could buy ready made for $2.50. It keeps perfectly and tastes pleasant.

Pinex is a most valuable concentrated compound of Norway white pine extract, and is rich in guaiacol and other natural pine elements which are so healing to the membranes. Other preparations will not work in this plan.

Making cough syrup with Pinex and sugar syrup (or strained honey) has proven so popular throughout the United States and Canada that it is often imitated. But the old, successful mixture has never been equaled.

A guaranty of absolute satisfaction, or money promptly refunded, goes with this preparation. Your druggist has Pinex or will get it for you. If not, send to The Pinex Co., Ft. Wayne, Ind.

NATCHITOCHES, LA.

I am delighted with my new field, and everything points to a good year. It is a great privilege to preach to the many young women who attend our church from the Normal school here; but it is also a great responsibility, and we hope to make their association with our church life here such, that when they go out into the world, as teachers and makers of homes, they shall carry with them the Christian idea of womanhood, thus making each life an uplifting force wherever they may go. Because of the fact that girls and boys come here from all parts of the State to attend the State Normal, our church here is in a peculiar sense the property of the whole Conference. Every presiding elder and every pastor in Louisiana should be deeply interested in the success of the church at this place, for there is hardly a district or a pastoral charge in the State that will not be made better or worse by these young men and women who will go into them as teachers and trainers of children. I ask for the co-operation of all the brethren in the work that we are trying to do here. We have just built a beautiful new church which makes it possible for us to more nearly measure up to the wonderful opportunity that God has given to us in Natchitoches. But this church is in debt, and the local congregation is small. Now, if there is any one, whom God has blessed with money and who wants to use part of it in a great and far-reaching work, we will give you the privilege of helping us cancel the debt on this church, which belongs to the whole State of Louisiana.

—F. M. Freeman, P. C.

SIDON, MISS.

Please give space in your good paper for the following account of our reception on arriving at Sidon, where we began a new year on a new charge. We had heard something of this good people through our friend, the former pastor, Rev. O. P. Armour, who wrought well here for the past two years, but we were hardly prepared for the generous, whole-hearted, wide-open reception we received. When we got off the train the ground was covered with men, women and children waiting to receive us and escort us to the parsonage, where were fires, a warm supper, prepared beds, and everything else necessary to make a family comfortable for the night. Also the larder was filled with good things enough to last for some time. The good ladies, led by Sister Armstad, the president of the society, had busied themselves for several days putting things in order, and since our coming, have continued to look after things that might be needed at the parsonage.

We are delighted with this nice little charge and expect a good year. Our charge consists of three good small towns—Sidon, Cruger, and Tchula—all on the Y. & M. V. R. R. We have a splendid board of stewards at each place that do not know what it is to fail in any kind of work for the Master, a good, loyal, and generous membership, and there are elect ladies not a few at each of these points. With such a constituency and co-workers, what preacher should fail? We are beginning a meeting at Sidon, and we want the prayers of the editor and the readers of the dear Advocate. May God bless the Advocate, the Editor and all its readers.—J. A. Poe.

SHANNON, MISS.

We are pleased at Shannon, and even delighted at some features of the situation here. We were most kindly received. A company of men and ladies met us at the train and we found preparations at the parsonage for immediate housekeeping. A table also was spread, laden with nice things to eat, and the rooms were comfortable, being fully warmed. The town has strength and resources, a fine school building, several churches, a number of splendid homes, and a "big trade." The country around classes with the best in Mississippi, being well improved, exceedingly fertile, and high and healthful. It rained during our first Sunday, but we had a good beginning at the Shannon church. At 2 p. m., four miles away, the funeral of Mr. Crawford Jackson, of Pleasant Grove was conducted. He was a worthy and honored churchman of this pastoral charge, and a citizen of prominence and long standing. The "church officials" have placed the salary somewhat in advance of previous figures. The Presiding Elder, Rev. J. W. Bell of Aberdeen, has been to see us for the first quarterly conference, the business session of which was very interesting, and his sermon of Sunday was well thought out and exceedingly instructive. Some light improvements were put on the parsonage and plans have been made to enlarge and further renovate, until the property shall be greatly increased in value, and made to better correspond with the select and roomy lot upon which it is located.

Rev. J. G. Johnson, my worthy successor at Black Hawk and Acona, entered upon his work with great hope, and gave notice that he was considering a sojourn of four years. His first sermons were from the words "God is love," and "Ye are the light of the world." A preacher of merit and a people of excellence are many times a prophecy of finest results.—A. H. Williams.

Editorial

"Words are like leaves, and where they most abound, Much fruit of sense beneath is rarely found."
—Pope.

We hear much these days about an every-member canvass for funds. Why not have an every-member canvass for souls? It would undoubtedly quickly usher in a new era if every person in our churches would go to work to win others to Christ.

"The field is the world." There need be no unemployed persons when it comes to serving the Lord. The door of opportunity stands wide open to all. What are you doing for the Master in your community? It may be a small one, but it is large enough for you to win in it an imperishable crown.

A don't-care sort of an attitude toward wrongdoing should not be mistaken for Christian charity. There are many things that ought not to be tolerated. There can be no true nobility of nature that does not embrace a capacity for moral indignation. The highest type of a Christian has the spirit of a crusader—a disposition to strike a blow for the right wherever it is imperiled. The man whose chief concern is to take care of himself and his own interests finds his counterpart in the Pharisee of our Lord's time.

A gentleman lectured before the Era Club of New Orleans a few days since on the subject, "Are the English Militants (Suffragettes) Crazy?" We are not an alienist and we do not wish to push out into waters so deep; but we frankly confess that we think they act a bit like there might be a few screws loose in their mental machinery. By the way, we have sometimes wondered why the woman suffragists have not taken the position that the first woman wore trousers. Have they never heard of that edition of the Bible which reads, "They (Adam and Eve) sewed leaves together and made themselves breeches?" We respectfully submit that the sisters should brighten up and present their cause in the full measure of its strength.

When the Pharisees on one occasion tried to entrap Jesus they sought first to blind him with flattery. They said; "Master, we know that thou art true, and teachest the way of God in truth; neither carest thou for any man, for thou regardest not the person of men." Then came their adroit and dangerous question. But our Lord discerned their subtle purpose, and, brushing aside their honeyed words, threw the charge of hypocrisy into their teeth. Happy the man who is able thus to discover the secret snare that is so often hidden beneath fulsome compliments! When a person begins to extol you it is well to be doubly on your guard. It is a great weakness to be continually at the mercy of an oily tongue. It is astounding how easily some really able men allow themselves to be "worked" in this manner.

THINKS WESLEY WOULD STIR THINGS.

We frequently hear John Wesley sneered at by modern Methodists as a back number. We had a minister to tell us a year or two ago that if Wesley were living now he could not fill a city pulpit as well as the average city pastor does. Of course, we were much amused. We have also heard it affirmed that as an evangelist he would not be able to stir things much in this day. But we note with interest that the able Editor of Zion's Herald does not entertain any such view, as is shown by the following extract from that journal of Jan. 7:

"We often think of what John Wesley would do if in New England! Could he be dropped into Boston to-day, what would he say and do? The answer is perfectly evident. In a word, he would be a Methodist, always and everywhere. If here, Boston would soon know it. He would be immediately recognized as a new personality, force and power. Under God, obeying him and preaching exactly the same truth here, he would transform New England, as he did the Old. The people would flock to hear him everywhere, and would be convinced, convicted, saved. Back to John Wesley! We have hundreds of undeveloped Wesleys in our pastorates in New England, not of his splendid proportions—not that—but those who could be like him in spirit, purpose, vision and passion. Will they not come forward to do what he did? We could change this New England of ours if our own ministers would but do their normal work."

IT OUGHT TO BE AMENDED.

Elsewhere in this issue of the Advocate, we print a memorial to the Mississippi Legislature adopted by the last session of the Mississippi Conference requesting that an amendment to the State Constitution striking out the sections which forbid the bequeathing of property to any Church or charitable institution, be submitted to the people. The North Mississippi Conference took similar action, as also did some of the other leading religious organizations of the State.

We are most heartily in sympathy with this movement. We can see no valid reason why, if a person wishes to bequeath his property to a Christian denomination or to some philanthropic cause, he should be forbidden to do so. Some speak of the present Constitutional provision as if it were much the same as the old English law of Mortmain, which has been so much extolled by legislators and historians. But in reality the two enactments are quite dissimilar. The English law spoken of forbade the bequeathing of real estate to the Church, which undoubtedly was wise at a time when vast tracts of land that the people needed were in the hands of the clergy and were not available either for homestead entry or for cultivation. But the Mississippi Constitution also includes money and all other kinds of personal property in its prohibition. The conditions in the United States also are radically different from what they were in Great Britain and the other Old World countries. There is little disposition upon the part of any Church beneath our flag to acquire and operate great landed estates. Indeed, the relation of the various religious denominations to our Government is utterly unlike that which existed between the State and the leading Churches in Europe in former centuries. The fear that what then occurred may be repeated upon our soil is far-fetched and, we think, utterly groundless.

Most of the States of the Union have no such law. In the North it is now scarcely respectable for a wealthy man to die without making bequests for charitable and philanthropic purposes. Why should not a citizen of Mississippi have the same privilege? And why should our churches and educational and charitable institutions that are doing so much for the public welfare be denied this source of revenue? As we have said, we can discern no sound wisdom in such a policy. It was such a slavish adherence to old laws and customs and the perpetuation of them under new conditions of society that led Henry George, America's greatest political economist, to pronounce lawyers the greatest hindrance to the progress of civilization. Undoubtedly some of them are too much inclined to bind us with the fetters of the past.

GOD'S MOST AUTHORITATIVE REVELATION.

By the Holy Spirit God is speaking to men and women to-day. He is calling them both to higher attainments in grace and needy fields of service; but he is not speaking to the world now in the same manner that he did when he made his great revelation of moral and spiritual truth through his only begotten Son and the inspired men whom he gathered about him. We have such a communication of the Divine Mind and Will in the Scriptures as can nowhere else be found, and hence to them we must ever come for light and guidance. To contend that an individual may have a secret revelation made to his soul equal in authority with that contained in the Bible, is to lay the predicate for all sorts of superstitions and heresies. This is the claim of Mohammedanism, Mormonism, Christian Science, and all the other modern religious cults. God has given us, "once for all," his precious Word; let us beware of how we neglect it or depart from it. There has been no change in its fundamental truths, and there never will be.

GIVE THE SOUL A CHANCE.

Physical hygiene is one of the slogans of our time, and this is well. But what about the hygiene of the soul? Why not open up all its windows and let the light of truth and the encircling atmosphere of love and joy stream in? Not a few are spiritually emaciated because they shut out of their hearts the life-giving influences that God would fain pour into them. He is ever trying to give us his blessings in abounding fullness, but we will not receive them. O that we would allow our moral natures to have a chance!

IF I CAN BEAR HIS CROSS.

If I can bear His cross,
What matters scorn of men, my grief and loss,
Ambition's failure, all that I have sought,
Except what I in love for Christ have wrought?

If I can bear his cross,
By faith a vision of His beauty trace,
What matter if my path be thorny now?
I see the radiant light upon His brow.

If I can hear His voice,
My throbbing heart, though wounded, shall rejoice;
What though I wander through bewild'ring ways?
My soul shall evermore my Savior praise.

If I can feel His hand,
That guides me onward to the better land,
What though my tears must fall? I see a light
Through mists of sorrow ever shining bright.

Dear Lord, I turn to Thee,
My hope in life, through death, eternally!
My cross is radiant now with flowers fair,
Oh, make my life through love a living prayer!

—Martha A. Kidder, in "Living Church."

WAS HE MERELY MAN, OR GOD?

(The following, which we take from the Christian Guardian, of Toronto, Canada, is from Ex-Gov. Frank J. Hanly's (Indiana) little volume—"My Lord and Savior Jesus Christ.")

Summary.

And so we have Him, a Galilean carpenter;
Not a physician, but a master of all human ills;
Not a lawyer, but the expounder of the elemental principles of all law;

Not an author, but the inspirer of the living literature of the world;

Not an orator, but the interpreter of the universal heart;

Not a poet or musician, but the soul and inspiration of all music;

Not an artist, but the unfailing light of the great masters, old and new;

Not an architect, but the soul-transformer and character-builder of all time;

Not a statesman, but the state and institution founder of the race;

And, more wonderful than all, a man blameless and unscarred by sin or taint of wrong.

Conclusion.

Before a mind like that, in the presence of such amazing intellectual powers and a character so faultless and so perfect, I am awed and humbled into humility.

Face to face with this lowly-born but transcendent and omniscient Jew I find in Him enough of the marvellous and inexplicable to convince me, of itself, of His superhumanity and divinity.

And when I contemplate the admitted facts of His wondrous life; His death on the cross at three-and-thirty; the effect of His brief ministry and the results of His work, so vast, so far-reaching and so abiding, and consider His all-pervasive and omniscient personality, my exultant soul slips its agnostic bonds, leaps the shrinking chasm of its doubt, breaks through every hindering quibble, falls at His nail-pierced feet, and in glad recognition cries out its joy, "My Lord and Savior, Jesus Christ! He was not a man. He is Deity itself, God made manifest."

CHURCH PROGRESS DURING 1913.

The year just closed has witnessed marked progress along many lines of church life and work, a few of the more important of which are here noted. Upwards of 40,000,000 Americans, native and foreign born, have allied themselves with some religious body, and to support their churches they give upwards of $400,000,000 a year, or an average of nearly $10 each. To be more exact, the number of people enrolled as members of some religious body, Christian or Jew, is about 38,200,000. This is considerably above one in three of the population. Their gifts have been carefully estimated at $360,000,000 to $375,000,000 a year, and are increasing steadily, in some bodies even rapidly. Last year unusual sums were put into new buildings, so that the total of gifts will doubtless pass the $400,000,000 mark within a year or two.

Those who know say that the most striking feature of the year now ended, among both Protestants and Catholics, is the advance in methods of work. As in the industrial world, churches are wholly reorganizing their ways of doing things. Old ways are going into the scrap heaps, along with old industrial inventions, and new ways are coming which produce larger results with less effort. The Christian Associations are leading in these new ventures, but many religious bodies, and large ones, like the Congregationalists and the Disciples of Christ, are remodeling their machinery, that it may be more effective and better meet changing American conditions.

Year in and year out Christian bodies in America, save a few of the small ones, increase their membership about two per cent each twelve months. Catholics, Disciples of Christ, Lutherans, and sometimes Episcopalians, do somewhat better. Catholics always do, so many are their additions from immigration besides the natural home increase. Disciples show a steady growth, rapidly forging ahead of some of the older bodies, Presbyterians, North, for example. Congregationalists, Methodists, South, Unitarians and some others do not reach the two per cent figure. But the two per cent is 20 per cent each decade, and 20 per cent is a somewhat larger per cent than that of the increase of population. The larger bodies grow more steadily than the smaller ones. (The writer is in error in saying that the Southern Methodists did not have a gain of two per cent last year. It was more than that.—Editor of the Advocate.)

In Sunday schools there is the same steady increase in numbers of children enrolled. Catholics are multiplying their schools, and adopting pedagogical methods. They are also introducing the system of classes and teachers. The Organized Sunday School Workers of the World, having its strongest centers in America, held a world convention at Zurich during the year and made big plans for growth. America is carrying the Sunday school system into the very corners of the earth, including some of the distant parts of South American countries.

Missionary contributions from all Protestant societies reached the last twelve months $63,000,000. No other country compares with America. England is second, but a very large part of England's gifts are relief funds, so vast are the demands of the suffering poor, while America's gifts go almost wholly to religious causes. The sum named should be increased by $3,000,000 to $5,000,000 if Catholic missions are included. This sum is exclusive of gifts to Catholic orders, of which no record is available. Protestant foreign mission gifts for the first time passed the $18,000,000 mark, the largest from any country. Protestant home missions are $45,000,000, with a steady gain in amount.

Eugenics came to the fore in Christian affairs during the year as never before. It started in Chicago, and was taken up throughout the country. With it came a new interest in all social questions. The Federal Council of Churches urged the adoption of one day's rest in seven and made plans to prevent commercialized vice in San Francisco during the Panama Exposition. Pulpits everywhere inveighed against evil in the home, on the stage, in politics, in business. The Church everywhere took a more active part in social-service questions than it ever took before. Several bodies have put such work on the same organized basis as missions and religious education. Perhaps this social crusade, next to the better method plans, is the most marked feature of the year.

Orthodox and Reform Jews have been active during the year. The former have perfected an agency for keeping congregations closer together, and for the first time in the history of Judaism in America, salaried secretaries were sent out on national work. The latter made national a Young Men's Hebrew Association on the same lines as the Christian Associations, and guaranteed an annual expense fund for five years.

Catholics lost by death a considerable number of Cardinals who were of first rank in the conduct of world work, but beyond that the Vatican had a quiet year. French Catholics went forward as never before, being released from obligations to the State. Catholic missionary leaders held in Boston the greatest gathering of Catholic prelates and laymen America has yet seen. It was missionary in the broadest sense, and the address of Cardinal O'Connell emphasized the advantage of co-operation in home and foreign work.

Church unity ceased to have the Episcopal Church as the only leader, other bodies naming commissions that are equally prominent in forward plans. Almost all bodies have co-operated in the plans for the winter, save only the Roman and Eastern Communions. These are large exceptions it is true, but great progress has been made toward the proposed world conference on Christian Unity.

The American Bible Society readjusted its work in Panama and in the Near East, dividing it up to some extent with the British and Foreign Bible Society of London, so as to make, if possible, at the Panama Exposition a great Bible distributing point comparable to that at the terminus of the Suez canal. It reported, in common with other missionary societies, less disturbance of work in Mexico than might be expected, and great opportunities in China. In Burma the Baptists celebrated the centenary of their missions there.

Four large bodies did unusual things with their organizations. Congregationalists made all benevolent societies semi-official, linking them with their National Council, and creating a national secretaryship. This secretary gives this body, for the first time, a national official head. It is a significant change from independence toward centralization, yet the independence of the single congregation being assured, the plan was adopted unanimously.

Methodists held a national mass meeting and adopted a policy for Methodism, or particularly for the M. E. Church, North. This policy affects missions, educations, Church extension, and every phase of Methodist effort. United Brethren so admire the plan that they are to try it early next spring.

An Episcopalian General Convention adopted the province plan. That is, it divided the country into eight districts, and created Provincial Conventions, having jurisdiction between the diocesan and the General Convention. To these Provincial Conventions were committed many duties, aiming to secure greater freedom of action and less cost.

Disciples of Christ met in national convention for the first time as a delegated body. Heretofore this large communion has been governed in its common work by mass meetings. There is some outcry against officialdom, but those in position to know say that the change means a new brotherhood in ambition and in ability to accomplish things.

And so the work of the Christian Church is pressing on and the day of the kingdom is growing brighter as it approaches its meridian splendor.—Christian Intelligencer.

METHODISM IN SHREVEPORT AND ELSEWHERE.

A recent call to Shreveport for a meeting of the Trustees of Centenary College, and on the same date a gathering of the preachers and laymen of the Shreveport district for conference about the work of the year, gave me an opportunity to catch a glimpse of Shreveport Methodism and at the same time to see something of the plans for the work of the coming year throughout the district. To one who knew something of Shreveport Methodism some twenty-two years ago, when one church represented our entire strength, and the first struggling beginnings of the Texas Avenue Church were being planned in a mission whose center was its Sunday school in the old Thatcher Armory, and whose circumference was marked by a series of cottage prayer meetings all over town, the transformation to its present activity is remarkable. Our Church has more than kept step with the rapid development of this growing and progressive city. The First Church, just completed on the finest site to be found anywhere, overlooking the business section of the city, is not only a structure architecturally beautiful, but well designed and equipped for the work of a modern city church and Sunday school. Every department of work is provided for.

It was my pleasure to hear by Brother McKennon, the superintendent, during the meeting of preachers and laymen, an inspiring account of the great Sunday school which has come to be known far and wide as one of the greatest in our connection. His account, which showed the devotion with which he has given himself to its upbuilding and the spirit of dependence upon Divine guidance which characterizes the work, revealed much of the secret of the marvelous development of the school under his leadership.

Enthusiasm characterizes the entire school from the large, useful cradle roll to the organized classes which are engaged in all sorts of missionary and benevolent activities, in addition to their lesson work.

Dr. Sexton, who comes to us with the inspiration of success in the past, has a great opportunity with this growing church. It was not my pleasure to meet him as he was in the midst of moving from his Texas home.

Brother Means has already taken hold with hopefulness and promise of the difficult problem of uniting all elements and overcoming the difficulties at the Noel Memorial Church, where he has one of the best equipped buildings to be found anywhere. The opportunity is open to our church, with such a material foundation in one of the best sections of the city, to build up in a short time a congregation that will stand right by the side of First Church in activity and success.

In addition to these leading churches, the pastors of the three other churches are working hopefully and with good opportunity for development. The presiding elder, Brother Coleman, in spite of a difficult move and many difficulties in getting settled in his new home, has taken hold with his accustomed incurable optimism, and has hope of securing soon a suitable new district parsonage. To have succeeded in building one district parsonage, moved into it, and within a few weeks to begin to plan for another one is a distinction, or an opportunity, that rarely comes to any of us; but Brother Coleman is equal to the opportunity, and we trust that he will soon be living in the newest district manse in the Conference.

A description of Shreveport Methodism would be incomplete without a word about Centenary College. The people of Shreveport have given us an unsurpassed site for a college, and funds for the erection of one excellent building. Dr. Wynn and his faculty, with the equipment at their command, are doing excellent work in giving us a college of high grade and wholesome influences. Their aim is to give thorough work, maintain careful discipline, and uphold the high standards and traditions that are a legacy from the old college. But if they are to do their best work, if we are to have a college that can maintain itself beside the neighboring colleges of our own Church, or compete with the State institutions, it is absolutely necessary that the Methodists of Louisiana come to their help. The Methodists of the State outside of Shreveport, have done almost nothing for the college outside of our regular educational assessments. And now the time has come when we must do something worthy of the cause of Christian education. Brother Brown, who has been appointed to the work of raising an adequate fund for equipment and endowment, will soon lay his plans definitely before us, and we can not afford to neglect the opportunity that his plans will present to us in definite form.

By invitation of Brother Coleman, I had the opportunity of presenting to a number of the preachers and laymen of the district the plans of the Mission Board and of the Laymen's Movement of the Conference, taking the place of the Conference leader, Brother W. S. Holmes, in representing the latter work. Emphasis was laid upon the necessity of meeting all our regular assessments as the basis of respectability for any pastoral charge, and to this end, of educating our people in the facts and needs of our work, and organizing our finances systematically according to the plans worked out by the Connectional Boards of the Church. It was made emphatically evident that the adoption of the every-member canvass and the duplex envelope in our Conference, wherever it has been tried, has meant increased contributions to every interest. Several charges have adopted this system since the last Conference, notably Monroe, Ruston and Keener Memorial, Baton Rouge, and all are hopeful of the results.

From Shreveport I was called to Monroe by the invitation of Brother Schuhle to a similar gathering of the preachers and laymen of that district. Signs of progress are not wanting in several charges in that district, and the spirit of hopefulness is prevalent. Brother Schuhle had arranged for the distribution of missionary leaflets to every charge, and was supplied with the material for this distribution. Brother Miller at Monroe and Brother Ledbetter at West Monroe are both hopeful and report definite progress. West Monroe has been made a station, and promises to live up to its new dignity. Rayville, under the indefatigable leadership of Brother Townsley, has also put on station airs, and is making great advancement. In addition to a good increase in the pastor's salary, by the church, the Sunday school has taken a special pledge of $150 for missions. Other pastors present were hopeful and planning for progress. Indications point to a prosperous year in North Louisiana.

FORWARD AT GRENADA.

The growing reputation of Grenada College for thorough work and kindly care of its pupils brought us last fall such an increase of patronage as to cramp us for room in every department. The management asked the North Mississippi Conference for authority to raise money for an additional dormitory. With gratifying enthusiasm, that authority was granted. Knowing that there was no room on the campus for such a building as is needed, we set to work to secure more land. We have just succeeded in buying the most beautiful property in Grenada, consisting of two acres lying along the north side of the campus and fronting 350 feet on Main street. This gives an ideal location for the proposed dormitory and furnishes two large residences with immediate room for twenty-five additional pupils. One of the residences will be used permanently for the President's home; the other will be moved and used as a hospital after the new building is erected. All friends of the college regard this purchase as the greatest forward step in its history. We have desired this property for years, but it was not for sale. It seems providential that it should have been available just when we were ready to buy. The way is now wide open for us to double our capacity, and make an A-grade college whose credits will be honored anywhere and whose diplomas will be an honor to any graduate. The Methodists of North Mississippi have the money to build it, the young women to fill it, and the brains to run it. Let us hope that they will not fail to grasp their great opportunity. We do not contemplate for one moment the erection of a cheap, make-shift building. We shall have a handsome, commodious building with every modern convenience and comfort, first-class in every appointment. The time has come for us to do more, much more, for our young women than we have been doing. They are so shut in by conventionalities that they cannot get out and work for an education as the young men can. We must provide for them adequate advantages for the best type of education.

We have Methodist women with money which they will never need to use for themselves or their relatives. Is there not some one among them who will immortalize herself by a generous gift to Grenada College in this hour of pressing need and golden opportunity? It is my prayer that such a friend may be found. We shall need $50,000 to carry out our plans. The sooner we get it, the more good we can do with it.

BEAUTIFUL THOUGHTS.

Think beautiful thoughts and set them adrift
On eternity's boundless sea!
Let their burdens be pure, let their white sails lift,
And carry from you the comforting gift
Of your heartfelt sympathy.

For a beautiful thought is a beautiful thing:
And out on the infinite tide
May meet, and touch, and tenderly bring To the sick, and weary, and sorrowing
A solace so long denied.

Church News

The late Prof. Borden P. Bowne's book, entitled "Personalism" has found its way into the Japanese tongue.

One hundred years ago there were 211,129 Methodists in the United States; to-day there are more than 6,000,000.

Bishop John M. Walden, of the Methodist Episcopal Church, died at Daytona, Fla., January 21. He was 83 years of age.

As pastor emeritus of the First Congregational Church of Columbus, Ohio, Dr. Washington Gladwin will receive a salary of $2500.

The 1912 Discipline of the Methodist Episcopal Church has been translated into the Norwegian-Danish language. Another step in the triumphant March of Methodism!

Mrs. John D. Rockefeller recently gave the Euclid Avenue Baptist Church of Cleveland, Ohio, $30,000 in 5 per cent gold bonds. The interest on this sum is to be used for the current expenses of the congregation.

Dr. E. G. B. Mann, the vigorous Senior Editor of the Central Methodist Advocate, of Lexington, Ky., has recently been sending some pointed shots at worldliness in his paper. Keep up the fire, Doctor; a whole volley is needed in that direction.

Bishop E. D. Mouzon preached in the First M. E. Church, South, of Texarkana, Ark., on Sunday, Jan. 11. The Bishop is now discussing in an illuminating manner in the Nashville Christian Advocate the "Revival Methods of John Wesley."

In a service conducted in one of the Presbyterian churches in St. Louis a short time since, forty young people are said to have come forward as volunteers for work in the foreign field. Truly, this is a time when the Lord seems to be pouring out his Spirit upon our young men and maidens.

Dr. Russell H. Conwell, who for thirty years has been pastor of the Baptist Temple of Philadelphia, Penn., has recently declined a call to the Calvary Baptist Church of New York City at a salary of $15,000 per annum. Dr. Conwell is 72 years of age. Manifestly, here is an old man who ought to be put out of the way with chloroform.

At the recent session of the Virginia Conference of the M. E. Church, South, Dr. W. G. Starr, who has so long shone as a pulpit luminary in the Old Dominion, took a superannuate relation. It is stated that several churches were anxious to secure his services, but that he deemed it best to retire from active work.

Dr. J. W. Perry, Missionary Secretary of the Holston Conference, recently gave two weeks to the work of deepening the interest in missions in the Chattanooga District. Keep your eye on the missionary reports from Holston, and see what can be done for that cause when it has a leader who leads. Dr. Perry was appointed to devote his entire time to this work.

The Disciples of Christ have under way a "Men and Millions Movement," which has for its object the raising of $5,000,000 for mission work, including the education and training of 1,000 young men to engage in it. Mr. R. A. Long, of Kansas City, a millionaire lumberman, has announced that he will give a million of this amount, provided the other four millions are raised.

When Gipsy Smith conducted his great meeting in Birmingham, Ala., last fall he did not overlook the colored people, but gave them the Saturday nights while the services were in progress. One of the favorite songs on these interesting occasions was, "Swing Low, Sweet Chariot." As a testimonial of their appreciation of the evangelist's efforts, they presented him with a Bible.

The Epworth Leaguers of Texas will endow a chair in the Theological Department of the Southern Methodist University, at Dallas, in honor of Bishop J. S. Key, who is known as "the father of the League" in the Lone Star State. A lot has also been secured upon which to erect the proposed Methodist hospital in Dallas, that is to be operated in connection with the Medical Department of the University.

Dr. John A. Rice, pastor of the First M. E. Church, South, of Fort Worth, Texas, has decided to make a special effort to develop his congregation along educational and sociological lines. To lead in this movement he has secured the services of Rev. E. Rosmond Stanford, an M. A. and B. D. of Yale University. One of the first steps in the program will be the opening of a comprehensive teachers' institute, and it is stated that more than fifty persons have already announced their purpose to avail themselves of the opportunities that it will offer.

It is stated that Bishop Leete has bought in Atlanta, Ga., at a cost of $50,000 a site upon which will be erected a fine Methodist Episcopal Church, the General Committee on Church Extension and Home Missions of that denomination having furnished a part of the purchase money. This is another illustration of how the Northern Methodists are trying to invade the South, as if it were a needy mission field. Is it not about time to stop the farce of having lengthy fraternal addresses, bubbling over with expressions of brotherly love, by the representatives of a Church that evinces such a spirit?

THE MERIDIAN DISTRICT STEWARDS' AND PASTORS' MEETING.

Pursuant to the call of the presiding elder, Rev. J. T. Leggett, the district stewards and pastors of the Meridian District met in Meridian on Jan. 1, 1914, to plan and discuss ways and means by which the Church could make the greatest progress possible, in the new Conference year of 1914.

New Year's Day dawned bright and beautiful. Every District Steward and all of the pastors present seemed to be loaded with "good resolutions" and filled with hope for the best year of the district thus far.

Quite a number of district stewards being present the presiding elder called their meeting to order at 11 a. m. Mr. J. B. Holland, a most efficient layman of Fifth Street Church, Meridian, was elected Secretary. The Secretary presented a plan of assessment distribution, which greatly facilitated the work of the stewards. After explaining the basis of the plan it was referred to a committee of five. This committee gave every church an opportunity to be "heard," after which the original plan was adopted.

The Orphans' Home, District Parsonage debt, and the Washington City Church, all came in for their share of emphasis. Brother W. M. Williams was there to present his cause. The meeting was harmonious and it could be easily seen that the laymen were loyal and interested in the work of the Church. Every fellow accepted his assessments and went away feeling that he had no more than his equitable share.

It was announced that the visiting laymen and pastors would be given a luncheon at Widman's Cafe. After the benediction all proceeded to Widman's. Some of our country preachers were in hopes that the generous city "fellers" would turn us loose with the menu card, but some wise superior had ordered so many "regulars" and we had to "eat what was set before us." But the "regular" was delicious and all enjoyed it, and appreciated the kindness of the brethren.

The pastors' meeting was called to order in the afternoon at three o'clock. All the brethren of the district were present sometime during the day, except three—Baggett, Thomas and SeEVERS. The presiding elder opened the session by discussing the subject, "Our Relation as Preachers in Promoting the Best Interests of the Church." This was, indeed, an able and helpful presentation of "Let brotherly love continue." It was a call to arms—to move forward armed with our spiritual weapons and united into a mighty phalanx; not only to oppose but to defeat the arch-enemy of human souls and enthrone Christ in the hearts of our people.

Brother W. B. Hogg, led in the discussion of "Revivals and How to Have Them." This message was afire with evangelism. The meeting was informal and Revs. I. L. Peebles, C. H. Ellis, J. R. Jones, H. A. Gatlin, G. S. Harmon, and A. B. Barry made helpful talks upon the subject.

Early collections were thoroughly discussed and when Ex-Presiding Elder Jones, C. H. Ellis, A. S. Oliver and the presiding elder had finished with the subject, all seemed eager to get out and "take collections."

The meetings were filled with inspiration and information. The time passed rapidly by until nearly six o'clock p. m., when it was announced that visitors would be entertained in the homes of the city. We adjourned with the benediction for supper and preaching at 7:30 at East End Church. The next day the pastors faced the new year with a lighter burden and fuller determination to "win for Jesus." We had gathered no burdens but were helped to face the battle and made to more fully realize that "The Son of God goes forth to war." We of the District expect to follow in his train and reap a rich harvest of souls for his glory.

PLAN OF WORK OUTLINED.

To the Preachers and Laymen of the Louisiana Conference.

Dear Brethren: The following is an outline of the plan of the Laymen's work for the Louisiana Conference for this year. It consists of nine points, viz:

1. A church leader for every church. This does not mean one leader for a circuit, but a leader for every church.
2. A missionary committee for every church.
3. An every-member canvass for every church and the adoption of the duplex envelope system.
4. A district leader for every district.
5. The monthly distribution of literature to every congregation in the Conference. The leaflets have already been selected and any church leader or pastor may secure a supply by writing to the Laymen's Missionary Movement, 810 Broadway, Nashville, Tenn. But you must write every month for your supply for that month.
6. As there have generally been elected only one church leader for a circuit, it is thought best for the pastors of circuits to write for and distribute the literature, but the church leaders of stations should do this.
7. The discussion of laymen's work at district conferences.
8. The election as delegates to the Annual Conference of men that will attend.
9. Our slogan, "At least one layman from every charge in attendance upon our meeting at the Annual Conference in Shreveport." The day of this meeting will be published later.

The discussion of laymen's plans and work at the Conference in Shreveport.

The time for this meeting will probably be the Thursday or Friday of Conference week at 3 o'clock in the afternoon.

Let presiding elders, pastors and laymen everywhere take note of these plans and lend a helping hand that they may be successfully prosecuted. If any of the officers or committees called for by these plans have not been elected or appointed, please let it be attended to at the first possible moment and oblige. Yours sincerely, Baton Rouge, La.

W. S. HOLMES.

IT MAY BE COMING.

On a recent Sunday, Dr. Charles E. Jefferson had preached to four different congregations at the same time. Three were in New York and one in Philadelphia. The sermon was delivered in the Broadway Tabernacle, New York, where a dictograph and an acousticon caught the sermon and transmitted it to a phonograph, which conveyed it over the telephone wires to the three other congregations. Verily, marvelous things are happening now-a-days. It would not be surprising were some man of economical spirit to suggest such an arrangement between a group of churches to affect a saving in ministerial salary.—Baltimore and Richmond Christian Advocate.

Secular News and Comment

The Wisconsin eugenics marriage law has been declared unconstitutional by Judge F. C. Eschweiler, a circuit judge, and has been appealed to the State Supreme Court.

The alumni of the University of the State of Washington are said to have started a movement to elect ex-President Roosevelt to the presidency of that institution.

Chicago's expense budget for 1914 foots up the sum of $39,000,000, an increase of $6,000,000 over that of last year. This sum is also said to be $900,000 in excess of the city's estimated revenue.

The Travelers' Aid Society of New Orleans will place placards giving advice and warning to girls in all the railroad depots of the city. It is claimed that New Orleans ranks fourth among the municipalities of the United States in the vice traffic.

Mr. W. S. Hill, of Greenwood, Miss., who for many years was a Congressman from that State, has been appointed Federal District Attorney for the Northern District of Mississippi by President Wilson. Mr. Hill is a member of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South.

There were 633 fires in New Orleans last year, with losses amounting to $512,242. This record was slightly in excess of that of 1912 and 1911, but lower than any other of the past thirteen years. Fire Chief Pujol has recommended the retirement of all horses from the service and the use of motors in their stead.

Dr. H. Shingle Wingert, Director of Physical Education at the University of Ohio, is authority for the statement that the athletic expenses of all our colleges amount to more than $1,000,000,000 a year, and that the larger portion of this money does not go to pay for the physical exercises of the students.

There is talk of another Balkan war. Turkey is reported to have notified the Powers that she will not accept their decision concerning the Aegean Islands and that she will do her utmost to regain Mitylene and Chios. Her military forces are said to have been greatly strengthened and improved within the past few months.

It is difficult to form any certain conclusion as to the true situation in Mexico, but the general impression seems to be that Huerta's cause is waning. Gen. Villa, the noted rebel leader, is reported to have said a few days since, "It will soon be shown that the United States has not waited in vain in the belief that the Huerta Government is slowly crumbling."

The Pittsburg and Lake Erie Railroad Company is stated to have discharged recently 126 men for drinking intoxicants. They were given ample warning, but were caught tipping by detectives. This action of the railroad company is much to be commended. No man who touches liquor should be allowed to have anything to do with the handling of trains that have human lives in their care.

By a vote of 80 to 42 a resolution to submit a woman suffrage amendment to the State Constitution was defeated in the Lower House of the Mississippi Legislature. This will likely dispose of this measure, so far as the present session of the Mississippi Solons is concerned. The movement is said to have had even less following in the Senate than it had in the House.

The anniversary of the birthday of General Robert E. Lee—January 19—was very generally observed throughout the South, and also in some places in the North. The celebration in New York City was particularly interesting and impressive. There is no nobler figure in American history than this great soldier and citizen, and well may the sons and daughters of Dixie revere and honor his memory.

There were in the State of New York last year 145,056 deaths, and 228,460 births. The rate of mortality was the lowest on record, except that of 1912, and was smaller in the cities than in the rural districts. Deaths from cancer showed the largest increase, numbering 8529, compared with 8234 in 1911 and 7500 in 1910. Such deaths within the past five years have comprised 5.3 per cent of the entire mortality.

Mr. Edwin Ginn, the noted publisher of school and college text books and the founder of the International School of Peace, died at his home in Winchester, Mass., on January 21, aged 76. In addition to his efforts in behalf of the cause of universal peace, Mr. Ginn manifested much interest in securing more harmonious relations between labor and capital in the United States and in providing better homes for the industrial workers of the nation.

The Hon. W. A. Clark, formerly United States Senator from Montana, has been elected a member of the Board of Trustees of the Corcoran Art Gallery of Washington, D. C., succeeding Thomas Nelson Page, who resigned. Mr. Clark has for several years been a liberal supporter of this fine museum, contributing large sums of money to be awarded as prizes to competing artists. He is reputed to be one of the wealthiest men in the United States.

The War Department at Washington has ordered restored to the relatives of Jefferson Davis the two dueling pistols and a double barreled pistol and appurtenances which belonged to the Confederate Chieftian, but which were seized by the Union troops toward the close of the Civil War and which have been in the custody of the Government nearly fifty years. It must not be inferred from his having owned such weapons that Mr. Davis was in any sense a bully (they were a part of a gentleman's equipment in those days); on the contrary, he was a deeply religious man. James Redpath, who saw him in his last years, said that the thing about him which impressed him most of all was "his goodness."

It is stated that the total value of the farm animals of the United States is $5,596,024,000, the increase over the preceding year being $443,758,000. This huge sum is in part distributed as follows: horses, $2,185,555,000; mules, $529,339,000; milch cows, $1,032,960,000. The chief meat producing animals of the country showed a considerable decrease in numbers, as follows: beef cattle, 1,762,000 head, or 5 per cent; hogs, 4,932,000, or about 7 per cent. The number of milch cows remained about the same, while horses showed a slight numerical increase. The value per head of the animals used for food purposes show a decided advancement: milch cows, 21 per cent; other cattle, 18 per cent; hogs, 17 per cent; sheep, 8 per cent. These figures do not promise any relief from the high prices of meats in the near future.

WILL YOU HELP THEM?

Dear Brother Meek: May I through your columns make an appeal for a number of young men who are studying for the ministry and are greatly in need of a little financial assistance? I have on hand applications from students in the following schools and colleges: Trinity College, Ruthenford College, Weaver College, Wofford College, Emory College, Reinhardt College, Young Harris College, Emory and Henry College, Hiwassee College, Millsaps College, Southern University, Hendrix College, Henderson-Brown College, Southwestern University, and Clarendon College.

Many of these students will not be able to carry on their work until June unless assistance can be secured. The Department of Ministerial Supply and Training is doing its best to help them, but its funds are exhausted. I want, therefore, to make an appeal to your readers in behalf of these men. Will not some pastor undertake to raise $50 or $100 to help some one student? Will not some liberal-minded layman help us to meet this urgent need? Contributions may be made to Dr. Stonewall Anderson, Secretary of Education, or to the undersigned. I shall be glad to give further information on request.

Hoping there may be a hearty response to this appeal, I am, Very sincerely,

J. L. CUNINGGIM.

IN FAVOR OF AMENDING THE MISSISSIPPI CONSTITUTION.

(Resolutions adopted by the Mississippi Conference in its recent session at Natchez.)

To the Bishop and the Mississippi Annual Conference:

Your committee to which was referred the Resolution looking towards the repeal of sections 269 and 270 of the Mississippi Constitution beg leave to report that we recommend the adoption of said resolution, with slight amendment so as to read as follows:

Since sections 269 and 270 of the Mississippi Constitution make it unlawful for a person to devise or bequeath his property to any church or charitable institution; therefore be it resolved by this Conference of Christian citizens of Mississippi:

1. That we repeat our former request to the State Legislature, made several years ago, praying relief from such unnecessary and unwise and unjust constitutional provisions.

2. We heartily join the other Christian Churches in their efforts to secure the repeal of said sections of the Mississippi Constitution, and we respectfully urge the Mississippi Legislature at its next session to submit an amendment to said constitution repealing said sections 269 and 270 thereof.

A STRICKEN HOUSEHOLD.

Dear Brother Meek: Little John, the five months old baby boy of Brother and Sister J. A. Hall, of Grenada, left them and went back to the Father Sunday morning, Jan. 18, at 3 o'clock. He was taken suddenly ill Saturday and the best medical skill stood helpless in the presence of the disease. A great host of sympathizing friends attended the funeral service which was conducted from the parsonage by the writer, assisted by Brothers Countess and Tucker. While their hearts are sad and the home lonely, they are resigned and are finding comfort in the presence of the never failing Friend, Christ Jesus. Let the brethren remember them in prayer.

Yours faithfully,

Mathiston, Miss.

INFORMATION.

Dear Dr. Meek: Some of my brethren are having trouble to reach me by mail. I do not wonder at it. I am moving so rapidly from place to place that I am surprised that any mail reaches me.

Please allow me to request through the Advocate that my quarterly conference round be consulted, and that brethren address me two or three days in advance at the place where I am to hold a quarterly conference. Let all communications be sent in care of the pastor.

I have two district parsonages, but do not live in either. I am not living anywhere. Most of my time is spent on the railroads. If the brethren wish a speedy answer to their letters, they must go by direction given above.

Let everybody take due notice thereof and govern himself accordingly. Yours truly,

T. W. ADAMS.

TWO EDUCATIONAL CONFERENCES.

The Executive Committee of the Board of Education has arranged for two educational conferences during the year. The first is to be held February 26 and 27 at Nashville; the second, August 4, 7, at the Southern Assembly, on Junaluska Lake. The program for the February Conference will be completed and published in a few days. While this program contemplates specially the presence of the presidents and principals of our colleges and schools and their active participation in the discussions, Conference Secretaries of Education, representatives of Conference Boards, editors of our church papers, pastors, and all others interested in the educational work of our Church are cordially invited to attend and to take part in the Conference.

On account of the Interdenominational Bible Conference being in session at Nashville at that time, special rates are granted by the railroads. Within the State of Tennessee, round trips are sold for one fare plus 25c; without the State round trips for one and one-half fare.

It is the plan of the Board to make the August Conference a great inspirational educational meeting. Further information concerning plans and the program will be made public later.

OUR MISSIONARY CAMPAIGN.

To the Pastors and Laymen of the Mississippi Conference:

Dear Brethren: There has never been a time since the days of the Apostle Paul when the opportunities for missionary enterprise were so numerous or so compelling as to-day. The whole heathen world is astir, and if we will but hearken, we can hear a many-voiced cry similar to that which St. Paul heard at Troas, saying, "Come over into Asia," come over into Africa, come over into the isles of the sea, and help us." Notwithstanding the frequent and pathetic appeals for reinforcements that are coming from every foreign field, our great Church with her 2,000,000 members is not keeping pace with the needs of the hour, or with the advance being made by sister Churches. It is a deplorable fact that the present average contribution of Southern Methodists for the world's evangelization is only about forty-eight cents per member per annum. In order to evangelize the forty million people in heathenism who have been assigned to us, 1,600 missionaries will be required instead of the 254 we now have in the field, and an annual outlay of $3,000,000, which could easily be raised by an average contribution of $1.50 per member, or less than two postage stamps per week.

How greatly we all need a world-vision in order to get rid of narrowness and selfishness and bigotry. Several years ago when Mr. W. T. Ellis broached the subject of missions to the big, short-spoken first-mate on the deck of a Yangtze River steamer, the mate replied: "It seems to me that if a man has something which he thinks is the best and most important thing in the world—as a Christian surely does—then he isn't much of a man unless he tries to share that something with everybody else in the world." It is a lamentable fact that no matter how hard the times, many Methodists have plenty of money for automobiles, for fine clothing, travel, for the moving picture shows and theaters, but give only a pittance to missions, while the heathen are dying by the million without the gospel.

In his report for 1913 to the Annual Conference, Dr. W. W. Pinson, our General Secretary, says: "The progress and enlarging opportunities of the work call loudly for an increase in the force of missionaries, and the urgent need for better equipment continues and grows more serious. We sent out during 1912 thirty missionaries—eleven men and nineteen single women. The year is signaled by the opening of our Congo Mission and the sending of three missionaries and their wives. The assessment of $400,000 for Foreign, and $125,000 for Home Missions is far too small. But for the income from specials, it would be impossible to support the work."

Last year our Conference raised for Home and Conference Missions $9,551 on an assessment of $13,200; and $8,494.52 on an assessment of $12,100 for Foreign Missions. Specials reported, $756.29, the total for missions being $19,520.31. While this heavy shortage was due in some measure to distressing financial conditions, it is scarcely to be doubted that indifference and illiberality had most to do with it. Who will be rash enough to say that we cannot improve on this record? Is it not high time for us as a Conference to sound an advance in missionary offerings and endeavor? Are not our members amply able to do larger things?

Inasmuch as the best results can be secured only by concert of action, your Conference Board of Missions earnestly asks the hearty co-operation of every pastor and layman and Sunday school superintendent in carrying out the following missionary policy for the year 1914:

1. The observance of one Sunday in each month as Missionary Day by every Sunday school in our Conference, in connection with which a short missionary program should be given. Let us not fail to develop our Sunday schools and Epworth Leagues along missionary lines, as provided for by the Discipline and by the Sunday School Board and our General Board in a wisely-planned missionary policy. This is a field whose wondrous possibilities we are just beginning to realize. The Sunday schools of the Baltimore Conference raise annually over $25,000 for missions.

2. A vigorous educational campaign involving:

(a) The holding of a Missionary Rally or Mass Meeting on each charge as early as practicable.

(b) The diligent circulation of missionary literature, including our well-edited magazine, "The Missionary Voice." Every one of our churches ought to be supplied with a set of missionary charts, which preach a missionary sermon every Sunday in the year, and also with a missionary map of the world. An excellent map showing all our mission stations can be obtained for $1.00. Nothing is truer than that missionary intelligence and missionary liberality go hand in hand. Samples and supplies of missionary leaflets will be furnished by the Missionary Secretary on application.

3. A carefully planned every-member canvass and the introduction of the weekly or monthly offering in all our churches. This would help greatly in solving the problem of delayed collections and deficits, and wherever tried has produced gratifying results. Let our slogan be: "Every assessment in full on every charge and every district."

4. A missionary sermon by every pastor at least once every quarter. A missionary pastor makes a missionary people.

5. The taking of missionary collections early in the year. It is much to be regretted that many of our stronger churches pay little or nothing into the missionary treasury until Conference. Dr. W. W. Pinson states that our General Board is obliged to pay out annually $7,500 in interest on delayed collections, this sum being sufficient to support three married missionaries. Last year, up to September 1, our Conference had paid on the assessment for Foreign Missions only $955. This ought not so to be. The brethren of the South Georgia Conference have for a number of years raised their assessment for Domestic Missions by April 1, and their assessment for Foreign Missions by June 1. May we profit by their example!

6. The raising of specials by some of our larger churches and Sunday schools, which have for years, it may be, been content with merely raising the assessments, and which are amply able to do larger things. The Sunday school at Fifth Avenue Church, Laurel, has recently assumed a $300 special for Huchow Hospital, China. May we not expect other churches and Sunday schools to do likewise?

7. United daily prayer for the quickening of missionary interest and for the development of greater liberality among our membership for the divine blessing upon our missionaries at home and abroad and upon the various mission fields of the Church. Greater than our need of increased offerings and more workers is the need of prayer to him who has given us the task of evangelizing the whole world, and who has said: "If ye shall ask anything in my name, I will do it."

Let us unite our efforts and prayers in making this the best year in missionary offerings and enthusiasm that our Conference has yet known.

Yours in the Master's cause,

M. M. BLACK,

Conference Missionary Secretary.

ONE OF THREE, WHICH?

Statistics are said to be dry things, but a casual glance at Table No. 1 of the Minutes of the recent session of the North Mississippi Conference reveals a ludicrous state of affairs. It would be ludicrous if it were not serious. This table of our Minutes is a refutation of the old adage that figures don't lie. They do. These figures do not properly represent our situation in North Mississippi. The Secretaries are not to blame, neither is the publisher of the Minutes, for the inconsistencies appearing in this table. The Secretaries handle only such figures as are turned in in the reports. They are not manufacturers of figures, but only can stand up and say to us, "Such as we have give we to you."

The particular point to which I refer is the fact that our increase in membership, as shown by the Minutes, is in a state of uncertainty. Our present total membership is put down as 56,919. The total last year is put down as 56,432, giving us a net gain of only 487. This looks like a final answer to the question of the Bishop, "What is the net gain for the year?" But I submit that this answer is not correct. Look at some other figures on page 62. There were 2,845 additions on profession of faith, and 2,759 additions by certificate and otherwise. According to these figures we had 5,604 persons to join our Church last year in the North Mississippi Conference. We lost by death, certificate and otherwise 3,579. If figures tell the right sort of tale we took in 2,025 more people than we lost: 5,604 represent all who came into our Churches on the various charges, and 3,579 represent all who went out of our Churches by the various ways. Then it looks like we came out ahead, not by the amount of 487 persons as indicated elsewhere, but by the much larger number of 2,025.

But look again! Here are some more figures. Our total membership one year ago was 56,432, but in column two of page 62, we have 54,474 members reported last year. This is the number the preachers say were reported last year; so if this be taken as the correct membership one year ago, you must add 1,958 souls to the list. So, after all, if 54,474 represent our strength one year ago, and that is what these figures profess to do, and 56,919 is our membership now, would not the difference between these two numbers represent our net gain for last year? If so, our gain was 2,445. Now, which figure is the correct one?

It would be a great thing for us if we knew how to make our reports and make them correctly. This subject is worthy the earnest consideration of the delegates to the General Conference, and I most respectfully lay it before them.

MRS. SOPHIA D. BELL.

Mrs. Sophia Douglass Bell, one of the oldest and most honored women of Sumner County, died last Friday evening, Jan. 9, at the home of her daughter, Mrs. Z. F. Green of Gallatin. She was laid to rest Sunday morning at the old Douglass burying ground where four generations of her kindred sleep.

Mrs. Bell was in the 91st year of her age. She was born October 13, 1823 on Station Camp Creek at the old Green homestead and her long life was passed in Gallatin and vicinity. She was the daughter of Col. Louis Green, a gallant soldier of the war of 1812, and his wife, Margaret Douglass. Mrs. Bell was a scion of some of the oldest families of the State and was related by blood to the Douglasses, the Edwards, the Cages, the Greens, the Lauderdales and others whose names find a large part in the history of Sumner County. Her mother died when she was quite young and she was reared by her uncle Bennett Douglass and her aunts, the Misses Sophia and Elizabeth Douglass. At the age of nineteen years she married Thomas H. Bell, a prominent farmer and stockman who died in 1869. Of this union eleven children were born. Of these nine survive. William D. Bell was killed at the battle of Chickamauga and a daughter, Mrs. Margaret Bell Pardue, died nearly three years ago. Five sons and four daughters are living as follows: Kleber M. Bell and Judge B. D. Bell of Gallatin; Rev. John W. Bell of Mississippi; Tyree L. of Texas and Thomas H. of Oklahoma; Mrs. Z. F. Green and Mrs. F. H. Dunklin of this county; Mrs. George Doubleday and Mrs. Richard Douglass of Nashville. She is survived also by forty-one grandchildren and great grandchildren.

Mrs. Bell was truly a mother in Israel. For seventy-six years she was a member of the Methodist Church, having joined the old Pleasant Hill Church on Station Camp Creek under the ministry of Rev. Robert Hatton. Faithfully she kept the vows and fulfilled the obligations taken when a girl of fourteen years. She passed away saying almost with her last breath, "Blessed Lord, I have put my hand in yours, take me." She was modest and retiring in disposition, was a woman of strong convictions and to these she strictly adhered. Well educated and a lover of good books, she was a strong personality and a power for good in the generations through which she lived.—From the Sumner County (Tenn.) News.

CONCERNING BROTHER HARRIS' STATEMENT.

The letter in the New Orleans Advocate last week from our dear Brother W. C. Harris, now at Uvalde, Tex., should stir into loving action all of our hearts. By private correspondence with him and others where he lived, I have known all the time of his painful contest with disease and want. It has been a struggle that many strong men would have gone down in, but his heroic soul still hopes and fights. He is at the crisis now and we must help him quickly. Let every preacher in North Mississippi help, sending his own and his friends' contribution by the next mail. There should be not less than 100 persons who would send $5 each. Send your help to him, and write him a good letter, too. Do it to-day; do not wait until next week.

Earnestly,

TRUE TO MOTHER.

Harold and Ralph were walking along the street when Ralph, with a smile, took off his hat to a lady on the other side.

"Who is that lady?" asked Harold.

"That is my mother."

"Do you always take off your hat to your mother?"

"Why, of course I do. Don't you?"

"I do to other ladies."

"Well, my mother's about the nicest lady I know. I think she's worth being polite to!"—Elinor's Herald.

A DOG THAT OBEYED HIS MISTRESS.

One day Betty and Bouncer went out for a stroll. On the edge of the wood Betty spotted a lady's slipper and picked it. Then she saw another a little farther in the wood and picked that. She kept on finding them and going deeper and deeper into the wood.

By and by she decided to go back, but the first thing she knew she was in a dreadful tangle of briars. Then she got into a swamp. Next she came to some tall pine trees that she had never seen before. She looked down at Bouncer and Bouncer looked up at her and, wasn't it strange, Bouncer never thought but that Betty knew the way home, and Betty never dreamed that Bouncer did. She threw her arms around his neck and burst into tears.

"We're lost, Bouncer!" she cried. "What shall we do?"

"Bouncer uttered a few short barks.

"Can't you find the way home, Bouncer?" she asked, suddenly remembering that dogs always know the way home. Bouncer wagged his tail.

"Go home, Bouncer!" shouted Betty.

This wasn't just the way Bouncer wanted to help.

"Go home!" cried Betty, stamping her foot.

Bouncer looked the picture of misery. The last thing he wanted to do was to go home and leave Betty. But she had said go, and go he must, so off he trotted.

And Betty followed. It didn't seem the right way at all, but she trusted Bouncer and pretty soon they were safe out of the woods with Betty's own dear home in plain sight.—Frances J. Delano in Our Dumb Animals.

THE STORY OF A GOLD EAGLE.

The soul that casts its burden upon the Lord will be sustained, even though the billows may seem ready to overwhelm it. If the burden is not taken away, strength will be given sufficient to sustain it. The following story, though old, is yet a good illustration of this truth:

A good many years ago a merchant missed from the cash drawer a gold eagle. No one had been to the drawer, it was proved, except a young clerk whose name was Weston. The merchant had sent him there to make change for a customer, and the next time the drawer was opened the gold eagle had disappeared. Naturally, Weston was suspected of having stolen it, and more especially as he appeared a few days after the occurrence in a new suit of clothes. Being asked where he had bought the clothes he gave the name of the tailor without hesitation; and the merchant, going privately to make inquiries, discovered that Weston had paid for the suit with a twenty-dollar gold piece.

That afternoon the young clerk was called into the merchant's private room and charged with the theft.

"It is useless to deny it," the merchant said. "You have betrayed yourself with these new clothes, and now the only thing that you can do is to make a full confession of your fault."

Weston listened with amazement; he could hardly believe at first such an accusation would be brought against him, but when he saw that his employer was in earnest he denied it indignantly, and declared that the money he had spent for the clothes was his own, given to him as a Christmas gift a year ago. The merchant sneered at such an explanation, and asked for the proof.

"Who was the person that gave it to you? Produce him!" he demanded.

"It was a lady," answered Weston, "and I can't produce her, for she died last spring. I can tell you her name."

"Can you bring me anybody that saw her give you the money or knew of your having it?" asked the merchant.

"No, I can't do that," Weston had to answer. "I never told any one about the gift, for she did not wish me to. But I have a letter from her somewhere, if I haven't lost it, that she sent with the money, and in which she speaks of it."

"I dare say you have lost it," the merchant sneered. "When you have found it, sir, you can bring it to me, and then I will believe your story."

Weston went home with a heavy heart. He had no idea where the letter was. He could not be sure that he had not destroyed it; and yet unless he could produce it his character was ruined for he saw that the merchant was fully convinced of his guilt, and appearances, indeed, were sadly against him. He went to work, however, in the right way. He knelt down and prayed to God to help prove that he was innocent, and then he began to over-haul the contents of his desk and trunk and closet.

He kept his papers neatly, and it did not take long to see that the letter was not among them. He sat down with a sense of despair, when he was convinced of this. What else could he do? Nothing but pray again for help and guidance and strength to endure whatever trouble God might choose to send upon him.

"When I arose from my knees," he said, telling the story years afterward, "I happened to catch my foot in an old rug that I had nailed down to the carpet because it was always curling up at the edges. The nail at the corner had come out, and stooping down to straighten the rug I saw a bit of paper peeping out. I pulled it from its hiding place, and it was the letter."

"How it got there I don't know. The fact that I had found it was enough for me, and if I hadn't gone on my knees again to give thanks for such a deliverance I should be ashamed to tell you the story now."

"I brought the letter to my employer. It proved my innocence, and he apologized. A month afterward the gold piece was found in Mr. Finch's overcoat pocket. He had never put it in the cash drawer at all, though he thought he had. He raised my salary on the spot to pay for his unjust suspicions; and I have never yet repented of trusting the Lord in my trouble."—The Christian.

A PRAIRIE DOG COLONY.

A prairie dog settlement in Colorado is estimated to contain 500,000,000 inhabitants. Were the snakes, owls, rabbits, lizards and horned toads which live with the dogs, to be counted in, the population of the place would reach the billion mark.

The figures are not strictly accurate, for the government has never counted these dogs in the census. But any one who has seen such a city knows there are over one hundred to the acre, and this city is one hundred and forty miles long by fifty wide, containing 4,000,000 acres.

They dig deep burrows with so many chambers that the animal which is being put through their city will have to destroy a large number of dogs and their homes in order to avoid accidents from having to go back.

This city was founded centuries ago. It has been known to be about its present size for fifty years. Families grow rapidly, and the young ones stay at home till there is not room enough for all and some are pushed out to dig homes for themselves.

They live on four kinds of food, namely, roots of wiregrass, tender green shoots of sagebrush and greasewood. These are the only specimens of plant life found in the western deserts where prairie dogs are found. In spite of the sameness of their fare they manage to keep sleek and fat on food which a ground squirrel would consider starvation diet.—Our Dumb Animals.

PAUL'S LEADERSHIP.

Paul was a born organizer and leader of men. His judgment was keen and sure and he was an original thinker. He was firm and just in admonition, in advice, and reproof. And the spirit of tenderness and love threads all of his apostolic administration. He wrote the Corinthians that he had reproved them out of much affliction and anguish of heart—not that they should be grieved, but that they should know the love which he held in great abundance toward them. Those Corinthians stood in need of severe reproof. Paul had administered his rebuke in no uncertain terms. He was also wont to give the admonition that all the Christian graces and virtues be shown wherever the Church was found. He advised the young preachers who were sent out to carry the gospel in such a manner as to bring forth the best spiritual fruit within them. Even Peter felt the keenness of the great Apostle's logic when he thought Peter had erred at Antioch in acting contrary to his (Peter's) expressed opinions at Jerusalem just before.

The New Testament chronicles of the beginning of Christianity evidence the wisdom of organization and leadership. Over and over again, the people were reminded to listen to reproof and to give heed to those who had authority over them. There seems to be expressed in the New Testament the idea that if a man is a leader in the Church, he has a right to be in authority, since he is fitted for the place. The very fact that he occupies the high office seems to be evidence. The assumption is, of course, that he occupies this place through the providence of God. Paul felt called to be an Apostle, but who ordained him? He was called of God. The leadership of Paul was God's leadership and it carried authority.

And the Spirit of God is still in the Church. He will doubtless raise up leaders for its advancement continually. This has been the method of the advancement of the Church from the beginning. Whatever factions, individual thinking, and separations, may come God will care for the unity of his Church. Many are the ills that are attributed to the church organization of to-day, and many are the remedies named from many sources. Socialism, evidenced in the Church or elsewhere, if it tends to make every individual a boss to the detriment of the best interests of all in bringing discontent and unrest, certainly seems to be wrong. The history of the past shows there are not many who are fitted for great leadership. There are not many, comparatively speaking, like Paul, Martin Luther, and John Wesley. Many have taken hold of the reins of leadership but were unable to maintain their authority. Few could have driven the chariot of Ben Hur. A man of ordinary ability could never have filled the imperial chair of Caesar. The assumption of leadership is something very great. Some one has said that the mistakes even of the great were colossal.

And, on the other hand, many people cannot do without the leadership of others. Some of those who boast, "If we could only have the authority they would make of all!" Paul could have been trusted to maintain his normal judgment and proper moral and spiritual equilibrium without the pressure of environment, but how many more could thus stand in the shoes of Paul? We usually need all the influence for the right, the authority exercised, to hold us true, that we can get. We may claim to be overworked. Taskmasters are hard. The labor of the day is from the rising of the sun till it goes down, and there is no time for recreation. Perhaps it is well. Our efforts at least under such circumstances will not be misspent.

There is a great difference in men whether we desire to recognize it or not. God has fitted some to preach the gospel and some to listen to preaching. There are those who are to lead even in the great organization of the Church. Whatever is the befitting place it should be occupied with the proper spirit. The spirit of humility in the leader, as Paul had, is as necessary as in the hosts that are being led. And to be able to listen to advice, to admonition, and even to words of reproof, is a saving quality, and doubtless has helped to make the Church a success. And it is often as wise to be led as it is to lead.

"GOOD SAMARITAN" BANKS.

A new financial institution seems about to come into existence; indeed, it has already made its appearance. It is what Mr. W. J. Bryan calls a "Good Samaritan" bank to rescue those who have fallen among thieves. The plan is to start at Chicago and establish in the leading cities of the country a chain of banks that are to be operated in the interest of working men and the poor generally in such a manner as will deliver them from the loan sharks that have been preying upon them so long. It is stated that money will be loaned in small sums and at the lowest possible rate of interest, and that the only collateral required will simply be the endorsement of some fellow wage-earner. It is also proposed, in order to encourage working people to become thrifty and save money, to accept certificate deposits, on which a reasonable rate of interest will be paid. The leader in this movement is Mr. Julius Rosenwald, of Chicago, who is said to have the backing of some of the leading multi-millionaires of New York.

The cynical man of the world will probably sneer at this undertaking and prophesy failure. But it is stated that the Industrial Loan Company of St. Louis has been operating along similar lines for more than a year, and presents a record that is quite encouraging. It is as follows: "The concern is capitalized at $200,000. During its year of business, 4500 loans were made, totaling $424,000. Of this amount, about one half of 1 per cent, or $1800, was lost on worthless negotiations. Not more than fifty endorsers were compelled to pay for defaulters, and several of these losses are being refunded by the makers of the loans through the bank. Since we commenced business we have forced nineteen loan sharks to close their doors. There are now only twelve concerns of that character in the city and their clientele is decreasing. We were forced to change our location three times because of our quarters becoming crowded. It is estimated that more than $17,000 was saved by customers in usurious interest."

It strikes us that this method of helping the poor is a happy inspiration. In our judgment, it is a far wiser way of assisting them than by the straight-out bestowal of charity, since it tends to preserve their self-respect and to develop in them a spirit of self-help and independence. There is much golden-hearted honesty among those who have little of the world's goods and who have to struggle fiercely to keep the wolf from the door. The Wise Man was right when he said, "The curse of the poor is their poverty," and it will be a glorious day on earth when the extortioner is no longer allowed to fleece them. One of the most propitious signs of the times is that Governments are concerning themselves more and more with the principles of social justice and with the task of improving the condition of the masses. The "Good Samaritan" bank is a product of the spirit of the age.

We quote, as worthy of consideration, the following words from an editorial in The Commoner by our distinguished Secretary of State, who yet belongs to the fraternity of the tripod: "Philanthropy and 5 per cent may yet go hand in hand, for 'Good Samaritan' banks would render a reasonable profit, besides rendering a helpful service. * * * Here is a field for the Church. If Christians who hold watered stock would dispose of it and use their money to make life brighter for the worthy poor, the churches would be brought nearer the struggling masses and the day of universal brotherhood would be hastened."

AN EXCELLENT NEWSPAPER UTTERANCE.

The modern daily paper is much berated by the moralists of our time, and perhaps to some extent deservedly so. But there are few secular journals without redeeming qualities; if they pour forth over the country a vicious stream of matter, they also scatter abroad much that is good. We doubt if many of them are intentionally bad. The world wants to hear of the things that are unusual, and hence they are most paraded in their pages. It is because vice is less common than virtue that its outcroppings excite so much attention. Quite a number of daily papers come to our table, and there is not a one of them that does not often contain splendid utterances that would adorn the columns of any religious weekly in the country. As a sample of these, we reproduce the following editorial which recently appeared in the St. Louis Republic, under the caption, "The Modern Missionary."

"The philosophy of Kipling that 'West is West and East is East and never the twain shall meet,' was challenged in the news of yesterday. In St. Louis Archbishop Harty, speaking of his experience in the Philippines, said he felt 'as if in a catechism class, so earnest and anxious were the natives to learn about Christianity.' And in Kansas City, addressing the student volunteer convention, Dr. Kato of Japan told of conditions in his country; how 'the old faiths are losing their hold, but as yet nothing has taken their place.' From Latin America came a similar message, voiced by Dr. Speer and Bishop Kinsolving, emphasizing the needs of more missionaries there.

"As laymen we may not fully share the religious enthusiasm of him who wears the chasuble or of him who carries the Cross into pagan lands; but the practical point of this striking array of testimony adduced, without design, by the day's news is the tremendous fact that the world, humanly speaking, is a very small place; that the problems of the brown man and the yellow man are about the same as those of the white man, and are solved, or may be solved, by the same agencies.

"What, then, is our duty? Our missionaries make answer. In the same way the enlightened stranger, like Dr. Kato of Japan, replies. They tell us that the fellow in Tokio or Manila or Rio Janeiro is much the same sort of chap as we have here in St. Louis. He has the same desires, the same needs, the same measure of strength, the same weakness, the same kind of fight to make. He knows the same joy at victory, the same remorse at defeat. In short, we are all members of God's great family, and if one branch of the house has discovered a better way of living it is incumbent upon it, for the honor of the name of manhood, to give the other members of the family the benefit of its knowledge.

"The modern American missionary is not solely concerned with substituting one ritual for another. That change is necessary and justifiable because of the changes that accompany it—the cleaner, higher, more hopeful ways of living, thinking and being.

"A religion must be judged by what it does for its followers in the very practical business of every-day life. In the acid test of comparison Christianity comes out with colors flying as high and bright as the stars. It is on that proposition, and that it is as practicable in the East as in the West, that the American missionary asks for our support."

PAST THE TWO MILLION MARK.

According to the Nashville Christian Advocate, the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, had last year a net gain of 46,231, which makes our present membership, including traveling and local preachers, 2,004,880. There was a net gain of 221 in the number of itinerant ministers, bringing the total number in the Church up to 7203, and an increase of 197 local preachers, of which we now have in the connection 4946. The enrollment in our Sunday schools is 1,614,917, an increase during the past year of 103,585, as compared with the usual gain of about 85,000 per annum, and of about 15,000 the year preceding. There was a slight decline in the Epworth League membership, which is 133,380. The gain in church buildings was 184; we now have 17,006 houses of worship, valued at $53,633,491. The amount paid on the regular assessments for foreign missions was $393,943, a gain of $34,340, and for home and conference missions, $434,943, a gain of $23,490. Specials for missions brought in the sum of $132,777, and including them, it is estimated that the total increase for missions was more than $100,000. These figures do not include the moneys raised by the women's societies, which doubtless went considerably above the half million mark. The church extension receipts footed up $209,414, an increase of $2185, and the amount paid the American Bible Society was $22,257, a gain of $785. It is estimated that the receipts on the assessments for education will show an advance of at least $25,000.

A comparison of the figures shows that our numerical gain during the quadrennium now ending has fallen considerably short of the preceding one. In the years from 1906 to 1910 we had an increase of 207,754, an average of 51,438 per annum, while in the years from 1910 to 1914 the total gain has been 170,108, a yearly average of 42,527. And, of course, the decline in the percentage of gain would look even worse. While we have much to encourage us, manifestly we need to hestir ourselves, that we may go forward with a swifter pace.

PERSONAL AND OTHER NOTES.

The First Methodist Church of New Orleans has had 38 additions since the beginning of the new Conference year.

What about the circulation of the Advocate in your charge, Brother Pastor? This is the best time of the year to take up the work of placing it in the homes of your people.

The work on our Carrollton Church, this city, continues to progress favorably. It is expected, if the good weather continues, that the walls will be up and the roof on in about three weeks.

We acknowledge ourselves indebted to Rev. J. L. Blackwell, of Vancleave, Miss., for two new and three renewal subscriptions. He has entered hopefully upon his work in that pleasant field.

A gentleman in our office a few days since stated that Rev. H. W. Bowman has taken hold of his work on the Baton Rouge District like a veteran, and that he is making a fine impression wherever he goes.

Rev. B. P. Fullilove, of Rienzi, Miss., continues to press the claims of the Advocate in his rounds. Up to date, he has given us 5 new and 2 renewal subscriptions. We are grateful for his kindly interest in our paper.

Rev. R. I. Collins, who continues to make proof of his ministry at Cockrum, Miss., forwarded us four subscriptions to the Advocate a few days since. A brief report of his work will appear in our columns next week.

A card from Rev. H. P. Lewis, of Jackson, Miss., to the Publisher, which was dated Jan. 24, stated that he was quite unwell with la grippe. We trust that he is better ere this, and that he will soon completely recover from his illness.

The following brethren, to whom acknowledgment has not been made elsewhere, have favored us with two or more subscriptions within the past few days: W. H. Lane, Eden, Miss., 6; Rev. P. H. Howse, McLain, Miss., 4; Rev. L. A. McKeown, Byhalla, Miss., 6.

Rev. T. L. Houston, of Slate Springs, Miss., has our thanks for a club of 8 subscribers. Of his work, Brother Houston says: "I am getting along nicely and am delighted with my charge. The people have been exceedingly kind, and the outlook is quite hopeful."

Rev. J. B. King, of Vaughan, Miss., forwarded to our office seven subscriptions with a check to correspond, on Jan. 20. We scarcely need to say that we highly appreciate his good work in behalf of the Conference organ, which we hope will re-enforce him in his charge and prove a blessing to his people.

We were in error some weeks ago when we stated that Rev. P. A. Sowell, who is serving the Jeanerette (La.) charge, was transferred to the Louisiana Conference. Brother Sowell still retains membership in the Tennessee Conference, in which he holds the supernumerary relation. He is serving as a supply in Louisiana.

Rev. D. A. Morris, who held a number of revival meetings in this State during the year 1913, expects to begin evangelistic work in Louisiana about March 1. Anyone who may desire his services may address him at Mooringsport, La., as his brother, Rev. C. M. Morris, will attend promptly to the matter of arranging dates for him.

We regret to be informed of the sorrow that has come to Rev. and Mrs. J. A. Hall, of Grenada, Miss., in the death of their little son, which occurred on Sunday morning, Jan. 18, and notices of which appear elsewhere in this issue of the Advocate. May the Heavenly Father have these bereaved parents in his gracious keeping.

Rev. P. O. Lowrey has entered upon his pastorate at Kentwood, La., with characteristic energy, and the work is responding to his efforts. Brother Lowrey sent us an installment of Louisiana Sunday School Notes this week, but they reached us too late for this issue of the Advocate. We are pleased to have him continue to write for this department of our paper.

Bishop James Atkins and Mr. J. R. Pepper, of Memphis, visited Corinth, Aberdeen, and other places in North Mississippi last week in the interest of the Junaluska (N. C.) enterprise. We notice that at Aberdeen, in order to bring the men of the Church together for a conference with them, Mr. Pepper gave a laymen's banquet at the Clopton Hotel on the evening of Jan. 21.

The Amite (La.) charge is fortunate this year in having as its pastor Rev. J. F. Foster, who already has made a fine impression. Brother Foster is a man who studies and who gives his people messages that have been carefully prepared. He also excels in the detailed work of the Church. He is this year the Publisher of the Louisiana Conference Minutes, which are being printed in the Advocate office.

Rev. W. V. Shearer, of Coffeeville, Miss., writes: "Everything is going well with us in this charge. To our great pleasure and profit, we had with us Rev. V. C. Curtis, our new Sunday School Field Secretary, last Sunday, Jan. 18. Besides his other work, he preached us two soul-stirring sermons. He is the right man in the right place. My advice to the preachers is to secure his services as soon as possible."

We take off our hat to Rev. W. A. Bowlin, of the Booneville (Miss.) Circuit, who sent us on Jan. 23 eleven subscriptions to the Advocate, ten of which, if we mistake not, were new. Things are happening up that way. However, we will not anticipate what this faithful pastor has to say about his work, but will let him speak for himself in our "Tidings from the Field Department" next week.

Rev. D. H. Crowson, of West, Miss., says: "I am pleased with my new field, and the people seem to be enthusiastic in their church work. A good interest is being manifested and prayers are going up for a revival." Among other things, Brother Crowson is mindful of the claims of the Conference organ, having sent us a few days since 6 renewals. May the Lord continue to bless his efforts to extend the kingdom.

We acknowledge the reception of an invitation to the celebration of the 25th anniversary of the wedding of Rev. and Mrs. W. J. Porter at their home in Bienville, La., on Friday evening, Feb. 6, 1914. We wish these worthy itinerants all possible happiness on this interesting occasion, and pray that they may have many recurring anniversaries of the day and year when their lives were blended into one in the sacred bonds of matrimony.

Dr. H. K. Carroll, who for many years has been publishing the statistics of the Churches annually, will again do so this year, but they will not appear in the New Orleans Christian Advocate first, as has been the case for a decade or more. They will be sent out this time simultaneously to all the religious journals of the country under the auspices of the Federal Council of the Churches of Christ in America, of which Dr. Carroll has lately become one of the Secretaries.

Rev. W. Schuhle, presiding elder of the Monroe District, writes: "After the session of the Louisiana Conference the following changes were made by Bishop Candler: W. T. Woodward was retained at Sicily Island, and Wilson Brown was appointed to supply Tickfaw; S. J. Davies was kept at Fisher, and J. F. Waltman was sent to Gilbert; and W. E. Akin, who had been assigned to Indian Bayou, and J. H. Hoffpauir, who had been appointed to Elmore, were exchanged."

Rev. W. D. Wendel reports conditions in his charge at Pontotoc, Miss., to be prophetic of a fruitful year, especially in spiritual things. He and his people have been nobly struggling to clear their fine new house of worship of all indebtedness, and that the Lord should pour out his blessings upon them as a reward for their fidelity and sacrifices is but in keeping with his promises. We trust that the fondest hopes of this energetic pastor may be fully realized.

We are much gratified to learn of the valuable property that has been added to the campus of Grenada College, of which President Countiss writes on another page. It is to be hoped that this is the beginning of a forward movement in behalf of this institution which will procure the needed new building and provide for it a more ample equipment in every way. The record which the college has made during the three years of Brother Countiss' incumbency is a most excellent one.

From Goodwill, La., under date of Jan. 23, Rev. G. D. Anders writes as follows: "I am completing my first round on the Wesley charge. We are having large congregations and a fine interest. We are expecting to have an old-fashioned revival, and the Lord will not disappoint us. I take this method of informing the brethren that I am in a position to give them any information that they may desire concerning the matter of securing transportation over the branch railway lines running parallel with the V. S. & P. road."

Mrs. Perry E. Duncan, of West Point, Miss., in a note to the Editor, speaks tenderly of the decease of her sister, Mrs. Lena (Smith) Mosely, who recently was summoned into the Master's presence, leaving a little son, three years old. It seems sad indeed that she should have been taken when the future apparently held so much in store for her; but the Heavenly Father knows what is best. We deeply sympathize with all upon whom the shadow of this bereavement has fallen, and pray that they may have the comforting influence of the Holy Spirit.

Brother J. R. Ables was in our office Monday of this week, having come to New Orleans with his wife, who is in the Presbyterian Hospital for medical treatment. We are pleased to know that the physicians take a hopeful view of her case, and we trust that she will soon be much improved. Brother Ables stated that Tangipahoa Parish has the promise of a bumper fruit and vegetable crop, and that the business outlook up that way is very encouraging. He spoke in terms of high appreciation of Rev. J. B. Williams, our pastor at Ponchartroula, who is said to be starting off finely.

In a business note to our office, Rev. S. W. Vowell, of Chester, Miss., says: "Brother Shipman held our quarterly conference on January 17 and 18. He preached two most excellent sermons and conducted the business of the Church with great satisfaction. The Durant District is greatly pleased with him. I have had sickness in my family for the past two months (my wife has been critically ill), and I have not yet been able to move to Chester; but I hope to do so soon." We regret to know that Brother Vowell's family has been thus afflicted, and we pray that the suffering ones may be speedily restored to their accustomed health.

Col. Thomas H. Lewis, of Opelousas, La., an able lawyer and a distinguished citizen, died in the Touro Infirmary in New Orleans on Jan. 22, after a somewhat extended illness. He was the son of Seth Lewis, who was at one time Chief Justice of Mississippi, and was a law graduate of Tulane University. He took a deep interest in public affairs and was known and honored throughout the entire State. He rendered signal service in the great anti-lottery fight and contributed largely to the destruction of that gigantic evil. He was an official member of our Church at Opelousas, where his remains were laid to rest. He was in the 78th year of his age. We extend sympathy to the hereaved.

In a note to the Advocate office, bringing us five new subscriptions and two renewals, Rev. Eugene Johnson, of Ripley, Miss., says: "I am entering upon my fourth year in this charge hopefully. My desire and prayer is that it may be the most fruitful one of the quadrennium for good. The pastor and his wife are rejoicing over the privilege of remaining another year with this choice people. Dr. Murry has recovered sufficiently from his fall to be able to go all about the house in his roller chair. This is exceedingly gratifying to his host of friends. By the same means of locomotion, we hope soon to see him at church. I must not forget to say that the people warmly welcomed me upon my reassignment to them as pastor, and that they remembered us with many good things during the Christmas season."

In a note to the Editor, Hon. G. T. Fitzhugh of Memphis, one of the leading lawyers for the Church in the Vanderbilt suit, states that he expects a decision to be rendered in the case within the next two or three weeks. We are indebted to Mr. Fitzhugh for copies of both the original and supplemental briefs filed in the Supreme Court of Tennessee. They make most interesting reading. We wish that some of the brethren who are disposed to lecture on how this fight ought to have been conducted would secure these and the other briefs that have been filed in the course of this litigation, together with the other records in the case, and read them. We rather think that if they would do this these Rip Vanwinkles would open their eyes a bit and somewhat modify the tenor of their remarks.

Brother W. S. Holmes, one of the leading laymen of our First Church at Baton Rouge, La., and the efficient superintendent of the Sunday school of that congregation, has recently spent several days in New Orleans. He came to this city to bring Mrs. Holmes to the Presbyterian Hospital for medical treatment, and we are pleased to state that she is reported to be much improved. While here, Brother Holmes favored our office with an appreciated call. He gave an encouraging account of the condition of Methodism in the Capital City of the State and spoke optimistically of its outlook. He is the Lay Leader of the Louisiana Conference, and elsewhere in this number of the Advocate may be found a statement from him outlining the plan of work that has been mapped out for the year.

RAY PARKER NESOM, son of Rev. J. D. Nesom and Mrs. Kate (Jones) Nesom, was born October 20, 1912, and died December 3, 1913. His mission to this world was a brief one and was soon finished; but not until he had made for himself a place in the affections of those nearest to him that cannot be filled. His was not a mission of long continued usefulness, nor of long and fierce struggles with adverse conditions; he neither felt the thrill of accomplishment nor the depression of failure; he knew not the joy of triumph nor the humiliation of defeat. But who will say that his mission was in vain? He came to bring greetings from the Commander-in-chief of the Church Militant, to a soldier of the Cross who was fighting his battles on a fiercely contested field, and to his no less brave companion who was abiding by the stuff. And for a little more than a year he brought heaven's sunshine to that itinerant's home. Then he went back to the heavenly Father who sent him, to make heaven more bright for these soldiers of the Cross when the war is over. May we finish our task as well as he did.

H. N. BROWN.

Mrs. MARTHA SUSAN DUMBLE was born near Jackson, Georgia, April 26, 1830, and died at Poplarville, Miss., Dec. 15, 1913. She was the daughter of Samuel and Rebecca Wilkinson. She joined the Methodist Church at Jackson, Georgia, at the age of 14 years, and was faithful to her church vows to the end. She was twice married: first, to Mr. Lou Goddard of Connecticut, who lived but a few years; and then to Mr. John Barr Dumble, editor of the Macon Telegraph. Much of her long life was spent in doing good to others. She was gentle, quiet, and unassuming, but steadfast in her purposes. She was a typical, Southern Christian woman. A few weeks before her death she called the writer to her bedside and talked with him freely of her past life and future hope, and made all the necessary preparations for her funeral, requesting that the Twenty-third Psalm be read in the service. She died at the residence of Mr. and Mrs. D. D. Durham with whom she had made her home for a long time. Her life was a long and useful one, and she passed quietly to her home and is at rest. MEMORIAL RESOLUTIONS.

(Resolutions of respect adopted by the fourth quarterly conference of the Greenwood Springs Circuit, North Mississippi Conference, 1913.)

Whereas, in the providence of God, he saw fit on the 25th day of July, 1913, to take from our midst, our friend, brother, and co-worker in the Church, Brother James S. Barton, who was an official of long standing in this charge; and

Whereas we shall miss him in the business sessions of our quarterly conferences; as well as his efficient work in the Church, therefore be it resolved:

1. That we fully realize that the Church has suffered a great loss, as he was one of our oldest and most useful members.

2. That we will cherish his memory, ever keeping in mind his good deeds, and forgetting his mistakes; that we sympathize with his heart-broken loved ones, and pray that God may console them with the sweet assurance that Brother Barton is at peace, where all the weary shall be at rest if they live and die in the Lord.

3. That a copy of these resolutions be spread upon the minutes of this Conference and a copy sent to the New Orleans Christian Advocate for publication. His pastor,

L. T. SARGENT,
For the Committee.

A LETTER FROM THE FRENCH MISSION FIELD.

Dear Brother Meek: I am glad to report that the Bourg Church in the French field has been honored for the second time, with a double wedding on the date of Jan. 3, 1914. The occasion was a magnificent one. There was not enough room in the church for all of the visitors. The contracting parties were Mr. Wilfred Authement and Miss Ovidia Saviole, and Mr. Charles O'Neill and Miss Hella Pontiff, Rev. T. V. Brethaupt and Rev. R. E. Martin jointly officiating.

I also wish to state that the French mission work here is in good condition. The outlook is very hopeful for this year. Last Sunday at the evening service I received into the Church 10 new members. These people came directly from the Catholic Church to ours. I think that this will be a banner year for the French mission.

The remainder of my letter is to the Christian laymen of Louisiana.

There is a place about twenty miles from my home where we have taken up work and made a good start, but unless we receive financial assistance to carry it on the interest awakened will die out. Now, my dear brothers, I, who am a local deacon, have to work in the field six days in the week in order to support my family, while on Sunday I preach and run a Sunday school and do all I can for the Master. Will not some brother whom the Lord has blessed with means send me about $50 dollars that I may carry on this work which is about to fall through. This money would pay my expenses and enable me to go there once a month.

In closing, I would say that I love every one of you and also I love the Church that we call the M. E. Church, South; but my heart is most of all with the poor, ignorant and neglected French people of our State. Yours for Christ,

R. E. MARTIN.

THIS GIRL IS A WONDER.

You can make dollars and dollars selling Pure Fruit Candy; so if you want more money than you ever possessed, send forty-eight two-cent stamps to cover expense of mailing seventy-seven Pure Food Formulas, and a set of assorted bon-bon moulds. I will help you start in business. I am glad to help others who, like myself, need money. People say "the candy is the best thing they ever tasted;" there lies the beauty of the business. You don't have to canvass; you sell right from your own home. I made $12.00 the first day; so can you. Isabelle Inez, Block 1371, Pittsburgh, Pa.

Tidings From the Field

Mooringsport, La.

We desire to express our appreciation of the good people of Mooringsport through the columns of the Advocate. We were very cordially received on our return to this charge, and since then have been the recipients of many generous gifts, a number of which were very pleasant surprises. Besides our joy-making gifts at the Christmas tide, we very recently received a generous supply of household necessities and $40 in cash to defray the expenses of our little son's trip to New Orleans where he took the Pasteur treatment. Mooringsport's assessment for the year 1914 is more than $100 in excess of that of 1913. "My heart's desire and prayer to God" is that I may be of great spiritual benefit to this people during this present Conference year.—C. M. Morris.

Mooreville, Miss.

We were very kindly received upon our return to this charge. Everything is going well with us. We are very pleasantly situated and are happy in the work. Our people are giving us their co-operation and we are praying and planning for great things for the Master this year. Our presiding elder, Rev. J. H. Mitchell, held our first quarterly conference on January 16. He was in fine shape, and, as usual, gave us a very able sermon. Our conference was very interesting and the collections were good. Our people are ready for service and we know the Lord is going to use them. We are not worthy of what they have done for us since our return. We are going to try to show our appreciation by helping them in every way possible. We are going to do our best. Pray for us.—Geo. A. Baker.

New Albany, Miss.

Dear Dr. Meek: I feel that the good people of New Albany deserve a note to the Advocate and "honorable mention" therein for the cordial, hearty reception they have given us here, and for the things they have done for the comfort of our household. The nice, large parsonage has been almost made new on the inside—every room has been re-papered and painted, the floors either stained or covered, and many other things done along this line. They have certainly been thoughtful and considerate. I do not think in all my ministry I have ever gone to a church so much alive—with all departments in such good working order. The finest kind of a spirit pervades all the congregation. Brother L. M. Lipscomb has a host of friends here; in fact, the town is his. To say he "wrought well" is too mild to express it; for God gave him abundant success. I find his tracks all over the town, and big ones, too (I do not refer to physical facts). It is a distinct blessing to have Dr. T. Cameron in the congregation. No sweeter spirited or saintlier soul lives than he. He is present at the preaching service every Sunday morning and almost every Sunday evening, and at most of the Wednesday evening prayer services. I am sure his many friends all over the State will be glad to know that he is still active in church work; in fact, I am beginning to feel that he makes a mighty good layman. I am going to make him my teacher in these things, in the hope that I, too, may learn to wear the "superannuate honor" with grace and usefulness, should that honor ever be bestowed on me. We are expecting a great year in our church. In the language of Haggai, it but remains for us to, "Be strong and work."—S. L. Pope.

Shubuta, Miss.

Dear Mr. Editor: For the first time in ten or twelve years, I suppose, I come with a short report to your paper. On the first day of last December, I left for Conference from Moss Point where we had spent two years, and in very many respects, very pleasant years too. I feel that I have some as good friends there as I have anywhere. Their many kindnesses, and especially, their visits and expressions of appreciation just as we were leaving, will never be forgotten. I went to Conference conscious of the fact that my work would in all probability be in some other field. On December 18, we arrived at Shubuta. We were met at the depot by several of the stewards and carried by them to the parsonage, and there we found some of the good women of the church, with everything needful for our comfort and happiness. The people continue to be kind and very thoughtful of the pastor and his family.

For four years I came to this town as the presiding elder of the district, and of course I met many familiar faces among the officials, and others of the church; but I was made to feel sad when I failed to see the pleasant face of Brother W. L. Weems, who went to his reward a few years ago. I will tell of some of the changes that have taken place during the last six years. Instead of the old parsonage we have a new one, one of the best in our Conference. And there has been added to the nice little church an annex containing eight or ten class rooms for Sunday school work. The church has a new roof and is freshly painted so as to correspond with the addition in every respect. You see, we are well equipped for work. I find some strong evidences of deep spiritual life on the part of a goodly number of the church members. There are 30 or 35 men who attend Sunday school regularly. Nearly all of the women in the church belong to the Woman's Missionary Society. They have 55 members, and carry on all of the departments of the work. They are a regular bee hive, meeting every week and generally twice a week. They read, sing, pray, and work. There are only 14 or 15 of the women of the church who do not belong to the society. These women raised last year a little more than $800. The Bible Study Circle is an interesting feature of their work. The stewards have assessed a good salary for the pastor, and will pay it. The first quarterly conference convened yesterday. Our presiding elder was at his best Sunday, and preached two very strong sermons. My, how Leggett does preach! Dr. Meek, you ought to hear him. The reports were good at the quarterly conference, about $500 collected to date for all purposes. Brother Jones reported more than $7,000 raised last year. He was here four years, and the people love him. I have agreed to outstrip him in just one way. I can make more noise than he does. I must even up some way. I find, very much to my gratification four or five who were just boys when I was on the District who are now, active members of the Board of Stewards; two of them are sons of the late W. L. Weems. "Surely the lines are fallen to us in pleasant places, and ours is a goodly heritage." I shall begin the canvass for the Advocate this week. Pray for us. Mr. Editor, come to see us; we will give you a fine congregation to preach to, and some new subscribers to the Advocate. Yours for success, W. M. SULLIVAN.

Sunday School

NEWS AND NOTES.

By Miss Elizabeth Kilpatrick.

Mrs. Thos. Mills, Southside, Corinth, has a fine class of teen age girls, who have chosen for their name "Win One." Mamie Timberlake is president, Mattie Belle Gable, secretary, and Louise McAnally, treasurer. Their motto is "All for Christ." They have their regular committees and in these every member is put to work. They take great interest in their business meetings and are doing good work under their excellent teacher.

The Houston Sunday school has an unusually good report: 296 church members and 340 Sunday school pupils, 3 organized classes and 16 on Cradle Roll, 12 taking Teacher-training, a graded school, and a worker's council. Present, as well as a large future success, can be realized by utilizing these fine accessories to Sunday school stability and possibility.

The Houston Circuit has a good percentage of pupils enrolled, 16 organized teen age classes in the six churches and 6 unorganized adult classes—these teen age boys and girls will far excel the less supple grown-ups if such a good long start ahead is maintained.

Starkville has 451 in Sunday school with 4 finely organized adult classes and one such teen age class. Some specially good work is being done in this progressive charge, and it reaches all over Mississippi as so many of the students of the A. & M. College find interest and profit in attending this Sunday school.

Superintendent S. B. White, West Point, has been making fine reports all the past year and his record of 402 in Sunday school, 55 on Cradle Roll and 45 in Home Department with 4 organized Wesley Adult Bible classes and 4 unorganized, is an excellent record. They have had a teacher-training class and possibly will resume it at an early date.

From Longview, Pastor F. H. McGee, writes he hopes to organize a good Sunday school in each one of his churches in January. At Longview there are 70 in Sunday school already, and 58 church members. Great things are expected from this charge when all the schools get in working order.

The organized classes of Batesville have such helpful and work-possible mottoes that they may prove interesting to other classes that find difficulty in selecting just such a definite goal toward which to work:

Class Number Six, Mrs. R. U. Price, teacher, and F. Kyle, president, "Every neighbor against himself, no neighbor against another."

The Golden Rule Class, motto, "The Golden Rule," Mrs. T. T. O'Bryant, teacher.

Philathea Class, Mrs. Lockhart, teacher, "Love ye and serve one another."

Frances Willard Class, Miss Nina Pollard, teacher, "For God and the Home."

"Lend a Hand" Class, Mrs. G. H. Ward, teacher.

Jane See Wesley Class, "With Love, serve one another," Mrs. Olive, teacher, and Mrs. C. B. Vance, president.

The men who smoke cigars in the city of Chicago alone spend more money for cigars every year than the entire Christian Church in the whole world contributes for foreign missions, and with what difficulty our missionary collections come!

So many classes complain of the difficulty of selecting practical missionary activities. Here is a list of tried and proven ones, which have helped school, church and community alike:

Distributed literature in the jail. Conducted religious services at the poor farm.

Provided equipment for local mission worker.

Planned leadership for missionary organization in the church.

Organized an extension Bible Class in a needy neighborhood.

Superintended mission schools.

Outfitted a home for mission workers in a city.

Boxes of clothing, books and toys sent to ministers' families on the frontier.

Secured property for settlement workers in a milling district.

Erected a hospital for a mission station in China.

Equipped the clinic for a hospital in China.

Provided pictorial material for use in foreign mission schools.

Assembled literature for distribution in institutions on foreign fields.

Projected Gospel street meetings.

Carried through the every-member canvass for the church.

Utilized the crowds assembled at a summer vacation camp to project and put through a missionary conference with daily sessions for a full week.

Gathered books for an alcove in a library in a school for mountain whites.

Operated an employment bureau.

Found rooms for stranger young people.

Kept a "house-to-rent" list for people, thus aiding them to secure better housing conditions.

Maintained an interpreter for the church.

Arranged "the Giving Christmas" in the public square in a Southern city.

COMB SAGE TEA IN

LIFELESS, GRAY HAIR

Look Young! Common Garden Sage and Sulphur Darkens so Naturally Nobody Can Tell.

Grandmother kept her hair beautifully darkened, glossy and abundant with a brew of Sage Tea and Sulphur. Whenever her hair fell out or took on that dull, faded or streaked appearance, this simple mixture was applied with wonderful effect. By asking at any drug store for "Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Hair Remedy," you will get a large bottle of this old-time recipe, ready to use, for about 50 cents. This simple mixture can be depended upon to restore natural color and beauty to the hair and is splendid for dandruff, dry, itchy scalp and falling hair.

A well-known downtown druggist says everybody uses Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur, because it darkens so naturally and evenly that nobody can tell it has been applied—it's so easy to use, too. You simply dampen a comb or soft brush and draw it through your hair, taking one strand at a time. By morning the gray hair disappears; after another application or two, it is restored to its natural color and looks glossy, soft and abundant.

KANSAS WOMAN HELPLESS.

Lawrence, Kas.—Mr. J. F. Stone, of this city, says, "My wife suffered for ten years from womanly troubles, during two years of which she was totally helpless. She was examined by many physicians, some of whom gave her up to die. Finally she began to take Cardui, and since then has greatly improved in health. The tonic, strengthening and restorative effects of Cardui, the woman's tonic, on the womanly constitution, are the most valuable qualities of this popular medicine. Cardui acts specifically on the womanly constitution. Half a century of success proves that Cardui will do all that is claimed for it. Try it for your trouble.—Adv.

JOHN HENRY COUNTISS HALL.

Five short months ago there came to the parsonage home in Grenada a bright and beautiful baby boy who immediately became the family pride and joy, especially of the parents, Rev. and Mrs. J. A. Hall. He was consecrated to the Lord in baptism and given every care and attention that love could bestow, responding as a lovely flower to the gardener's kindly cultivation and giving promise of usefulness and nobility. Alas for all our hopes of his earthly career, it was ended all too soon. Last Saturday he was taken suddenly ill with something like congestion and passed away in less than twenty-four hours. We laid him to rest on Sunday afternoon, the service being conducted by Rev. V. C. Curtis, Rev. R. A. Tucker and the writer. A glorious dawn will follow this night of darkness and a happy meeting this time of separation. May the heavenly Father comfort the sorrowing family. J. R. COUNTISS.

Grenada, Miss.

EDEN, MISS.

This is our second year on this charge, and the indications are very fine indeed for a good year. The people all seem willing to work. Our prayer meeting has greatly improved. The Sunday schools are working with renewed strength, and the Home Missionary Society has taken on new life, as is evidenced by the fact that several new members have been secured. Another evidence of growing interest in the work of the Church is that I am sending you four new subscribers to the Advocate and one renewal. We have a choice people to serve. Pray that we may be successful. Yours in the good cause, W. H. LANE, P.C.

AN INTERESTING PRAYER MEETING.

Pardon me for coming so often, but I feel constrained to send a few lines to the Advocate concerning a cottage prayer meeting I attended Jan. 18 in the community of one of my churches (Sartinville). It was announced to commence at 2 o'clock p. m. and at about this hour they began to arrive in wagons, buggies, surreys, and by horseback and on foot until two rooms of the house, gallery, and yard were almost full of men, women and children. The pastor was prevailed on to conduct the service, somewhat against his will, as he felt others present should do so, as is their custom.

After reading a short passage of Scripture and commenting on the same, he gave an opportunity for testimony and then came the interesting and impressive part of the service. Old men, young men, old women, young women and girls began to witness to the saving power of Christ. It was enough to "heighten the joy of angels" to see so many young people, with tears of joy streaming down their cheeks, get up and tell of their glorious and joyful inward experience of salvation, and ask the other Christians to pray that they might live right and help to save others.

After the oldest individual there, Brother J. O. Sartin, surrounded by loving friends and relatives, testified to the probability of his near departure according to the statement of his family physician, and others had expressed their desire for him to remain with them as their spiritual leader and counselor, the power of God fell upon us and we beheld a Pentecostal scene.

Later a young girl arose to "tell her experience" amid tears of joy (oh, what a heavenly glow she had on her face!), and as she sat down the Holy Ghost fell upon the assembly; and for about 10 minutes not a word was said, but some were crying for joy, others laughing, others praising God aloud, while the unsaved were struck with deep conviction. Indeed, God was there. Amen!

You say, "What about the lives of these people away from prayer meeting?" I say they are about the average. You say again, "What about their loyalty to the church?" I say they are loyal to the core. They attend church regularly, have the best Sunday school on the Circuit, give of their money and produce cheerfully and gladly to support the ministry. They paid $23 above their assessment in 1913.

Let all who read these lines pray that the good work may go on at Sartinville until the whole community is permeated with the presence and power of the living Christ.

J. A. WELLS.

HARRISTON (MISS.) CHARGE.

Dear Dr. Meek: I am well pleased with the outlook on this charge for the new year. The people at every Church gave the "new preacher" a hearty welcome, and especially here at Lorman they have been very mindful of the needs of his family and have been sending in all kinds of good things to eat. Now, Doctor, what would you do if you had a whole ham of meat at one time? Well, that is just what I did, and I feel more like preaching. I like to preach to these good people. Last Sunday when I was preaching I heard some one say, "Amen." I like to hear that; it helps a fellow, doesn't it, Doctor? And to beat it all, I hear but very little complaining about the boll weevil. Very few people have their mouths turned down at the corners! Nearly all are cheerful and smiling, and that makes me smile. I sometimes think of a rhyme that I heard a long time ago when I was a boy:

"Monkey sitting on a swinging limb,
He smiled at me, and I smiled at him."

One can scarcely keep from smiling when everybody else is smiling.

Well, there are a good many things that I would like to talk about, but I guess that you do not like fiction, and that I had better do something and then tell about it. Smiling is mighty good but it does not keep up the Advocate and feed missionaries, does it, Doctor? I am planning a campaign for every interest of the Church and I am not going to leave out the Advocate. You are giving us a good paper. Hurrah for you; now if I get you a good number of subscribers, you return the shout.—J. F. Campbell, P. C. Lorman, Miss., Jan. 20, 1914.

WALNUT GROVE, MISS.

In writing this notice of our arrival at the Walnut Grove parsonage, I will first say that which is uppermost in my heart: "Praise God for the good people of Walnut Grove." We arrived here on January 1, 1914, and found an excellent dinner awaiting us, which we enjoyed all the more because of the glad welcome we saw in every face, and flashing from every eye. The people have also given us an old-time pounding; they brought us everything from toys, nuts, and candy for the babies up to enough food supplies to last many weeks. One lady presented the preacher with a fat, young chicken; as the daughter of a minister, she knows our "weakness." Well, Amen! We were happy. The outlook is bright and I feel that we are to have a successful year here. Pray with us to that end.—E. H. Cooley.

"The love of God which flows through my thoughts is what tends to make me a better Christian."

ZEAL.

Zeal is an excellent thing, if it be the product of high moral motives, and directed by an intelligent plan to useful ends. The Word of God, which contains many exhortations to fervency in spirit and diligence in business, advises us that our zeal should be "according to knowledge." Fire burning in certain places is all right, and burning in certain other spots is all wrong. Life must have its emotive forces—and the purest and most permanent of these only the gospel of Jesus can supply—yet its emotion is not just for pretty sentiment, but for practical ends, and, while feeling may, and often ought to, run high, it should run straight and strong in channels cut out for it by a wise Christian stewardship and statesmanship.—Zion's Herald.

LIGHT THAT CANNOT DIE.

It is said that when John Keats, the poet, lay dying in Rome the most faithful watcher at his bedside was his friend, Joseph Severn. During the hours of darkness, a solitary candle illuminated the room and in case, overcome by weariness, he should drop asleep and allow this candle to burn out, Severn devised a plan by which it would light others automatically. At the base of the burning candle he tied a piece of thin twine, the other end of which he attached to the wick of a new candle some yards away. As the old end died out the expiring flame caught the twine, flickering up it like a fairy star and set light to the second candle. A third and a fourth was added, and the invalid's eyes never looked in vain for the cheering light.

So it is that the life brightly lived kindles the flame of brave living in other lives which, in turn, pass on the brightness. And so does the spirit remain immortal—"on earth as it is in heaven."—Continent.

EGOTISM.

Few of us have far to look for the fault of egotism. It may not show itself in boastful words—we may have too much taste for that; but what of the desire for praise, admiration, personal distinction which corrodes the services even of good men and women? Take care lest your very philanthropy and "work for God" is feeding your vanity and self-conceit. Sins of the spirit are as bad in the eyes of Christ as sins of the flesh. He never spoke a harsh word to the publican and sinner, but He lashed with His scorn the "Scribes and Pharisees, hypocrites." The sins which respectable people lightly commit every day of pride, indolence and indifference to the sufferings of the poor may be worse in His sight than the more flagrant ones of those not blessed with the same environment and opportunities of enlightenment.—Southern Churchman.

IF BACK HURTS USE SALTS FOR KIDNEYS

Eat Less Meat if Kidneys Feel Like Lead or Bladder Bothers You—Meat Forms Uric Acid.

Most folks forget that the kidneys, like the bowels, get sluggish and clogged and need a flushing occasionally, else we have backache and dull misery in the kidney region, severe headaches, rheumatic twinges, torpid liver, acid stomach, sleeplessness and all sorts of bladder disorders.

You simply must keep your kidneys active and clean, and the moment you feel an ache or pain in the kidney region, get about four ounces of Jad Salts from any good drug store here, take a tablespoonful in a glass of water before breakfast for a few days and your kidneys will then act fine. This famous salts is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia, and is harmless to flush clogged kidneys and stimulate them to normal activity. It also neutralizes the acids in the urine so it no longer irritates, thus ending bladder disorders.

Jad Salts is harmless; inexpensive; makes a delightful effervescent lithia-water drink which everybody should take now and then to keep their kidneys clean, thus avoiding serious complications.

A well-known local druggist says he sells lots of Jad Salts to folks who believe in overcoming kidney trouble while it is only trouble.

To mount from a workshop to a palace is rare and beautiful, so you think; to mount from error to truth is more rare and more beautiful.—Victor Hugo.

MRS. VEST FELT LIKE CRYING.

Wallace, Va.—Mrs. Mary Vest, of this place, says, "I hadn't been very well for three years, and at last I was taken bad. I could not stand on my feet, I had such pains. I ached all over. I felt like crying all the time. Mother insisted on my trying Cardui. Now I feel well and do nearly all my housework." No medicine for weak and ailing women has been so successful as Cardui. It goes to the spot, relieving pain and distress and building up womanly strength in a way that will surely please you. Only try it once.—Adv.

SHOES AT WHOLESALE

NEW ORLEANS CHRISTIAN ADVOCATE Readers are SAVING from ONE to TWO DOLLARS a PAIR by Ordering Their Shoes DIRECT FROM FACTORY BY PARCEL POST.

Would the cutting of your FAMILY SHOE BILL one-third or more mean a very big yearly saving to you? Figure it out. The present high cost of shoes is due to two things, the Middlemen's profits which the consumer must pay and the enormous decrease in raw materials. The new Parcel Post System gave us an idea. By selling our shoes direct to the wearer, cutting out the middlemen entirely, we could save the consumer fully a third on every pair of shoes and still make our usual wholesale profit. The plan is a great success. New Orleans Christian Advocate readers are realizing the opportunity of saving and great numbers are writing for our catalog which is sent free to anyone on request. It tells how cheaply high quality shoes can really be bought under this fair method of selling. Every shoe sold is guaranteed perfect in fit, material and workmanship—your money will be refunded if unsatisfactory. Write for your catalog to-day. A trial order will please and result in our getting your entire shoe trade. PARCEL POST SHOE CO., 258 Meeting Street, Charleston, South Carolina. (Advertisement.)

MISS M. BUCKLEY, Rec. Sec.

THE NASHVILLE BETHLEHEM HOUSE.

The Bethlehem House, at Nashville, has been in working order since October, 1913. It is located on the corner of Tenth Avenue and Cedar Street, and at almost every hour some feature of the work is in operation. The kindergarten has enrolled 56 little colored children, who enjoy the games and studies. The Knights of King Arthur and other ideal-inspiring clubs have enrolled 66 boys from twelve to sixteen years of age. The cooking classes, the Camp Fire Girls, the Mothers' Club—eleven different clubs and classes—already carry a membership of 320. This means that we reach that many colored people every week, and many of these several times a week.

MISSION STUDY.

Special attention is called to the picture stories by Fannie L. Kollock. It is a set of five large pictures of immigrant children. A story to be told by the teacher accompanies each picture, also a series of four-page leaflets for use by the children, containing small copies of the picture and simplified stories. The set, including the teachers' book, sells for 30 cents. This is very attractive, and should be largely used with the younger members of the Junior Division. Order from Smith and Lamar, Nashville, Tenn.

HEATHEN TEMPLES.

Every Home Mission Study Class should have the chart showing pictures of heathen temples in the United States and giving statistics concerning them. It costs only fifteen cents, and should be ordered from Miss Mabel Head, Nashville, Tenn.

"The Student Volunteer Movement began twenty-six years ago, with 'The evangelization of the world in this generation' as its watchword. The first emphasis was placed on the words 'of the world.' When the scope of the missionary movement was broadened to include all the countries of the globe, later the emphasis was transferred to the words 'in this generation.' Now the great need is to place a new stress upon the idea of 'evangelization.'—Robert E. Speer.

WANTED.

Helps for "China's New Day." The booklet of suggestions for the leaders for use with "China's New Day" was exhausted last spring, and there will be no reprint. A number of auxiliaries have organized classes using this text-book, and are calling for the Helps. Will not some leaders send their old copies to help these classes? Send to Miss Mabel Head, Nashville, Tenn.

MISSIONARY MEETINGS.

The mid-year Executive Committee meeting will be held in Nashville, beginning on February 4. The annual meeting of the Council will be held in Fort Worth, Texas, beginning on April 1. The Board of Missions will meet in Nashville on April 14.

MISSSES BENNETT AND GIBSON.

Misses Bennett and Gibson sailed from Rio de Janeiro, Brazil, December 17, coming by way of Trinidad, Colon, and Cuba. They expected to land in Cuba on January 10, visit our work at Cienfuegos and Matanzas; then at Key West and Thomasville, Ga., on their way to their respective homes. Their return is most anxiously awaited, particularly that definite action may be taken concerning the purchase of property in Rio de Janeiro.

THE NEGRO.

According to the census of 1910, there are 9,828,294 Negroes in the United States, of whom 8,875,661 are in the South. The increase for the last decade was 994,300, of which 882,155 are in the South. Maryland has 232,249; District of Columbia, 94,446; Virginia, 671,096; West Virginia, 64,173; North Carolina, 697,843; South Carolina, 835,843; Georgia, 1,176,987; Florida, 303,669; Kentucky, 261,656; Tennessee, 473,088; Alabama, 908,275; Mississippi, 1,009,487; Missouri, 157,452; Arkansas, 442,891; Louisiana, 713,874; Oklahoma, 137,612; Texas, 690,020. Almost forty per cent of all the Negroes in the United States are members of some Methodist or Baptist Church, and there are perhaps as many adherents to these faiths as communicants. The responsibility for proper religious leadership among the Afro-Americans of this country rests upon the white Methodists and Baptists. Since more than ninety per cent of the Negroes live in the South, the white Methodists and Baptists of the South must be charged with the direction of the religious life and activities of this people. The domestic and social life, the economic and industrial progress, the educational and religious development of the Negro must be safeguarded and promoted by the white people of the South. The Home Department will endeavor to inaugurate movements in our Southern towns and cities for the better housing of many Negroes, and better sanitary conditions of the communities. The life of Negroes on many plantations needs to be investigated by the Church. Ignorance, social evil, and moral destitution characterize much of that life. A missionary zeal for Africa will surely direct the Church to the Africans in the South.—J. M. Moore, D. D.

A HAWAIIAN ISLAND INCIDENT.

In one of the Hawaiian Islands a woman was noticed by a missionary at a great Sunday school celebration weeping as if her heart would break. When questioned by the missionary as to the cause of her weeping, she replied, "Why didn't the missionaries come sooner? With these hands of mine I have buried alive all of my own children, and my heart is broken. Oh, why didn't the missionaries come sooner to teach me better?" Thus it is that the very heathen themselves will rise up against us in the Day of Judgment and accuse us of our failure to give them the Gospel. Our disobedience to the divine command is resulting in the ruin and loss of the waiting millions in the lands of darkness. The Master has bidden us go, and yet we stand idly waiting.

WHY NOT ORDER AT ONCE?

Have just received supply of "Baptism as Related to Redemption." This is a booklet of thirty thousand words and contains many facts we had not met with before. It presents Christian baptism as taught in the patterns of the Old Testament as they relate to the crucifixion of Christ and the finished atonement.

Our methods of discussion throughout are sufficiently distinct from others to warrant a careful reading. Granting that much has been written, and wisely written, on the subject of baptism, there is yet much room for careful investigation. As a rule, the books published have not been generally read. We frequently meet with persons who are surprised to learn that the work "sprinkle" is in the Bible. Some well informed people (on other subjects) are of the opinion that our Savior was immersed, and that baptism originated with John in the river Jordan. I am sure that our people are not overstocked with literature on this subject. It is much to be regretted that vast numbers go from our Church every year for lack of a little information as to the mode of baptism. It is frequently said, "If that is all, let them go." But that is not all; it is only the turning point in the young life of the Church, and just what the end may be God only knows.

Why, then, should we longer delay when we know from past experience that plans are already on foot to take from us the very best of the flock? Who knows but that in some cases the plans have now matured, that the immersion robe is bought, the place selected, and the day and hour announced? They go from us never to return. They may on some extra occasion be seen on a back seat, but the chance to instruct them is most likely gone forever.

We do not for one moment question the sincerity of those who engage in this kind of work, but we do claim to understand the commands of our Lord differently.

Remember "procrastination is the thief of time," and order at once. Send orders to me at McNeill, Miss. Paper binding 25 cents per copy, or 6 copies for $1.10; cloth binding 50 cents per copy, or 6 copies for $2.10, postpaid.

Griffing Brothers Grow Trees and Plants for ALL the South

They have nurseries at ten centrally located points, each selected for specific soil and climate advantages. Every one produces certain plants, trees and shrubs of unusual vigor. All the fruits and ornamentals adapted to the South are grown in one or another of these nurseries.

are to satisfy every person who purchases from them not only by the superior quality of the trees supplied but by helpful information as to the planting, care and culture of these. Griffings never lose interest in the trees they sell—they want to see them thrive and fully meet expectations. The Griffing catalog is a guide book to grove and orchard success and to proper home ground planting. It tells what to plant in all parts of the South, how to select the soil, the best varieties, how to plant, and gives a fund of helpful facts. Those who follow its advice hardly can go wrong.

10 CENT "CASCARETS" IF BILIOUS OR COSTIVE

For Sick Headache, Sour Stomach, Sluggish Liver and Bowels—They work while you sleep.

Furred Tongue, Bad Taste, Indigestion, Sallow Skin and Miserable Headaches come from a torpid liver and clogged bowels, which cause your stomach to become filled with undigested food, which sours and ferments like garbage in a swill barrel. That's the first step to untold misery—indigestion, foul gases, bad breath, yellow skin, mental fears, everything that is horrible and nauseating. A Cascaret to-night will give your constipated bowels a thorough cleansing and straighten you out by morning. They work while you sleep—a 10-cent box from your druggist will keep you feeling good for months.

FROM THE COLPORTER.

Important Notice.

The second volume of Bishop Candler's "Studies in the Fourth Gospel" is now ready and copies have been mailed to all who gave me their orders at the Conferences at Tupelo and Natchez. Should any one fail to receive his copy, please notify me. This is a valuable work, which should be possessed by every preacher and other students of the gospels. Price per volume $1; for the set, 2 volumes in one order, $1.75, postpaid.

The financial year of the Publishing House closes on February 28 when all accounts are supposed to be settled. That the colporter may be able to meet his obligations at that date, he must have by February 20 every dollar due him for books.

Trusting all concerned for a due response, and with best wishes for a good year to all who labor with us in the Lord, I am, yours faithfully,

G. W. BACHMAN.

DR. J. Y. MURRY HONORED.

On January 6, 1914, a beautiful white enameled eating and reading table with silver trappings, and an individual cream and sugar set of silver and cut glass were presented to Dr. Jno. Y. Murry, President of Tippah County (Miss.) Sunday School Convention, as a token of the love and esteem in which he is held by its members, and in grateful acknowledgment of the great service he has been to the whole county during the twenty-five years of his Presidency.

The following note accompanied the gift:

"The Tippah County Sunday School Convention wishes for you many years yet and trusts that 1914 may be one continued season of radiant happiness. This table is a slight expression of the affection in which you are held by your co-laborers, and a token of their gratitude for the twenty-five years of faithful and efficient service as President. As you could not be present at the Convention on your silver anniversary, it was thought best to present their token of appreciation at the happy Christmas tide, but to their great disappointment it was delayed and did not reach you at that time. Because of you having suffered such a serious accident the nature of the gift was altered, but they trust that you may be reminded daily, thrice daily, of your place in their love and esteem. Many, many wishes, for a speedy recovery.

STEWARDS' AND PASTORS' MEETING OF THE BROOKHAVEN DISTRICT.

Dear Dr. Meek: On Dec. 31, 1913, the same day that the District Stewards of the Brookhaven District met to transact the business of the District Stewards' Meeting, a conference of the pastors and the presiding elder was held for the purpose of planning the work of the Church in the district during the ensuing Conference year.

The presiding elder opened the conference with a strong, impressive and earnest appeal to the pastors for their co-operation in making this the best year for the Church that has ever come to the Brookhaven District. He said, in substance, that he could look upon the past year's work with a degree of pride; that he was gratified at the success that had been accomplished within the bounds of the district, as it had proved to be the greatest of all the preceding years. But his prophecy was, "that this would be a much greater year." To this there was a hearty response from the heart of every pastor present, "So mote it be."

After some discussion on the subject, there was a motion carried to set in order plans for an "exchange library" for the pastors of the district. Doctor, this was quite an interesting subject. The idea that predominated in the meeting was, "our preachers are not reading enough." And it was the purpose of the "exchange library" to promote a greater interest in wholesome and helpful books. The committee appointed to set these plans in operation were Rev. Robt. Selby, P. E.; Rev. W. H. LaPrade, and Rev. B. F. Lewis. Then a motion was adopted to adjourn till 1:30 p.m., at which time the conference reassembled, opening with the singing of hymn No. 19, after which followed a prayer led by Rev. W. H. Saunders. Another song was announced, and another prayer followed, led by Rev. W. W. Nelson.

Dr. I. W. Cooper then addressed the conference in the interest of education. In his address he remarked "that the statement had been made to him that the ministry of twenty years ago was better educated than the ministry of to-day." Is that so, Doctor? After his address he took a collection (by subscription) for the purpose of keeping some young ministers in college, the subscription amounting to, I think, $170.

Next, a report of the Committee on the "exchange library" was made, recommending the changing of its name from "exchange library," to "pastors' study class." Dr. W. H. LaPrade was appointed as Secretary for this class. Following this the Chair called for a report from the Evangelistic Committee of the past Conference year. Rev. John A. Moore and Rev. W. H. Lewis made reports, after which a motion was carried to continue the work of the Committee. Revs. W. H. Lewis, J. W. Thompson, J. V. Bennett, John A. Moore and C. A. Schultz were appointed to serve on this committee for the next year. Resolutions, asking for the co-operation of the pastors of the district with the Committee was set forth, and they were unanimously adopted.

Rev. H. M. Ellis addressed the conference in the interest of evangelism, and also touched on the subject of the Methodist Hospital at Memphis, Tenn. A report of the Committee appointed by the District Stewards on the apportionment of the assessments to the several charges was read, and the conference passed resolutions commending the Committee for their work. We next had a report from Brother E. W. Reid, the District Agent for the Methodist Orphanage at Jackson, giving a partial statement of the amount paid to that institution by the Brookhaven District last year, with an earnest appeal to the pastors for co-operation in his work.

To my mind the meeting was a success—profitable in every particular—and we believe that great things are just ahead. For my part, victory has come already to a large degree. Only last Sunday night at our service a splendid fellow, and a business man too, made a bold start for the Kingdom. Let every preacher of the Brookhaven District remember that "the gospel is still the power of God unto salvation." We are not to occupy our time in discussing theories; Paul could have done this easily, but he positively refused to follow such a method, determining instead to know nothing among the people save Jesus Christ and him crucified. Jesus said that if he was lifted up, he would draw all men unto him. And when this is done and it fails to affect men, no theory of our own will count for anything. Pray for me, that I may live the gospel that I try to preach.

HE FOUND HIS FOOTING.

"He is brave whose tongue is silent of the trophies of his sword;
He is great whose quiet bearing marks his greatness well assured."

It is a noble service to encourage others. The faithful and the despondent alike need it. The worth of a heartening word, opportunely spoken, is incalculable.

Accuracy of statement is a thing that needs to be guarded. The loose talker soon becomes a reckless talker. It is not every person who can relate things just as they happened.

"The new paganism" is the Vatican's characterization of the recent outbreak of sensuous dressing, dancing, etc. This is an appropriate designation for much that is now going on. The firm and aggressive stand which the Roman Catholic Church has taken against this trend of things is very much to its credit.

No man, however gifted, has any justification for being egotistical. No human being is truly great when considered as a citizen of the universe and weighed in comparison with the Creator of all things. He knows but little, can do but little, and must soon pass hence. There is a tremendous amount of truth in that poem which is said to have been Mr. Lincoln's favorite, "O why should the spirit of a mortal be proud?"

A paragraphist in the Memphis Commercial Appeal says: "One thing you have to hand it to Mr. Bryan for: he never shoves Wilson out of the spot light. He has been scrupulously thoughtful in such matters." Mr. Bryan is a Christian gentleman who may usually be depended upon to do the proper thing. When he went into the Cabinet it was predicted that he would be a constant promoter of discord, but, like he has been doing ever since he became known to the public, he has completely disappointed his enemies.

The New York Times tells of a dining and dance given recently on a Sabbath evening in one of the noted hotels of the great metropolis "by a leading literary man." Yet there are those among us who seem to think that the only hope of saving humanity lies in CULTURE. The whole history of Christianity proves the utter futility of any such hope. Nearly two thousand years ago, Saint Paul wrote, "The world by wisdom knew not God;" nor are its savants his proper interpreters and the vehicles of his spiritual power in this day. One of them delivered himself in New England a few days since, and what a harangue he poured forth! Is it not surpassingly strange that it seems difficult for even the Church to learn those A B C principles of the Christian religion that spiritual truth must be spiritually discerned, and that only men in whose hearts the living Christ abides have the strength to save and uplift others?

There passed away in the city of Washington on January 28 one of the most picturesque and interesting citizens of the Nation—ex-Senator Shelby M. Cullom, of Illinois. For fifty years in various capacities he was a public servant of note—a record which in point of length is said to be unparalleled in American history. He served in the Illinois Legislature, was twice governor of that State, was a member of the lower House of Congress for six years and a member of the United States Senate for thirty years, and since his retirement from the latter body last March, had been the resident member of the Commission created by Congress to supervise the construction of the $2,000,000 memorial to Abraham Lincoln. Mr. Cullom was acquainted with Lincoln before he attained to distinction, his father being a friend of the future President when he was a struggling backwoods lawyer, and it was Lincoln's leadership that carried him into the Republican party. He took part in the stormy events immediately preceding the Civil War, was an actor in legislative circles during that fateful struggle, and ever since has been a familiar figure about the National Capitol. He enjoyed the confidence and esteem of such men as Grant, Sherman, Blaine, Conklyn, Edmunds, and other distinguished public men who for decades shaped the legislation of the republic. He was a man of open mind, of progressive spirit, and of large and varied capacity. And as the Governor of his State declared when he fell asleep, a few days since, at the ripe old age of 85, "He passed through the fiery ordeal of holding public office for half a century without ever having been accused of enriching himself in the service of the people, and died comparatively poor."

But it is not so much of Mr. Cullom's career as a whole, as of his religious views, that we wish to write. Though entirely respectful in his attitude toward Christianity and the holder of a pew in a Presbyterian Church, he has commonly been regarded as a skeptic or free-thinker. In the concluding chapter of his interesting volume, "Fifty Years in the Public Service," which was published about a year ago, is contained the following pathetic utterance: "I have survived both of my wives and all of my children. As I think of it now, I do not know where I obtained the strength to survive all these sorrows. I have no great fear of death, except the natural dread of the physical pain which usually accompanies it. I certainly wish, beyond any words I have power to express, that I could have greater assurance that there will be a reuniting with those we love and those who loved us in some future world; but from my reading of Scripture, and even admitting that there is a hereafter, I cannot find any satisfactory evidence to warrant such a belief. Could I believe that I should meet the loved ones who have gone before, I do not know but that I should look forward with pleasure to the 'passing across!' Not having this belief, I am quite content to stay where I am as long as I can; and, finally, when old Charon appears to row me over the river Styx, I shall be ready to go."

This touching and appealing statement so impressed us when it first appeared that we printed it in the Advocate and made editorial comment upon it. It was therefore with great interest that we noted in the public prints since the decease of Mr. Cullom the following utterance by Dr. Charles Wood, of the Presbyterian Church, who was his friend and who was closely associated with him in his last days: "In the last few months his feeling about eternity changed completely. He told me that he believed in God and Christ and immortality, and added: 'I want to make at the first opportunity a statement of my simple creed, to be inserted after the last chapter of my recollections, to correct the doubt expressed on a dark day when the light was dim.'"

Whether the statement referred to was ever prepared by Mr. Cullom, Dr. Wood could not say; but it is to be hoped that it was. Inserted in the fascinating volume from the Senator's pen, it would be an eloquent testimonial of his faith and would be widely read through the coming years.

Is not this another fulfillment of that memorable promise made by our Lord, "If any man is willing to do His will, he shall know of the doctrine, whether it be of God, or whether I speak of myself." Senator Cullom seemed to be thoroughly honest in his doubts and to have a sincere longing to know the truth, and if we may believe what we are told, he was led through the fog into the light at last. We doubt if any worthy soul, enveloped in darkness, that earnestly sought to find its way out ever failed to do so. It is our conviction that a guiding Hand, unseen by the physical eye, is invariably reached forth to all such strugglers.

We are happy to believe that this honest, capable, high-minded public servant found a firm footing for his faith before the long-deferred summons that called him into eternity came. But we wish that he had secured it earlier. Nothing can irradiate old age like the glorious hopes born of an unwavering trust in God and the promises of his precious Word. Sustained and inspired by these, instead of being harassed by the forebodings of doubt, one may triumphantly sing:

"I face me toward the sunset sky,
And all my soul is glad;
For the evening holds a glory
Which the morning never had."

OUR COMMISSION TO THE MASSES.

"THE GREATEST GOOD TO THE GREATEST NUMBER," should be the motto of every Christian institution. We are off the track when we begin to talk about rendering a service to a select few. God has no favorites, and the Church has no business having any. Her commission is to the whole human race. In proportion as a denomination becomes imbued with any sort of a caste spirit, its glory wanes. The great religious movements of history have invariably concerned themselves with the toiling and struggling masses of mankind.

MY MOTHER'S BIBLE.

This Book is all that's left me now—
Tears will unbidden start—
With faltering lip and throbbing brow
I press it to my heart.
For many generations past
Here is our family tree;
My mother's hands this Bible clasped,
She, dying, gave it me.

Ah, well do I remember those Whose names these records bear;
Who 'round the hearthstone used to close,
After the evening prayer,
And speak of what these pages said
In tones my heart would thrill!
Though they are with the silent dead,
Here are they living still.

My father read this Holy Book
To brothers, sisters, dear,
How calm was my poor mother's look,
Who loved God's word to hear!
Her angel face—I see it yet!
What thronging memories come!
Again that little group is met
Within the walls at home!

Thou truest friend man ever knew,
Thy constancy I've tried;
When all were false, I found thee true,
My counselor and guide,
The mines of earth no treasures give
That could this volume buy;
In teaching me the way to live,
It taught me how to die!

—George Perkins Morris.

STUDY OF THE BIBLE.

England has never sent us an ambassador who ranked higher in our regard than the Hon. James Bryce. A scholar, a statesman, a gentleman in the higher sense, he met all the requirements of his responsible position, and left us on his retirement a legacy of kindly memories.

Because of this feeling of friendship we are inclined to consider any expression of opinion from him with the sincerest respect. We know that he neither criticizes nor finds fault in a spirit of mere cavilling. Therefore, when we read of his assertion in a recent London speech that "the study of the Bible is declining in both the United States and England," we are inclined to take up our part of the assertion very seriously and see what is behind it.

The first thing that comes as corroborative evidence that Mr. Bryce's statement is true is the fact of the discontinuance of family prayers. In the older generations the day began and closed with the reading of a portion of Scripture by the assembled family. As long as that habit continued there was not much necessity for the teaching of the Bible in the public schools. Under the influence of these readings children were made thoroughly familiar with the lessons and the phraseology of the Word of God, and vastly benefited in both ways. The precepts were as seed, which later on bore the fragrant flowers of fine principles, and the exquisitely simple English helped to form the vocabularies of the listeners.

The growth of irreverence for sacred things, joined with the rush to be on time in the business world, gradually broke down this old custom, and the family Bible became merely a repository for births and deaths and marriages and a dust-catcher on an upper shelf. This private neglect might not have mattered so much if the schools had picked up the dropped stitch and gone on with the teaching. But all religious and moral training was cut out of the curriculum of our public schools for fear of offending some religious sect. Mr. Bryce, with clear-eyed perspicacity, saw just where we made our mistake—how we might have kept the Bible, or certain illuminating parts of it—as daily readings in our schools and given no offense. The foundation of all good citizenship is reverence for the law, and all law has its ramifying root in the old Mosaic dispensation. To Jew and Gentile the Old Testament is the rockbed of faith, the first stepping stone to temple or church. Here is a common ground on which to base a process of Bible teaching that could not fail to enlarge the child's moral horizon. The old argument that Sunday school is the place for Sunday lesson teaching might be unanswerable if all children went to Sunday schools. How small the proportion is, any minister or rabbi will tell you.

The lack of Bible teaching is responsible for many of the modern social moth holes—the disrespect for age, the disobedience to parents, the irreverence of sacred things, the inability to resist temptation—all of which have their culminating result in what is called "the pace that kills."

It is not meant that the study of the Bible is a panacea for all of these ills, but certainly it is an alleviation. To some few children the fine old precepts will be as the proverbial "water on a duck's back," slipping away irretrievably; but with many more some of the great truths will abide and be as the bit of leaven that quickens the whole nature to higher and better things.

Mr. Bryce is right; the American people are neglecting the Bible too much, both as a moral force and as an educational uplift. If it is not to be admitted to the school life of the children, then there should be a general exodus from the present neglectful ways, and an enthusiastic return to the old method of family readings and expoundings. The Bible, which we accept as God's book, should not be allowed to become as a dead letter in the every day training of those who to-day are children and to-morrow are leaders and followers in the march of the years.—Memphis Commercial Appeal.

THE SILENT WOMEN OF METHODISM.

By Evelyn Baker Dodd.

Although the silent women of Methodism are largely in the majority, they seem to be ignored in the "laity rights" question so uppermost in the mind of our Church at this time. Yet these women must be reckoned with, for they constitute the real power in Church and State.

They make no clamor, no noise, no demands. They send in no reports; are not often in evidence; are never spectacular. But they are thinking, thinking deeply, while they work unseen, unknown, and unsung. Through the long, hot days of summer, the cold, dreary days of winter, they are at the same post of duty—the fireside in the home—and in their seclusion they are making history. They have brought immortal souls into the world and are busy guiding little feet into and through straight and narrow ways, teaching lisping tongues to speak only the truth, training feeble hands to do the world's great work, storing youthful minds with that knowledge which makes for righteousness.

They are ordering well their households, the only world they are to know and direct. In the still watches of the night they are ministering to the sick and dying; and all that their hands find to do they are doing as unto the Lord, being seen only by those "eyes of the Lord which run to and fro through the whole earth."

What are they thinking? They are thinking that men's "parish is the world," as the great Wesley said; but that their parish is the home. They are thinking that they are willing to be ruled by their husbands at home and in the Church by men chosen by their husbands, according to the Word of God; that being ruled by women is something to which they are not committed; and there being no obligation, they object to laity rights for women until the Word of God commands their submission; that they resent laity rights, with all the entailed responsibility, being thrust upon them; that, when they vowed their allegiance to the Methodist Church, South, there was no such polity to be subscribed to, which might have determined their lodgment in some other Church; that, although they have never been in the limelight, their interest and wishes should be considered and they be given protection.

They are thinking that, if laity rights come to pass in Church and "equal rights" in the State, the equilibrium of the race will be destroyed. Women out of their natural sphere automatically precipitate men out of theirs. Women on the higher plane, the scales can not balance with both standing on one side. Therefore men must fall into the lower. Then what becomes of the "equality," and what has the Church or nation gained?

They are thinking that God has so planned that it requires two parents to continue the race—one to bear and rear the children and the other to go forth and, in the sweat of his brow, earn the bread; that woman is not to be taken out to lighten his burden of labor, and that it is impossible for man to accomplish the woman's part in life.

They are thinking that the question of laity rights is unique in that it has but one side; consequently it is not within the pale of legitimate discussion; that it can not be considered by the Church authorities, as they have no power whatever to create and bestow such prerogatives upon women. To change the divine arrangement would be an innovation, a usurpation of power, and be in direct opposition to the great Head of the Church. They are thinking that the General Conference should promptly and candidly say that it has no power to alter the Word of God, neither in part nor wholly, nor to ignore it; that the Methodist Church is founded on the Bible, draws its life from its sacred pages, and knows full well that when this divine source of being is turned aside or distorted only decay and death follow; that the Methodist Church, South, has never gone after new-fangled and strange doctrines, has never taught that religion must follow progress instead of progress following religion, as all true progress does, and has ever held to the traditions and customs of her peculiar branch of Methodism and is not likely now to do a "thing that will divide our Christian household" and shake the Church from center to circumference.

They are thinking that the equal rights demand is a reflection on the integrity and ability of their husbands, fathers and sons; that it implies that they can not do their part in life, making it necessary for women to do their work. This they are not ready to concede.

Men, American men, especially men of the Methodist Church, South, have always been too indulgent to women, which was proved to be a weakness, instead of strength. Investigation shows that it has been so from the very beginning. Their progenitor, Adam, fell before a woman's persuasion; the mighty Samson was undone because of a woman's importunities; the great prophet Elijah withstood four hundred and fifty of the priests of Baal and the powerful King Abab, yet he fell before a woman he feared to face and sat down under a juniper tree and wished to die.

Be not like these, men of Southern Methodism, but follow the Master's example. At the scene of his first miracle, when his mother told him that the wine was exhausted, he said: "Woman, what have I to do with thee? Mine hour is not yet come." And he gave his commands to the servants. Christ suffered not a woman to do nor to interrupt his work nor even suggest, and his disciples never swerved from his example. Again, "his mother stood without, desiring to speak with him." But he heeded her not; he put her aside. When it came to spreading his gospel he did not heed nor take the advice nor the services of even his mother, who, of all women, was best qualified to serve his cause. Her part was enacted at his incarnation. But Christ was mindful of his mother's welfare. His last loving care was for her. On the cross, when "his hour was come," and all was "finished," he gave her into the protection of a man, the beloved disciple, who "took her into his own home," and we have no record that she ever left it. Is the Bible not plain on this subject? Let it not be dodged nor twisted out of its meaning.

The august Church of God must be protected and demands that would menace its well-being should not be heeded save to be set aside. Therefore, members of the Methodist Church, South, "quit you like men; be strong;" rise up to the very height of your sublime calling and banish forever this laity rights question—not alone for your own sakes, but for the salvation of those who have, in all sincerity, asked for something more menacing than they realize and also of those patient, faithful, beloved, silent women of the Methodist Church, South, at home "by the stuff.—Christian (Nashville) Advocate.

FROM OUR MISSIONARIES TO AFRICA.

This letter written by Mr. J. A. Stockwell before plunging into the African wilderness, was received by Mr. A. M. Mayo, of Lake Charles, La. (by whose courtesy we publish it) a few days ago, and will be found extremely interesting. Probably it will be some time before Mr. and Mrs. Stockwell are heard from again. They now are just about due to reach their destination. The letter follows:

Kinchasa, Africa, Dec. 7, 1913.

Dear Folks at Home: Well, this is the last time I can write to you and get the letter mailed for quite a long time. We started up the river on the "Lapsley" yesterday, coming only as far as this place, which is only 4 miles from Leopoldville, where we stopped to spend Sunday.

At Leopoldville we were entertained by Mr. Guyton of the Baptist mission, he also being our agent at that place. I am more and more impressed by the good fellowship that exists among the different denominations out here. For instance, this morning there was a communion service at the Baptist mission here and they invited us and the native Christians on the boat to come and partake with them. In fact, as far as I have been able to see they work together actually as though they were one.

Dr. Morrison preached to the natives on the boat this morning, there being 88 of them present, beside 12 whites. Three of the natives were baptized at that service, and although we could not understand what was said, it was a very impressive service. The attention given him was as good as one could find in the churches at home, and to see the condition of the people whom we knew were only shortly out of heathendom was very encouraging to us. In fact, I do not suppose that there is in all the world a more promising mission field than here, and I think it would be safe to add, that there is none that is more neglected.

Last night, or rather yesterday evening, we visited the ship yard here where they are putting the big boats together for the work on the Congo River. They are building larger boats than I supposed, one being 190 feet long. They are built entirely of iron and are shipped knockdown and put together here. The "Lapsley" is one of the best boats on the river for the work that it has to do. It can carry 40 tons of freight, has cabin accommodations for five, besides room for a good many cots on the sun deck. There are 13 of us including the baby, so you see that we have to make some use of the cot proposition.

It will take, as near as I can figure it, until just about the 12th of January for this letter to reach you and by that time we should be on the march to Wembo Naiml. We go first to Luebo, leave the ladies, then go back down the Kasia River to the junction of that and the Sankuri, up that to Lusambo where we will store the most of our goods, only taking the most necessary things with us, and strike out across the country on our nine days' march. We will stay at Luebo only as long as is necessary to get the cargo re-arranged, taking off such goods as are being sent to the Presbyterians (including the lady-folks), all of which we should get done in less than a week. We are a little short on our outfit, some of the things that we need most not being here, but we cannot let such little things hold us back. Have very little ammunition, none for the shot-guns and only about half a dozen for the big rifles, but that will be enough for our present needs and we have left word to have the rest sent on by a government boat as soon as it comes, which ought not to be long as it came on the same steamer with us.

The view on the river is simply great. The river itself is about a mile wide in the main channel here with lots of islands, making it in some places up the river as much as 15 miles wide from one side to the other, and it is not what could rightly be called a lake in such places, for there is a strong current everywhere. Of course I have not yet seen that part of it but it has been described to me so much that I can almost see it.

As to the heat here, I still think that it is just about the same as the summer weather at home. Of course the long summer in Louisiana gets very wearying sometimes, and to be where it is summer all the time will be somewhat worse, but really it is not near as bad as we expected.

"Our" boat runs in the daytime and at night is tied up to the bank and a number of natives go out and cut wood for the following day. It will take about 17 days to make the trip to Luebo.

Mr. Mayo, I wish that next spring as soon as all danger of frost on the way is past that you would try to send me two or three of the yellow yams that we used to have in Louisiana. I do not know just how would be the best way to have them packed, but think if they were packed in a baking powder tin with plenty of cotton so as to keep them apart, and some adhesive tape put around the joint so as to make it air tight that they might get through all right. Anyway I wish that you would try it as there are none in this country and I believe that they would do well if we could once get a start in them. I would pick out the smallest ones that could be found, or say some long, stringy ones, about as long as a lead pencil, as then if one rotted it would not be so apt to spoil the others. Have the package marked "Live Plants," and send to Lusambo, also writing to postmaster and Mr. Bedinger there as to the contents of the package. Am afraid that even then they would not reach us in good condition, but think that it is worth trying.

The best way if it were possible would be to have some one who is coming bring them in their trunk, and then if they showed any signs of decay plant them in a pot and bring them out in a growing condition, but until we get some reinforcements I don't see how that could be done.

We are all feeling well now, Mary Lou has gotten so that she looks as well and strong as anybody, and I am feeling well as I ever did, except that I have gotten very lazy from so much life on boats where there was nothing for me to do.

Must close for this time. Will write as often as I can get letters mailed, but that will keep getting scarcer all the time until we reach Wembo Naiml.

So good-by, and love from

JOHN.

THE DANCING CRAZE.

By Rev. J. E. Godbey, D. D.

The dancing mania has come in upon us like a flood. Here in St. Louis dancing is taught in our public schools. The children understand that it has the sanction of the school board and teachers as a needful part of their education. The classes, especially in the higher grades, have their dancing parties, then their graduation balls. Of course, colleges have their Commencement balls. Dances are common in our church circles. A leading minister of this city, a Methodist—not of our fold—in a recent sermon favored opening his church parlors for dances. The Y. W. C. A. of the city teaches fancy dancing and their members lend themselves to vaudeville shows. They have a splendid building, erected for them by the churches, and what they do is supposed to have the sanction of the churches. Meantime dances of new styles are introduced—the more lascivious the more attractive to many. Rich women of fashion patronize these dances and it takes courage to condemn these leaders of society. Nevertheless there is first an outcry of, "Indecent!"

Even the police interfere. Various social clubs taboo the new dances and issue edicts of excommunication against the dancers. Then all grows silent, save that some preachers discuss the aesthetic character and possible moral influence of these dances, which notice only serves to advertise them and to suggest to the young people that they are not so very bad. So the tide rolls on.

Is there no comfort in all this for a man who still strives to be an optimist, and to persuade himself that the general trend of the times is toward better conditions in society?

There are some comforting reflections. The society women are not so very many. Then they live for the present, and affect the future but little. They seldom make homes and produce after their kind. Society is a Moloch which devours its devotees. They fill untimely graves. Those who follow the lead of passion have a short career. "Like sheep they are laid in the grave; death shall feed upon them and the just shall have dominion over them in the morning."

But is there, indeed, comfort to a good man that luxury and indulgence and the reign of carnal passion bear their victims to swift destruction? God who watches over the welfare of the race decrees it so. The preacher of righteousness and virtue can only point to the fruits of carnal indulgence and utter the warning, "Be not deceived, God is not mocked; whatsoever a man soweth that shall he also reap."

OUR DOCTRINAL STANDARDS.

By E. B. Partin, M. D.

That our doctrines, or what we as Methodists teach concerning the Bible and Christian experience, ought to be often preached in our pulpits and published in our literature is evident for the following reasons: (our doctrinal standards do not include the non-essentials, as the mode of baptism. No soul was ever saved by preaching on the mode of water baptism. Christ said nothing about the mode. Paul said "I am not called to baptize, but to preach the gospel. Wesley had no sermon on it. None of the great preachers and soul winners waste any time on it.)

1. In order that our officials, and membership generally, may be kept well informed in regard to our doctrines, so that those who teach, as well as those who preach, may teach and preach the same things, that there be no divisions and schisms in the Church.

2. Because the preaching of these doctrines was so wonderfully blessed of God in the salvation of souls and the edification of his people during the long and glorious ministry of the illustrious founder of Methodism, John Wesley; and has been the means in the hands of God and faithful men of bringing about such great results since Wesley's death.

3. Because these doctrines and usages belong peculiarly to Methodism, thereby distinguishing her people as a peculiar people. So the apostle, in speaking of the grace which Christ bestows upon us, says, "Who gave himself for us that he might redeem us from all iniquity and purify unto himself a peculiar people zealous of good works." (Titus 2-14.)

These doctrines and usages when preached and practiced by other denominations always bring about a revival of pure religion and the blessing of God upon that Church and people. And as Dr. Rankin said in an editorial in his paper, the Texas Christian Advocate, not a great while since, concerning another denomination who were bringing into use some of these usages or doctrines, "They are plowing our heifer and reaping the benefits of it." If the Lord can not by one denomination or church "spread Scriptural holiness over these lands," he will use another. It was for this purpose, Mr. Wesley said that he and his brother, Charles, were, in the providence of God thrust out into the world.

Church News

Recently the American Bible Society sent out from its Bible House in New York in a single day 32,700 Bibles, Testaments, and portions of the Scriptures.

Dr. J. D. Hammond, President of Paine College, at Augusta, Ga., who recently underwent a serious operation in the Wesley Memorial Hospital at Atlanta, is rapidly improving, and it is now thought that he will soon be able to resume work.

The Protestant pastors of Macon, Ga., are planning to have an inter-denominational Bible Conference in that city in March. Among the prospective speakers mentioned are Dr. G. Campbell Morgan, Dr. Russell H. Conwell, of Philadelphia, and Dr. George R. Stuart, of Knoxville, Tenn.

Dr. J. P. McFerrin, the alert presiding elder of the Macon (Ga.) District, is arranging for a general meeting of the pastors and laymen of his "diocese" to devise ways and means for promoting more effectively the interests of the Church in that promising field. This Conference will be held about the middle of February, and will be presided over by Bishop Candler.

Miss Nannie B. Gaines, Principal of our noted Girls' School at Hiroshima, Japan, delivered an address to a great audience at Lakeland, Fla., on Sunday evening, January 18. While spending her vacation in the State, this gifted worker from the foreign field is doing much to quicken the interest in the cause of missions within its bounds. Her present address is Leesburg, Fla.

Southern College, at Sutherland, Fla., recently disposed of its surplus realty holdings to the Sutherland Development Company for a consideration of approximately $40,000—about half of which was to be paid in cash or its equivalent, and the remainder with stock in the Company. It is stated that this sale will relieve the College of its financial embarrassment, due to the erection of a new dormitory and gymnasium.

The movement to unite the Presbyterians, Methodists, and Congregationalists of Canada into one denomination seems to be making headway. The Church Union Committee of the Presbyterians, recently in session in Toronto, by a vote of 31 to 8 declared in favor of proceeding with the undertaking. The Committee also adopted a resolution in favor of a "still broader union of Protestants, such as would create what fairly might be called a Canadian National Church."

The Greenwood (South Carolina) Auxiliary of the Woman's Missionary Society has sent out a letter to the Methodist women of the Palmetto State urging them to petition the General Conference not to divide the South Carolina Conference, as that body in its recent session voted to request the General Conference to do. And now the Chester Auxiliary has sent out a communication to the sisters on the other side of the question—and so it goes. Truly, these are turbulent times.

It is stated that Bishop Nuelsen, of the Methodist Episcopal Church, has recently had a conference with Sir Robert Perks and other leaders of the British Wesleyan Church concerning the matter of providing English Methodist services in some of the larger cities of continental Europe. It is claimed that such a service conducted in Vienna, Austria, during the recent Christmas season was attended by nearly all the members of the American Medical Association studying at the University of Vienna and their families—about ninety persons.

The forty-sixth session of the Mississippi Conference of the M. E. Church (colored) was held at Pass Christian a few days since, being presided over by Bishop W. P. Thirkield. It represents a church membership of about 22,000; the numerical increase for the past year was approximately 2000. The contributions to the various benevolences amounted to more than $6000; of this sum $1600 was a jubilee offering in commemoration of the 50th anniversary of the issuance of the Emancipation Proclamation by Lincoln, and was donated to the Meridian Academy.

Of the 330 delegates who will compose the approaching General Conference of the M. E. Church, South, 312 have been chosen. The remaining 18 will come from the Baltimore Conference and some of the Mission Conferences yet to be held. Only 96 of these—about 30 per cent—were members of the General Conference of 1910, though some of the others were members of General Conferences held prior to that time. Of the ministers in the last General Conference 41 per cent have been chosen delegates again, and of the laymen about 21 per cent. Of the 103 lay delegates whose occupations are given in the Nashville Christian Advocate, there are 35 lawyers, 23 merchants, 11 educators, 10 bankers, 5 farmers, 5 real estate men, 5 physicians, 4 lumber dealers, 1 coal dealer, and 1 salesman.

Having completed his first round in the Wilamette District, which embraces the whole of the Columbia Conference of the M. E. Church, South, Rev. E. H. Mowre, the presiding elder, writes as follows in the Pacific Methodist Advocate: "The Columbia Conference was never in a more prosperous condition at any time during the last ten years. With possibly two or three exceptions, every charge is stronger than ever before. During the quarter two new churches have been built and are ready for dedication. Substantial improvements have been made at Seattle, Corvallis, Medford, and Bandon. Good amounts have been paid for street improvements at Portland, Coquille, and Medford. There has been a large increase in the Sunday schools and 125 accessions to church membership." And let it be duly noted that this fine progress has been made with the suffix, "South," appended to the name of the Church.

AN INTERESTING MEETING.

The meeting of pastors and laymen of the Columbus District, which had been called by the presiding elder, Rev. W. W. Woollard, was held at Artesia, Miss., January 7 and 8, immediately following the meeting of the district stewards, which had been called for the same time and place.

Fifteen of the eighteen pastors were present; also Dr. T. C. Wier, of Starkville, one of our beloved superannuates, and Rev. V. C. Curtis, one of our Sunday School Field Secretaries. There were present some eighteen or twenty laymen from over the District, making a goodly number of men who were desirous of planning wisely and well for the welfare of our great Church in the Columbus District.

The business of the district stewards' meeting having been disposed of, the program which had been prepared by the presiding elder, outlining many vital and important subjects for discussion, by both pastors and laymen, was taken up. The first question for consideration was, "The needs of our Orphans' Home, and how best we may meet these needs?" From the discussions on this important claim, and the questions of the presiding elder, as to previous methods employed in raising funds for the Home, it developed that in most cases no systematic plan has been followed heretofore, but it was determined that we attempt during this year to raise at least $5 per month from each pastoral charge in the District.

The question, "Is a Committee on Evangelistic Services for the District desirable?" was discussed clearly and frankly by Revs. R. W. Evans, B. F. Bullard, O. P. Armour, and R. O. Brown, and it was moved that a committee of three be appointed, of which the presiding elder shall be chairman, to enquire into the needs of the District, and arrange for special meetings where most needed. This committee is composed of Rev. R. O. Brown, Rev. W. W. Mitchell, and the presiding elder.

Under the question as to whether we should encourage our Sunday schools to contribute toward the maintenance of other Sunday school work, a motion carried that, inasmuch as we now have two workers in the field within the bounds of our own Conference who will need our hearty co-operation and support, it is the sense of this body that our own Sunday school work be given preference over the inter-denominational work, at least until our own needs have been fully met.

Revs. J. M. Guinn, J. C. McElroy and T. H. Lipscomb, discussed the subject bearing on the advisability of holding a number of Inspirational Rallies throughout the District, with special reference to the Sunday school and Missionary work. Revs. W. L. Duren, R. W. Evans, together with the presiding elder as chairman, were appointed as a committee to arrange for such Rallies within the District, at such times and places as will best meet the needs of the people.

The work of our women was not overlooked, and Revs. E. D. Simpson and O. P. Armour told of what the women were doing, and how we, as pastors, could support and encourage their work.

We were glad to have one of our Sunday School Field Secretaries, Rev. V. C. Curtis, with us, and his helpful and inspiring sermon on Wednesday evening was thoroughly enjoyed by the large congregation present. The sermon on Thursday morning, by Rev. R. W. Evans, of Caledonia, was in every way equal to the occasion, and was heard with much profit by all who were present.

It was the pleasure of all to be permitted to remain over night in this delightful little town, and to enjoy the hospitality of its splendid citizens, and the following resolution of thanks was unanimously adopted:

"Resolved, that our hearty thanks are extended to the pastor and the good people of Artesia for the kindly entertainment of this body, and that we pray God's richest blessings upon them all."

We feel sure that great things will come to the District as a result of this meeting. The timely talks of our capable and efficient presiding elder were calculated to bring both pastors and laymen to a more diligent and faithful service, and we returned to our homes feeling that victory was to be ours, through Christ which strengtheneth us, during this year.

ALEXANDRIA DISTRICT NOTES.

Dear Doctor Meek: In compliance with your request, I am sending you a few notes from the Alexandria District. The month ends well. I have visited 18 charges since Conference and find each place pleased with the pastor. The Quarterly Conferences have made a generous increase in the assessments for the pastors at most of the places I visited. We are planning to build both a church and a parsonage at De Ridder during the present year. The parsonage will be ready for occupancy within two months. Our people are much pleased with Brother W. S. Henry. I was with him on Sunday night last and preached to a crowded house.

Brother Long at Bon Ami and Carson is in a most happy state of mind. Our people are delighted with him. Brother Swan at Longville is getting matters in hand and looking forward to a good year. Brother Booth has made a fine beginning. I expected that. Our people at Merryville had former acquaintance with Booth and were more than pleased to have him sent to them.

Brother B. H. Sheppard at Oakdale has a bright future awaiting him—a nice new church will be built during the next few months. I understand from Brother Peritt at McNary that our people are planning to build a church there during the next few months and will assess $1200 for the support of the ministry. McNary is a new enterprise. I have opened two missions since Conference and employed men for them. Brother A. A. Phillips will take charge of the missions we are opening for the Indians and Mexicans. Brother D. C. Bennett, a former member of our Conference, will take charge of the DeRidder Mission, which is composed of a sawmill town and the log camps near DeRidder. I am planning to make substantial improvements to the amount of $1000 or more on the District Parsonage in West Alexandria.

Dr. Cameron, of our First Church, is preaching, I understand, to more people than have attended that Church at any time in its history. All of the preachers where I have been are starting off with great hope.

The Kingdom of our Lord prospers everywhere I have gone, and with hope and faith, we are pressing the battle and by grace Divine, will win it in the end. I am, Yours cordially, Jan. 31, 1914.

Tunica County, Mississippi, has voted to issue $20,000 worth of bonds for the establishment of an agricultural high school.

It is thought that all the countries of Central and South America will have exhibits at the Panama Exhibition in San Francisco except Mexico and Colombia.

According to the Board of Liquidation of the City Debt, the present bonded indebtedness of New Orleans is $7,787,568, which calls for a yearly interest of $1,261,480.

It is announced that there have been registered in all the countries of the globe approximately 2,000,000 motor vehicles. The United States leads with 1,127,940, and England comes next with 425,335.

The death rates of the five largest cities in the world are said to be as follows: London, 13.52 per thousand; New York, 12.71; Berlin, 14.39; Chicago, 14.48; Paris, 15.28.

The fourth annual meeting of the Louisiana Music Teachers' Association will be held in Shreveport, April 16-18. One of the prominent questions before the body will be that of fixing a uniform standard of instruction for the State.

A Jackson (Miss.) dispatch states that 24 counties and parts of counties in that State have been freed from the cattle tick and have had the Federal quarantine against them lifted. This means much to the growing stock industry of that commonwealth.

The annual meeting of the Louisiana Prison Reform Association will be held in New Orleans on March 11. Among the speakers for that occasion is Bishop W. P. Thirdfield. This Association is said to favor heartily the reestablishment of the boys' reformatory at Monroe.

A Sociological Congress will be held in Jackson, Miss., February 13 and 14. The three leading questions that will be considered are: (1) the establishment of a juvenile reformatory; (2) the providing of a school for feeble-minded children; (3) the moral and social betterment of the Negro population of the State. Some of the most distinguished speakers in the South will be present.

Emperor William of Germany celebrated his fifty-fifth birthday on January 31. The occasion brought forth the usual street decorations in Berlin and religious services were conducted in the royal chapel, after which a levee was held at which many distinguished persons rendered his Majesty their congratulations. The Kaiser conferred quite a number of honors upon leading citizens of the Empire as tokens of his special favor.

Col. George W. Goethals has been appointed the first Governor of the Panama Canal Zone by President Wilson, and has signified his acceptance. The Panama Canal Commission which has had the general oversight of the construction of the great waterway will pass out of existence on April 1, but with Col. Goethals left out, will be formed into a committee to arrange and conduct the exercises incident to the formal opening of the canal.

Besides the defeat in the Mississippi Legislature, the woman suffrage cause has within the past few days sustained two other reverses: by a unanimous vote the Judiciary Committee of the South Carolina House of Representatives killed a bill to give the women of that State the right to vote, and in Congress the Southern members of the Rules Committee of the House blocked the effort to have a standing committee on the subject appointed.

A dispatch from Jerusalem, Palestine, dated Jan. 25, reads as follows: "A concession for the construction of a street car line from Jerusalem to Bethlehem, and also for the lighting of Jerusalem by electricity, was granted to-day by the Turkish Government. The concession went to the French bank which recently supplied Turkey with the money to purchase the Brazilian dreadnought, Rio Janeiro." The present population of Jerusalem is about 70,000.

During the twelve years of his unsurpassed service as Superintendent of the Mississippi Department of Archives and History, Mr. Dunbar Rowland has been receiving a salary of only $1800 per annum. The amounts paid by some of the other States for substantially the same service are as follows: Massachusetts, $6000; Rhode Island, $5000; New York, $5000; Wisconsin, $5000;

Kansas, $4000; Alabama, $3000. An effort is being made to have Mississippi increase the salary of this office to the same that is paid by Alabama.

It is stated that during the first semester of the current school year 1913-1914, per cent of the immigrants coming to the United States have been rejected. This at a much larger per cent than were turned back in previous years, not only because of the use of immigration inspectors but also the United States officials' tendency to reject as a group of the fact that for the first half of the school year 1913-1914 were admitted against 100,000 for the corresponding period of the previous year. Of the 10,000 who failed admission during the month of December 1913 landed at New York.

The latest Alumni Directory of the University of Chicago shows that the 1,774 graduates of that institution are distributed among the several following vocations as follows: teachers, 437; ministers, 378; lawyers, 344; merchants, 453; physicians, 348; writers, 114; scientists, 197; employed in financial institutions, 76; manufacturers, 53; farmers, 49; artists, 49; government officials, 44; engineers, 38; miscellaneous, 1263. If we regard lawyers, doctors, ministers, and scientists as make up to the so-called "learned professions," they constitute only about the 23 per cent of the alumni of this noted University.

In a recent bulletin, Dr. P. P. Claxton, United States Commissioner of Education made the following surprising statement: "The least illiterate of our population are the native-born children of foreign parents. The illiteracy among children of native-born parents is three times as great as that among native-born children of parents born and reared in other lands." Having themselves had only the most meager public school advantages, these foreigners who have come to our shores seem to realize the importance of making their offspring profit by the splendid opportunities offered them in the United States.

It is estimated that the chinch bug, which attacks corn, wheat, and other staple grains, has entailed upon the farmers of the United States within the past 18 years a loss of $316,000,000. From this it is evident that the boll weevil is not the only pest that our agriculturists have to reckon with. So far as the weevils are concerned, it is well to note that a late bulletin sent out from Washington declares that "Observations prove in a very definite way that crops planted late are sure to be injured more by them than those planted early." However, in order to make assurance doubly sure, the Government Agricultural Department will make further experiments bearing upon this question in Louisiana this spring and summer.

A LETTER FROM DR. WATKINS.

Dear Doctor Meek: Your kind letter concerning the loss of our Main Building came to hand this morning.

I was down town Wednesday afternoon, and when the alarm sounded, was very much surprised to learn that our Main Building was on fire. By the time I reached the campus the whole building was in a mass of flames and the walls beginning to fall.

The origin of the fire is absolutely unknown; nor can we form any plausible theory to account for it. It was first discovered on the second story in the classroom of the Department of Mathematics, but spread so quickly that all that could be done was to save the furniture on the lower floor, including the two oil portraits of Bishop McIlwain and Major Millsaps. Nothing in the second and third stories was saved. The loss may be estimated at $40,000, with insurance policies amounting to $25,000. Of course, we shall not be able to replace the buildings with the amount of the insurance, but with this as a nucleus we should be able, with the help of our friends over the State, to begin the erection of the new building in the near future and have it ready for use by the opening of the next session.

We are, of course, put to great inconvenience, but have made satisfactory provision for classroom work in the Science Hall and the Library and will not suffer a day's interruption of our routine school work.

With God's blessing we shall make this loss an ultimate gain to the College. Our old building, while adequate to the needs of twenty years ago, no longer met the demands of the school, and was in no sense worthy of the College to-day. We shall rebuild, and I believe shall be able to erect a far better and more adequate Administration Building. I should like to appeal through the columns of the Advocate to the friends of the College throughout the State to rally to our help in this time of disaster, and that every effort possible be made for the upbuilding of a new building. By the time our insurance matters have been adjusted we shall be prepared to announce our plans for an aggressive campaign. Meanwhile, let our friends know that the future of Millsaps College was never brighter than to-day.

Yours will be like to know that Bishop James H. McIlwain has assigned our invitation to preach our Commencement Sermon June 1.

Sincerely yours,
A. P. WATKINS.

LITERATURE FOR DISTRIBUTION.

The following is the list of literature selected for general distribution by the Laymen's Missionary Movement of the Louisiana Conference for the year 1914.

January, "The Annual Tag."
February, "Provisions of New Discipline with Regard to the Laymen's Missionary Movement," and "Our Goal."
March, "Money the Measure of a Man."
April, "A Handful of Facts."
May, "The Call of America."
June, "It's Time You Should Know," and "His Plans."
July, "The Call of Africa."
August, "Stirring Facts."
September, "Our Immediate Responsibility in Korea."
October, "Who Owns the Wool?"
November, "The Church and Higher Education."
December, "How Much Owest Thou?"

Church leaders and pastors will please write every month to the Laymen's Missionary Movement, 510 Broadway, Nashville, Tenn., for their supply for that month. Order one-third to one-half as many copies as there are members of your church, and oblige yours truly, W. S. HOLMES.

LATEST NEWSPAPER CENSUS.

Five New Publications Every Working Day.

The forty-sixth annual census of the publications of the United States and Canada, published in the American Newspaper Annual and Directory, of Philadelphia, Penn., shows that an average of five new publications were started every working day during 1913. The suspensions and consolidations make the net gain only three a week. The total number of publications is 24,527. There are 244 dailies—the evening editions outnumbering the morning, by about three to one. There are 577 Sunday papers. It requires forty different languages to carry the news to the people of this country. Large lists are devoted to the special publications, agricultural, religious, etc., but every class, every unit, every trade, every profession, every fact, every "ism," has its printed spokesman in the 115 different lists into which they are subdivided.

Only four industries now exceed in capital invested and value of products the business of publishing and printing. In ten years the output increased 66 per cent, and it is estimated that at present the earnings of newspapers and periodicals average nearly a million and a half dollars per calendar day. Two-thirds of this amount perhaps represents the income from advertising. In the nature of the case no one individual can be familiar with a large part of the publishing industry, which is carried on in more than 11,000 different towns; each of these is located and described, together with all of the publications, in the big book which presents the latest report of our publishing world.

SERVICE.

By Elam Franklin Dempsey, B. D.

"They, also, serve who only stand and wait." Such was the meditation with which John Milton comforted himself in the days of his blindness. Many others have entered into this fellowship of service by "waiting"—suffering the will of God. In our lusty strength we may serve God well. But no less may we serve Him in our weakness, if we keep the cheerful will to do so. Lydia Baxter and Charlotte Elliott who gave us the world-famed hymns, "I need Thee every hour" and "Just as I am without One Plea," were each confirmed invalids. So was Frances Ridley Havergal, while Fanny J. Crosby is blind. In their darkness and shut-in lives these noble spirits cheer the world by their songs, as the nightingale whose sweetest song rises out of the darkest night.

"Nothing praises or pleases God like service,"—words of the great Haygood, whose life furnishes one of their best commentaries. As an ancient English man said of his friend, so say those who saw him live: "I knew him that he could toil terribly." In his self-consuming labors, he gave his best praise to God. Shall we not more zealously than ever "enter into his labors." Let us breathe in of his spirit of "praising and pleasing God by service." Until the Gospel has lodged in our wills it has failed of its purpose for us. Obedience is better than thinking, dreaming, feeling, or professing—even than shouting and singing. He who said, "My Father worketh hitherto, and I work," also said, "Follow me!"

But, why serve? The answer is, Love serves. It has been said that love is the Christian's whole existence. Deep within his heart is only love. This is the spring from which gushes forth all the fountain of his life. Love knows nothing of drudgery. It works wholly unconscious of yokes and burdens. In the Christian's life, therefore, the inspiration of every service is love. He incarnates the first and great commandments—he embodies, (though his tongue may be inarticulate to phrase), this true and final philosophy of life. Love and labor should never be separated: When so, they are dead. Together they are, to use Tennyson's beautiful lines on wedded love, "the two-celled heart, beating with one full stroke, life." From a different point of view, this thought has been well-put: "He who has the vision without the task, is a visionary; he who has the task without the vision is a drudge; but he who has the vision and the task is an apostle."

A LETTER FROM BROTHER JOYNER.

(The following letter was written by Rev. N. E. Joyner, to Mr. Frank L. Kerns, who conducts the "Rosebud Corner" of the Baltimore and Richmond Christian Advocate. The "Rosebuds" are children missionary workers in Virginia who contribute largely to the maintenance of our school in Monterey. We reproduce this letter and also one from Sister Joyner, who with her children, is now at Jackson, La., feeling assured that these communications will be read with much interest.)

Monterey, Mexico, January 10, 1914.

Dear Brother Kerns: I am sending you a letter every chance that comes along, thinking each opportunity to send out a letter may be the last for some time. We are cut off from all points of the compass except for a long, circuitous, dangerous trip to Eagle Pass, Texas, with a transfer in a stage coach at some point on the road.

An American leaves to-morrow, and the Consul General, General Hanna, has offered to include this letter in his mail-bag. General Hanna has been exceedingly kind to us and rendered fine service, both in representing the Government and in courteous treatment of everybody who comes in touch with him.

This has been the Week of Prayer for our Mexican congregation, and the attendance has been unusually good and the services interesting. Brother J. B. Cox, Presiding Elder of this district, has been giving his personal attention to the congregation, as he was unable to get out on the district to any extent. I have enjoyed his companionship during the year.

I may not go to the Annual Conference, as it meets at Laredo, and I should not like to take risks of being cut off from Monterey for any length of time. If anything happens, I want to be here to do what I can for our School interests. The local and national conditions are full of possibilities, and even probabilities. Reckoning with the conditions, we have had a successful year, and one that will count for the future usefulness of Laurens Institute. By going steadily ahead amid all the unrest, we will be in a position to make the most of the opportunity that is certain to follow the coming of peace. Professor Leal and the other teachers are working away cheerfully.

I am glad to know that the Rosebuds are praying for our work and its success in these days. I can at least watch while they pray, and later there will come a larger opportunity for broader work through Laurens Institute.

With love and best wishes to you and all the Rosebuds, I am,

Sincerely,

N. E. JOYNER.

SISTER JOYNER'S LETTER.

Dear Brother Kerns: I am sure you will be glad to hear from the School in Monterey, that it is still open after having passed through one of the worst battles of the whole revolution.

Having disregarded the advice of the President of the United States, the Mission Board and friends, we were still in Monterey when the rebels made the many-times-threatened attack.

In fact, we felt we were in no special danger, and we knew that leaving meant the closing of the school.

The rebel attack on Monterey, beginning on the 23d of October, lasted continuously for forty-eight hours. During those two terrible days and nights we lived in the basement of "Comfort Cottage," going upstairs only occasionally to see how the battle was going.

Early in the morning of the first day two three-inch cannon shells struck the third story of Laurens Building, demolishing the bath-room. I suppose the building would have been set on fire by the exploding shells, but the pipes were broken by the first shot and the floors flooded with water. As soon as possible Mr. Joyner turned the water off, and later in the day, with some plumber's tools, fastened the pipes.

Nearly a hundred people took refuge under the U. S. Flag in Laurens Institute—Americans, Mexicans, and Chinamen. We talked with the soldiers of both sides, but were molested by neither. We have Laurens boys on both sides.

How terrible is a civil war! !

After going through the frightful experience of having a battle at our door, I was ready to come home with the children; so on the first train, just a month after the battle, Mr. Joyner brought us to the Border, and now I am in my childhood home with my children. Mr. Joyner returned immediately to Monterey, where the school is going on as usual.

We have another Rosebud in our family—Sarah—born two months before the battle.

With love to all the Rosebuds and yourself, I am,

Sincerely,

MRS. N. E. JOYNER.

MRS. W. R. RAINEY.

In the New Orleans Advocate of Jan. 3, 1914, appears a brief, though excellent sketch, of Mrs. Lou Elliott Rainey, widow of the late W. R. Rainey, who, for many years was an esteemed member of the North Mississippi Conference. The sketch is by Rev. B. F. Bullard, the pastor of Sister Rainey, and pays a well deserved and appropriate tribute to the life and character of this mother in Israel, "esteemed and loved," as he truly says, "by all who knew her." She passed away from earth to her heavenly home on December 28, 1913, in the home of her son-in-law, Mr.

Kemp, whose wife, Mrs. Jodie Kemp, is the youngest daughter of Sister Rainey. The types are in error which say, "her funeral was conducted at Starkville, Miss." The funeral service was held on December 29, in the Methodist Church at Sturgis. Brother Bullard, though suffering at the time with la grippe, held the services in the church, assisted by the writer. After services at the church, the body was laid to rest with a service of song and prayer in the Sturgis Cemetery.

Our saintly, and now ascended, Sister gave her heart to God and became a member of the Methodist Church when twelve years of age. And even in the earlier years of her childhood, she had doubtless by precept and example learned much of Christ, her Savior, her father being a Methodist preacher. Her home had been at Sturgis for many years, and most of her children still living in the town or vicinity, were able to offer their tender ministries to their loving mother during the closing days of her life.

She had past her four score years, and during her long life preserved the even tenor of her way. She kept the faith, adorning her profession of Christ by her pious walk and conversation. Her faith in the Lord Jesus Christ was assuring and loving, enabling her to be faithful in life, and to triumph over the pain and suffering of her last illness, and to leave a bright testimony to her Savior in view of approaching death—a testimony full of comfort to her family and friends. Her children and grandchildren may rise up and call her blessed.

Her husband, Rev. W. R. Rainey, was a preacher of earnest and faithful ministry. He was esteemed and loved and, made many friends among the people where he served. While presiding elder of the district in which he labored, I was an occasional guest in his Christian home. I was frequently associated with him, and learned to appreciate his fine companionable spirit, and his faithful, earnest work as a gospel minister.

The life and character of our ascended Sister Rainey seemed to grow, with her advancing years, in spiritual beauty and grace, even down to its peaceful and beautiful close:

Precious in the sight of the Lord is the death of his saints. The righteous shall be in everlasting remembrance.

Starkville, Miss.

BETTER THAN GOLD.

A gentleman while sitting at the dinner table with his family, had these words said to him by his son, a lad of eleven years: "Father, I have been thinking, if I could have one single wish of mine, what I would choose." "To give you a better chance," said the father, "suppose the allowance be increased to three wishes, what would they be? Be careful, Charley!" He made his choice thoughtfully; first of a good character; second, of good health; and third, of a good education. His father suggested to him that fame, power, riches, and various other things are held in general esteem among men. "I have thought of all that," said he; "but if I have a good character and good health and a good education, I shall be able to earn all the money I really need. Neither fame, power, nor riches, can be of any real advantage to the individual, except he have the higher qualities of head and heart which stand for character and conscience. Health, character, and culture are better than gold. They count for more, both for time and for eternity, than all earthly possessions combined. The fact of their superior value is thus suggested: "Seek first the kingdom of God."—Religious Telescope.

WHAT THE BIRD SAID.

Little boy so snug and warm,
Safe from all this wintry storm,
By your playroom window-pane,
Peeping at the falling rain,
Though the coldest winds may blow,
All good thoughtful people know
That my voice I never raise
In complaint of stormy days.
Little boy, oh tell me true,

MAKES THE BEST OF IT.

The children lived in a little cabin home, and all three of them—Nell, Rob, and Lizzie—were taking a gay "make-believe" ride on an old log. Fido jumped and barked as if he enjoyed the fun as much as anybody.

A gentleman who was passing down the road stopped and laughed at the gay time the children were having.

"Good morning, little folks. That is rather slow riding. Wouldn't you like a horse and carriage?"

"Yes, sir," said Robbie, "but we haven't any, and so we are getting the most fun we can out of what we do have."

Was not that a wise answer? How much pleasanter this world would be if all the little people—and the big ones, too—would stop fretting about things they can not get and make the best of what they have.—Little Ones.

HOW JANE SETTLED IT.

"Oh, mamma! must I save some of my candy for Grace?" said Jane.

"I think a good little sister would."

"But Grace didn't give me any of hers yesterday."

"Didn't she? And how did you like that?"

"I didn't like it at all. And I want to make her not like it, too, because I think she was real mean."

"Dear! dear! And is mamma to have two mean little girls, then?"

Jane looked at her mother, and was quiet a minute; then she ran and threw her arms around her neck and said: "No, no, mamma dear! You shall not have any mean little girl at all. I guess Grace forgot; and I'll go and give her some of my candy now, so she won't ever forget again!"

Her mother smiled. "I think that is the way to make her remember," she said. "And I am so glad I am to have two very kind little girls."—Picture World.

THE STORY ROBERT TOLD.

Nellie M. Leonard, in Zion's Herald.

Aunt Fay pretended to pout. "I am tired of telling all the stories," she said. "I think you might amuse me to-day, Robert."

"All right," agreed Robert promptly.

"Shall I play on your banjo or the piano? Probably it would be most fun to be typewriter for you."

"Oh, no; I don't think that would amuse me. I want you to tell me a story, a real exciting one, you know."

Robert looked puzzled. He climbed up on the divan, folded his small hands, and looked thoughtful. Aunt Fay kept on sewing while she waited to be entertained.

"Listen, auntie!" he began at last. "I know a story. It's an honest, true one, too. Once upon a time—I think it was last Wednesday—mamma and I went to visit Grandma Hooker. We hadn't been to see her for a long time—almost a week, I think."

"Grandpa Hooker is building a big barn, and it was a nice pleasant day, so mamma let me stay out of doors and help him. I pounded nails with a hammer. Then grandma gave me a basket and I filled it with shaving curls. Grandpa says they make good kindling."

"Little Mildred came over to play with me. She lives in the next house, you know. I put some long shaving curls around under her hat. She looked ever so cunning."

"When I was tired of working, Mildred and I played riding horseback. Grandpa fixed two planks on some logs and grandma gave us some twine for reins. We had some fine gallops."

"Then it was dinner-time. You just be patient, Auntie Fay, 'cause my story is going to be exciting pretty soon."

"Grandma cooks the nicest dinners. There were string beans and peas out of grandpa's garden, some baked fish, and potatoes, all mashed with butter, and cream and pudding. Oh, the most splendid pudding! You guess, auntie."

"Rice, tapioca, custard, chocolate, suet, grape-nut, cornstarch, plum pudding," guessed Aunt Fay.

Each time Robert shook his head merrily.

"Give it up?" he asked, his eyes twinkling with the fun of their guessing game.

"Give it up," agreed auntie soberly.

"Well, it was Indian pudding, and grandma just piled the whipped cream on top of mine. It was good."

"After dinner, I gave the potato skins to the hens and carried the pea pods to the pigs. Grandma set out a saucer of fish and potato for old Bobby Cat. Then I was going to help grandpa build the barn. But what do you think? The big, cross rooster flew out of his coop. First thing I knew, he strutted right up to me."

"I was wearing my old red coat. Mamma leaves it over to grandma's so I won't spoil my best overcoat. And that rooster hates red coats. He chased Cousin Alma one day when she had it on."

"He flew right at me and began to climb up my coat. He had been scratching in grandpa's sink-drain and his feet were dreadfully dirty. He never stopped to wipe 'em! You just ought to have seen the mud on my coat! I was scared. I thought he might pick my eyes out. So I cried for grandpa to come quick."

"Grandpa kicked him off and put him back in the hen-yard."

"That old fellow is getting ugly," said grandpa, "but never mind. By and by it will be Thanksgiving Day and he'll make a good stew."

"He's a horrid old rooster, but it seemed too bad to chop his head off and eat him. I said I'd forgive him this time. So I thought I'd talk to him about it. I went close to the wire fence and told him he'd better be a good rooster after this. I told him my Auntie Fay had a little pet hen that would eat right out of my hand, and let me pat her just like Bobby Cat, and she laid an egg most every day."

"It didn't do one bit of good. That old red rooster strutted about, threw his head back and said, 'Cock-a-doodle-doo!' ever so saucy. Then he came against the wire with a bang and snatched off one of my shiny coat buttons."

"After that I kept away from the hen-yard. We always go over to Holbrook and eat Thanksgiving dinner with Grandpa Hooker, and I like chicken ple. How's that for a story, Auntie Fay?"

"Why, that's a lovely story, Robert," smiled auntie. "Next time it will be my turn to tell you one."

"THE SHUT-IN."

We passed through a great canal the other day. Its upper level commanded the loveliest view that a picturesque land could boast, of beautiful villages, spreading meadows, rich farm lands, browsing cattle, busy men and women. It was worth a day's journey to see such a landscape. And it was worth the cost at which the view was revealed. What was the cost?

Our boat had first to enter a deep, dark lock. Then the great doors were closed behind us. We were literally "shut in." When this was securely done, the smaller gates, or sluices, were opened at the other end, and without any sight to us of the operation the higher waters from beyond the other gates began to flow in, down below the surface of our narrow quarters, and we began to rise, almost imperceptibly and as if from an unseen force, until in a few minutes we were on the higher level, passing through the upper gates and looking out upon the beauties of the landscape. Had we the right to murmur because we were shut in for a while?

God shuts in his people sometimes, but it is always that they may be lifted higher and see better things. That sick bed, that affliction, that loss of property which you so much bewailed was but the shutting of the gates that you might be lifted to a loftier level. "Tribulation worketh patience; and patience, experience; and experience, hope; and hope maketh not ashamed." Our light afflictions work out for us a far more exceeding weight of glory.—Presbyterian of the South.

BEWARE OF SECRET SINS.

An eagle carrying a serpent in its talons, was bitten to the heart, and fell to the ground. Have you ever seen a man or woman in church fall in the same way? You do not know the secret of the fall, but the omniscient eye of God saw it. That neglect of prayer, that secret dishonesty, that secret tampering with unbelief and error, was the serpent at the heart that brought the eagle down.—Theodore L. Cuyler.

Telephone Always on Guard

There is never a moment, day or night, when your Bell Telephone is not a protection.

In the busy hours of the day and the silent watches of the night, the switchboard operator is always ready to answer a call.

The telephone is as much a part of the protective system of each community as the police and fire departments.

There's always a feeling of security in the knowledge that close at hand is the means of calling aid quickly when you most need it.

More than 70,000 cities and towns are protected day and night by the Bell Telephone system; 7,500,000 Bell telephones are on guard. In thousands of rural communities it is the chief reliance in emergencies and times of danger.

WHEN YOU TELEPHONE, SMILE.

Editorial

THE PRESENT UNREST IN SOCIETY.

One of the most striking characteristics of this age is the passion for law-making. The Vicksburg (Miss.) Herald is authority for the statement that in 1894 the proceedings of the two Houses of the Mississippi Legislature made a journal of only 1085 pages, but that in 1904 the record made a volume of 1950 pages, while in 1912 it took 3226 pages to chronicle what went on. The present Legislature has been sitting a little more than a month and it is stated that more than 800 bills have been introduced. The idea seems to prevail that all the ills and needs of the body politic can be relieved and a floodtide of prosperity brought in by legislation. Nor is this spirit confined to the secular realm. It is quite as prevalent in the Church. We have in our denomination a considerable number of persons who seem to think that by tearing up and making over everything and tacking on to our system innovations innumerable, they could well-nigh usher in the millennium. But what they would be more likely to do, if they had their way, would be to usher out Southern Methodism, without providing anything that could half way take its place.

We do not mean to say that some legislation is not needed in Church and State. New conditions arise that must be dealt with and our laws, in the light of experience, should be improved and carried further toward perfection as the years pass. But we do not believe that there is any warrant for the revolutionary and socialistic spirit that would tear up the very foundations and multiply our statutes to regulate all the affairs of social and private life. Such a tendency, in our judgment, is unfortunate and bodes no good for the future. Much of the talk that we hear about "progressivism" is the most superficial twaddle. We heard a man of profound mind say a few weeks ago that the cause of the present unrest throughout the world is a weakening of the faith of the people in the great essential truths of Christianity—that belief in God and the teachings of the Bible is the very keystone of the arch that sustains the social order, and that when that is jostled everything else in society is disturbed.

If this be the correct explanation of the widespread disaffection that now prevails against existing authority, manifestly the only thing that can cure it is a genuine revival of religion—a revival that shall reach all classes, from the highest to the lowest, and give to the people everywhere a new consciousness of God and a new faith in his regnancy in human affairs. Undoubtedly what the future of the nations is to be depends largely upon the Church. If she is true to her spiritual mission and faithfully fulfills it in the name of her Lord, she may save the various peoples of the globe from their sins and follies and make possible larger achievements and richer glories in the years to come; but if she, too, loses her vision of the things that are unseen and her touch with God and turns aside to squander her strength upon comparatively unimportant secular matters, it is frightful to think of what may follow. Such is the tremendous responsibility that rests upon the disciples of Christ in this day.

A GRATUITOUS LECTURE.

After congratulating Southern Methodists upon having voted so largely against changing the name of their Church, the Editor of Zion's Herald proceeds to deliver them the following lecture:

"Now it is to be hoped that the Church, having voted in favor of retaining the word 'South,' the leaders will see to it that that distinctive name is kept prominently before the people of the Southland. On the border there is a great deal of confusion because of the persistency with which certain churches of the Southern branch insist on dropping the word 'South' from their bulletins and from other places where announcement is made concerning them, thus deceiving a large number of members of the Methodist Episcopal Church from the North who move to these cities. Let us be honest and open about this entire matter. Our Southern brethren form a great Church, have historic prestige, and have a great work to do. We wish them God-speed. But it is only right and proper that there should be no deception concerning their name. We and they should sail under our own colors. Every now and then we receive letters, as we did only this week, from our pastors along the old Mason and Dixon line, who complain that the Southern Church is recreant at this point. It is heartening to know that the people in the Southern Church, those who really make up that branch of Methodism, are determined that there shall be no confusion in the public mind. The word 'South' stands for something and means something, and they do not intend that a few of their misguided leaders shall bring about anything that will deceive in any way, shape, or manner. Now let the leaders themselves live up to the verdict."

It seems to us that this lecture is in rather bad taste. What is the official name of the Northern Methodist Church? The historians who claim to know say that it is "The Methodist Episcopal Church in the United States of America." When the name, "The Methodist Episcopal Church in America," was proposed to the Methodists of the South for adoption, Bishop Neely and others also laid claim to that designation. Do the Northern Methodists claim a monopoly of all the names except that which has the suffix, "South?" If they, at their pleasure, may drop from their official title the words, "In the United States of America" or substitute one of two or three other names, why should the Southern Methodists be taken complaining to task if, peradventure, they do not always use the full name of their denomination? Especially is the insinuation that our preachers are given to doing this with design very much out of place in a religious journal that aspires to move upon a high plane, unless some proof in support of this implied allegation can be adduced. We respectfully suggest to our contemporary that it might help to clear up any confusion that may exist along the border if the Northern brethren would use in all their literature and chisel or place in placards upon all their buildings the full name of their Church, including the words, "In the United States of America." If they will do this, we venture to predict that no Southern Methodist will ever trespass upon their title.

THE MASTER'S METHOD.

Ex-Governor Frank J. Hanly, of Indiana, in his superb little volume entitled "My Lord and Savior Jesus Christ," makes the following reference to our Lord's method of reaching men: "He understood every human passion and could have played at will upon them all. But he appealed only to the angels of our better nature. The baser keys he would not touch. Prejudice and hate, selfishness and avarice, pride and desire for place and power were beneath his use. But charity and compassion, justice and mercy, tenderness and courage, faith and hope are constellated in the very firmament of every utterance."

How suggestive are these words. They show the uniqueness of Jesus—the infinite distance between his methods and those of the political agitators of the race. And alas! we fear that they also disclose the fearful extent to which the Church has wandered away from the high standards of her great Founder. We talk about honors and salaries and distinctions in the Church as if they were things to be eagerly sought and sometimes, too, we appeal to the pride of men to induce them to become members of our congregations. But such a spirit is of the world, and is unworthy of those who claim to be the disciples of Jesus. True Christianity appeals only to the good in man—it seeks him in the higher altitudes of his being. It is because they move them by exciting the baser motives that spurious religions and a lowered Christianity cannot uplift and save the people. Let us be followers of Christ in our methods of work, and we shall not fail.

CONFUCIANISM OFFICIALLY RECOGNIZED IN CHINA.

A dispatch from Peking on January 29 stated that the Administrative Council which took the place of the Chinese Parliament had passed a bill which was in effect a recognition of Confucianism as the official religion of the so-called Republic. This measure is said to have been submitted to that body by President Yuan Shi Kai himself. This action is to be regretted, but we scarcely think that it will exert any great influence against the cause of Christianity. The truth is, China is yet a heathen and semi-civilized nation. Thousands of persons are being cruelly put to death, and the country is a democracy only in name. Indeed, the people can not really be said to be fit for self-government. We think that Christian speakers and writers have overestimated the influence of Christianity in bringing about the recent overthrow of the Chinese monarchy, though doubtless it was a contributing cause. Contact with the Western nations and increasing enlightenment were perhaps the forces that did most to fan the fires of the late rebellion into a flame, but all in the Western hemisphere is not Christian by any means. The Church will continue to find an open door and probably her largest opportunity among the hundreds of millions of China; but the leaven of Christianity will have to sink far deeper and spread far wider before that vast commonwealth can in any true sense be called a Christian one. We think that overclaiming is one of the dangers to the missionary cause in this day. If this is done, when the true status of affairs is discovered the reaction is liable to prove depressing and hurtful. Exaggeration even in the interest of good things is not wise.

A HAPPY SUGGESTION.

Mr. C. L. Harrell, Professor of Physics and Astronomy in Millsaps College, favored us with an interesting account of the recent fire on the campus of that institution which we are not printing because we had in type a letter from Dr. Watkins concerning the same regrettable occurrence when it came. Prof. Harrell, however, in concluding his communication makes a suggestion which we are glad to give a place in our columns. He says: "Why not name the new building that we shall erect to take the place of the old structure, 'Murray Hall,' and thus honor the first President who labored long and faithfully for the upbuilding of the institution? As President of the Alumni Association, I make the above suggestion, and I believe that every alumnus and former student will endorse it."

We are not included in the list of the alumni of Millsaps, but we like this proposal. Bishop Murray's wise and tactful administration of the affairs of the College in the early years of its history contributed more largely to the making of the institution than many realize, and the splendid service which he has rendered well deserves this recognition. The truth is, for safe and judicious leadership, as well as for purity of character and high-mindedness, our Mississippi Bishop has no superior in the Church. By all means, let us have on our beautiful campus a "Murray Hall or Building."

PERSONAL AND OTHER NOTES.

Rev. J. W. Ward, of Rosedale, Miss., in a business note to our office, says: "We are delighted with our new home. The work begins well and the indications point to a successful year."

The Club composed of the wives of Methodist ministers in New Orleans will meet with Mrs. R. H. Harper at 734 Nashville Avenue on Friday, February 13, at which time the newly elected President, Mrs. John D. Sutton will preside.

The membership of Parker Memorial Church gave a reception to their new pastor and his wife, Rev. and Mrs. R. H. Harper, on Tuesday evening, Jan. 27. Brother and Sister Harper have taken a fine hold at Parker Memorial. Our Methodist polity is as wise and efficient as ever.

The January meeting of the New Orleans District-Sunday School Union, held at Rayne Memorial Church, was the most successful and best attended session of the new organization. It holds much promise for the future. The next meeting will be at Parker Memorial on April 21.

In renewing his own subscription to the Advocate, Brother H. D. Chaney, of Rosedale, Miss., added $1.50 to send our paper for a year to the King's Daughters' Home at that place. It is characteristic of this noble-hearted layman thus to think of others. A truer and worthier man or a more loyal Methodist can nowhere be found.

Brother T. M. Babington, of Franklinton, La., forwarded to our office 3 subscriptions on January 27. This is the second list that he has sent in since the Annual Conference. We greatly appreciate the kindness of this well-known layman, who is a tower of strength to our Church in his community.

Rev. A. M. Bennett, of the Longtown Circuit, continues to bring us under obligations to him for good work done in behalf of the Advocate. In the two weeks preceding January 29 he sent in 30 subscriptions. We pray that our paper may carry a weekly blessing into every home into which he has been instrumental in sending it, and that it may effectively re-enforce him in all his work.

Persons desiring to communicate with Rev. N. E. Joyner may probably reach him by addressing him at Monterey, N. L., Mexico, and also writing upon the envelope "in care United States Vice Consul Blacker, Eagle Pass, Texas; please forward to Consul General Hanna."

Rev. J. B. Andrews, of Siloam Springs, Ark., will begin a revival campaign at Starkville, Miss., on Feb. 22.

Dr. E. B. Partin, of Chunky, Miss., says: "The Chunky Circuit is on the up grade, we think, and we look for a good year under the leadership of our new pastor, Rev. A. S. Byrd."

Bishop W. B. Murrah is expected to spend a Sunday with Rev. W. H. Saunders, our pastor on the Fernwood (Miss.) charge, and dedicate our new church at Kokomo in the early spring.

Rev. A. H. Parker, of Colfax, La., says: "Everything is moving along nicely in this charge. At our first quarterly conference this work was formed into a half station. The two preaching points are Colfax and Montgomery."

A letter from our long-time friend, Rev. J. M. Wyatt of Ackerman, Miss., which was received on Jan. 27, brought us a nice club of subscribers and some kindly words which we shall not soon forget. It is needless to say that his work is progressing favorably.

Rev. W. A. Hays, of Decatur, Miss., reports that he has been given a cordial reception by the people of his charge, and that he considers the prospects encouraging. He has already sent us several subscriptions to the Advocate, for which he has our hearty thanks.

Deemer, Miss., which is under the pastoral supervision of Rev. W. J. Ferguson, has been powerfully stirred by a revival conducted by Rev. Dan E. Kelly. The Church was wonderfully awakened, and up to January 29, with the meeting still in progress, there had been 119 accessions to its membership.

We are indebted to the following brethren, to whom acknowledgment has not elsewhere been made, for having sent in two or more subscriptions to the Advocate within the past few days: Rev. W. W. Bruner, Wall Hill, Miss., 5; Rev. A. S. Raper, Courtland, Miss., 3; Rev. John G. Sloan, Dubach, La., 7.

Rev. A. J. Henry, of Tishomingo, Miss., has entered hopefully upon the work of the new year, and he finds much to do. He will include in the list of things which he seeks to accomplish a more extensive circulation of the Advocate among his people. We pray that he may have success in carrying forward all the work of the Church.

Brother R. M. Weaver, of Corinth, Miss., sent us a few days since greetings from New York, along with a program of the services of the Fifth Avenue Presbyterian Church for January 25 and a neat calendar with superb quotations from distinguished men on every leaf. We are grateful for these kindly remembrances.

We acknowledge the reception of an invitation to a series of devotional talks on the "Spiritual Life" which were given by Rev. J. Gregory Mantle, of London, in Wesley Hall at Vanderbilt University, January 26 to February 1. The general theme discussed by this distinguished minister was, "The Christian and the Holy Spirit."

"Every department of our church work is full of promise." So writes Rev. J. C. Park, of Tupelo, Miss., in a business note to our office. Brother Park is serving the banner charge of the North Mississippi Conference, and we dare say this splendid appointment will go forward to still larger things under his guiding hand.

From the Mize (Miss.) Record of Jan. 29 we take the following: "Rev. A. W. O'Bryant, of the Taylorsville Circuit, was in town Monday. He stated that he is the pastor of ten churches this year and travels something over 100 miles on the round to reach them all." From this it would seem that he is in the noble succession of the pioneers of Methodism.

Under date of January 26, Rev. B. P. Fullilove, of Rienzi, Miss., wrote as follows: "Our Rienzi people gave us a light 'pounding' last Thursday. Our first quarterly conference was held here today. A very good start in the work was made. We are expecting a successful year. I am sending you still another subscription. Like Dr. S. A. Steel's Yankees, I expect to 'keep 'em a-comin'."

We take off our hat to Rev. T. L. Porter, who gave us 5 new subscribers from the Eureka charge (North Miss.) a few days since. Of his new field, Brother Porter says: "I think that our work has begun auspiciously and I am hopeful of a great year. The people received us kindly, and they seem to appreciate my efforts and are showing a disposition to co-operate in the Master's service."

Rev. J. I. Hoffpauir, presiding elder of the Lafayette District (La. Conf.), writes: "Please state that the district stewards of the Lafayette District will meet at Lafayette on February 18 at 11 a.m. Rev. W. W. Drake, the Conference Missionary Secretary, will be with us and conduct a missionary institute. All the pastors in the district will please attend if possible. We expect every district steward to be present."

Brother J. W. Faulk, of Sibley, La., gives us a fine club of subscribers from his charge and writes as follows: "My work is moving along nicely. The people received me well and a few days since gave me a pounding. We are planning some aggressive work, which we hope to consummate by Conference. We had a severe fight with a blind tiger last year, but were victorious in the struggle. The indications generally are promising in this field."

A short time ago there was received at this office an order for a Prayer Calendar from Janice, Miss. The order was forwarded to Mrs. Harrell, who, being out of the calendars, wrote for more, sending in this order also, asking that it be sent direct to Janice. Through some mistake it was sent instead to Mrs. Harrell, who has lost the letter containing the person's name. If the lady who ordered the calendar will kindly send her name to Mrs. R. F. Harrell, Centreville, Miss., it will be mailed to her at once.

Rev. J. J. Baird, of Brooksville, Miss., writes: "The indications here point to a good year. Ten members have been received up to the present time. A substantial increase was made in the pastor's salary at the first quarterly conference, and the charge seems determined to surpass even the good record made last year." Brother Baird will be the host of the Columbus District Conference this year, and we thank him for a kindly invitation to attend.

Of Church matters at Starkville, Miss., Dr. T. C. Wier reports as follows: "Rev. T. H. Lipscomb's congregation are delighted with his return to them as pastor. He has entered heartily upon the work of the Conference year. The new parsonage is going up rapidly and will be a joy to the church, and especially so to the pastor and his family. A Sunday school annex is also being built and will soon be ready for use. It will be a great convenience in the work of our growing Sunday school."

In a business communication to the Advocate, Rev. W. N. Thomas, of Daleville, Miss., refers as follows to the outlook in his charge: "The prospect here is encouraging. We have entered upon the new year with a renewed determination to do better work and to try to bring more souls into the kingdom." It is well to aspire to greater efficiency in the Master's service. The man who is satisfied with his past or present achievements is not possessed of the zeal and widening vision that he ought to have.

Rev. W. H. Mattison, the new pastor of the only C. M. E. Church in the city of New Orleans, called at the Methodist Preachers' Meeting not long ago. He produced fine credentials and recommendations, asked the co-operation of the brethren as far as possible, stated that his church was sadly in need of repair, and asked for a subscription. Practically all of the preachers contributed something, and several promised to send him a list of laymen in their churches for him to call upon in the interest of his work.

We stated in our last issue that the First Methodist Church of New Orleans had received 38 members since Conference. The number that has come in is now 48. All the indications point to a fruitful year for this active congregation, which is the "down-town church" of our Crescent City Methodism. It is the nearest of all our houses of worship to the great hotels of New Orleans, and hence it occupies a position of strategic importance. Both the opportunities and responsibilities of this flock are very great.

In forwarding us a club of 5 subscribers, Rev. J. T. Abney, of Morton, Miss., makes the following reference to his work: "We were very cordially received on our return to the Morton and Pelahatchie charge. Many kindnesses have been shown us. The people remembered us with quite a supply of substantial things during the Christmas season and since, which we are continuing to enjoy. Our first quarterly conference has been held, and we feel that a good start has been made on the work of the new year."

Dr. J. T. Sawyer wishes the brethren—the pastors in both Louisiana and Mississippi—to remember that he is ready to preach for them or hold meetings with them during the coming spring, summer and fall. He held revival meetings and preached frequently last year, with considerable success. His address is 5655 Hawthorne Avenue, Lake View, New Orleans. Write the Doctor and send him a call, fixing the date that will be best for your charge. He is an able expositor of the Word, and will render you excellent service.

Rev. Charles E. Downer, who was returned by Bishop Candler to the Buford (Miss.) charge has completed his first round of six appointments and states that the conditions present a fair prospect for a good year's work. Brother Downer secured 50 subscriptions to the Advocate last year, and announces that it is his purpose to continue to present its claims to his people. We are grateful for the fine service that he has rendered the Conference organ, and we pray that God may crown all his efforts to extend the Master's kingdom with a large measure of success.

Rev. John D. Ellis favors us with the following note concerning his work at Woodville, Miss.: "My reception by the people here has been cordial, splendid, and characteristic. A better people and more delightful pastorate cannot be found. Congregations have been good and are increasing each Sabbath. The Sunday school and prayer meeting are growing in attendance and interest, and the Epworth League of 40 members is on a boom. The finances are well up. Our house of worship will be remodeled and repaired in a few days. The money for this is in hand, and the committee is at work. The outlook for success along all lines is bright."

Referring in a letter to the Editor to the destruction by fire of the Main Building at Millsaps College, Major R. W. Millsaps says: "I did not know how much affection I had for it until it was lost to us. But this is the way things go in life, and there is nothing left for us to do but to go forward and rebuild." The Methodists of Mississippi will not fail to rally to the assistance of this splendid institution which has done so much for the Church in their State, in this hour of need and opportunity.

One of the growing young laymen of Southern Methodism is Mr. W. A. McKennon of Shreveport, La. He is the resourceful superintendent of the great Sunday school of our First Church in that city, and his wise leadership has had much to do with bringing it to its present high state of excellence. We are also informed that his influence contributed largely to the erection of the magnificent new house of worship now occupied by our First Church congregation. Brother McKennon is one of the delegates from Louisiana to the next General Conference.

Rev. J. Loyd Decell, of Waynesboro, Miss., sends us the following notice: "Last night, January 28, 1914, at 8:30 o'clock at the home of the bride's mother, Sister Eliza J. Davis, in Waynesboro, Miss., it was my happy privilege to perform the marriage ceremony of Rev. C. C. Evans and Mrs. Jogie D. Childress. Sister Childress was a loyal and active member of our Waynesboro Methodist Church, and is of noble Christian and loyal Methodist parentage. She represents one of the prominent families of this section of the State. Brother Evans, who is now the pastor of the Second Avenue Church of Laurel, with his honored record in the Mississippi Conference, needs no commendation to the Advocate's readers. May the Heavenly Father's blessings attend their ministry."

We acknowledge the reception of a copy of a neatly printed communication and statement which has been prepared and sent out by Brother E. W. Reid, of Magnolia, Miss., who is the Agent for the Mississippi Methodist Orphanage in the Brookhaven District. The work for this noble institution is thoroughly systematized in the territory over which Brother Reid has supervision, a monthly assessment having been placed on every charge in it. The district gave to the Home last year in monthly payments $1996.15, and on Work Day, $883.28. The banner charge was Fernwood, which paid in monthly instalments $750.87, and on Work Day, $255.87. We dare say that if the work in all the other districts in Mississippi were as well looked after as it is in the Brookhaven district, Brother Williams would have little to worry him financially.

Rev. J. S. Duke, of Bellefontaine, Miss., writes: "This charge has been chafed around considerably under the Methodist plan of taking care of all congregations, but I think it may stay as it now is for some time to come. I serve a fine people and there are great opportunities here in every way. All things seem to point to a great year, and I mean to do my part to make this a verity. Bellefontaine is now in the Durant District, and Brother Shipman made a fine impression when he held his quarterly conferences up this way. I went with him out to Slate Springs and enjoyed the trip immensely. He conducts business admirably, and his preaching is of a high order, and unlike the traditional elder, he does not use the same sermon for the whole round of conferences. Rev. J. T. McCafferty is in high favor with his people at Eupora and things are going on there all the time. Prof. Boyd Campbell is the efficient Sunday school superintendent at that place, but he is a layman who can work in any capacity."

Rev. J. F. Foster was in New Orleans last week and spent some time in the Advocate office looking after the work of getting out the Louisiana Conference Minutes. Brother Foster spoke most optimistically of his work at Amite City, La. He stated that his congregations have been large; that the stewards are active and given to standing loyally by the pastor, and that the Woman's Missionary Society has taken on new life and is now meeting twice a month instead of once a month as heretofore. A mission study class has been organized among the members of this Society, and the Week of Prayer is being observed this week, one of the mission fields being studied each evening. The Presbyterians are participating in these services. Brother Foster is especially pleased with the mid-week Bible Study Class which he has lately organized. He had 53 present at the last meeting, and of these 25 were men, including two judges and two doctors. He hopes to have 70 present at the next meeting.

THOMAS J. COKER was born in Crenshaw County, Alabama, 72 years ago; and died near Adams Church, on Dec. 12, 1913. He served three years in the Civil War. Enlisting in the 22d Alabama Regiment, he was later transferred to the Virginia army, and served under Gen. R. E. Lee. He came to Mississippi at the close of the war. He was converted and joined the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, in the year 1867, and was an humble, quiet follower of his blessed Savior. Those who came in contact with him, took knowledge of him, that he had been with Jesus. His devoted, and heart-broken daughter, Miss Inez, writes us that her father, had family prayers as far back as she could remember and up to the time of his death. He had no fear of death, and at the last requested his loved ones to meet him in heaven. He was first married in 1867. God blessed this union with three sons. His first wife died in July, 1873. He then married Mary Elizabeth Stevens in 1875, and to them were born ten sons and one daughter. The three older sons, his wife, and seven of the younger sons and the daughter remain to mourn their great loss. His former pastor, J. S. PARKER.

CALVIN MILTON COX, one of the knightliest and truest Christian gentlemen it has been my fortune to know, passed away at his home in Aberdeen, December 29, 1913. A devoted member of the Methodist Church, almost always in his place at Sunday school and almost always in his pew twice on Sundays, he was generally looked upon as one of the best examples of what the religion of Christ can do for a human soul. In business he was diligent and efficient to a marked degree, painstakingly accurate in his accounts and rigidly truthful in his representations. Socially he was genial and kindly; no pressure of time or hurry could keep him from a cheery salutation—one always felt better for meeting him on the street. Forty-seven years old, he seemed in the very prime of life, promising the most useful service for many years. Most happily married, and with a beautiful family growing up about him, life would seem most alluring. But we must leave mysteries too deep for our ken to that all-wise and infinitely-loving Being, our blessed God. By and by we shall understand; meanwhile we crave His comfort and the peace which only He can give. I. D. BORDERS.

MEMORIAL RESOLUTIONS.

(Adopted by the Sunday School of Labranch Street Methodist Church, McComb, Miss.)

Whereas, The Junior Phillathia Class of LaBranch Street Methodist Church, McComb, has been called to mourn the departure of one of its members in the person of Eddie Joe Middleton; therefore be it Resolved by said Class and Sunday School:

1. That in the death of Eddie Joe, the Class and Sunday school has lost a quiet, modest, sweet Christian girl, the Church a consistent member, and her home an affectionate daughter and sister.

2. That while we mourn her passing away, we sorrow not as those who have no hope, for we hope to meet her again when the battles of life are all over and the victories all won.

3. That we extend to the bereaved family our tender sympathy in their sorrow, making their sorrow and grief ours, and we commend to them and all others the sweet, modest disposition of Eddie Joe, and her patient submission as was demonstrated during her illness which continued for several months during which she never murmured nor complained.

4. That these resolutions be read in open Sunday school, that a copy be given the bereaved family, and a copy furnished the New Orleans Christian Advocate and each of the town papers for publication.

Signed: Mrs. F. B. Ormond (teacher), Fannie McGee, Nellie Wardlaw, committee.

RESOLUTIONS OF APPRECIATION.

Whereas, we have learned with profound regret that Mrs. A. E. Wyatt, our faithful and efficient Conference Second Vice President, has removed from Natchez, Miss., to Detroit, Mich., and has severed her connection with the "Petal Beacon Lights;" and

Whereas, we feel a sense of loss and bereavement as we face the coming year and years without her wise judgment and her guiding hand; therefore, be it

Resolved: 1. That we, the members of the "Petal Beacon Lights," extend to Mrs. Wyatt our love and sincere appreciation of her untiring efforts in our behalf and her devotion to our work.

2. That a copy of these resolutions be sent to Mrs. Wyatt, and a copy be placed upon the minutes of our Society.

Signed: Era Alimon, Ethel Crawford, Willie D. Hearst, Committee.

IN MEMORIAM.

Mabel Cornelia Valden, eldest daughter of the late Walter M. and Mrs. C. C. Myers, of Byhalia, Miss., was born Aug. 17, 1890; joined the M. E. Church, South, in 1906; was married to Clifton F. Valden, Dec. 22, 1909; and died at her home near Lewisburg, Miss., Jan. 20, 1914. On January 11, while engaged in her household duties, this noble young woman was taken with congestion; and after twelve days of suffering, all the efforts of medical skill and attention of loved ones, failed. The Angel of Death put forth his hand; and "She made no sign; she gave no token, that her dying hour had come, but the Angels knew, for God had spoken, and gently the silver cord was broken, and softly they bore her home;" and we must live in hope of the resurrection morn.

Mabel was of that high type of Christian womanhood that ever bloomed into a sweet genial spirit of love, because she loved her church, and the performance of Christian duty, loved her home and did all in her power to make home happy and pleasant. She loved her family and her friends which were many. Every one who knew her, only knew to love her. She leaves a heart-broken husband, a little boy three years of age, a fond mother, two sisters, and four brothers, to mourn their loss. But dear ones, weep not, the Hand that has plucked this rose of young womanhood from our midst and left the little bud to bloom alone hath need of bright spirits in His Kingdom; and by and by, one by one, we will be permitted to see how beautifully she blooms in Glory; and the loving ties that have been so suddenly severed will be reunited. Then we will know as we are known. God the Father doeth all things well. Impressive funeral services were conducted by Rev. L. A. McKeown, after which we laid her to rest in Fountain-Head Cemetery. ONE WHO LOVED HER.

THICK, GLOSSY HAIR FREE FROM DANDRUFF

Girls! Try It! Hair gets soft, fluffy and beautiful—Get a 25 cent bottle of Danderine.

If you care for heavy hair that glitters with beauty and is radiant with life; has an incomparable softness and is fluffy and lustrous, try Danderine.

Just one application doubles the beauty of your hair, besides it immediately dissolves every particle of dandruff. You can not have nice heavy, healthy hair if you have dandruff. This destructive scurf robs the hair of its lustre, its strength and its very life, and if not overcome it produces a feverishness and itching of the scalp; the hair roots famish, loosen and die; then the hair falls out fast. Surely get a 25-cent bottle of Knowlton's Danderine from any drug store and just try it.

MRS. POWELL ALMOST DEAD.

Dry Ridge, Ky. — "I could hardly walk across the room," says Mrs. Lydia Powell, of Dry Ridge, "before I tried Cardui. I was so poorly, I was almost dead. Now, I can walk four miles and do my work with much more ease. I praise Cardui for my wonderful cure." Cardui is successful in benefiting sick women, because it is composed of ingredients that act specifically on the womanly constitution, relieving headache, backache, irregularity, misery and distress. Only a good medicine could show such continual increase in popularity, as Cardui has, for the past 50 years. Try Cardui, the woman's tonic.

Findings from the Field

Cockrum, Miss.

We were cordially received for this, our fourth year, and things are moving along nicely. We have a fine Sunday school here at Cockrum, the best since I have been here. We had 60 present last Sunday. We have fine prayer meetings—50 to 60 out each Friday night, and a fine teacher-training class every Sunday afternoon. Last year we were able to carry up to Conference a clean sheet; everything was in full, and this year we have an increase in Conference collections of about $50. We are praying that this year may be the best of the quadrennium. We want a more spiritual people, and we feel that then the finances will be in full. We have had our first quarterly conference. I think we have a great and good man as our presiding elder. He preached us two fine sermons and in both stressed the importance of the Church caring for the children. We all love the Advocate and read it closely. Wishing you all a prosperous year in the office, I am your brother,
—R. I. Collins.

Booneville (Miss.) Circuit.

I think that we made a good start for a good year in this field. We have a good country, good people and fine roads, conditions are prosperous—hog and hominy everywhere, and everybody cheerful and hopeful. Our quarterly conference, the first held in the district for the year, has come and gone. Though so early, Brother Mitchell, our presiding elder, said that we had the best financial report he has heard made at a first quarterly conference for years. The people seem to be taking a new start with a higher conception of Christian duty and obligation. We have just finished re-papering Blythe's Chapel and have installed a new coal heater. Our Sunday school interest is good, two of our schools are "evergreen." I have visited 90 homes up to date and I am not yet half around. I have never felt a greater need of (the assistant pastor) the Advocate. No pastor can succeed without it, and without it an official of the Church is disqualified and ought to be ashamed of himself. I am sure the Advocate was never better. The Lord bless the managers!
—W. A. Bowlin, P. C.

Hermanville, Miss.

Dear Dr. Meek: The first session of our quarterly conference for the Hermanville charge convened here today, and was well attended. Nearly all of our official board were in attendance and every officer manifested a determination to stand more courageously by the church than ever before. Despite the fact that nearly every family has moved away from one of our best churches on the charge, and that many others have moved away from the charge since Conference, and that half of our town was destroyed by fire, many of our best paying people losing thousands of dollars in the same, the assessment for the preacher in charge was raised much above that of last year. Brother Adams came to us on Sunday, Jan. 25, and preached for us twice, both sermons being very much enjoyed by a large congregation, many of those present saying that they were the best sermons they ever heard Dr. Adams preach. His able sermons, efficient leadership and strong appeals to the official board to stand by the Church of God and render unto God what is due him, in the face of all their calamities, was largely the cause of a new determination on the part of the officials to pay more and do better by the church this year than ever before. This is a fine people, up here—none better in the world, in my opinion, and if you will visit our little city and preach for some time, you will find that I have not exaggerated when I say this.—G. G. Yeager.

Carriere, Miss.

Dear Dr. Meek: There is a homesick feeling which creeps over me occasionally, when I think of the dear, good people on the Vancleave charge. It was like parting with our own loved ones to tell some of those people good-bye. Those were four of the happiest years of my ministerial life and I shall never forget them. Brother Blackwell is serving some of the best people in the Mississippi Conference; may he have a great year! We are comfortably situated here at Carriere. We were cordially received by the good people. They had a good dinner ready for us when we arrived. They gave us a liberal "pounding," and we have been receiving good things ever since. The Lord is certainly gracious unto us. We find that our brother, H. P. Lewis, Jr., is held in the highest esteem by the people of this country. He has done a great work for Christ and Methodism here. We are trying to take up the work where he left off and move upward. Brother M. Green, our Sunday school superintendent at Picayune, is an untiring worker; he and his good wife have the work of the Lord at heart. We find a good friend and helper in Brother Woodward also, the superintendent at Carriere. With these strong men to back us up with their prayers and support, with the sympathy and friendship of all the people on this charge, with the love and prayers of a dear father (who is now waiting for the signal to come up higher); with the memory of the sweetest and best mother that ever lived, and with the love of a companion who knows how to be a wife and mother, how can I fail? We must succeed.

Brother Meek, will you permit me to say this one thing?—

If the women who have been in Jackson for the past few days clamoring for "Woman Suffrage" had been in their respective homes, erecting family altars, praying for their children day and night for the past few years, what a country we would have today! May the mothers of our country become more consecrated to their Lord, and to their homes.—Jas. M. Lewis.

DID YOU HAVE A GIVING CHRISTMAS?

Sunday schools and churches that have tried the plan of a "Giving Christmas" this year can help others by passing on the account of the way this idea was worked out. A description of your Giving Christmas, including the strong and weak points, will be of value to others in planning for next year. Please pass on the results of your experience by writing an account of the celebration to the Missionary Education Movement, 156 Fifth Avenue, New York City.

LESS MEAT IF BACK AND KIDNEYS HURT.

Take a glass of Salts to flush Kidneys
If Bladder bothers you—Drink lots of water.

Eating meat regularly eventually produces kidney trouble in some form or other, says a well-known authority, because the uric acid in meat excites the kidneys, they become overworked; get sluggish; clog up and cause all sorts of distress, particularly back-ache and misery in the kidney region; rheumatic twinges, severe headaches, acid stomach, constipation, torpid liver, sleeplessness, bladder and urinary irritation.

The moment your back hurts or kidneys aren't acting right, or if bladder bothers you, get about four ounces of Jad Salts from any good pharmacy; take a tablespoonful in a glass of water before breakfast for a few days and your kidneys will then act fine. This famous salts is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia, and has been used for generations to flush clogged kidneys and stimulate them to normal activity; also to neutralize the acids in the urine so it no longer irritates, thus ending bladder disorders.

Jad Salts cannot injure anyone; makes a delightful effervescent lithia-water drink which millions of men and women take now and then to keep the kidneys and urinary organs clean, thus avoiding serious kidney disease.

OLD LADY'S SAGE ADVICE.

Knoxville, Tenn.—Mrs. Mamie Towe, of 102 W. Main Street, this city, says: "If you had seen me before I began to take Cardui, you would not think I was the same person. Six doctors failed to do me good, and my friends thought I would die. I could hardly get out of bed or walk a step. At last an old lady advised me to take Cardui, and now I can go most anywhere." All ailing women need Cardui, as a gentle, refreshing tonic, especially adapted to their peculiar ailments. It is a reliable, vegetable remedy, successfully used for over 50 years. You ought to try it.—Adv.

The Sunday School.

LOUISIANA NOTES.

By Rev. P. O. Lowrey.

On Sunday night, Feb. 1, the Earnest Workers Class of teen-age boys are to have charge of the preaching service at Kentwood. They are to furnish the ushers and special music for the occasion, and the pastor will preach them a special sermon. This is a large class and their charter of organization has just been received.

Mr. W. S. Holmes has, as a feature in his Sunday school program at Baton Rouge, First Church, a "fellowship service" of about five minutes just before the recitation of the lessons, at which time strangers are introduced, guests greeted, and a general fraternal spirit developed. Nowhere else have we seen this feature on a Sunday school program, but we commend it as being worth while.

Since the beginning of the year the Sunday school at Kentwood has been re-graded and two new classes made—one a primary, taught by Mrs. J. B. Magee, and the other a Junior boys' class, taught by Mr. Ellison Carruth. Fifty new song books have been ordered, and also graded literature for the primaries, and some Adult Students for the adult classes. The attendance in the meantime has been much increased and plans are being matured to add needed classrooms.

Rev. W. W. Holmes, the pastor, corrects a recent report that we sent in to the Advocate to the effect that the Jonesboro Sunday school was the only one in the Ruston District where the enrollment was larger than the church membership, informing us that the Ruston church reported to the Annual Conference 804 Sunday school scholars as against a church membership of 575. We are glad to be thus corrected, and congratulate the Ruston leaders on this fine showing. Our report was based on the judgment of the Jonesboro pastor at that time, and not from an examination of the Minutes.

For some time the writer has had the conviction that much good could be gained in church social get-together meetings with a banquet feature, and at several points last year as Sunday School Field Secretary he tried to mature plans for such meetings, but in every case, we believe, our plans failed to come to fruition. At the beginning of this year we determined to try the theory out in our own pastoral charge, and our people from the first fell heartily in with the plan, and our success was beyond our most sanguine expectations. We have at different times attended banquets with high dignitaries of the Church and Sunday school world, but have never been a part of a gathering where the fellowship was happier or the occasion more profitable in attaining the end in view. As we had no suitable room in the church for such a meeting, we secured the most popular hall in town, which was furnished us gratis. The women of the Missionary Society served a splendid lunch, and our own orchestra consisting of organ, cornet, violin, and flute, furnished instrumental music, and the choir rendered various selections of vocal music, including some well rendered songs by a quartette of young men. Addresses were made by representatives of the Sunday school, the Epworth League, the Woman's Missionary Society, the choir, and the official Board, thus including all the organizations of the church, Rev. H. W. Bowman, our presiding elder, who was our guest of honor, also made an address on "The Church in Action." Rev. J. F. Foster, a neighboring pastor, was also present and brought an appreciated greeting from Amite. With our people at Kentwood the value of such meetings is no longer a matter of speculation, and when the church enters heartily into them they can be arranged and carried forward without much labor or expense, and will aid greatly in getting the people together socially and in re-enlisting some who have fallen by the wayside through indifference.

MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE NOTES.

By Mr. R. A. Maddox.

The Sunday school at Madison is doing the best work it has done in years. The attendance is increasing all the time. Last Sunday 99 were present, that is very, very good. They are talking of organizing the Bible Classes. At Pochontas new life has entered into the school. The attendance is better, the interest deep, and the work is good. They have a Young Men's Class. Rev. W. A. Terry is pastor at both the above places, hence the work.

Three things to do in teacher-training:

(1) Let a class of young people be organized in the Sunday school to take the Teacher-training Course at the Sunday school hour, using the Legion of Honor Course. This trains future teachers.

(2) Enlist the teachers of the Sunday school in a week night Training Class; or, if not enough can be interested for this, get some, at least, to take the Course at home or by correspondence. This trains present teachers.

(3) Persuade some man or woman to enroll in the individual, or home study Course for the Teacher-training Class teacher. This trains a teacher for the Training Class.

Something else we can do:
Have a good up-to-date Sunday school Library. It need not be so expensive, but should contain books that children and boys and girls like to read. They enter the reading period at about eight years of age, and they are going to read something. We should be just as careful about the books they read as we are of the company they keep. If it is hurtful for them to keep trashy and indecent company, then they should not read indecent books.

NEWS AND NOTES.

By Miss Elizabeth Kilpatrick.

"What nobler ambition can a strong, healthy man have than to take Jesus Christ as his supreme ideal and grow into it? Such an all-absorbing, all-dominant purpose will transform any life and cleanse it of dross."

Here is a list of books for Bible Classes of girls well worth consideration: "Out of Doors in the Bible," Cutler; "Jesus, the Man of Galilee," Slack; "Women of Ancient Israel," Adams; "Young Working Girls," Woods; "The Girl and her Religion," Margaret Slattery.

Superintendent W. A. Boone, of Pontotoc, has 130 pupils in his progressive Sunday school, several organized classes, and 29 on the Cradle Roll, which is fine. The school is graded and has an irregular Workers' Council. Near the good town of Pontotoc, there is a school of 25 out of 50 church members, with fine possibilities for organization.

The Galloway Memorial Class, of the First Methodist Church of Corinth has a great record for the last six months, as follows: 65 members, flowers sent to sick, 55 times; trays sent to sick, 56; visits to sick and strangers, 391; collections, $39.61; new members, 3; Home Department, 18; honorary members, 14. They have contributed $25 to missions, $100 to the local parsonage; and have given to many other charitable causes besides. Hon. Frank Worsham is the capable teacher, and the new officers are Mrs. Blakemore, president; Mrs. Sigman and Mrs. Patrick, vice presidents; Mrs. Thompson, secretary; and Mrs. George Taylor, treasurer. This class of busy mothers sets a fine example in attendance and punctuality.

Dr. John Y. Murry, who for 25 years has been the honored and revered President of the Tiptah County Sunday School Association, for many years the Superintendent of the Ripley Sunday school, and for many years a member of the North Mississippi Conference Sunday School Board, had a serious accident some two or three months ago; but his numerous friends are delighted to know that he is able to sit up, and that his Tiptah County friends have presented him with a lovely table furnishing every possible convenience in eating and other kinds of service, and that he can have it placed by his bed or chair and enjoy its comforts. This is only a small token of the esteem felt for this great and good man, whose life has been a benediction to all it has touched.

Prof. A. B. Campbell, of Eupora, is not only superintendent of the public school at that place, but of a fine Sunday school as well. He has reorganized the Teachers' Meeting, thereby doing a helpful service to every teacher and pupil in his school. A Junior Boy Scouts' Class has been formed out of the too large original class; the fourth Sunday has been set aside as Missionary Sunday, and Miss Willingham's Class has contributed the new assistant secretary for the Sunday school, proving as usual, that the organized Adult Class of men or women is the best bank account that any school could have. This class will assume the support of a missionary in China. The secretary's book is unique and interesting. The Cradle Roll and Home Department have both been reorganized. Mr. I. W. Cooper, a valued member of the Sunday School Board, has charge of the visitors' department in the Morris Class, and had six to his account on a recent Sunday. He has gotten out attractive cards and a roll for these "strangers within the gates," who are to receive this hearty Christian hospitality. Who can even begin to measure the results?

GIVE "SYRUP OF FIGS" TO CONSTIPATED CHILD

Delicious "Fruit Laxative" can't harm tender little Stomach, liver and bowels.

Look at the tongue, mother! If coated, your little one's stomach, liver and bowels need cleansing at once. When peevish, cross, listless, doesn't sleep, eat or act naturally, or is feverish, stomach sour, breath bad; has sore throat, diarrhea, full of cold, give a teaspoonful of "California Syrup of Figs," and in a few hours all the foul, constipated waste, undigested food and sour bile gently moves out of its little bowels without griping, and you have a well, playful child again. Ask your druggist for a 50-cent bottle of "California Syrup of Figs," which contains full directions for babies, children of all ages and for grown-ups.

Arouses the Liver and Purifies the Blood

The Old Standard general strengthening tonic CROVE'S TASTELESS CHILL TONIC, arouses the liver to action, drives Malaria out of the blood and builds up the system. For adults and children. 50c.

"Our minds are small because we are faithless. If we had perfect faith in God our our hearts would partake of his greatness."

THIS WILL INTEREST MANY.

F. W. Parkhurst, the Boston publisher, says that if anyone afflicted with rheumatism in any form, neuralgia or kidney trouble, will send their address to him at 701 Carney Building, Boston, Mass., he will direct them to a perfect cure. He has nothing to sell or give; only tells you how he was cured after years of search for relief. Hundreds have tested it with success.

10 CENT "CASCARETS" FOR LIVER AND BOWELS

Cure Sick Headache, Constipation, Biliousness, Sour Stomach, Bad Breath—Candy Cathartic.

No odds how bad your liver, stomach or bowels; how much your head aches, how miserable you are from constipation, indigestion, biliousness and sluggish bowels—you always get relief with Cascarets. They immediately cleanse and regulate the stomach, remove the sour, fermenting food and foul gases; take the excess bile from the liver and carry off the constipated waste matter and poison from the intestines and bowels. A 10-cent box from your druggist will keep your liver and bowels clean; stomach sweet and head clear for months. They work while you sleep.

My Meals Don't Hurt a Bit

A Little Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablet will Aid Your Exhausted Stomach to Digest Any Meal.

Isn't it a real joy to see children eat? There is almost a ridiculous humor about it. The same joy that a child feels at meal time should be experienced by "grown ups" and would be if they would only do as children do.

The work, worries and woes of adult life exhaust the digestive apparatus and nature very often is not allowed time or opportunity to renew or repair the exhausted organs and depleted digestive juices.

"Well whata You Think o' a Big Feed Without Pain?"

A Stuart's tablet goes into the stomach like food. It contains nothing but natural digestive elements and when at work in a weak stomach it aids the worn-out gastric glands, supplies the right mixture of stomach juices and under the action of the stomach it thoroughly permeates all the food. Thus when the stomach work is done the meal goes into the small intestines in better shape to be assimilated by the system.

One element of Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets is so strong and efficient that one grain of it will digest 3,000 grains of mixed food such as meats, vegetables, grains, fluids, etc.

The simple habit of eating a Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablet after each meal will readjust your digestion in a very short time so that you will no longer need assistance.

Go to your druggist and obtain a box to-day; price, 50 cents.

LOUISIANA TREASURER'S REPORT.

Receipts for the fourth quarter in the Home Department are $1647.95; for the Foreign Department they are $1781.89. Total received on Home Department Pledge for 1913 was $1615.40; for Foreign Pledge was $2222.52. Short on Home Department Pledge $409.60; Foreign Pledge $177.48. These figures speak for themselves. What a reproach they bring upon us!

ANNUAL REPORT.

Home Department of Woman's Missionary Society, North Mississippi Conference.

118 adult auxiliaries enrolled during 1913; Young People's auxiliaries, 29; Junior divisions, 59. Total number of members in these three branches of the work, 3797. Subscribers to Missionary Voice, 916. Members of Home Mission Study Classes, 63. Members pledged to Christian Stewardship, 240. Thirty-one auxiliaries observed the week of prayer. Of the 118 enrolled auxiliaries 14 are new organizations, but only 8 of these new ones remitted to the Treasurer. Eight auxiliaries that remitted in 1912 failed to do so in 1913 so the number of active auxiliaries is just the same as last year with an increase in membership of 232. The greatest increase is found in the Junior Division which now has 33 active paying auxiliaries where last year there were nine, with an increase in membership of 164. The Young People's Division also shows a splendid increase from 3 paying auxiliaries to 11, and in membership 126. The number of auxiliaries in both Junior and Young People is far in excess of those paying, or reporting their statistics, which indicates that there is an interest in these departments which should be encouraged by all the department officers; and perhaps during this year, the numerous letters which these faithful officers have sent out during the past year will bear some fruit. It would certainly assist the secretary very materially if the auxiliaries that failed to send in their membership reports would do so this year.

LOUISE DUNSTAN.

GOOD NEWS FROM THE TUPELO AUXILIARY.

Mrs. Hoyle in ordering 18 prayer calendars for the Tupelo Auxiliary says: "We will have 21 in our auxiliary using these. We are rejoicing over our union here, and feel greatly encouraged over the work. We have 81 enrolled, 41 of whom belong to both departments. 49 are in Study Circle, 66 taking the Missionary Voice, and 21 in the Prayer Circle. $200 promised on pledge in Foreign department, and $100 in Home department."

A MESSAGE FROM DR. SKINNER.

There are about three hundred and eighty thousand Mexicans in Texas. There are about eighty thousand children of school age. About one-fourth of these are enrolled in the public schools. Sixty thousand Mexican children growing up in ignorance—this is our problem. We have three hundred children enrolled at Laredo Seminary so far this year. Almost all of them are Catholics. They hear the Bible read and explained. They must listen to the prayers offered. They study the Bible. Most of them are from very poor homes, yet they are very bright children. We are helping about eighty girls, giving them employment that meets the greater part of their expenses. Church societies furnish clothes for some of them. We have Sunday school every Sunday morning. Our classes are organized and we use the graded system. We have a good, strong Epworth League that meets every Sunday evening. All the departments are in operation. We have preaching every Tuesday evening. Bible study is required of all students. They do the work gladly.

OUR KOREAN MISSION.

The minutes of the seventeenth annual session of the Korean Mission show that there are 6,292 members of our Church and 6,948 Sunday school pupils. The native Church members gave last year for all church purposes 13,187 yen, or about $6,598. There has been a decrease in the number of members; but there are several good reasons for this. Numbers of Christians—in some places whole churches—have moved into Manchuria. Some who came into the Church for other than spiritual reasons have slipped away. On the other hand, great progress has been made in the native contribution to the work of the church. This is one of the good signs in the church life of Korea. Every phase of missionary work in Korea is full of encouragement for the coming year. The Mission recommends that there shall be only one boarding school for girls in Korea, and Holston Institute, at Songdo, has been selected for that purpose. If this recommendation is adopted by the Council, Carolina Institute, and Lucy Cunningham will be conducted hereafter as day schools.

THE NATCHITOCHESS MISSIONARY SOCIETY.

The following clipping is taken from the "Natchitoches Times," and gives an interesting account of the workings of this society: The members of the Woman's Missionary Society of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, of Natchitoches, La., have divided themselves into three circles in order to do more thorough and efficient work. These circles are to be presided over as follows: Mrs. Mary B. Hargrove has charge of circle number 1, Mrs. J. I. Sandlin, of circle number 2, Mrs. Thomas F. Porter, of circle number 3.

The meetings of the society are held on four consecutive Saturdays of each month after the following manner: On the first Saturday of the month there is a business meeting held by each of the circles. The program for the meeting on the second Saturday of the month is taken from the "Missionary Voice." The meeting hours of the third Saturday are devoted to the study of a book entitled "New America." This meeting is under the leadership of the society president, Mrs. Lizzie Carter McVoy. The last, or fourth meeting of each month is known as the social meeting and at this time all are expected to spend a pleasant afternoon socially. The meeting is held at the home of one of the

Dr. Blosser's Catarrh Remedy.

Trial Package Mailed Free to Any Sufferer.

If you have catarrh of the head, nose, throat; if catarrh has affected your hearing; if you sneeze, hawk or spit; if you take one cold after another; if your head feels stopped-up; you should try this remedy discovered by Dr. Blosser, who has made a specialty of treating catarrh for over thirty-nine years.

This Remedy is composed of herbs, flowers and seeds possessing healing medicinal properties; contains no tobacco, is not injurious or habit-forming; is pleasant to use and perfectly harmless to man, woman or child.

Catarrhal germs are carried into the head, nose and throat with the air you breathe—just so the warm medicated smoke-vapor is carried with the breath, applying the medicine directly to the diseased parts. If you have tried the usual methods such as sprays, douches, salves, inhalers and the stomach-ruining "constitutional" medicines, you will readily see the superiority of this Smoking Remedy.

Simply send your name and address to Dr. J. W. Blosser, 204 Walton St., Atlanta, Ga., and he will send you a free package containing samples of the Remedy for smoking in a pipe and made into cigarettes, together with an illustrated booklet which goes thoroughly into the subject of catarrh. He will send by mail, for one dollar, enough of the medicine to last about one month.

A NOTE FROM BROTHER LEWIS.

Dear Brother Meek: Our pastor of the Galloway Memorial Church, Brother W. G. Henry, is moving on nicely. We like him. He has the appearance of being a quiet, sweet-spirited man. He is preaching to large and attentive audiences twice every Sunday. Bishop Murrah was here and preached for us last Sunday morning. His text was: "If any man has not the Spirit of Christ, he is none of his." He was at his best. He gave us a strong, helpful sermon, which was listened to by a large congregation.

I have been very much under the weather physically since Christmas. On the 23rd of December, I performed a marriage ceremony for my oldest grandson, and a Miss Stewart, of Canton, Miss. On Dec. 26, I baptized my youngest granddaughter, Fannie Lou Terry, of Madison Station, Miss.

Brother Henry preaches to from five to ten or twelve preachers nearly every Sunday. Rev. C. J. Nugent, of the Louisville Conference, was with us last Sunday. He is a brother of the late Col. W. L. Nugent, of Jackson.

H. P. LEWIS.

IMPORTANT NOTICE.

To the Pastors and Sunday School Superintendents of the Jackson District, Mississippi Conference.

Dear brethren: At the last session of our Conference, held in Natchez, Miss., in December, 1913, the Sunday School Board of the Mississippi Conference asked that an assessment of 5 cents per Sunday school scholar, be placed on the several charges of the Conference for Sunday School Extension, and that a collection be taken on each 5th Sunday in the year for the same purpose. This assessment was to be raised as early in the year as possible, and the amount forwarded at once. The Jackson District has assigned to me (being a member of the Board) the task of looking after this important matter in it, and I urge our pastors and superintendents to raise this assessments at the earliest possible date and send the amount to me at once. I also request the brethren to take the collection each 5th Sunday and also forward that amount at once. Brethren, the Board is needing this money now; so please don't neglect this important matter and thus cause embarrassment. Let's make the Jackson District lead in this work. Don't forget to send the amount collected for Sunday School Extension to me at once. Yours sincerely,

J. B. KING,

Member Miss. Conf. S. S. Board.

MINOR HURTS SOMETIMES FATAL

A cut, bruise, pimple, pin prick, or scratch very often develops into a serious case of blood poison. To allow a sore of any kind to go unattended is risky business. Dangers of this nature can be easily and surely avoided by having a supply of Gray's Ointment on hand for immediate use. It will save Doctor's bills and perhaps life. And then, if you ever suffer from boils, carbuncles, old sores, ulcers, poison oak, or other skin trouble, it will quickly and permanently relieve you. Write Dr. W. F. Gray & Company, 806 Gray Building, Nashville, Tenn., for a Free Sample of Gray's Ointment or get it from your druggist, 25c.

A LOVING TRIBUTE.

Mrs. Hancock went home to heaven October 21, 1913, in the home of her devoted daughter, Mrs. Vernon Sink. Three sons' and two daughters' hearts are made—oh, so sad, because mother is gone. She was anxious to go to meet husband and sons who had come for her with that "invisible choir." She said to her sorrowing children, "Don't you hear the singing—I do; and there are your father and brothers."

"All the way they walk beside us,
Down the aisles of bygone years,
Hidden from our blinded vision
By a mist of falling tears;
But when Jesus bids us welcome
To those pearly portals wide,
They will be the first to greet us
Over on the other side."

Mrs. Hancock had grown old beautifully. She gave her heart to God, and joined the Methodist Church when quite young. We extend our deepest sympathy to the stricken ones, and pray that the Heavenly Father may graciously comfort and sustain them. One who loved her, SALLIE RIVES.

"It is not enough that you wish to be upright; you must determine that you will be upright. In the one case you may be but a puny weakling; in the other case you are at least making the effort of a man."

TRY THIS FOR YOUR HEALTH.

For diseases which do not readily yield to drug treatment, such as chronic dyspepsia, indigestion, rheumatism, Bright's disease, gall stones, uric acid poisoning, and diseases of the kidney and liver, the best physicians send their wealthy patients to the famous mineral springs. Some even spend months at the Spas of Europe and are almost invariably cured and greatly benefited.

I believe that the Shivar Spring is the greatest mineral spring ever discovered and I believe it so firmly that I offer to send you enough water for a three weeks' treatment (two five-gallon demijohns) on my guarantee that if you do not say that you are benefited I will refund the price. You would hardly believe me if I told you that only about two out of a thousand, on the average, say that they have received no benefit. The water is curing thousands. It cured me when my friends and physicians thought that my case was incurable and I am willing and anxious for you to match your faith in the Spring against my pocket-book. If I win you become a life-friend of the Spring. If I lose I will be sorry for you, but I will appreciate your courtesy in giving the water a trial and will gladly refund your money on request. Read and sign the following letter:

This is Guaranteed to Stop Your Cough

Make this Family Supply of Cough Syrup at Home and Save $2.

This plan makes a pint of better cough syrup than you could buy ready made for $2.50. A few doses usually conquer an ordinary cough—relieves even whooping cough quickly. Simple as it is, no better remedy can be had at any price.

Mix one pint of granulated sugar with 1/2 pint of warm water, and stir for 2 minutes. Put 2 1/2 ounces of Pinex (fifty cents' worth) in a pint bottle; then add the Sugar Syrup. It has a pleasant taste and lasts a family a long time. Take a teaspoonful every one, two or three hours.

You can feel this take hold of a cough in a way that means business. Has a good tonic effect, braces up the appetite, and is slightly laxative, too, which is helpful. A handy remedy for hoarseness, spasmodic croup, bronchitis, bronchial asthma and whooping cough.

The effect of pine on the membranes is well known. Pinex is a most valuable concentrated compound of Norwegian white pine extract, and is rich in guaiacol and other natural healing pine elements. Other preparations will not work in this combination.

This Pinex and Sugar Syrup remedy has often been imitated, though never successfully. It is now used in more homes than any other cough remedy.

A guaranty of absolute satisfaction, or money promptly refunded, goes with this preparation. Your druggist has Pinex, or will get it for you. If not, send to The Pinex Co., Ft. Wayne, Ind.

WHERE THE KNIGHTS OF EZELAH COMES IN.

We have entered upon the age of the child. The theory of his importance in the kingdom of God has been accepted. The Church is steadily changing its practice to agree with the theory.

We have now reached the age of segregation. All children cannot be treated alike. Hence children of even slightly different ages are assembled in separate groups. And children of opposite sex, after the age of twelve, are arranged in groups apart from each other.

Since the practice of segregation began, the boy has rapidly gained a position of great importance in the estimation of leading educators and ministers. This is the day of the Boys' Club, the Boys' Department in the Y. M. C. A., and the Boy Scouts of America. The last-named movement is the colossal enterprise of the world on behalf of the boy. It extends to all countries and enrolls millions of boys in its membership.

At bottom all these specially organized activities mean one thing—that is, that the boy merits more attention than has heretofore been given him; that he requires more direction than he has received; that he is hungry for more instruction than we have thought it worth while to impart.

The Church sees this plain truth, and it is determined to conduct an adequate program of instruction and training in religion for the boys under its care. It is resolved to do something more for its boys than merely to gather them into a Sunday school class for half an hour once a week. Its purpose is to extend the interest of the teacher of the class to cover all the days of the week, and it intends to bind all the boys of the Church together in a brotherhood that shall develop in them a feeling of unity and train them in practical co-operation.

The expansion of interest in the boy begins in the junior period with supplemental work in the Sunday school and special activities in the Junior League. In the Wesley Classes of Intermediate and Senior grades, including boys from thirteen to seventeen years of age, the current deepens. There will be found provision for extending the activities of the boys beyond the class period, as well as for widening the scope of instruction to include other books besides the Bible.

To provide for giving expression to the principles of unity and co-operation, thus aiding the realization of the intention of the Wesley Classes, the Church has created a boys' society of its own. The name of the society is the Knights of Ezelah.

The local organization is called a Camp. The membership of the Camp is composed of boys between twelve and sixteen years of age. Boys nine years old are allowed to enroll as candidates, but they may not sit in the regular meetings of the Camp.

The Camp is organized under the direction of a superintendent appointed by the pastor. The officers are a King, Prince, Scribe, and Treasurer, elected by ballot from among the members. There are three committees in every Camp. A Religious Work Committee conducts studies in missions, Church history, and Church government. A Friendship Committee directs the benevolent activities of the boys. A Recreation Committee has charge of athletics, scouting, and all social pursuits.

Every Camp meets regularly twice a week, on Friday evenings for business and on Sunday afternoons for religious work.

A feature of the Knights of Ezelah which appeals strongly to the boy's primary interest is the initiation into the degrees. Boys of nine years of age are initiated as candidates into the Page's degree. Then there are three degrees in the Camp proper—the Shepherd's degree, the Squire's degree, and the Knight's degree. Tests for the degrees involve the boy's attendance at Sunday school, his conduct, and his proficiency in Bible study. The initiations follow experiences in the life of David and require close familiarity with the Bible story of that hero. Each degree is set to inculcate an important truth.

This is the second official announcement of the Knights of Ezelah. As the society is in the early stages of its development, the literature of the order is scant. Headquarters, however, are prepared to supply the demand for all that is needed to organize a Camp. The manual, leaders, and application blank for a charter will be sent to any one on request for ten cents. Every charter granted will carry with it the ritual containing the secrets of the Order. The charter and ritual cost thirty cents, postpaid. Address all inquiries to the Knights of Ezelah, 810 Broadway, Nashville, Tenn.

SAGE AND SULPHUR DARKENS GRAY HAIR

Brush this through faded, lifeless locks and they become dark, glossy, youthful.

Hair that loses its color and lustre, or when it fades, turns gray, dull and lifeless, is caused by a lack of sulphur in the hair. Our grandmother made up a mixture of Sage Tea and Sulphur to keep her locks dark and beautiful, and thousands of women and men who value that even color, that beautiful dark shade of hair which is so attractive, use only this old-time recipe.

Nowadays we get this famous mixture by asking at any drug store for a 50 cent bottle of "Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Hair Remedy," which darkens the hair so naturally, so evenly, that nobody can possibly tell it has been applied. Besides, it takes off dandruff, stops scalp itching and falling hair. You just dampen a sponge or soft brush with it and draw this through your hair, taking one small strand at a time. By morning the gray hair disappears; but what delights the ladies with Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur is that, besides beautifully darkening the hair after a few applications, it also brings back the gloss and lustre and gives it an appearance of abundance.

A CORRECTION.

In my article appearing in your columns last week concerning the interesting prayer-meeting at Sartinsville, I was made to say in answer to the question, "What about the lives of these people away from prayer-meeting?"—"They are about the average." I intended to say, "They are above the average."

I feel these people were due this explanation. Yours faithfully,

NEW ORLEANS CHRISTIAN ADVOCATE

Vol. 61.—No. 7. Official Organ of the Louisiana, Mississippi, and North Mississippi Conferences, Methodist Episcopal Church, South.

Whole No. 3025.

ROBERT A. MEEK, Editor.

NEW ORLEANS, LA., THURSDAY, FEBRUARY 12, 1914.

CHAS. O. CHALMERS, Publisher.

Editorial

"An easy thing, O Power Divine,
To thank thee for these gifts of thine—
For summer's sunshine, winter's snow,
For hearths that kindle, words that glow;
But when shall I attain to this—
To thank Thee for the things I miss?"

The famous "Autocrat of the Breakfast Table" is responsible for the following: "The race is divided into two classes—those who go ahead and do something, and those sit still and inquire, 'Why it wasn't done the other way?'"

The Northwestern Christian Advocate tells of a New York lawyer who left $150,000 to establish a "bread line" in that city, requiring his name to be stamped upon every loaf, and pertinently enquires, "Is there not another Name that would have been more appropriate?" The inability to sink self out of sight and to lift up Jesus is the thing that spoils so much benevolence and service. It is giving and doing in His Name that has the promise of reward.

The rewards of evil-doing are only "for a season," but the losses resulting from such a course are eternal. Satan can give a permanent title to none of the things for which he induces men to sacrifice their inheritance in Christ. They may boast of such possessions to-day, but soon death will loosen their hold upon them and they will slip from their grasp forever. What are sensuous pleasures, meretricious fame, or ill-gotten gains worth to him who stands uncovered and naked in the presence of the Infinite One upon his judgment throne?

In having to do with the things that are spiritual the pulpit is unique, and herein lies its charm and glory. If it turns aside to secular themes, it loses its distinguishing characteristic and places itself upon a parity with all other public platforms. And in the fact that this is being done to far too great an extent may possibly be found the explanation of why there are so many vacant pews in our churches. Hungry souls are crying out everywhere for the bread of life, and he who truly dispenses it is apt to find them gathering in increasing numbers about him to receive it. Oh, let us not dare to try to feed upon empty husks the famishing sheep of our Lord!

How long since has your church had an addition by profession of faith? This is a question for both pastor and people. The congregation as a whole is commissioned to seek and save the lost—not simply the minister. Whatever else a church may be doing, if it is not reaching the unsaved and perfecting believers in faith and character, it is not fulfilling its true mission. And this twofold work almost invariably goes on conjointly. Where saints keep their lamps trimmed and burning sinners rarely fail to find their way to the Cross; and where the lights are dim in the church they usually stumble on in darkness. What does the record show? And how will you meet it in the Judgment?

THE QUIET WORKERS IN THE BACKGROUND.

The Christian world owes much to the unknown and unheralded workers in the ranks. We read little of Andrew in the history of early Christianity, but it was he who brought to Christ Peter, who wrought so nobly for the ushering in of the Kingdom. The obscure Methodist preacher who led Charles H. Spurgeon to the Savior has never had his name blazoned abroad; yet but for him England's greatest minister since the time of Wesley might not have appeared to bless the Church and humanity. Another and not so well known illustration of how the faithful in their quiet circles may exert a far-reaching influence for good is given by Dr. F. B. Meyer of London, as follows:

"When Livingstone went to Africa, there was a Scotch woman named Mrs. MacRobert, quite advanced in life, who had saved up thirty pounds, which she gave to the great missionary, saying, 'When you go to Africa, I want you to spare yourself exposure and needless toil by hiring some competent body-servant who will go with you wherever you go, and share your sacrifices and exposures.' With that money he hired his faithful servant known as Sebalwe. When the lion had thrown Livingstone down and crushed the bones of his left arm, and was about to destroy him, this man, seeing his critical condition, drew off the attention of the lion to himself, thinking that he would save his master at the cost of his own life. The lion sprang at him, but just at that moment the guns of other companions brought him down, and Livingstone's life was prolonged for thirty years. Surely that noble Scotch woman, as well as the servant, should be credited with some, at least, of the results of the splendid devotion of the great missionary."

In such reflections there is much to cheer and inspire toilers in inconspicuous places. Though scarcely noticed even by God's people on earth, they may be achieving vastly more than they have ever dreamed of. Fidelity even in the lowliest places is priceless and may make itself felt to the end of time and throughout eternity. And there is an Eye that ever observes it, and a hand that never fails to chronicle its unostentatious doings in the shining record kept on high. Nothing that is done for Jesus is insignificant. Not so much as a cup of cold water given in his name will be lost sight of, or fail to bring a full measure of reward. The crowning of the background promoters of the Kingdom will doubtless be one of the outstanding events of the Judgment.

OF DOUBTFUL WISDOM.

Dr. E. G. B. Mann, Editor of the Central Methodist Advocate, has declared in favor of holding evangelistic services in connection with the approaching session of the General Conference in Oklahoma City. He contends that these services could be held each day in the afternoons and evenings, and that if properly conducted they would send a spiritual thrill throughout the entire Church. We do not believe that Southern Methodism needs anything so much as a great, sweeping revival, but the General Conference has so much work to do during the comparatively brief time that it sits, that we very much doubt the feasibility of undertaking to run an evangelistic campaign in connection with it. We fear that it would be found an unfavorable time for such a meeting, and also that the services might tend to interfere with the painstaking work that ought to be done by the various committees.

MILLSAPS COLLEGE.

The total destruction by fire of the Main Building has precipitated a serious situation in our College affairs. The members of the faculty promptly and courageously adjusted themselves to conditions and the students have not lost anything by lack of instruction. But we must rebuild without long delay or suffer disastrous consequences.

The Chapel, President's Office, Literary Societies and Y. M. C. A. Halls, together with the lecture rooms of the Departments of Mathematics, Ancient and Modern Languages, Philosophy and Law are all gone.

I would not discount the building we have lost. Far from it. It has served our purposes admirably for more than twenty years; and when I look on the ruins and recall the associations which are inseparably connected with the sacred spot, it is difficult to restrain emotions. But the demands call for a larger and better building. The insurance is only $25,000. The Methodists and other friends of the College throughout the State could easily supplement this by an equal or larger amount. Why should they not do so? The institution is not an experiment. We know now what it means to us. We should be poverty-stricken without it. What is done must be done promptly. We cannot wait to prosecute a long campaign.

It would be a fitting and gracious thing if friends would send contributions unsolicited. Some have done so.

A patriotic citizen and honored friend in North Mississippi—a member of the Episcopal Church—the day after the fire sent a generous donation accompanied with the statement: "Allow me, my dear Sir, as a native and loyal Mississippian, to express my appreciation to you, Major Millsaps, and others who have contributed so much to the establishment at the capital of our beloved State, that grand institution which has done, is doing, and I hope will ever continue to do so much good, for the uplifting of the Christian citizenship of our State. Please hand my enclosed check to the proper authorities for the re-building of Millsaps College." This should serve as a wholesome stimulus to Methodists.

President Watkins will give himself with untiring devotion to the work of securing contributions to meet the pressing demands of this urgent situation. Let him meet a hearty response everywhere.

Certainly after our generous founder has done so much to endow the institution we will not allow it to halt in its splendid career for lack of facilities to do the work for which it was established.

W. B. MURRAH.

THE LORD'S PRAYER.

By Dr. John T. Sawyer.

I.

The Lord's Prayer is found in Christ's Sermon on the Mount and is recorded in Matt. vi. 9-15. In Luke xi, 2-4, there is an abridged form of it, which was delivered on a very different occasion, and in answer to one of his disciples who, after a prayer by our Lord, said unto him, "Lord, teach us to pray, as John also taught his disciples." Matthew states that just before the prayer Christ charged his hearers not to pray as the hypocrites do, standing in the synagogues and in the corners of the streets, that they may be seen of men; nor to "use vain repetitions as the heathen do." It is said that prayer with the Mohammedans is "a performance," and "it is respectable to pray." Therefore, "they pray in the most public places, and at such times, as may draw towards them the greatest notice." Secret prayer which was recommended by our Lord, is "almost unknown in the East." The applause of men is fickle and for the moment, and generally not sincere, and in its nature worthless. Our Lord does not condemn long continuance in prayer, but the vain expectation of being heard for much speaking. Solomon's dedication service, "is the longest public prayer recorded in Scripture," yet it can be read leisurely in ten minutes.

Says our Lord: "After this manner therefore pray ye: Our Father which art in heaven, Hallowed be thy name." From this we learn that we should address God as Father, whatever other name or title we may use as occasion prompts during the prayer. The foundation of our prayers is our relationship as a son to God as our Father. In the song of Moses, as recorded in Deuteronomy xxxii. 6, we find these words: "Do ye thus requite the Lord, O foolish people and unwise? is not he thy father that hath bought thee? hath he not made thee and established thee?" In speaking "to the multitude and to his disciples," the words of Jesus, as recorded in the 23rd of Matthew, were: "And call no man your Father upon the earth: for one is your Father, which is in heaven." In Romans viii. 15 and 16 Paul's words are as follows: "For ye have not received the spirit of bondage again to fear; but ye have received the Spirit of adoption, whereby we cry, Abba Father. The Spirit itself beareth witness with our spirit, that we are the children of God." Also, in 1 Cor. viii. 6, he declares: "But to us there is but one God, the Father, of whom are all things, and we in him; and one Lord Jesus Christ, by whom are all things, and we by him." And again, in Hebrews xii. 9, Paul says: "Furthermore we have had fathers of our flesh which corrected us, and we gave them reverence: shall we not much rather be in subjection unto the Father of spirits, and live?"

The clause "Hallowed be thy name" means that we are to approach God with reverence, glorifying his holy name. Isaiah declares of the six-winged seraphim before his throne, that "one cried unto another, and said, Holy, holy, holy, is the Lord of hosts: the whole earth is full of his glory." The Psalmist declares: "He sent redemption unto his people: he hath commanded his covenant power: holy and reverend is his name." And again: "My mouth shall speak the praise of the Lord: and let all flesh bless his holy name forever." The Psalmist closes the 150th Psalm thus: "Let everything that hath breath praise the Lord. Praise ye the Lord." In John xii. 28, the chapter recording Christ's foretelling of his death, we have the following: "Father, glorify thy name. Then came there a voice from heaven, saying, I have both glorified it, and will glorify it again." We are never to go to God in prayer in a flippant, irreverent manner; but, thoughtfully, solemnly. Feeling the greatness and majesty and matchless splendor of his being, we are, not only to say the words "Hallowed be thy name" with the lips, but as the genuine expression and absorbing desire of the heart. We should ever draw near to God with reverence and confidence as children to a Father, infinitely kind and exalted, and able and ready to help all who put their trust in Him.

"Thy kingdom come." John the Baptist, preaching in the wilderness of Judea, cried "Repent ye, for the kingdom of heaven is at hand." In Revelation we read the prophecy: "The kingdoms of this world are become the kingdoms of our Lord and of his Christ; and he shall reign forever and ever." The coming of Christ's kingdom is prophesied by Isaiah as follows: "And many people shall go and say, come ye, and let us go up to the mountain of the Lord, to the house of the God of Jacob; and he will teach us of his ways, and we will walk in his paths." And again Isaiah says: "They shall not hurt nor destroy in all my holy mountain; for the earth shall be full of the knowledge of the Lord as the waters cover the sea." We should pray for the coming in power of the kingdom of God on earth, when all the nations of earth shall belong unto Christ, and there shall be no more wars, but peace, sweet peace, shall reign, and Satan be bound, losing his power forever.

Praying for the coming of the kingdom and the reign on earth of the Son, we are directed also to pray "Thy will be done in earth, as it is in heaven." In this petition we ask that God's standard of living may be ours in our daily life, in that our steady aim and practice shall be the doing of the divine will in earth as it is in heaven. Going as children to our Father, infinitely kind and gracious, able and willing to help us, and all others; owning our own unworthiness, sinfulness, needs and dangers, we should ask for grace to enable us to glorify him in all we do, increasing our knowledge, comfort and holiness, until at last admitted to an eternal triumph in the kingdom of glory. We should ask for grace to know, obey, and submit to the divine will at all times as glorified saints and holy angels do in heaven.

The next petition in the Lord's Prayer is this: "Give us this day our daily bread." When our Lord "was led up of the Spirit into the wilderness to be tempted of the devil," and when after his forty days and nights of fasting, he was "an hungred," the tempter came to him and said "If thou be the Son of God, command that these stones be made bread;" Christ answered and said: "It is written, man shall not live by bread alone, but by every word that proceedeth out of the mouth of God." In Proverbs we read this: "Remove far from me vanity and lies: give me neither poverty nor riches; feed me with food convenient for me, lest I be full and deny thee, and say, who is the Lord?" In Luke this clause of the prayer is: "Give us day by day our daily bread." Timothy says: "And having food and raiment let us be therewith content." Job said: "I have esteemed the words of his mouth more than my necessary food." John said: "Our fathers did eat manna in the desert; as it is written, He gave them bread from heaven to eat." Says Isaiah of the godly: "Bread shall be given him; his waters shall be sure." And again: "The Lord shall guide thee continually, and satisfy thy soul in drought, and make fat thy bones; and thou shalt be like a watered garden, and like a spring of water, whose waters fail not." We should acknowledge that every good and perfect gift cometh from God, "from the Father of lights, with whom is no variableness neither shadow of turning." Yea, verily, God is the Provider for all our needs of body and soul, and in perfect faith we should ask for the daily sustenance of the body as we do for the life and growth and salvation of our soul. Living a day at a time, we have need to pray for daily bread as any day that comes to us may be our last upon earth; and God only can feed us and continue our life. He gives for the asking bread for both body and soul. Christ says in his sermon: "Behold the fowls of the air: for they sow not, neither do they reap nor gather into barns; yet your heavenly Father feedeth them. Are ye not much better than they?" One writer says: "Insignificant, perishing, and uncertain are all the advantages of this world, when compared with the great, the solemn and eternal realities of the heavenly inheritance. Surely, then, it is highly absurd to be eager in our contrivances and labors, hopes and fears, wishes and cares, about them, while we are so indolent and unmoved about the things of God. If we are interested in Jesus' kingdom and righteousness, it is very unbecoming to distrust our divine Father, and torment ourselves with anxious cares about the necessities of life. Will the God who largely sheds his bounty on fowls and flowers deny what is necessary to his redeemed children, to whom he has given his Son—given himself?"

THE RUSTON DISTRICT AND ELSE.

There are some things that ought to be studied in connection with the reports turned in by the pastors of the Ruston District at the last Annual Conference—some things that look mightily like signs. Signs are good things for those who can read them. But that has always been the trouble—so few people can read signs. Some signs are works of supererogation; for instance, the sign when the roadway crosses the railway. If the traveler does not know what the railroad is, the sign does him no good—he probably does not know how to read. As this "piece" proceeds keep your eye open for the "signs."

The first thing of note is that there are three works that report no additions by profession of faith, and one of these works has that record for two years. Eight works report accessions in excess of 40; five report over 50, and four in excess of 70. There were 784 accessions reported; 387 by profession and 397 by letter and otherwise. There were 241 adults baptised and only 103 infants.

Infant baptisms were not one-half of those of adults. What does this show but that the ribaldish assaults of antipedobaptists are having the effect of keeping our people from the performance of one of their primal duties to their offspring? I urge every preacher to preach a sermon on the subject of infant baptism to every congregation in his charge.

From the figures turned in it is seen that of the 387 persons received by profession of faith, 241 were either from non-Methodist or antipedobaptist sources, and that we only received 146 members from Methodist or pedobaptist sources. This territory used to be the stronghold of Methodist teaching and practices in this State; yet to-day, while we number in our midst more than any other district in Louisiana, we are failing to emphasize some of the essential points in our denominational education and the very fundamental basis of our growth.

It is to our humiliation that a denomination, which in the days of its power magnified the place of the child in developing the kingdom of God on earth, should in the days of its greatest numerical strength seem to forget the source from which its chief increase should come.

As to the loss of membership in the District, it is perhaps more clerical than otherwise. The total reported last year was 6469. This is what we began business with on Jan. 1, 1913. According to the pastors' reports for 1913, we received 784, and lost by deaths, removals and otherwise 851, showing a net loss of 67. But when the same pastors make up their reports they write a total of 6180, instead of 6402, making a net loss of 289.

Only two charges reported everything in full—the same number as last year, but not the same charges. Last year they were Minden and Winnfield, and this year they are Homer and Ruston. These following paid pastor and presiding elder in full, but not the collections: Arcadia, Cotton Valley, Haynesville, Jonesboro, Minden and Winnfield, making eight charges that paid the assessments for ministerial support in full. Of the 55 Sunday schools reported, only 4 paid anything on missions—Gibbsland, Homer, Minden and Winnfield, making eight charges that paid the assessments for ministerial support in full. Of the 55 Sunday schools reported, only 4 paid anything on missions—Gibland, Homer, Minden and Winnfield. There was a net gain of 811 pupils in the Sunday schools, and a gain of 7 schools.

Something now as regards membership and population in the five whole parishes that make up most of this District:

In the parish of Bienville, where there are 12,312 white persons, we have 1129 members; in Bossier, where there are 5003 whites, we have 503; in Webster, where the whites number 9286, we have 1100 members; in Claiborne, with a white population of 10,112, we have 1569; in Lincoln, with 11,196 whites, we have 1420. Our 5621 members are in these five parishes that make up the larger part of this District; the other 754 are in Jackson, Natchitoches, Union and Winn, parts of which parishes are in it. The white population in the five whole parishes in our District is 47,909; our membership in Bienville, Bossier, Claiborne, Lincoln and Webster is only .1173 per cent of the white population in these parishes—truly a plentiful place in which to reap. In most of these parishes there are more than twice as many white people who do not belong to any church as there are members in all the churches therein. Surely, there is plenty of room to work and gather in without stepping on anybody else's toes or stealing sheep from other folds.

Let us do the work for which we are supposed to be in these parts or pack up and move out. Let us put special emphasis on the evangelistic note in the Gospel for this year and see if we can not make a better account of our stewardship this year than last.

Beyond the bounds of the Ruston District let us look for a bit. Last year we did nothing. The fact is, the Statistical Secretary said at Conference that we had worsted that—lost some of the capital with which we began business in January, 1913. To think that 135 pastoral charges with 34,198 members, led by 135 preachers and 309 Sunday schools, with 309 superintendents and 2363 officers and teachers working for a whole year worked out a deficit of some 1300! As a Conference, do we find any cause for joy in that record? Is it not time that we should seriously consider our commission? Has our candlestick, upon the face of such returns, promise of perpetuity? Could such a force in any human organization, upon the face of such returns, hope of being returned to this work for this year? Should not we receive our moving orders rather than our marching orders?

What is the matter? Compared with the growth in population our Church has lost and is losing ground, as far as the main purposes of a Church is concerned—getting people saved and into the church and organizing them into a saving force for bringing in the kingdom. In ten years we have increased a little over 4000 in the State—a very paltry showing. On the other hand, in the same period, the value of our church houses has gone from $545,630 to $1,080,030; parsonages from $119,403 to $248,600; and our ministerial support from $65,461 to $115,522. Are these figures the source from which our light may come? Are we setting too much store by these things? Are we in the condition of the Seventh Church of John? Are we rich and therefore in need of nothing that God can give? Are the words of the Angel of the Churches spoken to the Seventh the words that He is sounding in our ears to-day?

In the same period of time our contributions to foreign missions went from $7188 to $4634. Can anybody see any sign in that?

A LETTER FROM JAPAN.

Dear Dr. Meek: When we returned from our furlough in Oct., 1910, and our good ship the Chiyo Maru cast anchor at Yokohama, we received letters from several of our missionaries welcoming us back to Japan and also telling us that our appointment for the year was Okayama. To say that we were surprised to hear that we were to work in the city of Okayama, but mildly expresses it. We know that one or two stations where we already had organized work and a mission plant were in need of missionaries, and entering Okayama meant for our mission an entirely new station. Taking, however, this appointment as God's choice for us we came gladly and with the desire to do all in our power to see the work grow and expand through this region, using Okayama as the center of influence. Okayama is the largest city between Kobe and Hiroshima, and is about midway between these two places in which places we opened work 26 years ago. It had been the Mission's plan for years to take up work here, as this city, speaking broadly, made the circuit complete in this inland sea region where our church had planned her missionary operations.

While Okayama is a new place for our church to carry on mission work, it has had Christian work done in it for years. The Congregational Board appointed missionaries here first some 35 years ago, and has had missionaries here ever since. The Presbyterian denomination has had Japanese workers here for some time; the Church of England has a missionary plant here; and the Salvation Army has a corps here. All these agencies were in Okayama when we came, and gave us a most hearty welcome and extended us many Christian courtesies. While the city has been worked by these denominations, the place is not occupied. A liberal estimate of Christians would be 700 or 800 and with this number in a population of 100,000, it could not be regarded as encroaching upon territory for one new factor to enter the city. And the numerous towns and villages, so admirably reached by railroad from here, are altogether untouched. Such, in a few words, are the facts relating to our entering Okayama.

I thought that possibly a short account of some of the work done during the past three years at this the very newest circuit of our Japan Mission might be of interest to your readers. Fukuyama was cut off from the Hiroshima circuit when this circuit was organized, but the other places have all been opened since our coming here—Okayama, Takamatsu and Kasaoka.

Sometimes we missionaries grow faint-hearted when we look all about us and see the great possibilities of expansion, and in our zeal to see things move more rapidly, forget that forces are being used which are developing and extending the work. Three years ago in this section there was one Methodist helper and a membership of about 25. To-day there are a missionary family, three regular evangelists, one personal helper to Mr. Wilson, and one Bible woman. Three years ago there was a membership of 25; to-day there are 92 members and 15 probationers. Three years ago there was one organized Sunday school; to-day there are 5, with an enrollment of between 250 and 300 with 13 teachers. Three years ago there was one place where there was preaching twice on Sunday; to-day there are three, and one or two places where weekly preaching is done aside from the Wednesday night prayer meeting services.

With these additional workers, there are many indirect forces working which were altogether lacking three years ago. Such, in brief, is a resume of work at our newest center of operation. The older organized circuits can of course report more extensive plans and activities.

In reviewing the work in this light there is much to encourage us; but when we look at the unused forces that are in a large measure going to waste on this circuit even, our hearts are pained. A man well equipped as pastor in Okayama is asking for one or two out stations to visit weekly, but such trips mean travel by train and a rented room to use. Similar requests have come from the worker at Takamatsu and also from our personal helper, but all have had to be denied because of lack of money.

The opportunities for extensive work in Japan are very great; but while we may not be able to reach out to these new fields as rapidly as we would like, I pray that we may be on the alert to seize every opportunity to touch the hearts of those we daily meet.

I think that I have caught in a larger measure at this Christmas season, than ever before, the vision of the Christ. Christian friends, truly this Christ is able to save Japan and her people from spiritual death. Pray for us who are on the field, that in this year of 1914 we may reveal him better than we have ever done before; and pray for our great Church, that she may realize her present opportunity in sending the message to the Japanese people. Yours most sincerely,

MRS. W. A. WILSON.

Okayama, Japan, Jan. 2, 1914.

MODERN DANCING.

Men high in Church and State have uttered timely protests against the craze for dancing which has laid hold upon people like an epidemic. The Rev. Dr. Charles A. Eaton, of the Madison Avenue Baptist Church, this city, spoke very much to the point in a recent sermon.

"I don't know what the parents of our country are thinking about. They throw their children to the crocodiles as the Indian mothers used to do, but the former without any religious motive. They are consumed by an itch for social advance, and they think the only way to get into society is to dance in. The present condition is a result of a spiritual degeneracy. It in turn is the cause of a worse degeneracy. It is time for the Church, the home, and the press to use every legitimate means against these degrading conditions. They are nothing more or less than sensuality set to music."

We add to this the stirring words of Rabbi Stephen S. Wise:

"My objection to so-called modern dancing arises out of the belief, shared by many, that it is only a phase of the widespread social deterioration which we see about us. One objects not merely to the new dancing, but to the very atmosphere of this newest type of so-called amusement or recreation which seems to be morally polluted. The origin of modern dancing is its severest condemnation. Those who know say that it has come straight out of every manner of loathsome dive. The fact that these dances have been given to so-called decent society by such places, the patrons of which these dances suit, suffices to stamp them as unfit for decent men and clean-minded women."—Christian Intelligencer (New York).

THE BIBLE.

The revelation of God, which is the Bible, reveals God to us, shows us the way of salvation, teaches us how to live in this life, fills us with hope for the future, and comfort for the present. A writer in the Calcutta Bible Society Quarterly Paper gives the following eulogy:

"No man knows the Bible! No man has read the Bible through, except in the letter. I have not read the first chapter of the book of Genesis, except in the poverty of its syllables—its music, its reckoning, its sweep, its conception, its poetry, its pathos, amaze me every time I read the wondrous words. The Bible holds its influence over men, not because it is a thousand years old or ten thousand, but because it is the present answer to our present need. A book that is merely venerable will outgrow itself—there is a possibility, as we all know, of a man outliving his own reputation, of surviving himself—so will it be with any book that has nothing to plead in its own favor but its venerableness. The Bible is not only venerable in point of age; it answers to-day my sharpest pain, my hottest tears, my brightest joys. When I lose my child to-day, it says: 'Suffer little children to come unto me, and forbid them not, for of such is the kingdom of heaven.' When I dig my mother's grave to-day, it brings the largest lapful of freshest flowers to put around and upon the tomb, so deep, so dark. When all the blinds are down and the fine house is shrunken into a shadow, it is then I ask for God's Book, and then it is most clearly God's."—The Presbyterian.

AGAINST SEX HYGIENE IN SCHOOLS.

Governor Dunne, of Illinois, in a letter to President James, of the University of Illinois, thus goes on record concerning sex instruction in public schools:

"I honestly fear that if sex hygiene be taught in the schools, and young boys and girls in the open class room are made aware of the things which may be taught in the line of sex hygiene, it may create in their young minds a prurient curiosity, which will induce, rather than suppress, immorality and unchastity. Personally, I would not permit my young and innocent daughters to be sent to either a public or private school where sex hygiene is discussed in public. I think you can trust the mothers at home. I will vote emphatically 'No' upon this proposition."—Zion's Herald.

Church News

The South Carolina Conference is stated to have an enrollment of 362 organized Wesley Bible Classes.

Having had its endowment increased to $1,200,000, the Yale Divinity School will be developed into a "University School of Religion."

Dr. G. C. Rankin, Editor of the Texas Christian Advocate, has written an editorial in favor of sending a Bishop to the Orient to remain there for a full quadrennium.

The Rivers Memorial M. E. Church, South, of Louisville, Ky., has recently been blessed with a revival in which there were more than 100 conversions. The preaching was done by Rev. W. A. Swift.

A movement has been launched in Virginia to construct on the campus of the Randolph-Macon Woman's College, at Lynchburg, a handsome memorial building in honor of the late Dr. W. W. Smith, the founder of that institution.

Some of the Texas Annual Conferences placed the task of carrying forward their part of the educational campaign now under way in that State in the hands of the presiding elders. A fine arrangement where the right men are in the presiding eldership!

Of 1000 Chinese students attending American colleges and universities, 250 are reported to be converts to the Christian faith. Dr. W. W. Wen, the newly appointed ambassador from China to Germany, is stated to be a Christian and the son of a Chinese preacher.

To the New Mexico Conference belongs the honor of having made the first subscription to the Chair of Sunday School Pedagogy in the Southern Methodist University, at Dallas. This collection was taken by Bishop James Atkins while the Conference was in session at Albuquerque last fall.

The Central Christian Advocate says: "Our hall of fame has fifty-seven American names. Ten of these, almost a fifth, belong to the families of clergymen. They are Agassiz, Beecher, Harriet Beecher Stowe, Henry Clay, Jonathan Edwards, Emerson, Lowell, Morse, Bancroft and Holmes."

Bishop A. W. Wilson, the Senior Bishop of Southern Methodism, celebrated his eightieth birthday on February 5, and the Trinity M. E. Church, South, of Baltimore tendered him a reception in honor of the occasion. We pray that this majestic minister may yet be spared to serve the Church for many years.

Dr. Gross Alexander, editor of the Methodist Review of the Southern Church, will preach the haccalaureate sermon for the Garrett Biblical Institute, of the Methodist Episcopal Church, on Sunday, March 29. This is the institution in which Dr. Alexander has been filling the chair of Church History for some months.

Dr. William Hayes Ward, for a long number of years the active and now the honorary Editor of The Independent, has begun publishing in that journal a series of articles, entitled "What I Believe and Why." That they will tend to strengthen faith in the teachings of Orthodox Christianity, is scarcely to be expected.

It is stated that a careful investigation has shown that from 1885 to 1900 there was a slight but steady increase in the number of theological students in the various seminaries in the United States; that from 1900 to 1905 there was a decrease in the number; and that from 1905 to 1910 there was a decided numerical gain. And the trend is said to be still upward.

Mrs. William G. Brownlow, widow of the famous "Parson" Brownlow, who was famed as a politician and churchman and whose debates with Rev. J. R. Graves in which he defended Methodism were most memorable, died in Knoxville, Tenn., on February 4, at the advanced age of 95. Mrs. Brownlow is said to have been a woman of large mentality and was widely known in the South.

It has been announced that the Paullist Fathers of Chicago will use the life and drum and adopt methods quite similar to those of the Salvation Army to reach the outcast element in certain districts of that city. The zeal and alertness of the Roman Catholic Church are manifest nearly everywhere in the United States, and we Protestants need to be up and doing if we would not be outstripped.

The Mohammedans are reported to be showing great activity in the propagation of their faith in Asia and Africa. It is stated that because of the construction of new railroads and the extension of navigation upon its various streams the latter continent now presents a great opportunity for missionary work. Indeed, it is said that the next few years will determine whether the vast stretches of its territory are to be under the domination of the Crescent or the Cross.

Dr. W. D. Bradfield, pastor of the Tenth Street M. E. Church, South, of Austin, Texas, has had about 200 accessions to the Church since the last session of the West Texas Conference. Dr. Bradfield is one of the first men of the Connection, not the least of his distinctions being the manly manner in which he stood up for the rights of the Church on the Vanderbilt Board of Trust until his term as a trustee expired and the rebellious majority elected some one else to take his place.

The Protestant Churches of Louisville, Ky., have organized 12,000 men into a federation which will endeavor to improve moral conditions in that city and State. The list of things which they will strive to secure includes a State Vice Commission, a legal enactment to prevent landlords from renting property for immoral purposes, and a drastic law to prevent traffic in women and girls. Such a company of men working in unison should be able to make their influence powerfully felt for good.

The attendance upon the Billy Sunday meeting in Pittsburgh, Penn., has been phenomenal and the enthusiasm unprecedented. The whole city has been wonderfully stirred, and several days ago, with the services still in progress, it was reported that there had been more than 10,000 conversions. Mr. Sunday's temperance sermon, "Booze, or Get on the Water Wagon," has been pronounced the most terrific arraignment of the liquor traffic ever heard in the United States. The saloon forces are said to hate and fear this remarkable evangelist as they do no other living man.

The Executive Committee of the Woman's Missionary Council of the M. E. Church, South, presided over by Miss Belle H. Bennett, met in Nashville, Tenn., last week to arrange the program for the annual meeting of the Council at Fort Worth, Texas, which will begin on April 1. It is now in order to subscribe for the Council Daily, the price of which is 25 cents. Orders up to March 20 should be sent to Mrs. A. L. Marshall, 810 Broadway, Nashville, Tenn., and after that date to Mr. W. F. Barnum, Business Manager, Fort Worth, Texas. The sooner the subscriptions are sent in the better.

The Fifth Avenue Presbyterian Church of New York City, of which the renowned Dr. J. H. Jowett is pastor, raised last year for all purposes $584,314. Of this amount $52,720 was used for the local expenses of the congregation, while the remainder—over a half million dollars, was devoted to various kinds of missionary and benevolent work. In point of numerical strength, this is the third Presbyterian Church in the United States, its membership numbering 2436; the second is the Bethany Church of Philadelphia which has 3514 members, and the first is Dr. M. A. Mathews' great church in Seattle, which has 5625 members and four assistant pastors.

HAS THE RIGHT RING.

(The following resolution was passed by the Grand Jury of Caddo Parish, La., on Jan. 12, 1914.)

"Whereas, in the discharge of the duties incumbent upon us as Grand Jurors, we find that nearly all murders, and a large percentage of misdemeanors are directly traceable to the use of intoxicating liquors; and whereas we find that the purposes of the prohibition law are defeated in a large measure by Act No. 178 of the General Assembly of 1912, licensing near-beer saloons, and also by unrestricted shipment of intoxicating liquors from wet into dry territory; therefore, be it

"Resolved, by the Grand Jury of Caddo Parish, that we, by this resolution, recommend to the next General Assembly of Louisiana, that it, at its next session, repeal Act 178 of 1912, and enact a law to prohibit the transportation of intoxicating liquors from wet into dry territory within the State, and to prohibit such transportation from without the State, under the powers granted by the recently enacted Webb-Kenyon Act of Congress. We further urge our representatives and members of the Senate from Caddo Parish to use their best efforts to secure such legislation. We further respectfully request the Grand Jurors of the State, and other officials whose duties are concerned with law enforcement to co-operate in securing the legislation necessary to protect those parts of our State which have outlawed the liquor traffic by ballot from violations of the law by subterfuge and open defiance."

THE TARGET REALLY AIMED AT.

(When Dr. C. W. Eliot gave out his recent discussion, entitled Twentieth Century Christianity, Dr. H. M. DuBose, the pastor of the First M. E. Church, South, of Atlanta, Ga., published in the Atlanta Journal a brilliant review of that erratic statement. The following are the concluding paragraphs of Dr. DuBose's article.)

What this thesis has to say about the doctrine of brotherhood is not new; but that any turn or interpretation of the instinct of brotherliness should be employed against orthodox Christianity is the equation of interest in this general sum of aridity. The religion which has pushed modern missions, built world-engirdling chains of eleemosynaries, and preached the parable of the Good Samaritan, may be behind in its attainments, but can not be false in its spirit.

But the truth comes squarely out at last. Dr. Eliot and his fellow cultists are mad against the central doctrine of evangelical Christianity, the atonement. "Predestination, transubstantiation, vicarious atonement and apostolic succession" are by him jumbled into one category for the purpose of an equal execration. No "thinking person" can honestly question that the typing schools of evangelical Christianity reject "transubstantiation, predestination and apostolic succession;" nor will any "thinking person" fail to see that the atonement belongs in another class of ideas; that vicariousness is the only rational quality of any atonement made for sin, and that this is the very heart of religion, if the Scriptures on which religion rests are to be accepted as true.

But this is exactly the thing Dr. Eliot sets out to deny. With him these writings are not trustworthy. He has undertaken the task of Archimedes; he will move the world out of its place, if only he can find ground upon which to plant his engine. Plainly, he can not find that ground in the Scriptures. He must, therefore, go outside the record, and denounce it as insufficient, mythical, and the product of human incompetency. According to Dr. Eliot, the teachings of Jesus were imperfectly transmitted by the evangelists, by St. Paul and the other New Testament writers. Will this oracle of the twentieth century indicate the lapses and shortcomings of the New Testament?

Can he supply the lack out of contemporaneous literature? Truthfully speaking, there is no literature contemporaneous with the gospels and the Epistles, and the fragments that remain are as barren of their spirit as are the Sumerian and Egyptian ideographs. The gospel must be accepted as a whole, and as having been correctly reported, or it can not be accepted at all. Those who go about to amend it only publish to men the presumptuousness of their minds. A consistent heresy is dangerous, but an inconsistent one must in the end advertise itself to the judgment of ridicule. A great name may be sponsor for it, but the world has always had more respect for logic and truth than it has had for any name, however great.

Secular News and Comment

It has been announced by the authorities that the hog cholera caused in Louisiana alone during the year ending March 31, 1913, the death of 155,320 head of swine, valued $1,500,000.

A dispatch from Cape Town, in British South Africa, states that the strike of the miners and the Government's declaration of martial law have created conditions amounting almost to civil war in that country.

Congressman R. G. Bremner, of New Jersey, in whose body tubes containing $100,000 worth of radium had been inserted to combat the disease of cancer of which he was a victim, died at a sanitarium in Baltimore on Feb. 5.

Prof. George Poe, a cousin of Edgar Allen Poe and a distinguished scientist, died in Norfolk, Va., on Feb. 2, in the 69th year of his age. He was the first man to liquify nitrous oxide, a feat which he accomplished in 1875.

The suffragettes in Scotland are accused of resorting to the torch and setting fire to buildings in their frenzy to advance their cause. Surely the perpetrators of such outrages, notwithstanding their sex, should be summarily dealt with.

The Daughters of the American Revolution in Pennsylvania are protesting against the removal of the old Liberty Bell from Independence Hall in Philadelphia and its transportation to San Francisco for exhibition during the Panama Exposition.

The Woman's Protective League of St. Louis will in order to safeguard young girls increase its force of women watchers at the various depots of that city. A centrally located woman's home at the earliest date practicable is also in contemplation.

By a vote of 123 to 57, the Democratic Congressmen in Washington in a caucus on February 3 adopted a resolution declaring that "the question of suffrage is a State and not a Federal question." This means that the lower House of Congress will not appoint a standing committee on woman suffrage, which is a great victory for the anti-suffragists.

President Wilson has given to the public a statement advocating the repeal by Congress of that provision of the Panama Canal Act which exempts American ships engaged in coastwise trade from paying tolls when they pass through the great waterway. He thinks that this feature of the bill formerly passed is violative of the Hay-Pauncefote Treaty. This is also Mr. Roosevelt's position.

Within the last four months of the year 1913, 9000 laborers who had been employed in constructing the Panama Canal returned to their homes, most of them being Negroes from Jamaica and other West Indian Islands. Though much is yet to be done before the completion of this colossal enterprise, it has progressed far enough for a considerable part of the working force that has been carrying it forward to be dispensed with.

On February 3 President Wilson removed all restrictions forbidding the exportation of the munitions of war from the United States to Mexico. The order prohibiting the shipment of arms and ammunition into Mexican territory had been in force since March 14, 1912. Its revocation leaves the United States in this respect upon the same footing as the other nations. The effect of this action is likely to prove favorable to the Mexican insurgents.

A judge in Selma, Ala., on February 3, ordered the sheriff of Dallas County to destroy 5250 bottles of whiskey, valued at $2000, that had been captured in raids upon blind tigers in that city. What a waste according to the view of those who believe in liquor! But in reality this was the best disposition to make of the abominable stuff. The world would be incomparably better off if all the intoxicants in existence were poured out upon the ground and their manufacture prohibited for all time to come.

Mr. W. H. Parker, of Birmingham, Ala., has filed with the Sergeant-of-Arms of Congress a protest against the payment of the salary of Hon. R. P. Hobson, who is charged with having been continuously absent from his seat from January 19 to January 31 for the purpose of prosecuting his canvass for election to the United States Senate in Alabama. It is said that this protest is based upon a long-forgotten law which was passed in 1858. In our opinion, this action is much more likely to benefit Mr. Hobson's candidacy than to injure it, which doubtless it was intended to do.

WANTED—A LITTLE MONEY AND A BIG MAN.

The annual meeting of the Cuban Mission has just been held. The work in every part of the Mission shows steady and healthy growth.

The membership shows increase, and both the native preachers and the members of the churches, evince a deeper spirituality than ever before. In all my rounds I have seen no Conference in the session of which there were more cheering manifestations of spiritual power than the session of the Cuban Mission at Camaguey, January 22-25. Perfect harmony, warm, brotherly love, and great zeal for the advancement of Christ's Kingdom prevailed in all the proceedings.

The work on the Isle of Pines interested me especially. It is largely a work for Americans, who have taken up their abode on that wonderful island in the Caribbean Sea.

By the Treaty of Paris, made by Spain and the United States, just after the Spanish-American War, many people were led to suppose that the Isle of Pines was ceded to our country; but the stipulations of the treaty on this point were ambiguous, and our government gave the benefit of the doubt to the Republic of Cuba. Before the matter was finally settled a number of Americans bought land on the Island, thinking they were settling on territory under our flag.

These American Colonists cleared up their lands, built houses, planted citrus fruit trees, and otherwise improved the properties which they had bought. They have been forced to live hard while their trees have been coming to fruit-bearing. Most of them have suffered financially while they have been waiting; but they have not despaired nor forgotten God. While compelled to practice the most rigid economy, they have provided places of worship and supported the preachers sent to them.

Their case has been pathetic in many respects. In the midst of their struggles in a foreign land, their little children have been growing up without the educational opportunities and religious privileges which they would have had in the home land. Children in a foreign colony suffer far more than the older people, and the needs of these American children on the Isle of Pines appeal to me very strongly.

The case is clearly presented in a letter, just received from Rev. M. M. Stewart, the only preacher we have now on this entire Island. It is as follows:

"Havana, Cuba, Jan. 29, 1914.

"Bishop W. A. Candler,
Atlanta, Georgia.

"My dear Bishop:

"I wish to write you about the Isle of Pines and our work among the American settlers there.

"The Isle of Pines is remarkable in many respects.

"Its possibilities in the growth of citrus fruits, pine apples, and vegetables are great.

"In addition to its great natural resources, it is further remarkable in that it is the largest settlement of Americans outside the bounds of the United States. There are on the Island nearly three thousand Americans, besides about twenty-five hundred natives, the total population being more than five thousand souls.

"The natives are located mostly in, or near, the towns of Neuva Gerona and Santa Fe. Nueva Gerona is the capital of the Island, and a very important place. In and around it are located about seven or eight hundred Americans.

"We are placed in a position of peculiar responsibility for the welfare of these people, because our Church is the only Evangelical denomination whose work extends over the whole Island. These Americans are not rich, but in the main they are people who have bought land with their savings, and for some years to come they can expect only small incomes from their properties. They are depending upon Southern Methodists to help them through this trying period.

"At Neuva Gerona we need for the proper care of the people and the promotion of our work a church, a school, and a parsonage. We now hold services in a poor building, which is entirely unsuited to the demands of the situation. It is a temporary structure, which is inadequate, unsightly and insecure.

"The case is nothing less than deplorable. The Roman Catholics, seeing the situation and desiring to take advantage of it, have withdrawn their Spanish priests, and have sent American priests and nuns to the Island. They have opened a school, and are seeking to get hold of the American children. To save these children we must do something and do it quickly.

"Unless we do our full duty by these countrymen of ours and their children, and do it soon, both they and our work on the Island must suffer untold harm.

"We now have no means whatever with which to help these Americans in and around Neuva Gerona to shield their children from the peculiar and perilous temptations by which they are surrounded. In the town are quite a number of saloons and pool-rooms, and there are no wholesome places to which young people can go for recreation and self-improvement. They must go into the streets or into worse places.

"We must have an attractive church and an adequate school, with the residence of the preacher attached, to meet the needs of the situation.

"With eight or ten thousand dollars we can build on the lot, which we have already acquired, all these, with reading rooms, etc., to provide for the pressing needs of these dear people and their children. Of this amount, I can raise on the field $5000, I am sure, if the church at home will supply the rest. It is heartrending to see good American boys and girls going to ruin, and their lives made unhappy, for lack of a little means to lead them into better ways.

"I do not live at Neuva Gerona, but in another part of the island, and in consequence, I am not in a position to do much for them. We ought to place in the town a resident pastor and give him the means to handle successfully this situation, which makes such a moving appeal to all hearts who care for the welfare of our fellow-countrymen and their children living under such conditions.

"Each year many children reach school age, and the population increases constantly by the coming of other Americans from the States. If we do not meet the present needs we will close future opportunities against us. On the other hand, if we care for the situation as it now is, we will do much to save these American children and securely plant our work on the Island and obtain resources for other work in the future.

"I hope you can find in the States the small sum of money which is now urgently needed here, and another man for the West Circuit.

"Yours in Christ,

"MALCOLM M. STEWART,

"Preacher in Charge, Isle of Pines,
"East Circuit."

I want this house and the man for the Western side of the Island.

If we help these people now, they will be able in a few years to help others. They are ready to do all they can for themselves. Indeed, they have already done very generous things. They will, in a few years, be able to do more—and I believe they will do all they promise, if we help them in this, their time of need.

I want a man also; a self-reliant, courageous, hopeful consecrated man. No "tenderfoot" (as they say in the West) can be of any use. A man of culture, if he has the right sort of culture, will be better than an uneducated man. But common sense and consecration are indispensable in this work.

Here is a chance to do the work of a founder and accomplish results that will make the Isle of Pines a Methodist Island. I covet for our crown this pearl of the Caribbean.

Who will furnish this money?

Who will offer to do a man's work on behalf of these, our countrymen, in a foreign land?

T. H. SELBY—AN APPRECIATION OF MY FATHER.

Talbot Henry Selby, son of S. E. Selby, and Lucy E. Simmons, was born in Sumpter County, Alabama, January 15, 1841. His father was a native of Hyde County, N. C., and his mother was born in Baldwin County, Ga. He was educated in the common schools of his day, and it was clear to those who knew him that he took advantage of the opportunities that were afforded him for an education as far as they were able to advance him. While he did not have a college education, he knew the advantage of it, and was a patron of higher education as applied to all of his children.

In early life, his parents moved to Jasper County, Miss., but he was there for only a short while, being engaged with a mercantile firm along the line of the State of Alabama. While he was still in his teens he became connected with the firm of W. S. Nimocks and Co., at Decatur, Miss., and it was there that he united in marriage with Catherine, daughter of T. H. Massey and Mary Elliot, of Fayetteville, N. C., the ceremony being performed by Rev. J. F. N. Huddleston, at the home of W. S. Nimocks, on Sept. 24, 1861. Thus began a married life of more than forty-one years, and they were years of mingled joy and sorrow, sustained by a truly co-operative spirit on the part of husband and wife.

Shortly after his marriage he entered the Confederate Army, and remained true to his country until the close of the conflict. During his absence from his young wife, contending for what he believed to be right, a baby was born to him, the first of eight children who came to bless this union. At the close of the war he began life with the possession of $1, but being young and having a future before him, he addressed himself to the task of making a home and rearing a family for God and his Church. He believed in instilling into the heart of his children the very highest principles of honor and integrity and to this end he bent every energy of mind and heart. He was a very modest man and he was insistent that this trait should possess all of us. Being the father of eight children, and determined to give each of them an education (at the same time aiding others in this direction), he had little opportunity of becoming what some would term rich.

He hurried two of the children—twins—in infancy; his first born, a boy of great promise, at the age of seventeen; and two accomplished daughters after they had reached womanhood. The son began his college course with unusual promise at Cooper Institute, Daleville, Miss., and the two daughters were educated at the East Mississippi Female College at Meridian, Miss., mainly under the presidency of Rev. A. D. McVoy, of precious memory. The next and greatest sorrow of his life was when, after a long and painful illness, he lost his wife, my mother, on the fourteenth of November, 1902. The bitterness of this experience was very keen, the union of two lives for more than forty years was ruthlessly broken; but he knew whom he believed, and trusted him as the solace of his life.

In March, 1904, he was united in marriage to Miss Emma Sedberry, of Hillsboro, Texas, and they lived together until the separation on the early morning of December 4, 1913, in the seventy-third year of his age.

It is becoming that I should say something regarding him in the different departments of life to which he gave himself, for he was worthy of commendation by those who knew him. As a business man, he was above reproach, accurate in the details of business and honorable in all his dealings. He detested deception and trickery in business matters, and I am sure that he was never accused of being otherwise than thoroughly frank and open with all his business associates. As a testimonial to the esteem in which he was held, he was elected president of the first bank ever organized in Newton, and held the position to the day of his decease. He was as jealous of the integrity of the bank as he could have been respecting his own business career. He kept the books of a large firm in Newton for many years, and he was never known to be negligent of any responsibility. One reason of his ability to do so much was that he was regular, uniform, and systematic in all that he did. He not only believed in the honor of employment, but in the healthfulness of it to body and mind and soul.

As a citizen he was strong in his convictions as to what was right, and while he never took an active part in politics, he used his privileges as a citizen and was known to stand for the best policy and the best man for the place, that the policy might be executed. He was not aggressive in expressing himself, but I have heard him many times lament the disposition of so many to destroy the very fabric of the best ideas and principles of government as applied to the community, State and nation. He informed himself regarding the affairs of the country and rejoiced in any token or omen of good that was apparent to him.

As a churchman, and this is where he meant much, he was true to the Church of his mother and father. He believed in the doctrines and polity of his beloved Church, and he delighted to attend upon its services. Up to within the past two years, during which time he was more or less feeble, it was seldom that he failed to occupy his seat in Sunday school and at the preaching service. As far back as my memory goes he was a regular and active member of the Church. He did his best to be loyal to his pastor, and no one was encouraged by him to speak unkindly of his preacher. The beautiful and appropriate words that were spoken by his pastor, Brother Tolle, on the day that we laid his weary body in the tomb, only emphasized this trait, which was of great strength in his life. He was always interested in me as to appointments, and when disappointment came to me he was quick to encourage me to do my best. No man will ever know how much he meant to me in my ministry. Before mother left us, he would often say to her: "Bob preached mighty well to-day," and of course, she would tell me what father had said. Those who know, tell me that we will miss him more and more as the days pass on, and I am beginning to believe it. His religious life was not very demonstrative, and frequently he had struggles against the evil; but he conscientiously did the best he could. He would spurn the suggestion that he was a perfect man, and I would not so speak of him; but he loved God and his Church, and made an honest effort to keep the commandments. There were times when his heart was full; but his life was mainly a steady effort towards God and the perfecting of his faith and confidence in him. From his place in the church he will be missed for a long time to come.

I have already referred to the very appropriate service which was held in the church he helped to build and which in all of its services was the pride of his heart, because it was there he met with his Lord so often; but I wish to emphasize what I have said by saying that the pastor told me that father meant as much to him, almost, as his own father. During the year which closed his life to all things of the world he must have thought much upon the realities of the great future. Thank God, I visited him oftener than usual, and it was only a short while before his departure that I spent a night and part of a day with him. I little thought that the separation would be so soon and so very sudden; for, while he was not very strong, he seemed to enjoy life and its responsibilities as he had for some time. In April, 1912, he had a very severe attack which for several days threatened his life, but he rallied and we thought we would have him with us for many years. He was slow to admit that he was ill, and would not until he could endure no longer.

On the morning of December 4, 1913, about two o'clock he was awakened by a very severe attack of acute indigestion. His wife wanted to call the physician, but he said, "No." He continued to get worse, and neighbors were called in and the doctor summoned; but he was too far gone—nothing could be done to relieve him, and at 3:45 he closed his eyes upon earth and entered into the rest that often was in anticipation by him. Three children remain, but his illness and death were so sudden that not one of us was with him at the last. A brother and a sister also are living, and the five children at my home live to sorrow at his going; but we all have a rich legacy in the memory of one of the very best men I have ever known. Do I miss him? Yes, for how can I help it, when I wrote him at least once every week, and received a letter from him as often, and never have I prayed in secret for a long, long time but I called him by name in talking to my Lord. When we placed him under the sod on the morning of December 5, and the grave was covered with beautiful floral offerings from many friends, I said good-bye for only a time—I do not know how short—for I confidently expect to see him with my sainted mother some sweet day. I believe he has come to know the baby I gave back to God in November, 1906, better than he knew him on earth, and all those he loved so well who had preceded him to his long home. His youngest born, a son, who is traveling out of New York city, was not with us, but he had the comfort and sympathy of friends, and we helped him as we could to bear the burden of so great a sorrow.

If I have appeared too free and bold in speaking of my father, it is because he always impressed me with the extreme modesty of his life, and it occurs to me that, loving him as I did, and appreciating his memory as I shall, it is not improper in me to use the terms of laudation that I do.

My heart has cried out for the touch of a vanished hand and the sound of a voice that is stilled; but I shall struggle on until I am permitted to look upon his face glorified in the presence of Jesus Christ. I am, his sorrowing son,

MY WINTER REPORT.

Dear Advocate: My good Brother, Rev. H. P. Lewis, Sr., called for my report some time ago, but much of my time I am physically unable to write; hence the delay. My health was very poor last year. For weeks in August and September, I was in a Shreveport sanitarium. I only tried to preach twenty-one times during the whole year. I am not preaching at all now, but am watching and listening for an open door. Although idle so far as preaching is concerned, I am happy, happy! As the late Bishop Joyce was accustomed to say, "I am deliciously happy all the time." My Father's Word is food to my soul, and how eager I am each week for the perusal of my Christian literature! I read and laugh and cry, and thank God for such vigorous editors and contributors as we have.

There is much indifference in regard to religious work in this little town, only a few Methodists here, and they are without a pastor. I visit them and the Baptists too; especially the old ones. There are a few very spiritual old ladies here. How they love to talk of ante-hellum times when they were converted at the mourner's bench. On leaving them, with a cordial hand clasp, and their old eyes glistening with tears, they beg me to remember them when I pray.

Whether such a life is worth living or not, such is mine. I feel a little pang of regret that I am doing nothing for my Lord, but after a little, if I do not reach the home of the soul, and live forever with my Lord, I shall be greatly disappointed. I pray heaven's blessings upon Brother Lewis, and every reader of the Christian Advocate. God bless them all.

UP AND DOING.

Of course, you all have heard about
The Up-and-Doing Land, I know.
Geographies have left it out,
But 'tis not far to go
To find its cities, old and new,
And all its happy people, too.

For Up-and-Doing Land is true,
And not a fairy land at all;
And all have work enough to do
To keep them busy, great and small.
The Up-and-Doing people are
The busy people, near and far.

—Child's Hour.

SWALLOWING SUNSHINE.

Lily stood one glorious morning by a sunny window, through which came a flood of rich, warm sunshine.

"What a lovely morning," said Lily. So she picked up a spoon and put it right in the sun ray, and then in her mouth. "O, mamma, I have swallowed a spoonful of sunshine," she cried, with a merry laugh.

"I will tell you at bedtime whether you have or not," said mother. And when the sandman's hour came around, it was found that through all that long summer day Lily had been sweet-tempered and bright.

"You have, indeed, been my little sunbeam," said mother as she tucked Lily in bed and kissed her good night.—Phyllis Rowland.

KILLING THE DRAGON.

A little boy four years old was much impressed by the story of "St. George and the Dragon," which his mother had been reading to him and his sister, and the next day he said to his father:

"Father, I want to be a saint."

"Very well, John," said his father, "you may be a saint if you choose, but you will find it very hard work."

"I don't mind," replied John. "I want to be a saint and fight a dragon. I am sure I could kill one!"

"So you shall, my boy."

"When can I be one," persisted the child.

"You can begin to-day," said the father.

"Where is the dragon?"

"I will tell you when he comes out."

So the boy ran off to play contentedly with his sister.

In the course of the day some presents came for the children. John's was a book and his sister Catherine's a beautiful doll. Now, John was too young to care for a book, but he dearly loved dolls, and when he found that his sister had what he considered a much nicer present than his own, he threw himself on the floor in a passion of tears.

His father, who happened to be there, said quietly, "Now, John, the dragon is out.—Southern Christian Advocate.

HOW ANTONIA SAVED THE KING.

Of course you have heard of Frederick the Great, that wise king of Prussia who was born two hundred years ago. Perhaps you know, too, that he greatly admired our own General Washington and in proof of it sent him a handsome sword on which was engraved, "From the oldest general to the greatest."

But you may not have read of how he helped a poor little Italian boy, and of how the poor boy was able to repay the great king's kindness. The New York Tribune has told the story, and here it is for you.

Frederick, although the ruler of a great kingdom, never dressed very well, and so it is not surprising that when dirty, ragged little Antonio met him walking on the terrace near the river bank in Dresden he thought he was a very ordinary person and never dreamed of his being a king.

Antonio had a great box filled with dolls which he worked with strings and made act quite like human beings—marionettes they were called. When he saw the king he ran up to him and begged him to look at these dolls act. "You will be pleased with them, I am sure," he said, "and I do so want to earn some money to pay a man I know to teach me to play the flute!"

"Would you like to learn to play the flute?" asked the king. He had longed to do that very thing when he was a boy, but his cruel father had been very angry one day when he had found him playing and had broken the flute across the back of the young prince.

"Come with me," said this kind-hearted old gentleman, as Antonio still thought him, "and you shall have a good teacher and a fine flute of your very own."

The poor lad could hardly speak for joy. But his new friend understood and patted him on the head as they walked off together. He was put in charge of the court music master, who found he had great talent, and after a while he played so well that he was allowed to play before the king.

The boy felt deepest gratitude toward his kind benefactor, and prayed constantly that he might at some future time prove his devotion to him.

One morning Antonio, getting up very early and taking a short cut through the kitchen of the castle on his way to the garden, saw one of the cooks drop a white powder in the cup of chocolate meant for the king!

The little flute player was horrified, and ran to the king crying, "Oh, sire, do not drink your chocolate this morning—it is poisoned."

When, a few minutes after, the breakfast tray was brought in, Frederick the Great received it very calmly and looked hard at the servant, who immediately began to tremble.

"How pale you are. You must be ill," exclaimed his majesty. "Here, drink this cup of chocolate. It may revive you."

"Mercy, sire," pleaded the servant, throwing himself at the king's feet, "I am not to blame, but others," and he confessed the whole plot.

"Wretched man, you were going to poison me," said the king. He called one of the dogs to his side, and gave him the chocolate to drink. The dog died in a few moments.

Thus it was that Frederick the Great's kindness to a poor little boy saved his own life.—The Continent.

A LITTLE BOY'S ESSAY ON WOMEN.

Women can be told from men by their hats. Also by their going to church, of which men are not guilty. Maybe men would go to church if they had hats like women and could keep them on.

Women's hats prove them to be less logical and more ornithological than men.

Women are after the vote, and men are after the women. It is supposed that woman would catch up with the vote if she didn't waste so much time turning around to see if man was still following her.—Central Christian Advocate.

BOYS THAT SUCCEED.

"A new boy came into our office to-day," said a wholesale grocery merchant to his wife at the supper table. "He was hired by the firm at the request of the senior member, who thought the boy gave promise of good things. But I feel sure that the boy will be out of the office in less than a week."

"What makes you think so?" inquired his wife.

"Because the very first thing that he wanted to know was just exactly how much he was expected to do."

"Perhaps you will yet change your mind about him."

"Perhaps I shall," replied the merchant, "but I do not think so."

Three days later the business man said to his wife: "About that boy you remember I mentioned two or three days ago. Well he is the best boy who ever entered the store."

"How did you find that out?"

"In the easiest way in the world. The first morning after the boy began to work he performed very faithfully and systematically the exact duties assigned him, which he had been so careful to have explained to him. When he had finished he came to me and said: 'Mr. —, I have finished all the work. Now, what can I do?'"

"I was a little surprised, but I gave him a little job of work and forgot all about him until he came into my room with the question, 'What next?' That settled it for me. He was the first boy that ever entered our office who was willing and volunteered to do more than was assigned him. I predict a successful career for that boy as a business man."—The Sunday School Herald.

SOME CHURCH STATISTICS.

The statistics of the various religious denominations for the year 1913, gathered by Dr. H. K. Carroll, have been sent out as Bulletin No. 8 of the Federal Council of the Churches of Christ in America, of which organization Dr. Carroll is now Associate Secretary, having his headquarters in Washington, D. C. The problem of Church statistics is a most perplexing one, and scarcely any two enumerations even approximate agreement; but Dr. Carroll had charge of the Government Census of Churches in 1890 and is regarded as quite an authority in such matters. The compilation of figures which he has sent out covers such a wide scope that we cannot undertake to print his exceedingly interesting tables in this issue of the Advocate; nor have we decided that we will attempt to do so at all, since they would probably cover several pages of our paper and they would not be accepted as authoritative by any one not pleased with them (already we have noticed some efforts to impeach their accuracy). We are grateful, however, to Dr. Carroll and the Federal Council of the Churches of Christ for their kindness in sending us this full statistical exhibit, and from it we quote as follows:

"The gains for 1913 are considerably larger than those for 1912 in the number of communicants and in churches. The net gain in the latter is due chiefly to the surprising advance reported for the Lutheran bodies of 1455. Except for the unaccountable falling off reported by the Southern Presbyterian Church, the increase would have been more than double that of last year. Of the total net gain, beside the 1455 of the Lutherans, the Methodists report 496, the Baptists 338, and the Roman Catholics 375. The loss of 742 credited to the Disciples of Christ is probably due to incomplete returns. Six new churches, on the average, for every working day of the year cannot be interpreted as discouraging.

"The net increase of communicants is widely distributed. The Methodist bodies get nearly 220,000 of it, the Methodist Episcopal Church having the largest gain for many years; the Roman Catholic Church comes next with 212,500, then the Baptists with 64,608, the Presbyterians fourth with 45,649, the Lutherans fifth with 36,120, and the Disciples of Christ sixth with 21,324.

"The net gain is, on the average, one and eight tenths per cent, which is a fair increase. If only those denominations which report an increase be included in the reckoning, the only fair method, the percentage would be considerably larger—approaching two per cent. As a matter of fact, 618,000 is reported as the net increase of bodies aggregating about 33,000,000."

The numerical strength of the several leading denominations is, according to Dr. Carroll, as follows: Roman Catholic 13,083,534, an increase since 1890 of 6,852,117; Methodist Episcopal 3,415,768, an increase since 1890 of 1,175,414; Southern Baptist 2,471,389, an increase since 1890 of 1,191,323; Methodist Episcopal, South, 1,996,877, an increase since 1890 of 786,901; Baptist (Colored) 1,946,444, a gain since 1890 of 597,475; Presbyterian (Northern) 1,402,533, a gain since 1890 of 614,309; Disciples of Christ 1,362,711, a gain since 1890 of 721,660; Baptist (North) 1,176,615, a gain since 1890 of 376,165; Protestant Episcopal 986,607, a gain since 1890 of 454,553; Congregational 748,340, an increase since 1890 of 235,569; African Methodist Episcopal 620,000, a gain since 1890 of 167,295; African Methodist Episcopal Zion 568,608, a gain since 1890 of 218,320; Southern Presbyterian 300,771, a gain since 1890 of 121,050; Colored Methodist Episcopal Church, 236,077, a gain since 1890 of 106,694.

The foremost denominational families are thus set down: Roman Catholic, 13,083,534; Methodist, 7,125,069; Baptist, 5,924,662; Lutheran, 2,388,722; Presbyterian, 2,027,598; Disciples (Campbellites), 1,519,369; Protestant Episcopal, 997,407.

It should be remembered that the figures given above for the Roman Catholic Church embrace the Catholic "population" and not merely actual communicants; that is, all persons baptized (including infants), whether ever confirmed or not, have been added in. If the statistics of the Methodists were similarly gathered it is doubtful whether the Catholics would outnumber them.

One encouraging feature of Dr. Carroll's statistics this year, as was also the case last year, is that what might be termed the heretical denominations, noisy as some of them are, seem to be making very little headway. Thus the Universalists are reported as numbering only 51,716; the Unitarians, who have lately been making much ado about the "coming religion," number, 70,542; the Mormons, 356,000; the Christian Scientists, 85,000; the Adventists (six hodies) 98,822, with a gain of 3014; and the Dowileites, 5865. There seems, however, to be an exception to this rule in the case of the Spiritualists. They are credited with 2000 churches and about 200,000 members, a net gain of 50,000 since 1910. Most of the denominations of this class do not seem to have sufficient virility to take a census of their adherents or to co-operate with others in doing so; hence their gains or losses are not usually given.

All in all, the faith of our people seems yet to be generally sound and the prevailing disposition among them appears to be to connect themselves with Churches that hold and teach the essential truths of Christianity. The greatest foes with which the true followers of Christ have to contend in the United States are not the false religions that have found lodgment upon our soil, but the unbelief, worldliness, and indifference that are so widely prevalent in this materialistic age.

THE IDEA OF FRATERNITY BEING OVERWORKED.

Dr. Charles W. Eliot's recent statement concerning "Twentieth Century Christianity" and some of the comments that followed that deliverance have given us some glimpses of what the teachings of the Unitarians now are. Dr. Eliot himself, among other things, said: "God did not make man out of the dust of the ground. God did not turn stone-mason and give into the hands of Moses the Ten Commandments. Neither did the sun stand still for Joshua. Neither did Jonah go through the thrilling experience in the closed quarters of the whale. Men of science have no faith in magic or miracles. No thinking person now accepts as anything but primitive myth or fanciful poetry the story of the Garden of Eden."

In backing up the distinguished educator, Dr. Thomas Van Ness, pastor of the Second Unitarian Church of Boston, is reported as follows: "The higher conception you have of God the less you believe in miracles. The more you believe in the absolute rectitude of God the less you believe that he will break his laws or that he works by interference or miracles. * * * The story of Jesus arising from the dead is but one of the childlike conceptions which have no basis in fact. It is one of those beautiful ideas that have grown up like Santa Claus, that had a value once, but for which there is no longer need."

Many people have an idea that the Unitarians are a sect of Christians who, aside from not believing in the doctrines of the deity of Christ and the Trinity, are fairly orthodox; but if Drs. Eliot and Van Ness are correct exponents of their views, they have very little regard for the authenticity or veracity of the Scriptures as to any thing that does not suit their taste. It is not merely as to the interpretations of passages of the Bible that they differ from the Protestant Evangelical Churches; their entire attitude toward the Divine Revelation is fundamentally different. They do not hesitate to discard whole chapters of it at will, as must be done if the resurrection of Christ is to be repudiated.

There has been a growing disposition within recent years upon the part of orthodox denominations to fraternize with the Unitarians—to treat them as if they stood for all the essentials of the Christian faith. But surely such disclosures as these ought to check that tendency. In view, however, of the spirit of the times, we doubt whether it will or not. We know of scarcely anything that we think is being more overworked than this idea of fraternity. We have recently noticed that in the federation of mission boards the Seventh Day Baptists—a sect that is utterly hostile to the Christian Sabbath—have been included; and not long since we read a letter in a church periodical in which it was stated that some of our people on the Pacific Coast had been considering the question of correlating their school work with that of the Buddhists. Has the time come when the Church of God is to stand for nothing—when she is to put herself upon a plane of equality with all the false and misleading faiths of the world? If so, what shall we do with the ringing words of St. Paul, written to the Church at Corinth: "Be not unequally yoked together with unbelievers; for what fellowship hath righteousness with unrighteousness? and what communion hath light with darkness? and what concord hath Christ with Belial? or what part hath he that believeth with an infidel?"

In our humble opinion, the sound religious denominations need to be cautious about entering into the much-extolled federation councils and movements. To treat with an organization upon terms of equality, is to recognize and, to some extent, endorse it. The Bride of Christ should be careful as to the company that she keeps. She should not presume to associate and co-operate with any who do not honor and accord full sovereignty to her Lord whom she represents.

"WHEN SAINTHOOD WAS IN FLOWER."

This is the title of a most attractive volume from the facile pen of Dr. H. G. Henderson, of the North Mississippi Conference. It consists of a series of studies of noted Biblical characters, who are made to live and act again in a manner to charm and inspire the reader. The worthies whose careers are discussed are Daniel, Rebecca, Joseph, Jonah, Samson, and Esther, who are dealt with in chapters given, respectively, the following headings: Ideal Manhood, The Model Wife, The Challenge of a Pure Life, The True Friend, A Discounted Ministry, A Superficial Character, and A Heroine Among the Saints. Dr. Henderson has the gift of insight into the inner essence of things and the power of clear and accurate discrimination. He writes with unusual fluency and his style, though rhetorical, abounds in terse epigrams that fasten themselves at once in the mind. The work throughout is instructive and is calculated to lead to the formation of high ideals. It is beautifully bound and its mechanical make-up is all that could be desired. Sherman, French & Company, of Boston, are the publishers, and the price is $1.25. Send for a copy.

PERSONAL AND OTHER NOTES.

The date of the J. B. Andrews' Meeting at Starkville, Miss., is March 1.

Rev. W. L. Hunter has made a fine impression at Hammond, La., and the outlook for the work there is bright with promise.

The good people at Mangham, La., have secured a house for their pastor, Rev. W. O. George. This adds another parsonage to the list in the Louisiana Conference.

The Columbus District Conference will be held by Bishop W. B. Murrah at Brooksville, Miss., April 10-12. We dare say that the occasion will be one of much interest.

Rev. W. S. Selman, of Lamar, Miss., is actively at work, and speaks hopefully of the outlook. He has kindly things to say of his people, who are thoroughly loyal to their pastor.

Rev. C. C. Miller, pastor of the First M. E. Church, South, at Monroe, La., is preaching to fine congregations. His Sunday school, which continues to flourish, is one of the best in the State.

Rev. A. J. Coburn has in process of construction at Farmerville, La., a new parsonage, which is nearly completed. He is highly esteemed by all the people of his charge, as is also Sister Coburn.

One who has had an opportunity to know writes that the people at Macon, Miss., are much pleased with Rev. R. O. Brown, our new pastor in that city, and that the outlook there is for a year of activity and progress.

Rev. H. A. McCormack is preaching to large and appreciative audiences at Franklinton, La., and in spite of the prevailing financial stringency, a new parsonage will be built at once. The salary has been raised to $1300.

We are pleased to have the following good news from Rev. A. W. Hoffpauir, of Prairieville, La., written on Feb. 5: "I am glad to say that my wife is able to sit up. Everything is progressing favorably on my charge."

Rev. R. P. Goar, of Toccoola, Miss., states that the work has opened well in that charge, in which he is entering upon his second year. He hopes to accomplish much for the Master between now and the next Annual Conference.

At Rienzi, Miss., where Rev. B. P. Fullilove is pastor, a movement is under way either to greatly improve the old church or to build a new one. A committee has been appointed to decide the question and to go forward with the work.

In a recent personal note to the Editor, Rev. R.

M. Evans, of Strong's, Miss., says: "We are well and busy with bright prospects for the new year." Brother Evans is one of the most deeply spiritual preachers in his Conference and "a workman that needeth not to be ashamed."

Bishop W. P. Thirkield and Dr. Walter T. Terry, of the Garrett Biblical Institute of Evanston, Illinois, favored our office with a call last Monday. The Editor keenly regrets that he was not in and that he was so unfortunate as to miss seeing these brethren.

Rev. J. C. McElroy, of Mashulaville, Miss., has our thanks for several subscribers sent in a few days since. Of his work, he says: "We were most cordially received and have been remembered with many good things to eat. We are hopeful of a successful year."

Dr. W. H. Huntley, presiding elder of the Seashore District of the Mississippi Conference, writes: "I have changed quarters and my address is now in care of the Seashore Campground School, Biloxi, Miss." Correspondents should note this change, and govern themselves accordingly.

Rev. W. W. Drake, pastor of our First Church of Baton Rouge, La., and Rev. W. A. Mangum, who has charge of Keener Memorial in the same city, are co-operating and branching out in their work. They have lately organized a new mission Sunday school, and others are in contemplation.

Read what Bishop Candler has to say about the Isle of Pines on page 5. Here is a golden opportunity to do good with your money. Why not solicit some contributions in your charge and remit the amount secured to the Bishop at Atlanta, Ga.?

The following brethren, to whom acknowledgment has not been made elsewhere, have our thanks for two or more subscriptions sent in within the past few days: M. L. Ward, Wheeler, Miss., 4; J. D. Wroten, Tunica, Miss., 6; J. J. Kelly, Good Pine, La., 2; Rev. M. M. Black, Laurel, Miss., 7.

Rev. G. A. Morgan, of Opelousas, La., sends us the following notice: "On January 29, at the home of the bride's parents in Belleview, La., it was my pleasure to officiate at the marriage of Mr. E. V. Chauvin and Miss Alice Boring." We extend to the happy couple our congratulations and best wishes.

Rev. J. J. Kelly requests us to state that his address has been changed from Trout to Good Pine, La. Brother Kelly has since Conference received 12 into the Church and has organized a class of 15 in the First Standard Teacher-training Course. He regards the indications as favorable for a fruitful year.

We regret to know that Bishop W. A. Candler has been ill with la grippe since his return from Cuba, but are happy to be informed that he is again able to be at his desk. There is no busier man in the Southland than our Georgia chief pastor. Scores of urgent demands are ever pouring in upon him.

Rev. G. D. Purcell, the energetic pastor at Oak Grove, La., is working heroically for the upbuilding of the Master's cause. The church that the people have been talking so long of moving to town is now on the way. It is expected to be in shape for his quarterly conference, which is scheduled to be held next Sunday.

We regret to be informed that Bishop W. B. Murrah was quite ill with acute indigestion at his home in Jackson, Miss., last week, but are pleased to state that he was reported to be much improved two or three days ago. We trust that he will soon be entirely free from the effects of his recent attack.

A note from Rev. M. L. Burton, of Gulfport, Miss., states that he is gaining physically, but that his improvement is slow. He is not yet able to leave his room. Let the brethren remember this faithful itinerant at the throne of grace. Brother Burton's pulpit was ably filled last Sunday by Dr. A. F. Watkins, President of Millsaps College.

Miss Elizabeth Kilpatrick, of Corinth, Miss., spent Sunday, February 1, at Holly Springs and Byhalla, Miss., in the interest of the Sunday school work. She says: "There was much interest manifest and good records were in evidence. Both places are enjoying their new pastors, Brother Duncan and McKeown."

Writing from Memphis, Tenn., under date of Feb. 7, Evangelist O. B. Culpepper said: "I am just back from Huntington, Tenn., where I conducted a union revival. Something like 150 joined all the Churches. I leave to-night for Paducah, Ky., to assist Rev. R. W. Hood in a meeting at our Broadway Church in that city."

Rev. W. D. Wendel, our worthy pastor at Pontotoc, Miss., has lately been tarrying for a brief season at Enterprise, Fla., where both the water and climate are said to be surpassingly fine. He was enjoying the good fellowship of Rev. J. A. Bowen and Dr. H. M. Hamill when he hurriedly penned us a card a few days since.

Dr. Theo. Copeland, pastor of the Cabanne M.

E. Church, South, of St. Louis, has recently been assisting in a meeting at Boonville, Mo. The Weekly Advertiser of that city speaks in high terms of Dr. Copeland's preaching and work, and states that the services have been largely attended and that much good has resulted from them.

Rev. C. V. Breithaupt reports as follows from the Houma (La.) Mission: "Since the first of January we have had on this charge 14 accessions to the Church by profession of faith and 5 by certificate; 5 infants have been baptized, 5 wedding ceremonies performed, and 1 funeral conducted. We have also dismissed two members by the issuance of certificates."

Brother J. A. McArthur, a worthy layman of the West Point (Miss.) charge, adds the following footnote in a business letter written to the Advocate office: "West Point seems lucky in getting good preachers. We now have Rev. W. W. Mitchell and he is a good one." From other sources also, we have learned that Brother Mitchell has made a fine beginning in his new field.

Rev. H. W. Bowman, the stirring presiding elder of the Baton Rouge District, is opening some new territory. He states that he is now in need of men for three new charges. At his request Rev. J. F. Foster, our pastor at Amite, La., has accepted the care of several outlying points, and Quincey Werlein, a son of Dr. S. H. Werlein, who is preparing for the ministry, is assisting Brother Foster.

By appointment of the Executive Committee of the North Mississippi Conference Board of Education, consisting of Rev. H. S. Spragins, Rev. J. C. Park, and Mr. J. D. Barbee, Rev. T. H. Lipscomb will attend the Educational Conference that is to be held in Nashville, February 26 and 27. Being well educated and having also been a teacher, he will be a valuable counselor in that notable gathering. For the past three years he has been Secretary of Education of the North Mississippi Conference.

We greatly regret to announce the death of Miss Claudia Attneave, the second daughter of Mr. and Mrs. F. Attneave, which occurred at the family home at Black Hawk, Miss., on Friday morning, February 6, 1914. Miss Claudia was a young woman of noble Christian character and an active and unceasing worker in the Church. She exerted a constant influence for good, was universally loved, and will be greatly missed. We extend our deepest sympathy to the bereaved relatives and friends.

Rev. J. B. Randolph, of Como, Miss., in a business note to our office, adds the following: "We are in our fourth year in this delightful charge, and the work is progressing nicely. The ladies are making the interior of the parsonage new with paint, paper, furniture, rugs, etc." Brother Randolph has wrought nobly during his incumbency in this fine field, and will leave behind at the end of the year a durable monument in the beautiful new house which he has been instrumental in erecting.

Rev. C. J. Nugent, an esteemed member of the Kentucky Conference, has recently been visiting relatives in New Orleans. He favored our office with an appreciated call last Thursday. He is at present stationed at Walton, Ky., where he has a pleasant pastorate. Brother Nugent was formerly a member of the North Mississippi Conference, and has yet quite a number of relatives and friends in the Magnolia State. Prior to coming to Louisiana he visited in Jackson, Greenville, Rosedale and Cleveland.

Rev. O. L. Savage, of Belzoni, Miss., says: "The outlook is promising for a good year in this charge. We have finished since Conference a beautiful church on Four-mile Lake in Sunflower County, about a mile and a half from Duke, Miss. I am glad to say that it is entirely out of debt, but we still have the pews to buy. When finished the property will be worth $1500. I have had up to date 7 accessions to our membership since the Annual Conference."

Rev. J. E. Thomas, of Itta Bena, Miss., has borne off the palm in sending in subscriptions to the Advocate since the beginning of this Conference year. He gave us this week a club of 40 subscribers, 27 of which were new, enclosing a check to correspond. We scarcely need to say that we are grateful for this fine service rendered the Conference organ. On another page may be found a communication from Brother Thomas concerning the work in his charge. He and Sister Thomas have taken hold in their new field with their accustomed tact and energy, and manifestly the people are responding splendidly to their efforts. Itta Bena is highly favored this year in having the ministries of these faithful servants of the Master.

Rev. W. Fred Long, Field Secretary of the State Sunday School work in Mississippi, was in New Orleans last Saturday and brightened our sanctum with his genial presence for an hour or more. He is brimful of plans for the State Sunday School Convention which will be held in Meridian from March 31 to April 2. He says that the work under his supervision is greatly prospering, one man having recently given $1200 for the maintenance of a Sunday school missionary in the field. Brother Long went from New Orleans to Carriere, Miss., where he was booked to deliver an address last Sunday afternoon, and from there he expected to reach Picayune, where he had an engagement to speak at the evening hour on the same day.

Of his interesting charge at Lumberton, Miss., Rev. W. B. Jones writes: "Things are going well with us. A hearty welcome was given us upon our return from Conference, and the work is progressing nicely. We have received 8 members up to the present time; our Sunday school is fine and continues to grow, and all other departments of the church are active. We are making some repairs on our house of worship and the parsonage. This is indeed a choice people to serve—good enough for a Bishop, and most too good for an ex-presiding elder." We dare say if the Methodists of Lumberton were consulted, they would reciprocate by saying that their pastor is worthy of any appointment that could be given him. Brother Jones' letter brought a fine club of 18 subscribers, for which we extend to him our most hearty thanks.

Rev. John B. Bennett, of Yazoo City, has been officially named as Agent for the Mississippi Orphans' Home within the bounds of the Jackson District, which has pledged to raise for this noble institution at least $100 per month. The Brookhaven District contributed last year through Brother E. W. Reid about $200 a month, and surely the great Capital District of Mississippi, within the bounds of which the Home is situated, should not fall short of the obligation which it has assumed. Brother Bennett has mailed a letter to all our pastors in the District, and they and all our Sunday school superintendents, as well as the people generally, should give him their hearty co-operation in this needed work. Write him at once and pledge him your assistance. Particularly is it important to let all funds pass through his hands, instead of sending them direct to Brother Williams, in order that he may keep up with what is being done.

Rev. W. W. Ledbetter, of West Monroe, La., writes: "Yesterday (Feb. 3) we let the contract for an annex to the West Monroe Church, which requires it to be turned over to us fully completed—painted, papered, and the windows stained. When this is done, we will have increased the value of our property this year and last to the amount of about $3200. Our Sunday school has steadily grown for several months, and we now have 227 pupils enrolled. There were 167 present last Sunday (Feb. 1). In the perfection of our organization and the preparation for better service, we have gone forward with an equal stride. Our church has fewer than a hundred members, and a small percentage of them are men. None of them are wealthy. Yet it is a genuine pleasure to serve these people. We feel that our growth will continue to be such as to make it a source of gratification to the Mission Board and cause its members to feel that they acted wisely in assisting us this year."

The Young Men's Christian Association of New Orleans held its sixty-second Annual Meeting in its home on St. Charles Street on Tuesday evening, February 3, at 8 p.m. The parlors were crowded with ladies and gentlemen; and, after brief addresses were delivered by Bishop W. P. Thirkield, President A. T. Terry, Secretary Dr. A. Oscar Browne, Dr. J. T. Sawyer, and Chairman W. P. Johnson, a fine musical program was rendered. Refreshments were then served and a delightful social hour followed. The prospects of the Association are very bright, and the plan proposed by Mr. Johnson to secure 1000 additional members, to raise $5000 for the work by voluntary contributions was enthusiastically approved and will be energetically pushed. In winning to Christ and caring for the many thousands that will soon be added to our population by the completion of the Panama Canal and the holding of the proposed Exposition, the Y. M. C. A. and the churches of New Orleans will have plenty to do. All the Christians among us should work harmoniously together to this desired end.

Paring a corn brings only brief relief. And there is danger in it.

The way to end corns is with Blue-jay. It stops the pain instantly. Then it loosens the corn, and in 48 hours the entire corn comes out.

Blue-jay is applied in a moment. From that time on you will not feel the corn.

Leave it on for two days, until it gently undermines the corn. Then lift the corn out. There will be no pain or soreness.

Blue-jay has ended sixty million corns. Nearly half the corns in the country now are ended in this way.

There is nothing else like it. And no man who knows will even suggest any other way for dealing with corns.

Sister MATTIE A. MARTIN, daughter of John and E. A. Murphy, was born on March 18, 1848; and died on January 2, 1914. She was happily married to W. T. Martin on January 27, 1870. Sister Martin joined the Methodist Church, South, in childhood, and ever remained faithful to her church vows. As a pastor's friend, she had no superior and few equals. She was a model wife, a kind neighbor, and a true friend. In my travels of forty-one years as a preacher, I have never found a better friend. She and her good husband carefully looked after me and mine during the five years I was her pastor. Never did I go to her home that my family were not remembered in some kind way. The Master's words: "Inasmuch as ye have done it unto one of the least of these, my brethren, ye have done it unto me," found an almost constant fulfillment in her life. Sister Martin leaves a heart-broken husband, one brother, and a number of relatives to mourn her departure. Farewell, good Sister Mattie; we shall meet you in the "sweet by and by." That God may bless Brother Martin and all of the relatives and friends, is the prayer of her former pastor.

R. P. GOAR.

Death, "like an untimely frost upon the sweetest flower of all the field," came in the form of pneumonia, upon little Annette Lorraine, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. V. W. Barrier, of Rolling Fork, Mississippi, who was born May 13, 1912. She was consecrated to God by baptism, by the writer, July 27, 1913. Much brightness and happiness was added to the home and the community by her dear little life on earth. All that loving parents, fond grandparents, and interested friends could do was done to prolong the life of the little sufferer; but God's ways are not as our ways, so the living jewel which had been "sent unstained from Heaven," to brighten earth for a few brief months, was called back to the Father's house. Sin had not corroded this little life and may the saddened hearts find a balm for their grief in this thought, and also the fact that our Savior's arms are ever open to receive the little ones, for "of such is the Kingdom of Heaven." May God bless the hearts made sad by her departure, and may each one say with David, "I shall go to her, but she shall not return to me."

MEMORIAL RESOLUTIONS.

(Adopted by the Woman's Missionary Society of Byhalia, Miss.)

Whereas God in his wisdom and love has called our beloved friend and sister, Mrs. W. C. McCrary from this world to a brighter home in heaven; therefore be it Resolved:

1. That in the death of Sister McCrary this Society has been called upon to part with one of its best and most worthy members, whose kindly words and affectionate association have been a benediction to her sister members.

2. That, while we bow in humble recognition of the fact that an all-wise Providence attends our lives and orders all things for the best, and that our loss is her eternal gain, nevertheless the mournful fact remains that Mrs. McCrary will meet with us no more, and nothing is left us but a precious memory.

3. That a copy of these resolutions be spread upon the minutes of our Society, that a copy be sent to the family of our departed friend, and that a copy also be sent to the New Orleans Advocate for publication.

Signed: Mrs. T. D. Burrow, Mrs. W. M. Nichols, Miss Susie Davis, Committee.

CLEVELAND (MISS.) BRIEFS.

The District Stewards' and Preachers' meeting, held here on January 5, was a very interesting meeting.

We are very much pleased with our new preacher and his wife, Brother and Sister Smoot. Brother Smoot is getting hold of the men of the town, and the interest in our prayer meetings is increasing.

Brother Smoot has organized the choir. He is a fine leader, and his wife sings well. We have plenty of local talent to have splendid music.

Last Sunday was Orphans' Home Day in the Sunday school and the contribution amounted to $8.

The Board of Stewards have purchased a lot on which to build our new church. We hope to build this year.

Mr. Dave Allen is working up a Men's Bible Class, beginning with eleven members on the first Sunday.

The Woman's Missionary Society had a most interesting meeting in January—the first since the uniting of the two Societies.

A good many Methodist people have moved to our town within the last few months. We give them a cordial welcome.

MRS. S. C. TAYLOR.

HOME MISSION WORKERS.

An "installation service" was conducted at the Shannon (Miss.) Methodist Church on Sunday, February 1, at 3 p. m., for the Home Mission Society of that congregation. Mrs. Vic Thompson Hoyle of Tupelo, the Conference President of the Woman's Missionary Society, was present and directed the principal features of the exercises. Mrs. Evans, also of Tupelo, and the honorary president of the Conference Society, spoke in the meeting. Mrs. J. C. Windham, the Aberdeen District Secretary, presided, and took part in some special proceedings relating to the general work of the local organization. A very full choir rendered missionary songs, and the congregation present greatly enjoyed the occasion. The Shannon Home Mission Society is enlisted, just now, in local work, and is also in sympathy with all of the great purposes of the missionary movement. The visitors were entertained for supper at the Irby Hotel, and returned by a late train to Tupelo.

SARDIS DISTRICT STATISTICS.

Dear Dr. Meek: I was disappointed when the Minutes of the North Mississippi Conference came out. There are deficits on several items from some charges from which I thought I had assurances that they were out on all claims. I assume the responsibility for the inaccuracy in the report from Charleston. For some reason I copied incorrectly the assessments to the Statistical Secretary. This may be the explanation in other cases. I am not criticizing the work of the Secretaries, but want the people to know that true men like Pabb and others don't fail. Fraternally,

J. W. DORMAN.

TAKES OFF DANDRUFF, HAIR STOPS FALLING

Save your Hair! Get a 25 cent bottle of Danderine right now—Also stops itching scalp.

Thin, brittle, colorless and scraggy hair is mute evidence of a neglected scalp; of dandruff—that awful scurf.

There is nothing so destructive to the hair as dandruff. It robs the hair of its lustre, its strength and its very life; eventually producing a feverishness and itching of the scalp, which if not remedied causes the hair roots to shrink, loosen and die—then the hair falls out fast. A little Danderine tonight—now—any time—will surely save your hair.

Get a 25 cent bottle of Knowlton's Danderine from any drug store. You surely can have beautiful hair and lots of it if you will just try a little Danderine. Save your hair! Try it!

Everyone Who Writes.

A. L. Rice, a prominent manufacturer of Adams, N. Y., has discovered a process of making a new kind of paint without the use of oil. He calls it Powderpaint. It comes in the form of dry powder and all that is required is cold water to make a paint weather-proof, fireproof and as durable as oil paint. It adheres to any surface, wood, stone or brick; spreads and looks like oil paint and costs about one-fourth as much.

Write to Mr. A. L. Rice, Manufr., 138 North St., Adams, N. Y., and he will send you a free trial package, also color card and full information showing you how you can save a good many dollars. Write to-day.

Tidings From the Field

Buntyn, Tenn.

Dear Dr. Meek: I thought I would write a few lines to the dear old Advocate that has been coming to my home for 18 years. I am so glad whenever it comes. I want to thank all of the brethren who helped us in the great cyclone troubles when we were without even a shelter. I never will forget the good people who helped us, nor any of my friends in Mississippi. May God bless you all! If any of the brethren want my help in meetings, I would be glad to help them as I have no work for this year. I want to do what I can in the Lord's service, and cannot be satisfied without work, for I feel that I am not doing my duty. Write me at Buntyn, Tenn.—D. M. Floyd.

Guntown, Miss.

We are with the good people of the Guntown and Baldwin charge this year. We arrived at Guntown on December 10, and were met by several of the brethren and a number of the good ladies. They came with an "auto" and carried us to the parsonage where we found many good things for our comfort, and the good things have continued to come. We are serving a most excellent people, and we greatly appreciate them and their kindnesses. Our first quarterly conference was held at the Saltillo Church on February 1 and 2. Brother Mitchell was at his best and gave the people some good sermons. They were enjoyed by all. The stewards made a good report and a good assessment for their pastor—a raise of $25. All things are going on well, so far as I know. We are hopeful of a good year.—W. C. Carlisle, P. C.

Morgan City, La.

Last Sunday was a busy one in the work. The pastor preached three times; administered holy communion three times, and baptized three children. Morgan City had the largest attendance at Sunday school that has been seen for months. In this church, we have a piano, an organ and a number of fine singers. The pastor preaches Sunday mornings. At Berwick the Sunday school is doing a fine work. In addition to the number of good voices in the choir at this point there are four instruments. The pastor preaches there every Sunday night. At Ramos, an afternoon appointment, we have just been presented with a nice new organ. It is complimentary from Mr. Cummings. At Gibson, another afternoon appointment, is one of the oldest churches in our Conference. It is called Sycamore Chapel. I have heard Dr. Carter speak of preaching there when a young man. The pastor is comfortably housed in a nice new parsonage that represents, in part, the energetic labors of Rev. H. N. Brown. I have just planted some grape-fruit trees for my successor.—C. C. Wier.

Taylorville (Miss.) Circuit.

I was returned to the Taylorville work for 1914. Our work has undergone some changes. Instead of having five churches, as we had last year, we now have eight, with two extra appointments. Instead of the work all being in Smith County, it is located in Smith, Covington, and Jones Counties; instead of it being 53 miles around the circuit as was the case last year, it is now 128 miles; instead of having to preach seven times a month as last year, I preach now twelve times; instead of having four houses of worship and one appointment without any as last year, we now have four congregations with houses of worship and four without any. We were warmly received by the people on our return. They have shown their appreciation by their thoughtfulness in supplying our needs. We received quite a lot of groceries on Jan. 3. Our first quarterly conference was held Jan. 10 and 11. We had a good conference. Brother Thompson preached us three very strong sermons. I am planning for great things for the Master on this work this year. I intend especially to look after the interests of the Advocate. What does 128 miles of traveling each month amount to, provided I can be of use to the Master in bringing about the salvation of lost souls? I am, as far as I can learn, the only preacher residing in Smith County. Wishing the brethren all a grand year and the Advocate much success.—A. W. O'Bryant, P. C.

ADDITIONAL SUNDAY SCHOOL NOTES.

By Rev. P. O. Lowrey.

Mrs. J. B. Magee, the Missionary Superintendent of the Baton District Sunday School Conference, is communicating with the superintendents with reference to installing the "Missionary Policy for Sunday Schools, provided by the Board of Missions, in each Sunday school in the District. We trust that they will give due consideration to this matter, and concede that the plan devised by the missionary leaders of the Church is the best for the purpose of missionary development that we have, unless some one yet to be heard from has a better one, in which case the Board of Missions should adopt the new plan.

By reference to the recent report of the Treasurer of our Sunday School Board, and by adding in the $37.60 contributed on the expense account of the Field Secretary to the meeting of the General Sunday School Board, which was referred to but not included in his summary, it will be seen that there was contributed to our Sunday school work last year a total of $2532.75. The year previous the Board had a total income of $906, $300 of which was given by the Board of Missions and $606 by Children's Day collections. Leaving out what was contributed for each of the two years by the Board of Missions, it will be seen that there was raised for our Sunday School Board $1826.75 more in 1913 than in 1912, and when the unpaid subscriptions of $375 to the 1913 budget are added, the difference totals $2201.75, or a gain in income within one year of more than 350 per cent. We know of no other Board in the Conference that had an equal increase in the funds for its maintenance, and this speaks well both for the fidelity of our Treasurer who had charge of this part of the Board's administration, and for the growing interest in our Sunday school work as well. At the same rate of increase this year the Board would have an income of nearly $10,000.

AVAILABLE FOR SERVICE.

I have an engagement to sing for Rev. W. B. Dillard, of the St. James M. E. Church, South, of Augusta, Ga., in special evangelistic services beginning March 29. This leaves me open for engagements from Feb. 22 to March 27, and during that period I should be glad to serve any brother in the South who may need a special singer. I am a son of Rev. J. T. Kimsey, of Lathrop, Mo., who has been a member of the Missouri Conference of the M. E. Church, South, for many years. Address me at Lathrop, Mo.

HOWARD WADE KIMSEY.

FROM A FORMER LOUISIANIAN.

Dear Doctor Meek: I wish to speak through the Christian Advocate to the many friends we have in Louisiana, to whom, individually I could not write, without spending a great deal of time and labor. We have been in the State of Oregon a little more than fifteen months—long enough to have passed through all the seasons and to ascertain the real climatic conditions. Our winters are very little colder than those of Louisiana and we are free from the very heavy rainfall so general in that State. Hence the winters are not disagreeable. We are also free from devastating cyclones—none in the history of the State. Our summers are positively delightful, with warm days, and cool, bracing nights. Sleep is always refreshing. The soil is wonderfully productive, especially where it is irrigated. Three crops of alfalfa can be grown without water, and with water five. Rocky Ford canteloupes grow almost as close as they can lie on the ground, as was demonstrated in our garden last year. I bought "Royal Ann" cherries last season from a lady who had a number of trees, one of which yielded from 1250 to 1500 pounds. She sold them at her door for 6 cents per pound. I will not multiply examples. Suffice it to say, this is a great part of our great country, notwithstanding Mr. Webster's discouraging speeches in Congress and to Mr. Whitman in the years of the past, when the latter was striving to get settlers for the "Oregon country."

We lived in Medford last year, or rather until the ninth of October, when I accepted work with the Methodist Episcopal Church, whose authorities sent me to this place as supply for the conference year. On two occasions I offered myself to the M. E. Church, South, but they had no available work for me; so I thought the next best thing to do was to accept work in the church of our "Big Sister." We have been delightfully received, and the work is moving on nicely here. We have one of the best Epworth Leagues I have ever seen. The young people here are a very fine band of workers, and have some excellent devotional meetings. I have a $3500 church building, nicely finished, with an Epworth League room, which is used on Sunday mornings for a Sunday school class room. We have an organized Adult Bible Class, which is meeting now in a separate hall, as we were too much crowded in the church for satisfactory class work. I am preaching every Sunday to a congregation numbering at least one-third more than our membership, and feel that some good is being accomplished. Wife and I felt very lonely last year, while out of the regular work, and now we expect to remain in the work as long as our health will permit. Before this experience, I could not appreciate the feeling of some of my Louisiana brethren, who were being "laid on the shelf," but it is all plain now. One has said, "In order to properly sympathize with a friend it is necessary to have passed through a like experience." It is even so. Since I left Louisiana some great men in Israel have fallen. I refer to Rev. H. O. White who was for six years my presiding elder and Dr. C. W. Carter, who was my presiding elder for one year. "Part of the host have crossed the flood, and part are crossing now."

From the reports of the Louisiana Conference proceedings, as given in the Advocate, there must have been an interesting and profitable session. I fully intended writing to the Conference, but on account of numerous duties, overlooked the matter till almost startled one day by the fact that the Conference was at that moment sitting. I wish to extend to the brethren my hearty thanks for all their many acts of kindness and love shown me in my absence. If my health had been good in that section I would never have suffered so many miles to have separated us. Thanks to a kind Providence for reasonable health both of self and family and a place in the Master's kingdom to render some service to him! "Brethren pray for us," that the rest of our lives may be lives of usefulness in the work of "our high calling."

THE EDUCATIONAL CONFERENCE

Of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, Feb. 26 and 27, Nashville, Tenn.

1. The Conference will be held in the Sunday school room of McKendree Church.
2. It will open promptly at 9 o'clock Thursday, the 26th.
3. The first morning session will be devoted to organization and to a discussion of the general topic, "The Junior College."
4. The afternoon session will be devoted to a discussion of the general topic, "Admission to College."
5. The first evening session will be devoted to the Round Table discussions.
6. The second morning session will be devoted to a discussion of the "Requirements for Graduation."
7. The second afternoon session will be devoted to a discussion of the topics, "The Teaching Force," and "Income Requirements."

Special railroad rates to Nashville may be secured from all points in and out of the State of Tennessee. The Conference is open to all educational workers of the M. E. Church, South.

It would be well to secure hotel accommodations in advance, as Nashville will probably be crowded with visitors at that time. The following are some of the hotels:

Hermitage Hotel, Sixth Avenue and Union Street, European Plan. Rates: $2 to $3.50 per day. Private baths with all rooms.

Maxwell House, Church Street and Fourth Avenue N. European Plan. $1 to $2.50 per day without bath; $2 to $3.50 with bath.

Savoy Hotel, Seventh Avenue between Church and Broad Streets, European Plan, $1.50 per day without bath; $2 with bath.

Duncan Hotel, Fourth Avenue and Cedar Street, American Plan, $3 and up per day without bath; $3.50 and up per day with bath.

Tulane Hotel, Church Street and Eighth Avenue N., American Plan, $2 to $2.50 per day without bath; $3 per day with bath.

MRS. JOHN DREW BETTER

McLeansboro, Ill.—"About five years ago, says Mrs. John L. Drew, of this place, "I was afflicted with pains and irregularity every month. I suffered continually, was weak and despondent, and unable to do my housework. I took Cardui, and in one month I felt like a new woman and worked hard all summer. I am now in perfect health, and recommend Cardui to all suffering women." Every day during the past 50 years Cardui has been steadily forging ahead as a result of its proven value in female troubles. It relieves headache, backache, womanly misery and puts fresh strength into weary bodies. Try it.—Adv.

ITTA BENA, MISS.

Dear Dr. Meek: We received a royal welcome upon our arrival at Ittabena. We were met by a committee of ladies who carried us to the parsonage. They had bountifully filled the pantry with good things. They have furnished three rooms of the parsonage with elegant new furniture, and have put down two new art squares, and have provided a range and safe for the kitchen and crockery for the dining room. They are enthusiastically working to pay what is due on the parsonage, and in addition to paying cash for all they have put in the parsonage they have paid $157 on the parsonage debt.

This is a really spiritual working church. Brother and Sister Pope wrought well the two years they were here and they have in this community a host of friends. I found the charge in fine working order. The woman's prayer meeting every Friday afternoon, has an attendance of from 25 to 40. The men's prayer meeting every Sunday afternoon is well attended and is very helpful. Our Wednesday night prayer meetings are unusually good. For the four weeks in January the attendance was 77, 81, 95, and 100. We have organized a Junior League of 50 members. We have organized a Sunday school with 35 members at Berclair. All goes well, and best of all, the Lord is with us.

J. E. THOMAS.

MYRTLE, MISS.

Dear Brother Meek: Rev. J. H. Mitchell has just held our first quarterly conference at Myrtle. This conference in point of general advancement excels any previous one in the history of the charge for the first quarter and the prospects are encouraging indeed. The pastor's salary has been raised handsomely for this (the third) year, and the people express their appreciation and give their hearty co-operation in many substantial ways, for which the pastor claims no credit. Brother Mitchell gave us three inspiring sermons and remains in high favor with our people.

Feb. 9. E. H. CUNNINGHAM.

CENTERVILLE, MISS.

Our church at this place is enjoying a marked degree of spiritual uplift under the able ministry and devoted and untiring efforts of Rev. R. F. Harrell, our pastor, who is beloved by every one. Our Sunday school is doing a good work, having an efficient and loyal corps of teachers and officers, who inspire the young people and some older ones with zeal for the Master's work. The Epworth League, under the leadership of Brother C. H. Deterley, is well attended and is a means for growth in grace and knowledge to all the members. Our mid-week prayer meeting is fairly well attended and is increasing in interest. The women of the charge are doing their part well, and as a result there has been quite an improvement in the appearance and comfort of the church property in the last few months. In fact, our people seem to have a zeal for God's work born of knowledge, and are receiving his blessings in this life, and we rejoice in the promise of that which is to come. All these things, together with the privilege of reading the dear old Advocate, make me glad that I am a Methodist and cheer me on as I near the end of my journey.

Sincerely your brother,

Feb. 7.

A. J. GREEN.

MORE FAITH NEEDED.

It is very plain that what is now most wanted in the Christian world is more faith. We too little respect faith, we dabble too much in reason; fabricating gospels when we ought to be receiving Christ; limiting all faith, if we chance to allow faith, by the measures of previous evidence, and cutting the wings of faith when, laying hold of God, and bathing in the secret mind of God, it conquers more and higher evidence. Be it unto you according to your faith, is the true principle, and by that the whole life-state of the Church on earth always has been, always will be graduated. "Increase our faith, then, Lord!" be this our prayer.—Bushnell.

New Styles in Summer Shoes.

Since catalogue was issued, we have added a great many new styles to our line. It will be several months before a new catalogue will be ready to mail. We have found that with rubber soles on English last, are very popular. We can furnish the Russia Calf with rubber soles at $2.00 and $2.50 per pair, the kind that retail for $3.00 and $3.50. We have a complete line of Ladies' White Duck Oxfords, with rubber soles, at 90c., the kind that retail for $1.50,—at $1.10 and $1.50. The $1.50 is the regular $2.25 shoe.

It is about time now for the wearers of shoes to think about the spring and summer styles, or oxfords, and we would suggest to the readers of this paper that they forward their orders now while our stock is complete. We have all the new styles and if there is anything not mentioned in the catalogue we would suggest that our customers describe the shoe wanted, we have it.

Yours very truly,

FROM OUR LOUISIANA DEACONESS, MISS ILES.

With the majority of French young people in the country, dancing is the only social pleasure they know. When these young people join our church it is understood that they give up this social feature. About fifty have done this and have become members of our church and Epworth League at Bayou Blue. The pastor and deaconess decided that since people are by nature social, and since Christ honored social life, we must supply this deficiency in the lives of those who had willingly left questionable pleasures to follow him. Thursday, Jan. 29, the deaconess with her traveling bag went on board the mail boat, and landed at Bourg, nine miles from Houma. Here she was met by one of the boys in a buggy. After a short drive they reached the hospitable home of one of the French workers. Hospitality may be used in its full meaning when describing the characteristics of these earnest, intense French people. At seven p. m., we went to Mr. Brenet's where about fifty were assembled to take part in their first Epworth League social. How can I describe the flushed faces, sparkling eyes, and eager enthusiasm of these boys and girls? The social was begun by singing several hymns. These boys and girls take correspondence courses in music, and can play the organ very creditably. After singing awhile, various games were played, for instance, a needle threading and sewing contest, mock fortune-telling and "forfeits." Then popcorn pralines were served by the Junior Leaguers, and while partaking of these, conundrums were passed around. Then the deaconess told the story of Ruth in its beautiful imagery and romance, dwelling upon the reward of faithfulness and upon the purity of love and home life. The climax of the evening was reached however, when young and old joined in singing hymns in French. The heart of the deaconess was thrilled as she looked on and listened and thought of what these young lives might yield for the Master, even now, and in years to come. A prayer in French was offered by one of the French pastors asking our heavenly Father to lead us and to again honor us with his presence at our socials. This closed the evening, one of real joy and revelation to God's trusting children in this French field. In buggies and wagons these happy-hearted boys and girls left, laughing and calling "bon soir" and "au revoir" as far as could be heard. I believe our Lord was our guest that evening, transforming and training as much as at Cana. The work is wonderful, and sure and soul-satisfying.

Deaconess ELIZA ILES, Houma, La.

WESSON, MISS.

We have a flourishing society of some sixty members at this place, and are in high spirits as a result of our campaign for new members which has just closed, and which resulted in securing about forty additions to our society. Early in the fall we divided our society into two sides for the purpose of increasing our membership, each side selecting their captain, with the understanding that the side securing the largest number of new members were to be entertained by the side securing the least number of members. Mrs. B. F. Youngblood was chosen captain of one side and Mrs. Ford captain of the other side. Mrs.

Youngblood's side, having secured the largest number of members, were on the evening of January 23, entertained at the splendid home of Dr. and Mrs. W. L. Little. An interesting program of recitations, music, and addresses was rendered, after which delicious refreshments were served. There were present about thirty-five and all expressed themselves as having enjoyed the occasion very much, and the ladies of the winning side came to the conclusion that they had been the losers in not having had the honor of being hosts instead of guests.

WHAT DAVIDSON MEMORIAL IS ACCOMPLISHING.

The Y. W. C. A. girls of Davidson Memorial, in Soochow, attended a conference in Shanghai which was a wonderful revelation to them and helped them to forget self and live with a higher, nobler purpose. When the call came to this school last spring for volunteers for evangelistic work, almost the entire faculty of Chinese teachers volunteered, together with the matron of the Kindergarten Training School and the Chinese secretary of the Industrial School. The sales for the Industrial School for 1913 amounted to $7966.75.

ANNUAL REPORT OF HOME DEPARTMENT, LOUISIANA CONFERENCE.

Adult auxiliaries 84, increase 11; Adult members 2178, increase 391; Young People's auxiliaries 12, increase 2; Young People's members 319, increase 200; Junior Divisions 25, increase 5; Junior Division members 679, increase 235; total number of members 3176, increase 804; number of members on Cradle Roll 309, increase 54; subscribers to Voice 740, increase 245; subscribers to Young Christian Worker 86; number taking Home Mission Reading Course 670, increase 10; pledged to Christian Stewardship 148; boxes of supplies sent off and reported to Bureau 27; number auxiliaries observing week of Prayer 23; number of auxiliaries visiting sick and strangers 20; number of auxiliaries visiting corrective or benevolent institutions 3; auxiliaries holding cottage prayer meetings 20; auxiliaries distributing garments in good condition 20; auxiliaries represented in City Mission Boards 9. In 1912, $1000 was pledged to the Home Department and $606.99 was collected. At our annual meeting in Baton Rouge, March, 1913, $2025 was pledged to the Home Department and Mrs. Holmes' report shows that $1615.40 was collected. These figures show an increase over the pledge of 1912, but they do not show that each auxiliary has brought a gift of love to the Giver. After listening to a certain missionary, a poorly dressed woman came forward. "I must give something to help," she said, as she laid her wedding ring in the speaker's hand. "I cannot take that," was the reply. "I know," she answered, the tears choking her voice, but her lips smiling through it all, "but Christ gave himself for me, and surely I can give what is most precious to me." Were an equal desire and a commensurate effort found in the hearts and plans of our women, how great would be the possibilities of the Woman's Missionary Society!

Your Boy

First, ask your doctor about Ayer's Sarsaparilla as a tonic for the young. Then use it or not, as he says. J. C. Ayer & Co., Lowell, Mass.

Ask your doctor how often he prescribes an alcoholic stimulant for children. He will probably say, "Very, very rarely." Ask him how often he prescribes a tonic for them. He will probably answer, "Very, very frequently." Ayer's Sarsaparilla is a strong tonic, entirely free from alcohol.

FOREIGNERS IN NEW YORK CITY.

New York City is no longer American, if by that term we mean that its present population is of American-born ancestry. It is the largest Irish city in the world. It is the largest Hebrew city in the world, having a Jewish population fifteen times as large as the Jewish population of Jerusalem and ten times as large as the Jewish population of all Palestine. There are only two nations that as nations have a Hebrew population equal to that of the city of New York. It has more Germans than any German city except Berlin, there being more residents of the city with German parents than with American parents. It has a larger Italian population than any city in Italy except Naples and Rome.—Dr. J. M. Moore.

The Sunday School.

NEWS AND NOTES.

By Miss Elizabeth Kilpatrick.

The keen interest taken by the teen age classes in organization is proof that they are ready and willing to work if they can be given the opportunity.

"The Sunday School at Work," by Dr. John T. Faris, is a comprehensive survey of modern Sunday school work. Each chapter is treated by a specialist along the various lines of Sunday school work and from it one receives broader visions and great help.

Rev. E. D. Simpson, of Mathiston, will soon be moving into his commodious new church, and then an ideal Sunday school will be next in order. He has a fine corps of interested workers and is doing a great work. His large intermediate classes under Miss Buckingham and Mr. Atkins are most interesting and well-taught; and all the other teachers are keenly alive to the great possibility and future of this work.

Mrs. John Gibson, First Church, Corinth, started out with 10 girls last September, and last Sunday organized 20 regular attendants into the "I am Third" Class, which means Christ first, others second, and self third. They are planting seed and will furnish the church with flowers every Sabbath. They furthermore intend giving the Sunday school $20 and will make the money themselves. Margaret Wilson is president; Mary Heyer, vice-president; Eugenia Price, secretary, and Grace Gibson, treasurer. They have written Dr. Bulla for their certificate and blue and white buttons, and can't you see the handwriting on the wall? These girls will be the trained and ready teachers and workers for the coming days.

Mr. Marion Lawrance's Cardinal Points for the New Year are well worth while:

Looking backward—long enough to fix the lessons of the year just gone.

Looking forward—until the challenge of the New Year grips us.

Looking upward—for sky-born ideals and God's help to interpret them.

Looking inward—with a personal resolve to live the gospel of Happiness, Helpfulness and Hope.

Shall we not, as friends together, rely more than ever upon this compass to guide our pathway through this new year of privilege we are facing?

So many classes are desirous of doing some real missionary work and have not yet decided on the object of their good impulses—here are 14 objectives in reach of many schools and classes:

Foreign Mission Objectives.

A native pastor in India.

A kindergarten teacher in Japan.

A teacher in a mountain school in the South.

The pastor of a church for foreign-speaking people.

A Bible class supporting its own representative on the foreign field.

The education of a child in India.

Support for members in training for missionary service.

Junior class of girls making a Chinese baby a life member of the Little Light Bearers.

Class of college girls supporting a Bible woman in India.

School observing Thanksgiving by annual support of near-by orphanage.

Class of boys supporting a student in mission school in Turkey.

Class of girls making warm garments to be distributed by a city missionary in a large industrial center.

An Adult class educating a Mexican maiden to become a missionary to her own people.

Two Korean Bible women supported by a class of men.

LOUISIANA NOTES.

By Rev. P. O. Lowrey.

At the last session of the Louisiana Conference a resolution was passed urging each Sunday school to make a contribution to the State Anti-Saloon League, and the Superintendent, Rev. A. W. Turner, is sending out a reminder of this action and is asking that the collection be taken during the month of February. Let all fall in line and carry out the pledge thus made in the resolution.

The young people's mixed class in Kentwood, taught by Mrs. Eilzey, has recently organized with Miss Clara Broyles, president; Robert Magee, vice president; Miss Alice Hilburn, secretary-treasurer; Mrs. H. Kent, chairman of the Membership Committee, and George Bird, chairman of the Missionary Committee. The class chose the name, "Good Samaritans," with the motto "Helping Others." As a challenge, the pastor proposed that if they would build the class up to a membership of 50, he would prevail on the church to build them a class room, and the challenge was promptly accepted, and the class starts off with that as its goal.

Rev. W. W. Drake, Conference Missionary Secretary, is endeavoring to raise a special fund of $1000 for our French Mission work and is hoping to secure a liberal part of it from our Sunday schools, and we commend his cause to our people. The presentation of this claim to the scholars will not only enlist their contributions in behalf of a good cause, but being one of our own home obligations, it will have a great educational value as well. The Sunday school and Epworth League of our First Church at Baton Rouge have taken $75 of this amount, and the Lafayette Sunday school $50. Brother Drake will be glad to hear from our superintendents concerning this matter. He should be addressed at Baton Rouge.

Brother J. R. Ables, a member of our Sunday School Board, and a teacher in the Ponchatoula school, finds that since establishing a Sunday school on his rice farm of some 500 acres that he receives applications from a good class of tenants for employment because of the possibility of having a Sunday school to attend. This reminds us that even the people who may not be very enthusiastic Sunday school workers, would nevertheless refuse to live in a community where the word of God was not taught. Nor do the best class of employers want their employees to live without being affiliated with some form of Sunday school or church work. Thus in the estimation of the people the "foundation" of the kingdom of God "standeth sure," and is all the time growing in the esteem of the world.

The "Earnest Workers" class of boys at Kentwood recently had charge of one of the regular night services of the church. Two of the boys acted as ushers, two took the collection, a quartette sang, and the pastor preached a sermon specially to them on "Warring a good warfare." The teacher, Mr. J. C. Petty, who by the way has built up a class of eight to a present enrollment of about thirty-five, was introduced to the audience and made some appropriate remarks about his work, and he, with his boys, took the leading part in reading the responsive Psalm, the class being seated in a body on the rostrum. Decidedly the best congregation that the present pastor has seen at this church was present to greet the class on this occasion, and he is convinced more than ever that a program in which an individual class is thus recognized is profitable; and he plans to have the young people's "Good Samaritan" class have charge of a similar service a month hence.

MARRIED.

On the highway, February 1, 1914, at the "White Hills," near Shannon, Miss., by Rev. A. H. Williams, Mr. ARTHUR ROBBINS and Miss EFFIE STEWART, both of Lee County, Miss.

SAGE TEA PUTS LIFE AND COLOR IN HAIR

Don't Stay Gray! Sage Tea and Sulphur Darkens Hair so Naturally That Nobody Can Tell.

You can turn gray, faded hair beautifully dark and lustrous almost over night if you'll get a 50 cent bottle of "Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Hair Remedy" at any drug store. Millions of bottles of this old, famous Sage Tea Recipe are sold annually, says a well-known druggist here, because it darkens the hair so naturally and evenly that no one can tell it has been applied.

Those whose hair is turning gray, becoming faded, dry, scraggly and thin have a surprise awaiting them, because after one or two applications the gray hair vanishes and your locks become luxuriantly dark and beautiful—all dandruff goes, scalp itching and falling hair stops.

This is the age of youth. Gray-haired, unattractive folks aren't wanted around, so get busy with Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur to-night and you'll be delighted with your dark, handsome hair and your youthful appearance within a few days.

Order Your Piano Through the New Orleans Christian Advocate Piano Club

And Get the Benefit of the Tremendous Saving in Price

The less money you waste on agents' commissions and dealers' profits, the farther your money will go in buying QUALITY and DURABILITY, the two big items in piano values. Club members write us that they are simply astonished at the exquisite tone, the surpassing beauty of design and finish, and the splendid construction of the pianos furnished by the Club. They cannot understand how it is possible to furnish such superb pianos and player-pianos at the prices granted to Club members. But to any one who knows the inside of the piano business, it is all very simple. The explanation lies in "The Power of Numbers." What is impossible for ONE is easy for ONE HUNDRED. An army of one hundred buyers is entitled to, and receives the MAXIMUM Factory discount, and that cuts a TREMENDOUS slice off the selling price.

CLUB NOT AN EXPERIMENT NOR A SCHEME

The Advertising Manager of the New Orleans Christian Advocate and the Managers of the Club are occasionally asked whether the Club is simply a theory or scheme, or an actual fact. To this we reply that the Club is the greatest and most significant fact in the history of the piano business. Some have asked us whether one hundred people really join and form the Club. To these we reply that more than ten clubs of one hundred bona fide members each have already been duly formed and that the plan has proven so extremely helpful and popular that it now requires from four to five clubs each year. Over one thousand enthusiastic members stand ready to give you the benefit of their experience. Some of these may be your friends, or people whom you know. We have printed hundreds of their letters of endorsement in a book and would be glad to send you a copy on request. Thousands endorse the plan—not a single case of dissatisfaction.

HERE ARE A FEW TYPICAL LETTERS

They tell of the superior quality of the instruments; of the lifetime guarantee of quality; of the big saving in price; of the convenient plan of payment; of the protection to your family in the event of your death before the instrument is fully paid for; of the uniform courtesy and consideration which they have received at the hands of the Managers. They say that they are delighted with every feature of the Club. Read these samples, then write for the booklet which contains hundreds of them.

"We have one of your Farrand Cecilian Player Pianos and are most delighted with it. All who have ever heard it are in an agreement that it is one of the very best combinations that has ever been put on the market. Persons desiring such an instrument will certainly do well to examine yours, and if they will only give it a trial, I feel sure that they will look no further."

LEN G. BROUGHTON, London, S. E.

(Note—Dr. Broughton is a Minister of world-wide reputation, his church in London being, as you probably know, one of the largest in the world. The Player he has is the same as that offered by the Club.)

"The Club Piano that I bought from you last April gives perfect satisfaction. Its tone is just as round and sweet as it was the day it was placed in my home. I have three daughters taking music and they practice on it every day. I would advise anyone who wants a good piano to join the Club and get the best. The Club Plan is exceptionally good, as it places a fine piano in reach of anyone who wishes to buy." MRS. T. S. MARTIN, Greenville, S. C.

"I have had the Ludden & Bates Piano now almost a year and would not take twice the amount of money that I paid for it. If I wanted to buy a dozen more, I would buy a Ludden & Bates Piano every time. Not only my family but everybody that has seen it and heard it just thinks there is nothing like it."

MR. & MRS. JOHN A. SMITH, Harrison, Ga.

"In purchasing a Ludden & Bates Piano I was satisfied I should make no mistake, and after a trial of over a year I can testify that it is better than I expected. Am so well pleased that if I were in need of another Piano should certainly call on you again." JOHN R. DELANEY, Key West, Fla.

"Our Club Piano arrived safe, and certainly is a beauty. It is all and more than we expected. All of the neighbors are delighted with it. Wishing you every success, I remain,"

MRS. J. A. CANE, Langdale, Ala.

"I have had my piano, which I bought through the Club plan, two months and would not take twice the amount I gave for it if I could not get another. All my friends are wild about it and think the tone beautiful and sweet."

MISS BETTIE HOLLY, Lincolnton, N. C.

"The prompt and more than courteous attention which I have always received at your hands would make me a friend of the Ludden & Bates Piano if its own merits had not already done so. The Piano we purchased of you gives entire satisfaction."

A. L. COLLINS, Oneco, Fla.

"We are very much pleased with the Piano. Everyone says it is so sweet toned. The Club Plan is splendid, we think." M. M. BOST, Morgantown, N. C.

"We are perfectly delighted with the Player bought from you. It is not only a pleasure to our family, but to my guests as well. It makes hearing good music possible at any time."

NEW ORLEANS CHRISTIAN ADVOCATE

Vol. 61.—No. 3.

Official Organ of the Louisiana, Mississippi, and North Mississippi Conferences, Methodist Episcopal Church, South.

Whole No. 3026.

ROBERT A. MEEK, Editor.

NEW ORLEANS, LA., THURSDAY, FEBRUARY 19, 1914.

CHAS. O. CHALMERS, Publisher.

Editorial

Every Sunday ought to be a Go-to-Church Sunday emphasizing attendance on a special Sabbath is helpful only as it may lead to regular worshipping in the house of God.

There is such a thing in the Church as a "sore-toe" statesmanship. We scarcely need to say that it is revolutionary in spirit. The following which it commands is not large, but it is exceedingly noisy.

Prayer and fasting is not a new method of achieving results in the Master's work, but we do not think that any modern expedient can equal it. Perhaps if we would use the old way more, the statistics we report at our Conferences would look somewhat different.

It may be well enough to have an "open mind," but we rather think that for a Christian a fixed mind is quite as important, if not more so. Indeed, there are some influences toward which the mind ought to be forever closed. If it had been so in Eve's case, she would not have lost Paradise and have brought into the world "sin and all its woe."

The man who loves to parade before the public eye yet lacks much of having attained to Christian perfection. St. Paul says: "Love vaunteth (heareth) not itself, is not puffed up." The Master classified these trumpet-sounders nearly two thousand years ago. It is helpful to give the news of the Kingdom, but it should be done with sincere humility. The object in view should be the exaltation of Christ, and not the magnifying of one's self.

There are some persons who affect to be satisfied when an effort is made to adjust their differences with others, when they really are not. And there are some who make very magnanimous proclamations in a discussion which do not represent their real feelings. In such cases they are courting favor which they do not deserve. It is never noble to be to the slightest extent untruthful or insincere. An honest, open hostility is better than a feigned and deceptive friendship.

Postmaster General Burleson, in declaring against postmasters' conventions a few days since, is quoted as saying: "I am inclined to believe that at this time the tendency of the postal service is toward over-organization." In our opinion, this tendency is not by any means restricted to the employees of the Postal Department of the Government, but, on the contrary, is a very general one. We fear that our Churches are impairing their efficiency in this day by having too many conventions and conferences of various kinds. Had we not better let the workers remain more steadily in the field? Even as a means of acquiring knowledge we had rather risk the quiet of the study to bring substantial results than the hurrah of the chautauqua."

GREATER EARNESTNESS NEEDED.

What a man is morally and spiritually is largely a matter which he himself must determine. To be sure, heredity and environment are important factors in the equation of life, but they are not the dominant ones. God's "prevenient grace" comes to every human soul and gives it the power and opportunity to link itself with forces that will uplift and ennoble it. Our own choices and strivings either make or mar us. An intelligent earnestness is absolutely necessary both to high attainments in personal experience and large achievements in service. Only the aroused and determined seeker can find his way to the entrance gate of the Kingdom. "The Lord is nigh unto them that are of a broken heart and saveth such as be of a contrite spirit." And even after one has become a disciple the extent of one's spiritual growth depends upon the intensity of one's desires and the effort that one puts forth to realize them. The Master said, "Blessed are they that hunger and thirst after righteousness for they shall be filled." Holiness is an acquirement that it costs much to secure. It is never thrust upon any one; it never comes, as material wealth often does, by accident or inheritance. It must be persistently striven for, in the way that God directs, as the one thing craved above all else. Hence, only persons who are tremendously concerned need hope to come "unto a perfect man, unto the measure of the stature of the fullness of Christ."

But it is not only in the cultivation of one's own religious life that earnestness counts—it also has much to do with what one accomplishes for the Master. Easy-going men have not been the makers of history, either secular or sacred. There are different kinds of energy—physical, intellectual, and spiritual—but some form of it must be actively in operation before anything worth while can be achieved. The men of zeal have swayed the past, are swaying the present, and will sway the future. To this class belonged Christ, Paul, Luther, Wesley, and the heroic pioneers of Methodism. Look at the consuming and unceasing earnestness of Edison and of all the other foremost achievers of our time. May we not as the servants of our ascended Lord learn a lesson from them in this respect?

We have the most powerful incentives conceivable to incite us to diligence and activity. Our own lives are fast fleeting away. Therefore what we would do, must be done quickly. The people about us who need assistance are also being swiftly borne to eternity. Every day, all around us, the eternal destinies of immortal souls are being decided. With every passing hour go opportunities to do good that will never return. The eye of the Master is upon us and to him we must shortly give an account of how, as his representatives, we have met our awful responsibilities. The man who, in the face of such conditions, can move along through life complacently, feeling but lightly the weight of his obligations, is greatly to be pitied. Terrific was the displeasure of the great Head of the Church with those at Laodicea who were "neither hot nor cold." Oh, let us shake off our lethargy and fling ourselves, heart and soul, into the work that we have been commissioned to do. What matters it if we soon wear out? God will amply reward us and raise up others to take our places. Would that every disciple of Jesus could truthfully say:

"Sin worketh,
Let me work, too;
Sin undoeth,
Let me do.
Busy as sin, my work I ply,
Till I rest in the rest of eternity."

OUR DIVORCE PROBLEM.

We are publishing in this issue of the Advocate an account of a bill introduced in Congress relative to the question of divorce by Senator Joseph E. Ransdell of Louisiana, together with the remarks that he submitted on the occasion of its presentation. This ringing utterance of the Senator is entitled to much more than a mere casual reading. The figures which he adduces in the course of his discussion are startling, but the probabilities are that the true situation is even worse than he depicts it. In Kansas City recently a judge is reported to have heard eighty-three divorce cases in two days and to have granted every application. The number of divorces and separations in New Orleans last year was 774, and one out of every 242 of the city's population is now said to be a divorced person. And all over the country the record being made is a frightful one, and it seems to be steadily growing worse.

As to the cause of this trend of things, there is a wide diversity of opinion. The probabilities are that numerous influences are operating to produce this result; but in our opinion the most potent single cause is the feminist movement, which is proceeding upon a world-wide scale. We do not refer simply to the efforts of women to enter the political arena—that is merely a surface aspect of a far deeper and more significant movement—but to the disposition that many of them are showing to rebel against the task of home-making—against wifehood and motherhood. Wherever in the world's history this spirit has manifested itself, synchronous with it, there has been a growing laxity of the marriage laws, the number of divorces has rapidly increased, and there has been a diminishing birthrate. The laws of God and nature cannot be capriciously set aside without suffering the consequences.

This question is one that may well engage the attention of our legislators. No financial problem is comparable to it in importance; indeed, it affects the deepest foundations of society and involves the very life of the nation. Decades ago William E. Gladstone, who was perhaps the ablest statesman that the world has had in a hundred years, pronounced the divorce evil one of the very gravest menaces to modern civilization. If the great Englishman thought this under the conditions then existing, we wonder what he would think if he were living now.

A HYMN.

Luther E. Guice.

My God, the love I have for thee
Does not approach thy love for me,
For Thou thy Son hath given,
That we may triumph o'er the grave
By trusting in his power to save,
And have a home in Heaven.

A wicked, sinful race are we
And prone to wander far from thee,
Without Divine constraint;
But Thou hast made a wondrous plan
To save thy wicked creature, man,
And make of him a saint.

On Calvary's brow the Savior died—
The Holy One, the Crucified,
To save a wretched race,
And then ascended unto thee
And there he intercedes for me,
And saves me by his grace.

Then help us, Lord, to love thee more
And sing Thy praises o'er and o'er
Till ends life's transient dream;
Then take us home to thee, we pray,
And let us dwell through endless day
With thee and thy redeemed.

THE LORD'S PRAYER.

By Dr. John T. Sawyer.

II.

The next clause of the Lord's Prayer is—"And forgive us our debts as we forgive our debtors." In Luke it reads: "And forgive us our sins; for we also forgive every one that is indebted to us." This section of the prayer—asking for forgiveness of our sins and debts as we forgive those indebted to us—is forgotten frequently in our dealings with those who are our debtors or who have injured us. We should remember that our hearty forgiveness of injuries done us is of the utmost importance in our supplications. If God's grace enables us to do this, it is a certain evidence of our being his children, whose iniquities he is engaged, by grace and promise, to pardon. If on the other hand, we indulge in an implacable and revengeful temper, causing us to be unwilling to forgive our debtors and the injuries done us, our asking God for his pardon is a flat contradiction to the design of the Gospel, and a mocking of God. Unless we forgive those indebted to us, we cannot expect God's merciful pardoning of our infinitely greater sins and provocations against him. God, through Isaiah, declares: "I, even I, am he that blot out thy transgressions for mine own sake, and will not remember thy sins." Peter asked, "Lord, how oft shall my brother sin against me, and I forgive him? till seven times?" Jesus saith unto him, "I say not unto thee, until seven times; but, until seventy times seven." Paul to the Ephesians said: "And be ye kind one to another, tender-hearted, forgiving one another, even as God for Christ's sake hath forgiven you." In Mark we read: "And when ye stand praying, forgive, if ye have aught against any, that your Father also which is in heaven may forgive you your trespasses. But, if you do not forgive, neither will your Father which is in heaven forgive your trespasses." Christ closed the parable of the unmerciful debtor with these words: "So, likewise shall my heavenly Father do unto you, if ye from your hearts forgive not every one his brother their trespasses." One writer well says: "As forgiveness from God is the chief desire of a sinner, so forgiveness of injuries is the chief test of a Christian. If a man ask for forgiveness from the God he has offended, and does not extend forgiveness to the brother who has offended him, he plainly condemns himself as utterly undeserving, since the measure he requires from God he will not return to man." Christ is sure to do great things for such as believe firmly, pray earnestly, and forgive injuries heartily.

The next clause of this Prayer is: "And lead us not into temptation, but deliver us from evil." James says: "Let no man say when he is tempted, I am tempted of God; for God cannot be tempted with evil, neither tempteth he any man. But every man is tempted, when he is drawn away of his own lust, and enticed." One has said: "Let no man under his affliction fret and murmur, or pretend that God thereby tempts him to sin; for God is so infinitely holy in his nature and will, purposes and work, that it is absolutely impossible for him to be influenced to anything sinful, or to entice, persuade, influence, or necessitate any to commit the least moral evil. We have the responsibility upon us, and must pray and strive against temptation and evil." Matthew says: "Watch and pray that ye enter not into temptation; the spirit indeed is willing, but the flesh is weak." Christ said to his disciples: "Pray that ye enter not into temptation." Shortly before his betrayal, and when he found his disciples sleeping, He said to them: "Why sleep ye? rise and pray lest ye enter into temptation." Praying for his Apostles, as recorded in the 17th of John, our Lord said: "I pray not that thou shouldest take them out of the world, but that thou shouldest keep them from the evil." That is, from the Evil One—from the power, the wiles, the evil influences, the fear of Satan, who is the great adversary of Christ's people as he was of Christ himself.

The Lord's Prayer ends with these words: "For thine is the kingdom, and the power, and the glory, forever. Amen." The Third Chapter of Ephesians closes thus: "Now unto him that is able to do exceeding abundantly above all that we ask or think, according to the power that worketh in us, unto him be glory in the Church of Christ Jesus, throughout all ages, world without end. Amen." Paul's charge to Timothy ends thus: "Now unto the King eternal, immortal, invisible, the only wise God, be honor and glory forever and ever. Amen." We should as God's children, give unto God the glory due him. We should in our prayers take encouragement from God's own perfections, character and promises, praising him for what he is, what he has done, is doing or will do. Our prayers and praises should be offered up with earnest desire and in perfect assurance of being heard and answered as God sees best for our souls. The wording of our prayers need not be conformed to the Lord's Prayer, but should be such as the circumstances of our personal condition and environment may make necessary.

In the Lord's Prayer we have all the essentials of genuine prayer. No true prayer consists simply of mere words, or phrases, however correct or oratorical. The prayer must come from the heart, and many a prayer has been answered where no uttered word was made. The prayer flowing glibly from human lips may not in the least be heard and answered of God, because the expressions beard of man may not be in agreement with the true desires of the heart, and so are not sincere. "As a man thinketh in his heart, so is he," and God hears the cries of our inner being coming from the heart. Christ in his sermon, just before he gave the model prayer, said: "When ye pray use not vain repetitions as the heathen do: for they think they shall be heard for their much speaking. Be not ye therefore like unto them: for your Father knoweth what things ye have need of before ye ask him." The first words of the Lord's Prayer adapt it to the whole family of man, showing that we have "all one Father." It may be used by all Christians of all nationalities wherever they may be on the face of the earth. We should all of us make frequent and indeed daily use of the Lord's Prayer; but we may also, and should, pray in our own words after its manner, placing, like it, the concerns of God before our own.

Praying our Lord's Prayer, and our own worded prayers, we should not selfishly pray just for ourselves, our loved ones, and our special church; but, as "God so loved the world as to give his only begotten Son" to die for all mankind, we should always pray for the salvation of all men, at home and anywhere and everywhere, for our blessed Lord tasted death for every man. Spurgeon said this: "When the sun rises there is light. Why, I do not know. There might have been light without the sun, and there might have been a sun that gave no light; but God has been pleased to put these two things together, sunrise and light. So wherever there is prayer, there is a blessing. I do not know why. There might have been prayer without a blessing, for there is in the world of wrath; and there might have been a blessing without prayer, for it often is sent to some who sought it not. But God has been pleased to make this a rule for the government of the moral and spiritual universe, that there shall be the answer to earnest, believing prayer."

Oh, how much more we Christians might do for our Lord, our fellow men, and to hasten the coming of the kingdom, if we were more given to prevailing prayer. The prayers of genuine faith are the mightiest power a Christian has. Jeremy Taylor was right when he said the following: "Prayer can obtain everything; it can open the windows of heaven, and shut the gates of hell; it can put a holy constraint upon God, and detain an angel till he leave a blessing; it can open the treasures of rain, and soften the iron ribs of rocks till they melt into a flowing river; prayer can unclasp the girdles of the North, saying to a mountain of ice, Be thou removed hence, and cast into the bottom of the sea; it can arrest the sun in the midst of its course, and send the swift-winged winds upon our errands; all strange things, and secret decrees, shall combine in ministry and advantages for the praying man." One has said of the Lord's Prayer: "It is full of an outflowing of thought and of emotion toward great objects of desire, great necessities, and great perils." Sang Tennyson:

"More things are wrought by prayer Than this world dreams of. Wherefore let thy voice
Rise like a fountain for me, night and day.
For what are men better than sheep or goats
That nourish a blind life within the brain,
If, knowing God, they lift not hands of prayer,
Both for themselves and those who call them friend!
For so the whole round world is every way
Bound by gold chains about the feet of God."

Keeping in touch with God, we may become mighty men and women of prayer.

THOSE KOREAN CONSPIRATORS.

Not long ago we reported the decision of the highest Japanese court which concluded the trial of over a hundred Koreans, mostly Christians, charged with conspiracy to murder Governor General Terauchi, who succeeded Prince Ito, the most honored of all the statesmen who created modern Japan, and who was assassinated by Koreans. It is not strange that the civilian Ito was succeeded by the soldier Terauchi; nor is it strange that the Japanese police should have very suspiciously watched all meetings of Koreans in their care to guard against a fresh conspiracy; and the Korean Christians, with their Young Men's Christian Association, were under especial suspicion, and their ministers and teachers were of the first to be arrested. It will be remembered that when examined by the police they made confessions of guilt, which they all repudiated when brought before the court of first instance, declaring that their confessions were forced by torture. Over a hundred of them were convicted, however, on the basis of their confessions, and the court refused to hear evidence as to torture. On appeal to a higher court in Korea they were all acquitted except six. The prosecution utterly broke down, although still the evidence as to torture was excluded. The six included a Korean nobleman educated in this country who was not tortured, but who declared that he yielded on threats and promises of release. There followed an appeal in their behalf to a higher Japanese court, but that has affirmed the sentence, as it could find no flaw in the proceedings and had no authority to review the evidence.

Now the Japan Advertiser publishes a series of letters ably reviewing the case, written by a missionary who was appointed to care for the Christians under accusation. They present a strong case which is editorially supported. Other Japanese journals avoid the subject, and they do not attempt to make any defense of the charges of torture beyond giving the statement that it is incredible that there should have been torture, because that is forbidden by Japanese law. Yet there can be no doubt that in Korea the police did use this means to force confession from suspected persons. They had a theory of the conspiracy and they framed their questions accordingly and tortured the accused till they could resist no longer. The evidence is conclusive, and there were those who either died or went insane or were so crippled that they could not be allowed to appear as witnesses. Doubtless this was an old way in Japan as in China, and is now forbidden in Japan, but has been practiced by the lower officials in Korea, and we fear in Formosa. There is reason to believe that under a fair trial, such as certainly the two upper courts meant to give, the six who were condemned would be acquitted, and we trust that in some way their cases will again come under review. In the first trial before an inferior court and in the preliminary proceedings to prepare the dossiers, there was atrocious injustice, but the higher courts attempted as far as they could under the law to redress the wrong, although they still refused, or under the law were not able, to investigate the charges of torture.—New York Independent.

THE WORD "BAPTIDZO" IN CLASSIC GREEK.

Dear Brother Meek: On the first of this month Dr. Wm. A. Borum, pastor of the First Baptist Church of this city, in a sermon on baptism delivered from his pulpit, declared that there were no instances of the Greek word "baptidzo" in classic Greek meaning anything else than "to dip" and re-inforced his argument by reading from a lexicon which he declared was "used at Millsaps College." Three or four of those who heard his sermon reported to me his use of Millsaps College as a reference to bolster up his cause. Immediately upon hearing of his action I wrote him the following letter:

"Dr. W. A. Borum, Jackson, Miss.

"Dear Dr. Borum: I have been told to-day by reliable parties that in your sermon last Sunday on baptism, when quoting your authorities, you mentioned a book which is "used at Millsaps College," thereby putting the College back of your claim that there are no examples in Greek of the word "baptidzo" used in any other sense than to dip.

If I have not been correctly informed as to this matter, I owe you an apology for taking up your time with this letter. And I herewith offer you this apology.

If I have been correctly informed, I want to protest against the inference which you must have had in mind for your audience to draw from your reference to the College and its text books.

I am sending you under separate cover an article which appeared in the Nashville Christian Advocate some time back covering the claim made by you that there are no examples of the word "baptidzo" used in Classic Greek in a sense other than to dip. Of course, you will want to know the facts in the case so as to avoid in the future any like statements.

To be sure, you will understand readily that I am not so presumptuous as to be inclined at all to instruct you as to what you shall say from your own pulpit. I desire only that when Millsaps College is used in any way as a reference the inferences drawn shall be those and those only which the facts warrant.

"With sincere best wishes, I am cordially yours,
M. W. SWARTZ.

"Millsaps College, Jackson, Miss., Feb. 5, 1914."

Immediately upon the receipt of this letter Dr. Borum called me up over the telephone and stated to me that he did not mean to use the College in an improper way, but merely wanted to let the people know that the book he was quoting from was not a "Baptist book." This was just the point I made in my letter that he was using the College and its text books to fortify him in his claim that the position of the Churches other than the Baptist Church (and those of like belief) was wrong and unsupported by philological testimony. I assured him, however, that my spirit in the discussion was the friendliest and that I would accept his statement in the spirit in which it was made and that we would think no more of the matter.

I supposed that ended the affair. Yesterday, however, in his morning sermon he referred to the fact that a "learned Greek scholar" had called his attention, in the course of the past week, to an article bearing on "baptism" in which the whole Greek language had been ransacked from A to Z and in which "only two" examples (and those of questionable merit) had been able to be adduced where "baptidzo" did not mean to dip. And he claimed also that, because Prof. Beet, in the article mentioned, conceded the point which he was making, the entire proposition was a fortiori conclusively demonstrated.

Now, unfortunately for this present moment, I have no pulpit in Jackson from which to turn a friend's statements into irrefragable proof of the correctness of my position. I should, however, like in some way to call the attention of those friends in Jackson who are hearing of the discussion, and of those Methodists out in the State who are interested in this general question of such great importance (to the Baptists) to a few things which Dr. Borum's remarks yesterday suggest.

And the first one is: My purpose in writing Dr. Borum was not to seek to change the belief or to undermine the faith of any one of another persuasion, great or small, preacher or layman. My only object in taking the matter up at first was to prevent the Greek department of Millsaps College from being used as a foil to fortify, even inferentially, a position utterly untenable. I so stated to Dr. Borum in my letter. He has, however, apparently overlooked that.

The second thing is this: Now that the discussion has assumed a larger phase, by Dr. Borum's use of my article in his yesterday's sermon, I desire to emphasize the fact that there are other examples than "only two" where "baptidzo" can be translated by something else than to dip and that these two are far from being of "questionable merit." This fact, that there are other examples than the two I enlarged upon, I specifically state (and furthermore I give the references) in the article which Dr. Borum quoted from. So that I am at a loss to understand how he could have said that there were only two, unless, perchance he had read the article only superficially. And in this case he ought not to have used it at all. However, it is interesting to note that a week ago there were no examples at all, while yesterday there were two.

The third thing which I want to call attention to is this: For Dr. Borum to use the statement of Prof. Beet, which I refute in my article, as an a fortiori argument to prove his contention is putting logic to a truly wonderful use. However, that the merits of Dr. Borum's statements may be more easily seen, I am sending you a copy of the article of mine under discussion with the hope that you may be able to reprint it in one of your soon-to-appear issues of the New Orleans Christian Advocate. If possible, I hope that this letter and the reprint may appear in the same issue.

I shall soon send you another article amplifying the Greek examples to which mere reference is made in the copy from the Nashville Christian Advocate. For I am abundantly able to show that "baptidzo" with other meanings than to dip is well established by Greek usage.

Very truly yours,

Feb. 9, 1914.

M. W. SWARTZ.

The article referred to by Dr. Swartz, which appeared in the Nashville Christian Advocate of Jan. 21, 1910, appears below:

The Greek Word for "Baptize."

In the Sunday School Times of October 23 of last year, on page 530, is an article entitled "Why Some Are Baptists, and Why Some Are Not." The article consists in the main of two "statements of belief"—one for the Baptists and one for the Methodists and those of like faith with respect to the matter of baptism. The Baptist "statement" is drawn up by Prof. A. T. Robertson, D. D., Professor of New Testament Interpretation in the Baptist Theological Seminary at Louisville, Ky.; and the Methodist side is stated by Prof. Joseph Agar Beet, of Surrey, England. Now, it is not my purpose to enter into a discussion with these or with any other men on the relative merits of the different modes of baptism; yet, it does seem to me that there are two declarations in these statements of belief which are misleading and unfair (though I have no idea the writers meant to be unfair) to the Methodist side of this long-standing controversy.

The first declaration to which I take exception is in the statement of belief prepared for the Methodists, etc., by Prof. Joseph Agar Beet. Professor Beet says: "The use of the Greek word translated 'baptize' is so rare and indefinite that we have little to guide us except the New Testament."

The second is in the article of Professor Robertson for the Baptists. Professor Robertson says: "No example of this word ('baptize') has been found in ancient or Hellenistic Greek which does not mean 'dip' or 'immerse.'"

Passing over for the time these two declarations of Professor Beet and Professor Robertson to which I have taken exception, let us look for a moment at the word "baptidzo."

Verbs in Greek which end in "idzo" are derivatives from other words, and denote (Kuehner: "Greek Grammar," p. 236, sec. 232):

(a) A condition (state); (b) the exercise of agency or activity.

For example, "elpidzo" (from elpis, "hope") may denote according to (a) a condition of hopefulness (translated, "I am in a state of hopefulness"), or according to (b) the exercise of such mental activity as the verb "hope" in English suggests.

Apply this now to "baptidzo." This word is from the older "bapto," and will mean therefore, according to the above: (a) A condition resulting from whatever the root, "bapto," means, or (b) the exercise of the agency or activity of the root, "bapto." Obviously, therefore, the task before us is to discover what the word "bapto" means. If we do this, the meaning of "baptidzo" follows.

Now, this word "bapto," which has been shown to be the crux of the whole matter, occurs in the classic Greek writers from Homer down, through Aeschylus, Sophocles, Euripides, Herodotus, Plato, etc. In Homer we find it twice at least, in Aeschylus twice at least, in Sophocles three times or more, in Euripides five times or more, in Aristophanes five or six times, in Plato frequently, and so on; so that we see that the sum total of the passages where "bapto" occurs in classic Greek is large and would almost equal, I am sure, the number of places where the word occurs in the New Testament. Furthermore, the meaning of "bapto" in classic Greek is generally (as we shall see) far from "indefinite." For these reasons, therefore, I take exception to Professor Beet's statement quoted above, and I emphasize this point; for to throw away, as Professor Beet does, the classic authors is to concede (as Professor Beet virtually does) that the other side has us "on the hip" with respect to this phase—the linguistic phase—of this long-standing discussion. And to concede this would cause to many of us a tinge at least of disappointment in that we have in this philological age no philological basis for our position.

This for my objection to Professor Beet's statement. Let us look now to the statement of Professor Robertson.

There can be no doubt that the word "bapto" means "to dip." It has meant this from Homer down. In the ninth book of the "Odyssey" we read (391-392): "As when a smith dips ('bapto') a great ax or adz in cold water to temper it."

In the Hecuba of Euripides we read (610 ff): "Do thou, my old servant, take a vessel, and, having dipped ('bapsas') it, bring back to me some water from the sea."

There is no need to multiply examples. We will all concede that the word means "to dip." But does it mean anything else? Professor Robertson says it never does, and that no example can be found anywhere in classic Greek when it does not mean "dip" or "immerse." Let us see.

In the "Batrachomyomachia" (a comic poem on a supposed battle between frogs and mice, attributed by many to Homer and certainly of very early origin) is a passage where a frog is spoken of as slain in battle and as falling into a lake. In describing the effect of the wounded frog's blood upon the lake the author says: "Ebapteto d'almati limne" ("The lake was baptized with blood"). Obviously this does not mean that the lake was dipped or immersed in the blood of a small frog, but that the lake was tinged or sprinkled with the blood of the frog as it fell.

In Aristophanes's comedy of the birds there is another interesting case where "bapto" does not mean "dip" or "immerse," but something else—"sprinkle," "sprayed," or "tinged," etc. The scene I refer to is as follows: Some men are hopping onto the stage with a mask on representing the various kinds of birds; the remainder of the body not fantastically arranged to represent birds at all, but clothed as ordinary men. In fact, so conspicuous for their absence were the feathers of the bird-men that Euelpides (one of the actors) asks of one of the birds as it hops in: "Art thou bird or cockcomb?" And when the bird answers, "I am a bird," Euelpides immediately inquires: "Well, where are your feathers?" To which the bird rejoins: "They have fallen out." It is important for us to note here that specific attention is prominently called to the fewness of the feathers adorning the bodies of these pseudo-birds. Very shortly after this, while the foregoing ludicrous explanation of the absence of feathers on the bodies of the birds is still fresh in the minds of the spectators, another bird hops in, whereat Pisthetaerus (another of the actors) exclaims: "O Poseidon, here is another 'bapted' (baptos) bird!" Now, this word "bapted" cannot mean here "dipped" or "immersed;" for only the head was, as I have said, covered with feather. In view of the preceding scene, to which I have called attention, the sense of "bapto" here is obviously "sprinkled" or "tinged," and the line is to be translated: "O Poseidon, here is another of those (feather) sprinkled (or feather-tinged) birds!"

It is not necessary to cite further examples of "bapto" meaning something else than "to dip" or "to immerse." Such examples abound in classic

Greek. In fact, I am inclined to think from a study of the passages that "bapto" means something else oftener than it means to dip or to immerse. The verb "to moisten" or "to wet," for example, would admirably translate "bapto" in many cases. (Compare Aees., Prom. Vln., 863; Soph., Ajax, 95.)

At any rate, whether we translate "bapto" by "to moisten," "to wet," or by some other word, we have clearly shown that this verb has in classic Greek a meaning besides "to dip" or "to immerse," and, so far as it from being true, as Professor Robertson says, that no example of this word has been found in ancient Greek which does not mean to dip or to immerse, that we have actually cited two passages where it means something else. And we could cite a number more.

We have seen from the above discussion that "bapto" means in classic Greek, even from the earliest times, to sprinkle, to tinge, as well as to dip. Let us now apply these meanings to the derived word "baptidzo," and thus determine its meaning.

We said above that "baptidzo," being a derived word in "idzo," signifies, as all derived words in "idzo" do: (a) A condition resulting from whatever the root, "bapto," means; (b) the exercise of the agency or activity denoted by the root, "bapto." Substituting in this formula the ascertained value of "bapto" (which is to sprinkle, tinge, or dip), we find that "baptidzo" means: (a) a condition (state) resulting from sprinkling, tingeing, or dipping; (b) the exercise of the function or activity of sprinkling, tingeing, or dipping. That is, according to (b) "baptidzo" is virtually an exact equivalent of "bapto," and means "to sprinkle," "to tinge," as well as "to dip;" while, according to (a), "baptidzo" does not signify mode at all, but merely a state or condition resulting from "bapting"—sprinkling, tingeing, dipping. And this is undoubtedly the meaning it has in a large portion, if not in all, of the places where it occurs in the New Testament.

Church News

Three hundred missionaries, representing fifteen Missionary Societies, are at work in Egypt.

The Bishops of the Methodist Episcopal Church will hold their spring meeting at Germantown, Penn., on April 30.

Two new Mormon temples were recently dedicated in Chicago, Mr. Joseph Smith, the official head of that pernicious sect, officiating.

Rev. I. S. Hopkins, a superannuate member of the North Georgia Conference and who for many years was one of the leading ministers in the Southern Methodist Church, died at his home in Atlanta on February 3.

Representatives of the Methodist Episcopal Church have bought about six acres of land at the southern end of the historic hill, Monte Mario, near Rome, Italy, which it is proposed to use as a site for a great modern college.

Bishop W. F. McDowell, of the Methodist Episcopal Church, who some weeks ago underwent a serious operation for a serious gall-duct trouble, has recovered sufficiently to leave the hospital and return to his home.

The Main Building of Henderson-Brown College, at Arkadelphia, Ark. (a Southern Methodist institution), was destroyed by fire on February 3. The loss is estimated at $75,000, and insurance was carried to the amount of $50,000.

The American Bible Society keeps on sale in Boston, to meet the needs in Massachusetts, Bibles printed in 42 different languages. This indicates the extent to which foreign immigration has affected the New England States.

"The Week of Prayer and Self-Denial" was observed by our missions among the Orientals in California, with the following financial results: Korean Mission, San Francisco, $12.50; Japanese Mission, Alameda, $10; Japanese, Oakland, $5.

Bishop J. H. McCoy will spend the week from March 15 to March 22 in Texas, campaigning in the interest of the Key Memorial Chair which is to be established in the Theological Department of the Southern Methodist University by the Epworth Leaguers of that State.

The burning question among Texas Methodists is, "Shall the Southern Methodist University be opened next September?" It is stated that the work of launching that great educational institution will have to be carried steadily forward if it is to begin operating by that time.

Separate religious mass meetings for men and women will be held at the University of California during the second week in March, under the direction of Dr. George Sherwood Eddy and Miss Conde. It is said that these services will be upon a larger scale and more pronouncedly evangelistic than any Christian work ever undertaken at this great State institution.

At the meeting of the Sunday School Council of Evangelical Denominations, held in Chicago, January 27-29, Mr. D. M. Smith, our Senior Publishing Agent, was chosen Treasurer of that organization, and Dr. E. B. Chappell was made Chairman of its Editorial Section. Thirty-one denominations, with a Sunday school enrollment of more than 17,000,000, are actively affiliated with this Council.

Mr. E. H. Moore, a prominent laymen in the Trinity M. E. Church, South, of Los Angeles, Calif., in a letter to the Pacific Methodist Advocate, highly commends the work of his pastor, Rev. C. C. Selecman, who he says is an interesting and able preacher and a tireless toiler. Brother Selecman has already received 52 members into the Church, a number of them on profession of faith, and he has set 500 additions as his mark for the year.

The laymen of the several Methodist Churches in Dallas, Texas, gave Bishop E. D. Mouzon a banquet in the Southland Hotel of that city on Friday evening, January 30. About three hundred guests, including all our pastors in Dallas, were present. The Bishop preached a masterly sermon at the South Ervay Street Church on Sunday, Feb. 1, at 11 a. m., but was too unwell to meet an engagement to fill the pulpit of the First Methodist Church at the evening hour.

Bishop R. G. Waterhouse spent Sunday, February 3, in Los Angeles, occupying the pulpit of the Fitzgerald Memorial Church at the morning hour. Referring to the service on that day, the Pacific Methodist Advocate says: "The weather was beautiful and the congregation, with eager attention, heard this Spurgeon of America discuss in purest diction the great salvation. Judged by any standard, it was a great sermon, and could a stenographer have been present, the discourse might have gone to press without a change or alteration, being perfect in order and arrangement—a masterpiece of English. Bishop Waterhouse is thorough, knows how to preach, and enjoys a most intimate acquaintance with his 'mother tongue.' It is always a delight to hear him."

The Wesleyan Christian Advocate says: "Bishop Hoss in the Nashville Advocate says that, under certain conditions, he may write an article for that paper on 'Laity Rights.' We hope that he will do that very thing and let the people see what granting 'laity rights' might lead to." Like the Wesleyan, we hope that this lion-hearted apostle of Methodism who never touches any subject without illuminating it, will find it possible to discuss this vexed question. We have never sympathized with the view that in case one of our leaders is elevated to the episcopacy he must thereafter muzzle himself and remain silent. Who is so competent to give advice to the Church as our chief pastors who travel all over the connection and have an opportunity to observe the work in every part of the field?

A MOST IMPORTANT AND URGENT INTEREST.

To the Ministers and Members of our Church in Louisiana:

I beg to call your attention to the plans of the Board of Education of the Louisiana Conference, which were adopted at the last session of the Conference, and to commend to your cordial support Rev. Paul M. Brown, who was put in the field to direct this important work.

No Church can hope to win the largest and most enduring success without adequate educational institutions. Indeed, it may be doubted if the work of any Church can be stronger in the long run than its colleges. This is the unanimous judgment of all the Churches in America; and each and all have their institutions of higher learning.

Whatever may be done by the civil government in the matter of common schools, the State can not furnish the sort of higher education which is required for the highest success of the Church of God.

The State can not under our system of government give any sort of religious instruction without invading the liberty of the citizen. But the higher education must be fundamentally religious, or positively perilous. Youths, who attend colleges and universities, go to such institutions at that period in their lives when the strongest moral and religious influences are required to safeguard their spiritual life. They go when youthful passions most need restraint, when opinions are being formed, and habits contracted. Then, also they are without experience of their own and without ability to use the experience of older people. To remove a young man from home at such a time, and put in place of the home-influence no definite and intentional religious effort on his behalf, is to incur the most dangerous risks to his religious character. Under the most favorable conditions the moral perils of youth are very great, especially at boarding schools. It behooves the Church of God to reduce these perils to a minimum, and this is the object sought in the colleges of the Church.

Moreover, the Church can not derive from secular institutions a qualified ministry. The Church college is the only reliable source of supply for an educated ministry. A few years ago a layman who had given many thousands of dollars to the building of churches all over the Conference within the bounds of which he lived, said to me, "I have given money enough to build churches, and, henceforth I wish to put far more in equipping our college to make some preachers big enough to fill the churches we now have." His words are suggestive of an important truth.

Old Centenary, at Jackson, La., has passed away, and now it belongs to Louisiana Methodists to make new Centenary, at Shreveport, greater and better than the old college ever was—and that is saying much.

Brother Brown is serving every church and every church interest in the Louisiana Conference by his efforts on behalf of this great work. Let every loyal Methodist in Louisiana give him cordial, earnest, generous support.

WARREN A. CANDLER.

A CHOICE LOUISIANA TOWN.

Mr. Editor:

I had the pleasure recently of spending a few days at Alberta, La. This delightful little village is situated in Bienville Parish on the line of the Louisiana & Arkansas Railroad. Starting some years ago as a log road this line has become one of the best equipped and most up-to-date lines traversing our State. Together with the great lumber manufacturing plants situated on it, it has wrought a great transformation in the section of the State through which it passes. The leading stockholders are those princely Arkansas laymen (Methodist and Presbyterian) the Buchanan brothers.

The policy of this road is to furnish ministers of all denominations who have work on it with free transportation. Not only is this true, but wherever these men have investments the Church finds in them genuine sympathizers and hearty supporters. They have been large contributors to the colleges of our Church in Arkansas.

Alberta is a mill town where another group of Arkansas men have been operating for a number of years. Mr. John Allen, formerly of Allentown, in Bossier Parish, where he was known and loved by many of our preachers is the "Nestor" of the village. Here he abides in the evening glow of life surrounded by his children and grandchildren. It has not been my fortune to meet a more interesting and delightful family group. Among them we were pleased to find Mr. Clyde Williamson, whom we knew as a boy at Stonewall during our pastorate there eighteen years ago, and also Mr. Marvin Cassity, son of our beloved and lamented Brother J. B. Cassity, who was a heroic figure in North Louisiana Methodism a quarter of a century ago.

While we were delighted with the business and home-like atmosphere of the place, we were still more pleased with the splendid moral and religious sentiment which abounded on all sides. Rev. H. W. Cudd, one of the latest products of Centenary College, has just entered upon his pastorate here. It did not take long to find that this Centenary boy had already won the confidence and esteem of all the people. There is a roseate hue to every prospect in church life.

We were heard in behalf of Christian Education and met with a liberal response to our appeal for funds. The cash received amounted to more than a dollar for each member of the Church and nearly trebled the assessment for Conference Education.

It is in my heart to say much more about Alberta and our new-made friends, but we fear that the Editor is already glancing towards the wastebasket, and besides somebody might be tempted to envy Brother Cudd.

The Canadian Government put into operation on Feb. 10 a parcel post system similar to that of the United States.

Greenwood is the largest cotton market in Mississippi. Her receipts this year reached the sum of 134,221 bales, against 101,000 last year.

Within twenty-four hours last week there were in New Orleans three suicides and five attempted suicides. From this, it would seem that we need to follow Chicago's example and organize an Anti-Suicide Bureau.

The trial of W. C. Walters, the alleged kidnapper of little Robert Dunbar, is due to begin at Opelousas, La., on April 13. Mr. E. B. Dubuissou, of the local bar, has been appointed to assist the Mississippi attorneys in defending the accused.

Mr. John M. Parker, of New Orleans, was the principal speaker at a Lincoln birthday dinner given in New York City by representatives of the Progressive party on Thursday, February 12. The speaker for this occasion a year ago was Col. Theodore Roosevelt.

The Mississippi Daughters of the American Revolution will hold their annual meeting at Greenwood, March 10-12. The term of Mrs. A. F. Fox, of West Point, the present State Regent, will expire at this session, and Mrs. E. F. Noel, of Lexington, is being prominently mentioned as her successor.

The Mississippi Supreme Court rendered last week a decision upholding the legality of the amendment to the Constitution providing for an elective judiciary in that commonwealth. This means that 17 Circuit and ten Chancery Judges will be elected next November. The Supreme Court Judges will continue to be appointed as heretofore.

Ella Wheeler Wilcox has endorsed the tango dance. She further says: "The man or woman who does not dance now is the exception. He or she needs to explain why—not the dancer." Since this is a lady speaking, we will not say what we think of this statement, but will only remark that the sphere of Mrs. Wilcox's observation must have been quite restricted. New York City is not the world.

It is claimed that rats cost the city of New Orleans annually not less than $630,000. This calculation is based upon the statement of Dr. R. H. Creel, Past Assistant Surgeon-General of the United States, that it may be assumed that there are as many rats in a city as there are human beings, and that each of them will destroy a half-cent's worth of property daily, or $1.50 worth per annum.

According to the Negro Yearbook, edited by Monroe N. Work, there are 450,000 Negroes seriously ill in the South all the time, and from the sickness and deaths among their colored population the Southern States are estimated to sustain annually a financial loss of $300,000,000. It is claimed that about half of this loss could be averted by the use of sanitation and preventive medicine among the Negroes. Following a recent Negro Conference at Tuskegee, Ala., a national organization for the conservation of health among the colored people of the United States was effected.

It now seems to be practically assured that the Southern University, a Negro school formerly operated in New Orleans, will be located on the Shaffer farm, about four miles from Baton Rouge. If a good title can be secured to that property, the prospective site embraces about 500 acres of land, which is held at $42.50 per acre. In our opinion the State of Louisiana is acting wisely in transplanting this institution to a place where it will have a rural environment. We do not think it is well to locate colleges in large cities where the moral atmosphere is usually unwholesome and there are so many things to distract the attention of students.

The Psychological Clinic, a journal issued in Philadelphia, Penn., in publishing an article by Dr. David Spence Hill of this city, entitled "A Study of Exceptional Children in New Orleans," says: "It is safe to say that this investigation conducted by Dr. Hill in New Orleans is the best scientific contribution which has yet come from a direct clinical investigation of the exceptional children of a city school system. The character of this report inspires the belief that New Orleans is at the present moment better equipped than any other city in this country to carry forward a scientific survey of the children in its schools along the lines of sound clinical methods." This is a high compliment both to Dr. Hill and the Crescent City.

England is reported to be not a little disturbed over the prospective return of Mrs. Pankhurst who, since being released from jail for the sixth time, has been sojourning in Switzerland under a sort of temporary legal banishment. When last in prison, Mrs. Pankhurst went three days without eating or drinking anything or sleeping, and the Government became much alarmed lest she should injure herself. There is no doubt that the present administration in Great Britain is a thoroughly Christian one. The Master gave the injunction, "If thine enemy hunger, feed him; and we respectfully submit that the authorities in England have done this and "a little rise" in forcing food down the throats of the fasting suffragettes. Whether in doing this they have served their country well, is another question.

It is stated that $150,000 will be offered by the managers of the Panama-Pacific Exposition in prizes to aeronauts engaging in a flying race around the world in any kind of motor-driven machine. The plan is to have the contest started on May 1, 1915, and it is expected that the prescribed route will be from San Francisco to New York; thence to Belle Isle, a small point between New Foundland and Labrador; thence to Cape Farewell, Greenland, 610 miles away; thence to Reyjavik, Iceland, a distance of 670, and from there to Stoenaway, in the New Hebrides, a stretch of 570 miles. Thus the Atlantic, which is considered the most formidable obstacle, will have been crossed, and the trip through Europe will be by way of Paris, Berlin, St. Petersburg, and along the Transiberian Railway to Japan, and then across the narrow waters separating the north-eastern shore of Asia from Alaska, and finally down the Pacific Coast back to San Francisco. The time allowed for making this aerial circuit of the globe will be 90 days. The winner of the first prize will receive $100,000; the winner of the second, $30,000; and the winner of the third, $20,000. It is said that an additional $150,000 may be raised by subscription to be distributed among the contestants on conditions to be named later. (Since the above was written it has been stated that the amount of money to be given as prizes in this contest may be increased to $1,000,000 and the time lengthened to four months.)

THE DAILY CHRISTIAN ADVOCATE.

A daily edition of the Christian Advocate will be published at Oklahoma City, Okla., during the session of the General Conference of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, in May, 1914. Accurate stenographic reports of the proceedings will be published: the speeches, the reports of committees, memorials, the Bishops' Address, the fraternal addresses, and many items as they develop from day to day.

The General Conference, being a legislative body, will have before it many subjects of interest to the Church, including the probable election of bishops and the other connectional officers. As the Daily Advocate will be the only official organ of the General Conference, the report of its proceedings may be relied upon for correctness. Every effort will be made to make the Daily Advocate bring you the news of what the General Conference is doing. The price for the entire session will be $1. We are now ready to take your subscription, and shall be glad to begin listing names. It is not too soon to subscribe, so send your order for the Daily Advocate. Order from the nearest House. GOOD FOR DREW, MISS.

One of my happiest visits in the interest of the Methodist Hospital was that recently made to Drew, Miss.

Our church there just became the dignified head of a new charge last year, and at once increased their payment for pastor from $600 to $1200, and other claims proportionately. Then they bought and furnished a splendid parsonage and made their pastor comfortable.

The spirit of progress possessed them. By the end of the year they determined to build a handsome brick church, to cost not less than $10,000, with all facilities for a modern Sunday school—a splendid enterprise for that little band of Methodists in a town of 300 inhabitants. At the time of my visit the solicitation committee had secured more than $7000 in gilt-edged subscriptions from the few they had approached.

I was with them the Sunday before Christmas. Brother Raper, the loved pastor, gave me a hearty welcome but was laid up in bed with a violent sick headache before night. Some of the brethren had been unfortunate in their experiences with another hospital and had therefore concluded it would be better for our Church to have none. The church had a standing order against any public collection. My visit was on the Sunday before Christmas, when the merchants were determined, and rightly so, to make the best of the season's opportunities, and all others were equally determined to get the best out of its festivities. To cap the climax of adverse conditions, on Monday, when I had to do what was to be done by personal solicitation, it rained so hard and so constantly as to greatly interfere with even the Christmas shopping.

It looked as if the Methodist Hospital were put out of business as far as Drew was concerned. Who could have blamed the good people had they said to me, "Not NOW, if you please?" I have had it said to me when there was far less reason for it.

But that is not the way with the big-hearted, generous people of Drew. When they were convinced that our Methodist Hospital is proposing to do the right thing in the right way their subscriptions were prompt and liberal.

Brother Fred Grittmann gave $1000 to build a room as a memorial to his little boy who was recently called up to the Father's home, and the other good people gave another thousand dollars that they may have a memorial room named for their church. Do you wonder that I said: "Good, yes; splendid for Drew?"

I was entertained most royally in the elegant home of Dr. and Mrs. Booth. No pastor ever had better friends than these, and certainly no one knows better how to make the wayfarer feel at home. I can never forget them and their dear children.

We could ask no more than that every charge be proportionately as appreciative and responsive to the cause of our METHODIST HOSPITAL as the royal people of Drew.

H. M. ELLIS, Secretary.

Dear Dr. Meek: I have been wondering why the above did not appear in the Advocate when, lo! it is returned to me marked, "Missent," though I fail to see why. Other mail of mine was lost at the same time. Please append this note. Memphis, Tenn.

EAST END MERIDIAN HEADS THE PROCESSION FOR 1914.

The wide awake and enthusiastic pastor of the East End Methodist Church, Rev. W. B. Hogg, observed Sunday, Jan. 25, as Veterans' Day, at which time he took the annual collection for our superannuates, thus leading the Conference in this good cause for the year 1914.

In this connection let me also say that the committee in charge of the Conference Endowment Fund has planned a forward movement for the year. In two years the Galloway Memorial Fund has amounted to $1000. This amount has been collected mainly from the smaller charges. Wherever the cause has been presented the people have heartily responded and commend the enterprise. All Mississippi Methodists feel it a sacred duty, not only to honor the memory of Bishop Galloway, but to make better provision for the worn-out preachers. We are sure that if the preachers will accede to the plans of the committee the fund will be speedily augmented and become a source of help to our veterans. We wish now to fix in the minds of the preachers two facts: First, Veterans' Day was fixed by the Annual Conference as the second Sunday in March, while the fourth Sunday in April was fixed as the Galloway Memorial Day. I cannot refrain from saying to the preachers that the Joint Board of Finance at its last annual session heartily commended the admirable way in which all came to the help of this fund.

WANTS A FEDERAL DIVORCE LAW.

Senator Ransdell, of Louisiana, on Feb. 4, introduced a resolution proposing an amendment to the Constitution forbidding absolute divorce, with right to re-marry, in the United States or in any place subject to its jurisdiction, directing the enactment of uniform marriage laws and statutes providing for separation, mensa et thoro, without permission to re-marry, and empowering Congress to enforce the proposed article by appropriate legislation. He read his proposed amendment and made some observations on the general subject, saying, in part:

"As appears from its reading, the purpose of this amendment, is to prevent the dissolution of a valid marriage for any cause, though separation from bed and board, without permission to re-marry, may be granted in proper cases.

"At this time I deem it necessary to make only a brief observation on the great evil of divorce. The remedy by constitutional prohibition is drastic, but the malady is so fatal that nothing short of it will prove efficacious.

"Practically everyone who has given the subject the slightest study, admits that divorce is one of the most serious problems confronting our republic.

"In the United States, divorce is spreading with alarming rapidity. It has permeated every walk of life, and is prevalent among every class of people. The total number of divorces granted in 1867 was 9937, or 27 per 100,000 population. Forty years later, in 1906, there were 72,062 divorces, or 86 per 100,000; thus in actual numbers there were more than seven times as many divorces granted in 1906 as in 1867, or allowing for the increased population, divorce had increased 319 per cent. To put it in another way, in 1867 there was one divorce for every 3666 people, while in 1906 there was one for every 1162.

"If divorces multiply at the same rate in the future as in the past—and there is every indication that they will increase faster—then before the middle of this century we will have annually in the United States 275 divorces per 100,000 population, or one divorce for every five marriages. In 1887 there was one divorce for every seventeen marriages, in 1906 one for every twelve, and at the same rate we will have in 1946 the appalling figures of one divorce for every five marriages.

"Our closest competitors in Europe are: Switzerland, with forty-one divorces annually per 100,000 population; Hungary, with thirty-five, and France with thirty-three, according to the statistics for 1910 and 1911, while Japan has 215 divorces to our 86.

"To make a most striking comparison, during 1901 the total number of divorces granted in the United States was more than twice as great as in all the rest of Christendom combined; yes, actually more than two times as many divorces among 75,000,000 Americans that year, as among the 400,000,000 souls of Europe and other Christian countries.

"England stands in bold contrast with this country. In 1911 she granted a total of only 655 divorces, or 1-1-2 per 100,000, while in 1906 the United States allowed 72,062 divorces, or 86 per 100,000. During the twenty years ending with 1906, Ireland had only nineteen divorces, or an average of less than one absolute divorce per year for her entire population of 4,500,000.

"If the United States were to write in the Constitution an amendment prohibiting absolute divorce, it would not be taking such a radical step as might at first be thought, but would be following a beaten path.

"Our own State of South Carolina—all honor to her—forbids divorce. It is absolutely prohibited in Italy, Spain and two-thirds of the population of Austria-Hungary, while the Latin-American countries of Mexico, Argentine Republic, Brazil, Peru, Chile and others have similar laws. A legal separation, however, without the right to re-marry, is recognized in all of these jurisdictions. In Canada, the important provinces of Quebec, Ontario, New Foundland, and the Northwest Territories, have no divorce laws, though divorce may be obtained in exceptional cases by special act of the Canadian Parliament. From 1867 to 1909—a period of forty-two years—those provinces had only 140 absolute divorces.

"It cannot be gainsaid that divorce destroys the home. And the home is the base and foundation of the State; hence we must stop divorce or ruin the State, which cannot continue to exist if its base is allowed to crumble and fall.

"While many excellent people are divorced and some of them make new homes, the inevitable trend of divorce is to break up many more homes than it builds up, and to materially reduce the number of children. When marriage is dissolved the true home ceases to exist; the parents and children are separated and the sweet ties that bind father and mother to their offsprings, and to each other, are forever broken.

"So long as the Romans of old looked upon marriage as sacred and held the sanctity of the home inviolate, their arms were invulnerable and Rome became mistress of the world. But with the accumulation of colossal wealth came great laxity of morals; marriage became a jest, and child-bearing a useless burden. The luxurious Romans lost all respect for female chastity; the heroic virtues of their early years were forgotten, and the empire fell, the victim of luxury and disregard for the binding effects of marriage. Shall not the United States take warning from Rome's example?

"I appeal to all patriotic citizens—good men of every creed and of no creed—to unite in urging the adoption of my amendment, which has for its object the preservation of the home, ay, the preservation of the republic—home, which gave us our earliest and best lessons in morality; home, where we were taught to love, honor and obey our parents, and all lawful superiors; home, where we received our first ideas of government, a little State in which our fond parents were the rulers, and we, their children, were willing subjects; home, the greatest protection from anarchy, the strongest defense against Socialism, and the chief bulwark of society; home, the maker of good citizens, and the model on which every wise government is founded."

PIONEERING ALONG THE LOWER COAST.

To the south and east of New Orleans on both banks of the Mississippi River and extending to the Gulf of Mexico is what is called, on the map, Plaquemines Parish, but what is more commonly known as the Lower Coast. The population of Plaquemines Parish is something more than 12,000. During the last fifteen years, with the single exception of a point called Daisy, the whole parish has been neglected by all Protestant Churches. For ten years previous to that our own Church maintained a small work there. Storms, the accidental death of one of the ministers sent there, and the desperate poverty of the people combined to discourage our workers and all effort to redeem these people was abandoned. During the time work was done there, many places were untouched and little permanent work was done anywhere.

During the time our preachers labored there one mistake was practiced, and the fruit of that one mistake is the largest obstacle yet to be overcome before a permanent work can be done. I say the mistake was practiced, and that is exactly what I mean, for it was made over and over again. The people are mostly of Roman Catholic extraction, and that Church is the only one that has operated there to any extent. The Romish Church is shrewd in its methods of money raising and many of its members deeply resent the money-grasping spirit of some priests. Methodist ministers have joined them in resenting this money-grabbing spirit and have left the impression that Protestant Churches are entirely free from the money-getting habit. The result is that the people think the Methodist Church does not need money and they are sitting there waiting for preachers with their salaries paid to come in and minister to them. Our missionaries among the disgruntled Romanists should be bold to teach that it takes money to run our Church and all other Churches. The minister may receive 500 members and appear to have done a monumental work, but if these 500 members will not support a pastor the field will be a perpetual missionary problem.

I made a trip to various points where the population is densest during the first week in January. On that trip I studied conditions and made acquaintances. The first week in February I returned and extended the lines of my investigations and called the people together and preached to them every chance I had. On my last trip I traveled 230 miles by water and rail, walked 25 miles, visited in 25 homes, preached seven sermons, had 312 people, all told, in my audiences, and baptized one infant. I was the first Protestant minister that ever visited Burrwood, a town of 450 people. I delivered the first sermon at Pt. Pleasant that had been delivered there by a regular minister in 58 years. I found one community where within the bounds of the entire school district there is but one property owner who can read and write, and where I preached to four generations of the same family, all of them illiterates. Had I the space I might give details of my trip, but it is sufficient to say that preaching along the Lower Coast is near akin to the kind of work the pioneer preachers of Methodism did. I traveled 32 miles through the passes in a small motor boat; slept alone in an empty house because I was among strangers who did not take me in; spent another night in the only house on an island with an old trapper whom I did not know, and walked 14 miles in order to preach at 11 o'clock on Sunday morning.

There are many needy fields in Louisiana, and doubtless others could tell of experiences very similar to these of mine, but I thank God that he has made it possible for me to reach the Lower Coast and tell these people the story of redeeming love. I returned from Conference at Crowley and found my McDonoghville people in a very receptive mood. I told my official members that I longed to visit the Lower Coast regularly and each one joined me in praying that a way might be made for me to go. I made my first trip and gave a report to my congregation. All expressed themselves as willing to grant me a week out of each month to open the Lower Coast Mission, on condition that I would arrange to have my pulpit supplied during my absence. Dr. J. M. Henry, our presiding elder, agreed to help in supplying my pulpit, so there remained just one obstacle to my doing the work at hand, and that was the expense. It was too much to ask of the McDonoghville people, that they should allow me to leave them one fourth of the time and also assume the financial responsibility of opening the work. But this problem was not long unsolved. Dr. F. R. Hill, Jr., who has for some time been deeply interested in the conditions that prevail along the Lower Coast, presented the matter to the Rayne Memorial congregation and the result was that his quarterly conference adopted the Lower Coast Mission as its child. We are now free to work.

Among the things mapped out to be done during this year are the following: We hope to organize four Sunday schools, re-organize the church at Daisy, repair the church building at Daisy, a task that will cost about $150; solicit funds for the payment of a preacher in that section next year for full time; purchase a motor boat so that it will be on hand for the first regular pastor, and lead as many souls to a saving knowledge of Christ Jesus as possible.

Those who read this article may wish to have some part in this work. If so, all can pray for the success of it and particularly that we may reap a rich harvest of souls for the Master; a real generous hearted man might present to the mission a motor boat and name it for a loved one, or some adult class in a Sunday school might perpetuate its name along the Lower Coast by presenting the mission with a boat. The boat will cost from $175 to $250.

THE NEW LEAF.

He came to my desk with quivering lip,
The task undone,
"Dear Teacher, I want a new leaf," he said
"I've spoiled this one."
In place of the leaf all stained and blotted,
I gave him a new one, clean, unspotted,
And into his sad eyes smiled:
"Do better now, my child."

I went to the Throne with quivering heart,
The Old Year done.
"Dear Father, hast thou a new leaf for me?
I've spoiled this one."
He took the old leaf, stained and blotted,
And gave me a new one, clean, unspotted,
And into my sad heart smiled:
"Do better now, my child."

NOT GIVING UP.

Among some skaters was a boy so small and so evidently a beginner that his frequent mishaps awakened the pity of a tender-hearted, if not wise, spectator.

"Sonny, you are getting all bumped up," she said. "I wouldn't stay on the ice and keep falling down so; I'd just come off and watch the others."

The tears of the last downfall were still rolling over the rosy cheeks, but the child looked from his adviser to the shining steel on his feet and answered, half-indignantly:

"I didn't get some new skates to give up with; I got 'em to learn how with."

Life's hard tasks are never sent for us "to give up with;" they are always intended to awaken strength, skill and courage in learning how to master them.—Western Christian Advocate.

A RICH LITTLE GIRL.

"Mother," asked Lutie, "may I have two little apples instead of a big one in my luncheon to-day?"

"I'm sorry, dear, but there is only one big apple left. I used the rest for pies yesterday and kept this out for you."

Lutie went into the pantry and inspected the apple thoughtfully. Her face cleared. "This one will be all right, mother, it is such a big one! Are apples very dear, mother?"

"Why, rather; at this season; but there will always be as many as my little girl wants to eat."

"Oh, yes, I know that; but there is a girl in our class who never has an apple in her luncheon. There are four girls at their house and three boys, so it takes a lot of bread. Boys eat so much bread. She says her mother has to bake bread every other day. So if apples are dear I suppose that is why she never has one, and I thought I should like to give her one. This is so big I can give her half. You see, if it was a small one she wouldn't want to take half of it, for fear I might not have enough."

"I shall order more to-day, so there will be plenty in the morning," said mother. Lutie laughed: "I want to tell you such a funny thing, mother. You know I have four gingham school dresses, but where there are four girls that makes only one apiece; so Mary's mother washes theirs out Saturday morning and irons them Saturday afternoon. They have some old dresses they wear at home. She must be a very smart woman," said Lutie, admiringly.

Mother laughed, too. "Very clever, indeed. Did Mary tell you that?"

"Yes, she said she knew we would notice that she always wore the same dress, and she was afraid we would think it never was washed."

"You might put in another piece of pie or cake for her, too," said mother, but Lutie shook her head.

"I think I'd better not do that," she said. "She mightn't like it. At school we don't give each other pie or cake or bread, as if we were poor folks, but candy and apples—we all give each other those," she explained.

"So Mary isn't poor folks?" asked mother.

"Why, Mother Ralston!" exclaimed Lutie, with a shocked look. "Mary Dalton poor folks? I should say not. She is the head girl in our room. She sits in the back seat in the first row and takes care of the copybooks and notebooks. She is head of our class, and last month she had the highest grade in our school—the whole school, mother. She never whispers, nor plays in school, and we hardly ever do, either because we are afraid Mary might see us. I'd almost rather the teacher would see me whisper than Mary. You see, mother, we have always had Mary. She is so good and sweet that everybody loves her."

"I see," said mother. "I think she is a very rich little girl."

"Yes, indeed!" cried Lutie.—Mary M. Parks, in Boys and Girls.

THE INFLUENCE OF A CHRISTIAN HOME.

A wealthy and careless young man, in one of our Eastern towns, married a girl who was a Christian and loyal to her Church duties. He did not care to go to church, but she went regularly. The church was neither large nor flourishing, and the young husband rather laughed at her devotion. Time went on, and a little family of children grew around them. The mother taught the Bible to them, and on Sunday afternoons she would gather them in her room and hold a home Sunday school.

Her husband would come in and lie on the sofa, to listen to the hymns the children learned and sang. It came to be his custom to be present in this way every Sunday. He was a very profane man, by habit more than by fixed intention, and he had never taken any interest in religion. But, he found himself learning with the children, from his wife's gentle, sincere teaching of the gospel. The old, old story, ever new and vital, reached his soul. He became a Christian, and a thoroughly changed man.

No profane word was ever heard to cross his lips after his conversion. Those who knew him best marveled at his control. He would close his lips tightly, flush—but never let a profane word slip. He was always in his place in church, ready to aid generously in any work.

To-day, in that town, a large and beautiful church, his gift, stands as a witness to his consecration of his possessions to the cause of Christ. In it are two tablets, one to his memory, and the other—more important yet, all the people feel—to the gentle wife whose home pupil he was. No preacher or evangelist converted him. The church could not reach him. But she made home religion so lovely, and proved its power and truth so deeply to him, that she won him heart and soul to follow her Savior and his. Christianity is powerful anywhere but in the home it is irresistible. The Christian who forgets this—and some do—is forgetting the truest place of power.—Southern Christian Advocate.

"ASLEEP ON OUR JOBS."

While we Christians soundly are sleeping;
As a silent thief in the night,
The devil is robbing God's kingdom
With all his main and might.

He is winning the souls of our fellows
Whom Jesus, the Christ came to save
And suffered and bled on Calvary—
His life on the cross freely gave.

So awake and hasten, my brothers:
For the devil steadily robs,
While many of us so-called Christians
Are sound asleep on our jobs.

Asleep on our jobs, my comrades!
And shall we our duty thus shirk?
Nay, we must lose not a moment
But awake and to work! To work!

ATTENTION! MEALS AT MARDI GRAS TIME!

Carnival visitors to New Orleans will find good meals, served by the Woman's Missionary Society of the First Methodist Church, South, at their Church, 1108 St. Charles Ave., in the second block above Lee Circle. They will serve a la carte, three meals each day, on Monday, February 23, and on Tuesday, Mardi Gras day, February 24. All parades pass the Church, and it is convenient to the boarding houses and Canal Street. All Methodists and strangers will be welcome to the Church, to the meals, and to the Sunday services on February 22.

Telephone Always on Guard

There is never a moment, day or night, when your Bell Telephone is not a protection.

In the busy hours of the day and the silent watches of the night, the switchboard operator is always ready to answer a call.

The telephone is as much a part of the protective system of each community as the police and fire departments.

There's always a feeling of security in the knowledge that close at hand is the means of calling aid quickly when you most need it.

More than 70,000 cities and towns are protected day and night by the Bell Telephone system; 7,500,000 Bell telephones are on guard. In thousands of rural communities it is the chief reliance in emergencies and times of danger.

Editorial

MR. CARNEGIE'S LATEST DONATION.

A press dispatch from New York, bearing date of February 10, reads as follows:

"Andrew Carnegie to-day gave $2,000,000 to be used through the Churches for the promotion of international peace. The income of the fund, about $100,000 a year, will be expended by a board of 26 trustees representing all the leading religious denominations in the United States. This gift is in addition to the $10,000,000 foundation established by Mr. Carnegie on Dec. 14, 1910. The income will be used to organize the moral power of the Churches on critical international questions, to circulate peace literature among the clergy and to bring about the annual observance of a 'Peace Sunday.' Conferences in America and Europe will be called to discuss the promotion of peace. When the leading nations abolish war, the trustees may devote the income to other philanthropic uses."

Not having seen the conditions of this gift of Mr. Carnegie stated or the plan of operating it fully indicated, we are not in a position to discuss this matter with much definiteness. We will not say that Mr. Carnegie's efforts in behalf of international peace have not been productive of some good, but the fact remains that the bloodiest conflicts within nearly a half century have taken place since the establishment of the arbitration tribunal at the Hague, and that the great nations are going steadily on increasing their armaments. In our opinion the banishment of war from the earth can never be brought about by a mere literary propaganda against its evils, aided by the arts of diplomacy. So long as gross wrongs are perpetrated and peoples suffer oppression, they may be expected to rise up and seek to redress their grievances by force. When thus aroused, the question of financial gain or loss is not apt to weigh much, and when honor has been wounded or great principles are at stake it is difficult to induce men to accept a settlement coolly arranged for them by others.

We do not, however, take a despairing view of the future, so far as doing away with strife is concerned; but if this glorious result is ever to be consummated, it must be done by the operation of forces that can regenerate human nature and reconstruct the order of society. A reign of concord can only follow in the wake of a reign of justice and righteousness. Mr. Carnegie himself is a product and defender of the very conditions which hinder the coming of the day of the universal brotherhood of man. He talks of good will among men, while standing for a system of monopoly that crushes and destroys them, and while using the wealth that they have largely created to glorify himself. He preaches of peace, while rejecting the Prince of Peace, and extols the fruits of Christianity while building monuments to infidels, as he did in the case of the noted free-thinker Moncure D. Conway.

We think that the Churches of Christ should consider carefully what is involved before they enter into an alliance with this agnostic multimillionaire who, in his officious arrogance, seems to think that he can sneer at, and insult, and strike them whenever he pleases, and then blind them with the glitter of gold and patronize and use them as he sees fit. There are many more valuable things in this world than money, and among them are self-respect, high ideals, and fidelity in the face of alluring temptation. Well may the disciples of Jesus beware of the enemies of their Lord when they come bearing gifts. Already, in our humble judgment, we have been injured by what has come to us from such sources far more than most of us yet realize. So subtle are some evil influences that it takes decades to disclose their blighting and undermining effects. We are fully aware that many will not agree with us in the sentiments that we have here expressed, but we are quite willing to submit the issue to the final arbitrament of the future.

We have no right to dictate to Mr. Carnegie what use he shall make of his means, and we have no desire to try to do so; but it is our firm conviction that if he really wishes to promote friendship among the nations and to sheathe the sword and hush the cannon's roar, he would accomplish more in that direction by aiding the Churches in their great fundamental work of bringing the millions of mankind to Christ and imbuing them with his spirit, than he can ever do by seeking to drive them from the field of education in which alone they can equip their forces and endeavoring to divert their attention to various secular and humanitarian tasks that are of a superficial character.

We suppose that Mr. Carnegie's $2,000,000 offer will very likely purchase the "Peace Sunday," which he desires, and that in some churches his name will occupy a larger place in the services on that day than that of the great Galilean; but we are quite willing to leave to others the glory of entering into such a compact with him. For our part, we are utterly weary of seeing our pulpits secularized by intruding into them at the regular preaching hours the current external reforms of the age. We do not believe that the great vital themes of the Gospel should be sidetracked for any other cause, no matter how insistent may be its advocates. There are plenty of other times when such interests can be represented.

MORE CHAPLAINS FOR THE NAVY.

The Methodist Recorder (Pittsburgh, Penn.) says: "It is said that, while the Navy itself has increased six-fold since 1841, the number of chaplains remains the same as at that date. Representative Farr, of Pennsylvania, has now introduced a bill in Congress providing at least one chaplain to every thousand men in the Navy. The bill proposes to give the rank of captain to ten per cent of these chaplains, that of lieutenant-commander to 30 per cent, while the remainder are to rank as lieutenants. The pay of the chaplains would be the same as that of other officers of the corresponding rank." We think that beyond any question the Government ought to increase the force of chaplains in our Navy at the earliest moment possible. The present situation is a positive reproach to us; especially so when the fact is considered that we are the richest Nation that the world has ever known. Why not write your Congressman a few lines on this subject?

THE DOOR KEPT OPEN.

An effort on the part of the Mississippi Bar Association to induce the Legislature of that State to require higher legal and literary qualification in order to obtain license to practice law met with defeat a few days since. The fight against the proposal was led by Senator W. K. McLaurin of Warren County, who pleaded eloquently in favor of keeping the door of opportunity open to the poor boys of the commonwealth. We most heartily endorse his position. There is a decided tendency upon the part of the members of nearly all the learned professions to set up a sort of aristocracy in them. Of course, in the case of physicians and pharmacists who have to deal with the preservation of human life at critical times the State does right to insist upon seeing that they are fully competent; but in the case of lawyers and men engaged in most of the other callings the conditions are different, and it is well enough to let nature's rule, "the survival of the fittest," operate.

THE SITUATION AT MILLSAPS COLLEGE

The destruction by fire of the Main Building at Millsaps College on the evening of January 28, brings that institution face to face with a serious situation. As Bishop Murrah said in his admirable appeal appearing in last week's issue of the Advocate, the chapel, the President's office, the halls of the Literary Societies and the Y. M. C. A., and the classrooms of a majority of the Professors are all gone. The work of the remaining part of the session will have to be done in cramped and inadequate quarters. By every token, a new not to be a difficult task. They probably number not less than 125,000, and they have in their possession a large share of the wealth of the State. Seventy-five cents a member would more than bring the needed sum.

Surely we will not balk and delay in carrying forward this urgently needed enterprise. The worth of Millsaps College to Mississippi Methodism, and indeed to the whole State, is beyond all calculation. What it has done for our ministry within the bounds of that commonwealth has already given the Church, in all the departments of building to take the place of the old one should be erected and made ready for occupancy by the opening of the next session. Otherwise the interests of the College are liable to be greatly retarded. If a new structure of adequate proportions is to be secured in time for use next fall, not a moment is to be lost. Every friend of the institution needs to bestir himself at once and lend all the assistance in his power.

We heartily concur in the view that the Methodists of Mississippi should take advantage of this opportunity to construct upon the Millsaps campus a great central building which, both in its appointments and appearance, will measure up to every requirement for at least a half century. To do this, not less than $100,000 will be needed. This means that our people in Mississippi, in order to consummate this achievement, must add $75,000 to the $25,000 of insurance. This ought its work, a tremendous uplift. And in it our hopes are largely centered for the future. Nothing would so much weaken us as to allow it to decline, or to permit it to fail to keep step with the march of progress in the coming years.

The great body of our people in Mississippi have done comparatively little for this splendid institution. It has largely been built up and equipped through the noble generosity of Major Millsaps. It is high time that the rank and file of our membership were doing something to show their appreciation of what this large-hearted philanthropist has done for the Methodism of their State, and it is to be earnestly hoped that the campaign for funds for our educational work that was authorized by the Mississippi Conferences at their late sessions, and which will soon be under way, will meet a generous response upon their part.

PERSONALS AND OTHER NOTES.

Rev. W. M. McIntosh, of Iuka, Miss., is evangelizing in Oklahoma, and as usual is meeting with much success.

Rev. R. S. Walton, of Bunkie, La., has our thanks for a club of 6 subscribers. He reports everything to be encouraging in his field.

Rev. W. J. Newsom was given a hearty welcome by the people of Bonita, La., who may always be counted upon to be mindful of their pastor. The work has opened well in that charge.

Miss Elizabeth Kilpatrick, one of the Sunday School Field Secretaries of the North Mississippi Conference, was scheduled to address the Men's Bible Classes of Little Rock, Ark., at the Winfield Memorial Church on February 17.

Rev. H. W. Bowman, presiding elder of the Baton Rouge District, says: "Brother W. S. Holmes, the Lay Leader of our Conference, is a force for righteousness, and he is in demand constantly. His heart, soul, and life are in the cause of the Church."

The Executive Committee of the Woman's Missionary Society of the North Mississippi Conference met at Holly Springs a few days since and selected Aberdeen as the place and June 11-16 as the time for the annual meeting of the Conference organization.

Brother Ben Garrett, of Jonesboro, who has been taking the Advocate for 35 years, has favored us with a renewal of his subscription, accompanied by some kindly words of commendation. He is a traveling man, but states that he has our paper to follow him, and that he never misses reading a copy.

We are informed that Bishop Murrah has recovered sufficiently from his late attack of illness to be up in his room, but that he is not yet able to be out. The Bishop is due to preach the opening sermon in our beautiful church at Batesville, Ark., where Rev. T. Y. Ramsey is pastor, on Sunday, March 1.

From Grand Cane, La., Rev. J. C. Price writes: "I have been given a cordial reception and am among a fine people. The field is an inviting one and I hope to see the work go forward along all lines." Brother Price has our hearty thanks for a club of 6 subscribers to the Advocate sent in a few days since.

Rev. W. F. Rogers, of Sallis, Miss., says: "My work is moving on hopefully. We have repaired one church since Conference, having given it a new roof and in part new walls. Our Ladies' Aid Society is active and doing a good work. The Sunday school at Sallis is steadily increasing both in interest and attendance."

Of his charge—Lake Cormorant and Hines (North Mississippi)—Rev. A. F. Moore writes: "This is a promising field, but there is plenty of hard work to do. We have a loyal and generous people to serve and we are confidently expecting another successful year." Brother Moore's letter brought us a club of 5 subscriptions.

At a meeting of the Executive Committee of the Board of Trustees of Millsaps College, held in Jackson, Miss., last week, a Building Committee was elected and ordered to proceed to consider the question of plans for a new structure to take the place of the old main building recently destroyed by fire.

Rev. C. H. Strait, of Rocky Springs, Miss., is presenting the claims of the Advocate in his rounds among his people with gratifying success. He states that he is well pleased with his new work, and that he is hopeful of accomplishing some substantial results in the Master's service this year.

Rev. R. H. Bamburg, of Calhoun, La., writes optimistically of the way things are progressing in his large parish. The attendance upon public worship is good, and encouraging signs are not wanting. Brother Bamburg is mindful of the interests of the Conference organ, and favored us with a nice list of subscribers a few days since.

One in a position to know writes that Rev. L. C. Wilson is in fine favor with his people at Mer Rouge and Oak Ridge, which together form one of the choice charges of the Louisiana Conference. Both the pastor and the members of the church are possessed of a spirit of hopefulness and are looking forward to a year of activity and progress.

The Executive Committee of the Mississippi Conference Board of Church Extension will be held in Newton, Miss., March 17, 1914. All applications to the General Board of Church Extension for aid for churches and parsonages within the bounds of the Mississippi Conference will need to be passed upon by this Committee. A fuller statement concerning this meeting will appear next week.

Last week, in referring to Brother John P. Bennett, of Yazoo City, who has been appointed Agent for the Mississippi Methodist Orphanage within the bounds of the Jackson District, the title "Rev."

was inadvertently given him. Brother Bennett is not a minister, but a highly esteemed and useful layman. We discovered the mistake before the paper was scarcely off the press, and immediately wrote Brother Bennett a note of explanation.

Rev. W. N. Duncan, our pastor at Holly Springs, Miss., brought us under obligations to him for a club of six subscriptions, forwarded on the 13th inst. From several sources we have learned that Brother Duncan has made a most favorable impression in his new field of labor, and that all the indications point to a fruitful year. He is one of the growing young men of the North Mississippi Conference.

A friend sends us the following note concerning the work at Kentwood, La.: "Rev. P. O. Lowrey, after three years of constant going to promote the Sunday school interests of the Conference, is still traveling. He is covering the ground in his pastorate, doing an intensive work of cultivation that will doubtless soon yield gracious results. The recent social meeting that he had to quicken the interest in the work of the Sunday school was both enjoyable and profitable."

Rev. H. E. Carter, of Leakesville, Miss., writes: "Our work is moving on nicely. I heard one of my members say yesterday that the interests of the Church here are looking up and are in better shape than they have been for some time. Of course, it pleased me to hear his encouraging estimate of the situation." Brother Carter made his good letter all the more acceptable by enclosing in it 1 new and 4 renewal subscriptions to the Advocate, with a check to correspond.

After fifteen years of highly creditable service with the New Orleans Picayune, Brother H. H. Ahrens has accepted a position on the staff of the Times-Democrat. We congratulate the latter journal upon having secured this valuable addition to its editorial force. Brother Ahrens is a gifted writer and one of the best known newspaper men in this section. There is no daily in the South that moves upon a higher plane than the Times-Democrat, and it deserves a large circulation.

We are indebted to the following friends, to whom acknowledgment has not been made elsewhere, for two or more subscriptions sent in within the past few days: Rev. J. B. King, Vaughan, Miss., 3; Rev. J. C. Chambers, Collins, Miss., 5; Rev. R. P. Goar, Pittsboro, Miss., 2; Rev. E. J. Coker, Mayersville, Miss., 5; Rev. C. T. Floyd, Abbeville, Miss., 8; Mrs. A. B. Barry, Pachuta, Miss., 6; Rev. J. H. Moore, Bay Springs, Miss., 5; Rev. J. D. Simpson, Pickens, Miss., 6.

Rev. J. A. Bowen writes us as follows from Enterprise, Fla.: "I have enjoyed the Bible Conference here for 18 days. It was a gratifying success in every way. I have assisted in some good meetings in Florida this winter. My health is good, and I expect to return to Birmingham early in March and take up my work in Alabama, Mississippi and other States. My address is 3338 Highland Avenue, Birmingham, Ala., and correspondence addressed to me there will reach me promptly."

Rev. C. A. Battle preached at the Louisiana Avenue Methodist Church last Sunday at 11 a.m., and Brother H. H. Ahrens discoursed at the Felicity Street Church at the same hour. Rev. J. L. Sutton, the Louisiana Avenue pastor, by special request occupied the pulpit of one of the colored congregations of the Methodist Episcopal Church at the morning service, and it was his absence from his charge that pressed Brother Ahrens into service and carried Brother Battle to Louisiana Avenue.

Our hat is off to Rev. H. M. Young, of Coahoma, Miss., who gave us on the 13th inst. 1 renewal and 5 new subscriptions. Brother Young has for years been a true and faithful friend of the Advocate. Of his work, he says: "Our church at Coahoma has since Conference been dressed in a new coat of white paint which adds much to its appearance, and which attests the interest of this good people. We enter upon our fourth year here with splendid prospects for a good rounding out of our quadrennium."

We have on our table a copy of the Journal of the One-Hundredth Session of the Mississippi Annual Conference, edited by Dr. A. F. Watkins and Rev. G. S. Harmon. The publication is up to the very highest standard in every respect, and is fittingly adorned with a fine picture of the lamented Bishop Charles B. Galloway, who was for many years a member of this historic Conference. There is no man in the connection who is a more complete master of the secretarial art than Dr. Watkins.

Rev. T. H. Morris, our popular pastor at Mansfield, La., was in New Orleans on Tuesday, Feb. 13, and favored our office with a call. He spoke encouragingly of the work of his pastorate, and commended in enthusiastic terms the service which President R. E. Bobbitt is rendering at Mansfield College, and Dr. R. H. Wynn is rendering at Centenary. Brother Morris was en route to Lake Charles to attend for a day or two the reval meeting which Rev. T. B. Price, of Siloam Springs, Ark., was engaged in conducting at that place. Mr. Price is due to start a series of evangelistic services at Mansfield on Feb. 25.

In a business note to the Advocate office, Rev. J. V. Bennett, of Monticello, Miss., adds: "We are in sorrow in our home. Our little boy, 16 months old, has been very sick for about ten days and his condition is still serious. We have a trained nurse from Jackson and are doing our best to save the little fellow's life. We need the prayers of our friends." We greatly regret to know of the illness of Brother Bennett's little son and we deeply sympathize with the anxious parents at this trying time. Let the brethren remember them at the throne of grace.

Through the courtesy of Mr. John B. Kent, Secretary of the Chamber of Commerce of Lake Charles, La., we have received an invitation to attend the All Southern Highway Convention which is to be held in Lake Charles, April 7 and 8. The object of this meeting is to organize for the construction of a first-class road from Atlanta, Ga., or Jacksonville, Fla., by the way of Mobile, New Orleans, Lake Charles, Beaumont, Houston, San Antonio, El Paso, and on to San Diego, Cal. It scarcely needs to be said that such a highway would be a great blessing to the section of country through which it would pass.

Rev. N. B. Harmon, as will be seen elsewhere in this issue of the Advocate, reports a great time in Yazoo City, Miss., on Sunday, Feb. 8, when his pulpit was filled both in the morning and evening by Bishop J. H. McCoy, of Birmingham, Ala. An effort was made to provide for the liquidation of the indebtedness on our house of worship in the Yazoo County Capital, with gratifying success. Brother Harmon and Rev. Paul D. Hardin, presiding elder of the Jackson District, are following up the Bishop's effective appeal by personal work and the indications are that funds sufficient to free our property entirely from the incumbrance upon it will be secured.

Rev. W. W. Holmes, of Ruston, La., writes: "I am more and more delighted with Ruston. We have had a most excellent beginning of the work of the new year. The pastor's salary was raised from $1800 to $2000, and it is paid at the bank on the first day of each month. We have already made a good start on the Conference collections. We have had quite a number of additions to the membership of the Church since Conference: eighteen were received on Sunday, Feb. 1, eight of them on profession of faith. Our attendance at Sunday school has been well above the 400 mark for the entire month of January, and our congregations are taxing the seating capacity of our church."

After spending several days in New Orleans, Dr. Milton S. Terry, of Evanston, Illinois, left for Los Angeles, Calif., last Monday. Dr. Terry has been connected with the Garrett Biblical Institute for thirty years, holding at present the Chair of Christian Doctrine and Comparative Religions. For the first ten years of his connection with this institution he was the Professor of Hebrew and Old Testament Exegesis. As an appreciation of the service which Dr. Terry has rendered, the trustees of the Garrett Biblical Institute have voted him an eight months' vacation on full pay. This distinguished scholar called three times at our office while in the Crescent City, and we greatly enjoyed our brief season of fellowship with him.

In a personal note to the Editor, Brother J. H. Johnson, an esteemed layman in our church at Clarksdale, Miss., says: "I am glad to state to you that Brother Lagrone has made an excellent start in his work here. We have had good congregations since the first of the year and the people seem to like him very much. The Sunday school is improving, the attendance being considerably over that of last year. It has assumed the support of a missionary in the foreign field, and for that purpose $105 was raised last Sunday morning (Feb. 8). Brother Lagrone has been talking up the new church enterprise, and two members have pledged him $2,000 each on a $30,000 building. I think that the prospect is very good for this movement to materialize during the year. We have made a good beginning with the regular finances of the charge." Clarksdale is most fortunate in having the services of Brother Lagrone. He is an able preacher and few can equal him in the work of the pastorate.

SWEETEST PIANO OF ALL.

It is the consensus of opinion of the members of the New Orleans Christian Advocate Piano Club that the tone of the Ludden & Bates Pianos and Player-pianos surpasses all others in sweetness, brilliancy and carrying power. Their tone possesses none of that harshness and metallic quality which is so often found even in instruments of highest price. The makers of the Ludden & Bates pianos have taken as their standard "The Singing Quality of the Human Voice," and have approached that standard with wonderful accuracy. The result is a sympathetic tone of exquisite sweetness and purity which is particularly appreciated by singers and by those who enjoy vocal music. As an accompaniment for the voice, the Ludden & Bates pianos and Player-pianos are supreme.

Such are the instruments that have been selected by the Advocate Piano Club. If your home needs a piano or self-player piano, or if you have an old instrument which you would like to exchange for a new one, write for your copy of the Club's handsomely illustrated catalogue. You will be surprised and delighted with the big saving in price, the convenient terms and the protective guarantees which the Club provides. On January 25, 1914, WESLEY MILLER died at the hospital at Hattiesburg, Miss. His body was carried home and placed in the old Adams Cemetery. Brother Miller loved the Methodist Church, South, of which he had been a member for some time. While I had been his pastor for a little more than a year I had not known him as well as I should have liked, as he has been teaching. He leaves behind a wife and two little boys, a father, a mother, three brothers, and four sisters. May God make himself, indeed, a father to the fatherless and a husband to the widow in this case!
A. H. STEELE, Pastor.

On January 5, 1914, the death angel visited the home of Mr. Oscar and Mrs. May Dace and plucked the rose—little MARY V., their only daughter. Little Mary was a sufferer nearly all her life, and God in his wisdom saw fit to carry her home where suffering is no more. We laid her little body in the grave, while her spirit took its flight to the God who gave it. She will be missed in the home, but Heaven will be brighter to her father and mother because of her presence there. May God comfort them in their loneliness! She leaves a father, a mother, three brothers and a host of loved ones. May they all strive to meet her in Heaven!
A. H. STEELE.

Mrs. MARY VIRGINIA RAWLS LEE was born August 5, 1860, in Natchez, Miss. She was happily married to F. W. Lee in 1880. She passed from her earthly toils to the Father of spirits on January 27, 1914. She was the mother of ten children, nine living, all grown but two. To the children she was a faithful mother. Well do they realize that their best friend is gone. Sister Lee was a member of the M. E. Church, South, for sixteen or seventeen years. She loved her Church and her Lord. Her opportunities did not enable her to manifest this love as she would have liked. She was charitable to the poor and kind to the sick. May her life be an unending call to her children to hasten to give their lives in service to their mother's Lord and Savior. May the comfort that he, alone, can give console the bereaved husband and children. "Blessed are the dead that die in the Lord."
H. W. LEDBETTER, Pastor.

THOMAS JAMES FITZGERALD was born at, what is now, Blond, La., Oct. 15, 1849. His father and mother came to America, from Ireland, in 1848 and settled in St. Tammany Parish. Thomas James, the subject of this sketch, was the oldest child, and was named for his father. He was raised on the farm and devoted his life to that work. He was married to Elizabeth Barker on April 4, 1874. Of this union were born six boys and four girls—two of the girls died in early life, the remainder are left to mourn their loss. He was a very earnest and devoted Christian, a member of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, and was very attentive to its ordinances. He was the superintendent of my Sunday school at Fitzgerald Chapel. I never went to my appointment at that place that I did not see "uncle Tommie," as everybody knew him, in his place. He was taken sick on Thanksgiving day, with typhoid fever, and after lingering forty days, he quietly fell on sleep on January 3, 1914. He leaves behind to mourn his going, a wife, eight children, a brother, two sisters, and a host of friends. May the Lord bless you, brother, sister, wife, children and friends, and help you to live so as to be a blessing to him.

TIMOTHY V. PETERS.

RESOLUTION OF APPRECIATION.

A Tribute to John Hoyt Veazey by his Sunday School Class of the Methodist Sunday School in Coldwater, Miss., February 8, 1914.

The loss of a young life that has so much of promise to the home circle, the church and the community, is confessedly beyond all earthly computation. We bankrupt language in seeking a figure or metaphor that will adequately represent or appreciably determine its value. The heart feels its loss, and the language of the human heart is too deep and full to find fit expression in human speech of its felt loss. The heart feels more than the tongue or pen can tell. When the sun of life goes down, life's golden day-dream ends in the shadows of earth's evening twilight and darkest night, but the to-morrow is gilded with the halo of a glorious dawn whose rising sun shall know no setting. Our genial young comrade, our sweet-spirited friend, our devoted Sunday school classmate, John Hoyt Veazey left us on January 29, 1914. We mourn his going away, but the beautiful lessons of truth and wisdom gleaned from the pages of the Sacred Oracle, Sunday after Sunday in our class, will no doubt be his theme in the eternal world, and some day we shall, with him, take up our class work under the inspiration of the great Teacher.

Be it resolved that a copy of this paper be spread upon the minutes of our Sunday school, and a copy furnished the family.

Respectfully submitted.

J. L. Christy, J. T. Callicott, J. D. Turley, Committee.

IN MEMORY OF MRS. H. H. NABORS.

I wish in this communication to record some words of appreciation of Mrs. Annie Maie Gordin Nabors, wife of Brother H. H. Nabors, mayor of Itta Bena, Miss. I have not at hand the data usually given in an obituary; but there were so many good, beautiful, and true things in her Christly life that space in the Advocate will not allow even the mention of them all. Sister Nabors possessed one of the most gentle, delicate, yet deeply loyal, Christian personalities I ever knew. Christ seemed so "formed within her" that all the dross was consumed; the little frailties so often seen even in the best people seemed to be almost wholly lacking in her. Her work in the church at Itta Bena was constant and efficient. She was a teacher in the Sunday school, president of the Woman's Missionary Society, and always an attendant upon prayer meeting. She went in and out before the town of Itta Bena as one of those mighty forces for good without which this earth would indeed be a barren waste. She was taken sick with something like grippe the latter part of December, but the skillful care of the best of doctors, the love and worship of her faithful and loving husband, and the sympathy and prayers of the whole town could not keep her from her reward. A crown of glory awaited her up yonder. And this I know: Itta Bena will never forget the touch of her sweet, gentle spirit, and the influence of such a life can never die.

Tidings From the Field

Mathiston, Miss.

The Matbiston Circuit and vicinity were honored on Jan. 25 and 26, by having with them Rev. V. C. Curtis and Miss Kilpatrick who held at Mathiston, their first joint Sunday School Rally. The program was finely arranged. The subjects were all of vital importance, and each was ably discussed. Brother Curtis preached two sermons inspiring to both the young and old. His close observation, study, and experience are shown in his broad discussion of general topics. Miss Kilpatrick's lectures were highly appreciated by all. Her thorough equipment is demonstrated in every sentence. She showed plainly how to conduct a Sunday school, both organically and spiritually. Miss Willingham, the successful Adult Bible teacher, of Eupora, made several impressive talks. Her thoughts were well expressed and went straight to the heart. Mr. Jack Wilson gave two fine lectures—one on "Who Touched Me?" and the other on "The Ragtime Women." Those who are so fortunate as to have such a program rendered in their community will reap a large harvest. We feel greatly profited by having had these workers with us.—E. D. Simpson, P. C.

Yazoo City, Miss.

Dear Dr. Meek: Sunday, February 8, was a great day with the Methodists of Yazoo City. Bishop J. H. McCoy of Birmingham accepted an invitation from the pastor and Board of Stewards and came to lead our well planned rally for the new year. The Bishop preached both morning and night to a crowded house, and charmed everyone with his forceful sermons and genial personality. The object of the "Rally" was to arrange for the liquidation of the debt of $10,000 which has hung like an incubus over our handsome property for six and more years. The response Sunday morning to the Bishop's appeal was inspiring. About $5000 has been subscribed, $2200 of which is in cash. Last night our prayer meeting was a jubilee. We sang, spoke, and voiced in prayer our praises to God for his blessings to us and for the liberality of these noble people of Yazoo City. Need I add that the women of the church were in the vanguard of the subscription ranks?—Nolan B. Harmon.

Feb. 12, 1914.

Durant, Miss.

My Dear Doctor: I am just finishing up my first round of quarterly conferences. This may be called a "hurry-up" round, but by this method I have been able to touch all the preachers early. I find that some of them need an early conference, for so many of our people seem to think it not pious or safe to pay the pastor anything before the quarterly conference, and that they must be very careful about the matter then. Yet some of our stewards have felt that they could risk the pastor with even more than a quarter's salary, and have actually paid the presiding elder more than the amount due for the quarter. But this company is not like that that St. John saw when on Patmos—it can be numbered. I have found the preachers full of hope and hard at work. The truth is Doctor, Bishop Atkins was partial, it seems to me, in picking out the best men for the Durant District. Of course, you know it is the best manned district in the North Mississippi Conference—of course you do, for you know men.

I received this afternoon Itinerary No. 1, for the Durant District, sent out by that pair of hustling Sunday School Field Secretaries who are to operate in the North Mississippi Conference this year. I hope that all the pastors will co-operate with them, and give them a chance to show us how they can make things go. I am sure that Bishop Atkins thinks they need to go in this part of the kingdom, and I have heard of no one taking issue with him. Say Doctor, have you seen "When Sainthood Was in Flower," by Dr. H. G. Henderson? This is his latest book. A fine delineator of Bible characters is the gifted Doctor. "A Discounted Ministry," chapter number five, is well worth the price of the book. I hope to see this book in the Epworth League and Sunday school reading courses. Doctor, one more thing: you are to be in the next General Conference; please, Sir, don't let them kill the presiding eldership, for I am just getting started again.—W. S. Shipman.

WHAT THE WORLD THINKS OF THE CHURCH.

"There is only one way to make men and women good, and that is the old way of making them good from the inside first. Churches will do more in one Sunday morning than all the police and all the detectives and all the officials of the city will do in a term of office or in a generation. You cannot make men moral by act of parliament, acts which are only made to punish those who commit immoral acts. The regeneration of the world must be done by the fathers and mothers who occupy places of trust in the present generation working upon the hearts and minds of their own children who will constitute the next generation, backed by the day schools, the Sunday schools and the churches. This work is personal and individual, and can only be done where the heat and light of human love blaze upon the family altar, and by those God-appointed instrumentalities known as the churches."

CAST YOUR CARE UPON HIM.

Peace of heart lies in perfect resignation to the will of God. What you need is true simplicity, a certain calmness of spirit which comes from entire surrender to all that God wills, patience and toleration to your neighbor's faults, and a certain candor and child-like docility in acknowledging your own faults. The trouble you feel about so many things comes from your not accepting everything which may happen to you with sufficient resignation to God. Put all things, then, in his hands, and offer them beforehand to him in your heart, as a sacrifice. The moment when you cease to want things to be according to your own judgment, and accept unconditionally whatever he sends you will be free from all your uneasy retrospects and anxieties about your own conceits.—Fenelon.

Every soul on its way to eternity has its appointed times and seasons for good, which, if they be allowed to pass away, shall never return again.—Kebble.

COFFEEVILLE, MISS.

Dear Dr. Meek: As we have just closed our first quarterly conference, and in view of the fact that every department of the Church showed such growth, the brethren, especially my immediate predecessors, will be glad to hear from this charge. The people of the entire work are evidencing a considerable growth in grace. This is manifested in many ways. An Epworth League, which now has about 61 members, was recently organized and is doing very effectual work. A Sunday school, which now numbers 51 members, was organized some three weeks ago, and is now a live force. The church at which it exists is in the country and has not had a school for years, if indeed it ever did before. Therefore we are very proud of this forward movement in that community. The other two country churches on the charge have resumed active business along Sunday school and all other lines. The town board of stewards have adopted the budget system for their finances and also the monthly plan for paying the preacher's salary. This board has furthermore relieved the preacher of the task of collecting any of the finances. By unanimous consent of the officials, the preacher's salary was raised over $200 above that of last year. This liberal advance in salary places the Coffeeville charge in a class it should have been in long ago. We have a high type of people in this section and our hearts go out in great love to them. We want to see them embrace full salvation. We trust all the readers of the Advocate will remember us in their prayers. Our presiding elder, Rev. R. A. Tucker, preached us two very fine sermons on Sunday, Feb. 8. Large congregations were in attendance at both services and many expressed great appreciation of these able discourses. Brother Tucker is quite popular in this community; in fact, he is much appreciated all over the district and is accomplishing much for the advancement of our Lord's Kingdom. We are always glad to see him come this way. He is the right man in the right place. We are looking forward to a great year and hope to see scores of people brought into the Kingdom of our blessed Lord.

W. V. SHEARER, P. C.

AMERICUS (MISS.) CIRCUIT.

Just to let the readers of the Advocate know that the Americus Circuit is in the same place, I thought I would let you hear from us. "We" have been cordially received, are happily situated, and are living with an expectation of doing a good year's work, though "we" are getting somewhat thin speeding over such a large territory. Our charge embraces parts of two counties and two States, and consists of six appointments with the probability of another. Brother Huntley held our first quarterly conference yesterday and gave us two very interesting sermons. Our reports were in very good shape, and a slight increase was made in the assessment for the pastor's salary. Best wishes for the Advocate.

H. M. JOHNSON, P. C.

ABBEVILLE, MISS.

Dear Dr. Meek: Will you please allow me space to give a brief account of my work? We were cordially received on the Abbeville charge; I think we have the best people I ever saw. They have shown us every kindness possible. Everything seems to be moving along nicely. We have four appointments and three evergreen Sunday schools that are doing excellent work. We have a prayer meeting at Abbeville that I think is above an average in some respects. We meet every Wednesday night, and have large crowds and a good interest. We have as many as 100 or more at every service when the weather is favorable. And our young people especially, are taking great interest, as also are many of the older ones. Our young people take part in these meetings. We are giving all a chance, and they seem to enjoy it very much. The young men have been leading the prayer service up to the present, and there has not yet been one to refuse to do this when he was appointed, so I think I can safely say that our people are above the average in many respects. We had the privilege of having Rev. V. C. Curtis and Miss Elizabeth Kilpatrick with us two days in the interest of the Sunday school work, and, of course, all who know these workers, know our meeting was a success. They were, indeed, a great blessing to everyone who heard them. I would urge every pastor to secure their services at the earliest date possible. Since they were with us, our people look at Sunday school work from another view point. We are hoping and praying for a great year. Yours for service,

C. T. FLOYD.

GRANDMA USED SAGE
TEA TO DARKEN HAIR

She made up a mixture of Sage Tea and Sulphur to bring back color, gloss, thickness.

Common garden sage brewed into a heavy tea with sulphur and alcohol added, will turn gray, streaked and faded hair beautifully dark and luxuriant, remove every bit of dandruff, stop scalp itching and falling hair. Just a few applications will prove a revelation if your hair is fading, gray or dry, scraggly and thin. Mixing the Sage Tea and Sulphur recipe at home, though, is troublesome. An easier way is to get the ready-to-use tonic, costing about 50 cents a large bottle at drug stores, known as "Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Hair Remedy," thus avoiding a lot of muss.

While wispy, gray, faded hair is not sinful, we all desire to retain our youthful appearance and attractiveness. By darkening your hair with Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur, no one can tell, because it does it so naturally, so evenly. You just dampen a sponge or soft brush with it and draw this through your hair, taking one small strand at a time; by morning all gray hairs have disappeared, and, after another application or two, your hair becomes beautifully dark, glossy, soft and luxuriant.

MEMORIAL RESOLUTION.

Whereas, on January 31, 1914, our merciful Heavenly Father saw fit in his providence to remove from our midst our beloved sister, Mrs. Tommie Saie Raiford, be it therefore Resolved, by the Woman's Missionary Society, of Como, Miss.:

1. That while we humbly bow in submission to the will of him who is "too wise to err and too good to do wrong," we are sorrowful on account of her going away.

2. That our Missionary Society has lost one of its most loyal, faithful, and efficient workers, and the M. E. Church, South, one of its most devout and consecrated members.

3. That a character so pure and a life so rich in Christian virtues can but leave a lasting influence for good upon the lives of all who were associated with her.

4. That we extend our deepest sympathy and condolence to the grief-stricken family and friends, and that these resolutions be spread on our minutes, a copy be sent to the family, and copies forwarded to the Nashville and New Orleans Christian Advocates and to the Sardis Reporter.

Signed: Mrs. W. B. Taylor, Mrs. R. F. Sledge, Mrs. J. B. Randolph, Committee.

A Beautiful Complexion

May be Obtained by the Use of Stuart's Calcium Wafers, the Greatest of All Blood Purifiers.

No need for anyone to go about any longer with a face covered with pimples, blotches, eruptions, blackheads and liver-spots. These are all due to impurities in the blood. Cleanse the blood thoroughly and the blemishes will disappear.

"Stuart's Calcium Wafers will give you an excellent skin color and remove all face eruptions."

That's what Stuart's Calcium Wafers are intended to accomplish and do accomplish. Their principal ingredient is Calcium Sulphide, the quickest and most thorough blood cleanser known.

These wonderful little wafers get right into the blood, and destroy eruptive substances present in it. In some cases a few days are sufficient to make a marked improvement. And when the blood is pure the whole system is a hundred per cent better.

Go to any drug store and get a 50 cent box of Stuart's Calcium Wafers. Get them to-day.

Don't fret any longer about those blackheads, pimples, boils, tetter, eczema spots or skin eruptions; they all go and "go quick" if you use Stuart's Calcium Wafers.

STRANGE THAT THEY DO NOT.

The great cause of social crime is drink. The great cause of poverty is drink. When I hear of a family broken up, I ask the cause—drink. If I go to the gallows, and ask its victim the cause, the answer—drink. Then I ask myself in perfect wonderment, why do not men put a stop to this thing?—Archbishop Ireland.

IT PAYS TO BE CAREFUL

Statistics reveal a surprising number of deaths resulting from seemingly trivial injuries. For instance, a rusty nail puncture, a neglected wound which becomes festering and ends in blood poison. What was easy to prevent becomes impossible to cure. Newspapers chronicle daily deaths which would never have occurred had Gray's Ointment been on hand. It is an absolute preventer of blood poison and cures quickly and permanently all boils, bruises, carbuncles, festering wounds, old sores, ulcers and other skin maladies of every nature. 25c a box at drug stores, or a Free Sample can be had from Dr. W. PROGRESS.

There is a great deal of arrant nonsense spoken and written about progress. Some people talk as if the law of human progress were written across the whole of history, as if it were an upward tendency from better to better, so that one might suppose that by a mere process of going on, year after year, the human race was destined, by some inevitable necessity, to attain to the climax of human dignity. Human history says nothing of that kind. It is good sometimes to take a map and realize the vast area over which man's attainments, centuries ago, were infinitely higher in some respects than they are to-day; but even that does not make me doubt the reality of progress in the world.—Bishop of Oxford.

LOCAL OPTION FOR GREAT BRITAIN.

General temperance legislation is the move that will be made before long by the Liberal Government of Great Britain. David Lloyd George, Chancellor of the Exchequer, is responsible for this statement. It is realized that it is one of the most important questions calling for legislative action. As soon as the present measures which are engaging British thought are disposed of, this "overwhelming problem," as the Chancellor terms it, will be taken in hand. The measure in mind is a local option bill.—Zion's Herald.

AUTHORITY DECLINES.

There is no more characteristic note in the American life of to-day than the decline of respect for authority. In religion and politics it is the same. Men frown upon creeds and look with suspicion on courts and Constitutions. Never before, perhaps, since civilization began, has there been less regard for the outward symbols of religion and government. Yet, in the words of Lecky, "the first desire of the heart is for something to lean on." Men do love authority, fixed standards of right and wrong, whether in religion or government, and when this transitional state shall have passed they will return with redoubled ardor to dependence on settled religion and political beliefs. Signs are not wanting that the American people already are tired of drifting on the open sea of religious and political "freedom." It may be that they will not return to the old dogmas, the old political beliefs, but some fixed standards they must and will have. "If there were no God it would be necessary to invent one." In the realm of politics, too, the American Constitution has been invaluable to the progress of the United States. Around it the people have rallied, and their success as a nation has never been equaled in the world's history. Let it be interpreted in the light of twentieth century needs, but let it stand, for in politics, as in religion, fixed, positive beliefs are as necessary to the mind as food is to the body.—St. Paul Dispatch.

FINE PROGRAM BEING MAPPED OUT.

The Louisiana State Sunday School Convention to be Held at Lake Charles April 20, 21, 22 and 23.

Seven Great Mass Sessions and a School of Methods of Thirty-Periods Among the Features of the Coming State Gathering.—A Large Attendance is Expected.

Louisiana's Twenty-eighth Annual Sunday School Convention is announced for Lake Charles, Monday, Tuesday, Wednesday and Thursday, April 20-23, 1914, with the opening session Monday night, the 20th. It will be the largest convention of its kind ever held in the State and will present the strongest program ever prepared for the Louisiana Sunday School workers. The convention will occupy five churches, while the night sessions will be held in the Central High School Auditorium, which has a seating capacity of 900.

The program provides not only for seven great mass convention sessions, but for a School of Methods of thirty periods, meeting on the afternoons of Tuesday, Wednesday and Thursday. The School of Methods is a new feature of State Sunday School Convention work, and through it the convention is provided with practical treatment of numerous phases of Sunday school work. Each Parish Association is expected to send to the convention its parish officers and department superintendents, and all schools throughout the State are entitled to representation by one delegate for every twenty-five members; pastors and superintendents being ex-officio delegates. On Tuesday afternoon there will be a great Sunday school parade in Lake Charles, participated in by the delegates and all the adult and teen age Bible classes of Lake Charles.

The many convention speakers and institute instructors are recognized specialists of international reputation. The list includes the names of Mr. W. C. Pearce of Chicago, Adult Specialist of the International Association; Mr. John C. Carman of the Colorado Association, Teen Age Specialist; Miss Nannie Lee Frayser of Kentucky, Elementary Specialist and Lesson Writer; Dr. Wilbur F. Crafts of the Reform Bureau of Washington, D. C., Sociology Specialist; and Dr. Wm. J. Williamson of St. Louis, Bible Specialist. In addition to these three, there will be over fifty Sunday school workers of Louisiana on the program.

DISPERSING INFIDEL NOTIONS.

Preaching at Warrington, the Bishop of Liverpool related a story on the cure of an atheist. He said that some years ago, in a colliery not far from Warrington, there worked a man who professed to be an atheist. He was working one day with his mates, when a great piece of coal fell from the roof within a few yards of him: the fear was that the whole roof would fall in and crush the men. In a moment that man was on his knees crying to God to have mercy upon him. One of his fellow-workmen dryly remark that there was nothing like a good cob of coal for driving infidel notions out of a man's head.—Southern Churchman.

MISSIONARY FRAUDS.

I desire to call the attention of the public to a number of so-called missionary agents from Syria who are now traveling through the United States raising money for orphanages and hospitals in various parts of the Turkish Empire. These men usually present letters from some church dignitary in Syria and show a book in which the names of contributors have been written. Two of these men were arrested in Nashville some time ago after an investigation. Two others were driven out of Atlanta and just recently I discovered that one was raising money in Nashville for an orphanage. This man had letters from the Governors of two States which had been given on what appears to be a forged letter of an Archbishop of Syria. On referring this case to his Excellency, the Ambassador of the Turkish Empire, I have received the following reply which should be a sufficient warning to the public to bar these agents from the churches and from soliciting money privately in any part of the United States:

"Mr. J. E. McCulloch, General Secretary Southern Sociological Congress, Nashville, Tenn.

"Dear Sir: In answer to your letter of inquiry of January 28 I will say that I know nothing of the person mentioned by you, nor of the aim of his self-styled mission. He certainly has no official acknowledgment whatever. The Imperial Embassy, on the contrary, disapproves in the most emphatic manner such schemes as the one he is trying to work on the generosity of the American people.

Yours very truly,

(Signed) YOUSSEUF ZIA PACHA."

The man referred to had raised over $200 in two months and had secured a contribution from a prominent minister of Nashville, who afterwards confessed that he really believed the man was a fraud. Surely the American people "like to be duped."

GIVE "SYRUP OF FIGS" TO CONSTIPATED CHILD

Delicious "Fruit Laxative" can't harm tender little Stomach, liver and bowels.

Look at the tongue, mother! If coated, your little one's stomach, liver and bowels need cleansing at once. When peevish, cross, listless, doesn't sleep, eat or act naturally, or is feverish, stomach sour, breath bad; has sore throat, diarrhoea, full of cold, give a teaspoonful of "California Syrup of Figs," and in a few hours all the foul, constipated waste, undigested food and sour bile gently moves out of its little bowels without griping, and you have a well, playful child again. Ask your druggist for a 50-cent bottle of "California Syrup of Figs," which contains full directions for babies, children of all ages and for grown-ups.

WORTH WEIGHT IN GOLD

Abingdon, Va.—Mrs. Jennie McCall, of this place, says: "I had been troubled with female complaints for over ten years. I could not walk or stand on my feet, and had been almost confined to the house, for a long time. I began to take Cardui, the woman's tonic, and now I can walk anywhere I want to go. Cardui is worth its weight in gold." This is a high estimate of a plain, herb medicine, yet there are thousands of women who would gladly pay this price for a remedy to relieve their suffering. Cardui has helped others. Why not you? Try it. Your druggist sells it, in $1 bottles.—Adv.

YOUR FRECKLES

Need Attention in February and March or Face Will Stay Covered.

Now is the time to take special care of the complexion if you wish it to look well the rest of the year. The February and March winds have a strong tendency to bring out freckles that may stay all Summer unless removed. Now is the time to use othine—double strength.

This prescription for the removal of freckles was written by a prominent physician and is usually so successful that it is sold by your druggist under guarantee to refund the money if it fails. Get an ounce of othine—double strength, and even a few applications should show a wonderful improvement, some of the smaller freckles even vanishing entirely.

May we, the women of Southern Methodism, whom Thou hast blessed with the superior advantages of race, heredity, privilege and opportunity, be given also, through Thy grace, the discerning mind and the sympathetic heart that pierce the surface of color and condition to find the real human soul in its needs and yearning; then may we give ourselves in unselfish devotion to meet with Thee, these "little ones" of a darker race whom Thou lovest, even as Thou dost love us!—Mary Debardeleben.

A MESSAGE FROM THE MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE PRESIDENT.

My Dear Sisters:

The Annual Meeting will be held in Laurel, Miss., April 17-22. We are looking forward to this meeting with a great deal of pleasure, expecting inspiration and a new vision of our Lord and the great work in his vineyard both at home and abroad. We are very anxious for you to send a delegate, that we may have her assistance and your auxiliary get a direct report from the Conference. Our aim should be: 1914 the best year in the history of the Conference and to accomplish this, everybody try to do their very best. My heart is sad over the result of last year's work, neither Home nor Foreign pledge was paid up. In the Foreign field we have four consecrated young women, Misses Nevada Martin, Hallie Buile, Janie Watkins, and Nell Drake, who have given their lives to this work and our Conference is pledged for their support; last year we fell short. Have we denied ourselves for this great work? If not, then pledge now to do more this year, adding a few dollars to last year's gift, remembering that it is for our Savior, that his gospel may be taught and preached to those who do not know him. The Home pledge will be used for the Wesley House work as the Conference shall direct. We owe $1000 and interest on the Biloxi Wesley House which will be due in October. I hope this can be met promptly. Our Treasurers would be glad to have the Conference Expense fund paid as early in the year as possible. This is used for stationery, literature and traveling expenses of the officers and secretaries attending district meetings. If every member will pay the 50 cents in the united auxiliary or 25 cents in both Home and Foreign departments, there would be no trouble about expenses. I hope your auxiliary will not wait until after the Annual Meeting to begin work but will start now, arranging and systematizing so there will be no deficit at the close of the year. Please send in your report on time so the district secretaries will not have to wait. These reports are so necessary as they extend from the auxiliary to the Council. Sisters, pray for the work and the workers, especially for the four Missionaries across the sea and the Deaconesses at home. Please call on me whenever I can serve you; this is my pleasure. Sincerely,

Mrs. R. E. JOHNSON.

FROM THE LOUISIANA AUXILIARIES.

Rayville.

The members of the Rayville Missionary Society issue a cordial invitation to everybody to attend the Annual Conference of the Louisiana State Missionary Society which meets in that city in the near future. They are making extensive preparations, and will be disappointed if YOU do not attend. All communications from delegates relative to the meeting addressed to Mrs. J. C. Calhoun, will receive prompt attention. Watch this column for exact dates of Conference.

Mrs. FANNIE E. NORMAN, Press Supt.

Ruston.

Our membership is divided into twelve circles, each circle is responsible for one meeting, both program and refreshments. We have increased our pledge and each circle is responsible for a part of the pledge. Since we meet twice each month, we find an increase in both interest and attendance. Our pastor is a great help to us in the work.

Mrs. JULIA A. ROBINSON, Press Supt.

Mrs. A. C. McKinney sent us a program from the Rayville society; it was issued by them last fall and is very attractively gotten up. It not only contains the date of each meeting but the subject for the afternoon, the leader and the hostess. They are indeed a very wide-awake society. The following we take from Mrs. McKinney's letter. It speaks for itself: "They (the Press superintendents) not only do not report what they are doing, but will not fill out the report blanks. I sent them, so I have not been able to report anything to Mrs. Johnson. Have not had a report of any kind from Shreveport this year, not more than six from anywhere in the State all the year." She further states that she is preparing a "toast" for the women, and we are sure it will not be too warm for them to digest readily.

FEBRUARY 25—A DAY OF PRAYER.

The fourth Wednesday of this month has been set apart by the Council of Women for Home Missions as a day when every constituent board is asked to spend a season in united prayer, that "our country may become God's country." Don't forget to have this Day of Prayer in your town. The meeting ought to be interdenominational, when all of the Woman's Missionary Societies will come together to pray for the spread of the Christian religion in America. No collection is to be taken; Bible study and continuous prayer for the great needs of our country are the features of the program.

The Sunday School.

MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE NOTES.

By Mr. R. A. Maddox.

Please do not forget the 5-cent Assessment. Take the collection to pay it in February or March sure. The Board needs the money and needs it badly.

If you need assistance in introducing the Graded Lessons, or in organizing Bible classes, Teacher-training classes or anything else in your school, let me help you by a visit to your school or by mail.

Branton is on the Honor Roll. They have paid their 5-cent Assessment, as also has Holly Grove. Branton has also ordered nine Legion of Honor Books for the Teacher-training class. What place will be next to send in the 5-cent Assessment and report a Teacher-training Class?

They are going to put the Graded Lessons in the Beginners' Department and organize the Intermediate, Senior, and Adult Departments into a Wesley Bible Class in the Madison Sunday school. Mr. Stewart has been Superintendent of this Sunday school for just 32 years, and says that he is not yet tired of serving.

Rev. H. K. McKee, of the Oak Ridge Circuit, is arranging to organize the Sunday school workers of his charge into a Sunday School Association, and devote a week to holding with them institutes at different places, in which he will be assisted by the Field Secretary, beginning the last day of February. Brother McKee believes in looking after the Sunday school interests of his charge.

LOUISIANA NOTES.

By Rev. P. O. Lowrey.

The writer has just learned that the "O. K." record system, which provides convenient blanks for grading Sunday school pupils on being present, being on time, having an offering, bringing their Bibles or reading their daily home readings, staying to church, having a prepared lesson, and good deportment, is gotten up in a style that only costs 15 cents, and the Secretary's book corresponding costs 75 cents. We are installing this system at Kentwood and believe it to be superior to any that we have seen. Of course, every class will not be graded on all the points provided, but the system makes it easy to mark those points of merit that will recognize the worth of Sunday school work, and thus utilize a principle that has proved valuable in common school work all these years. A quarterly certificate of honor for those who have made a first honor grade is a part of the system, and is beyond doubt a great stimulus to the pupil of normal ambition.

NEWS AND NOTES.

By Miss Elizabeth Kilpatrick.

Eighty-nine statistical reports have been already returned. This is gratifying indeed, but it would be greatly helpful to have the full number in at the earliest date possible.

A class motto, or rather an individual motto, well worth the personal memory of every Class member, is this: "If every member was just like me, what kind of a Class would our Class be?"

Dr. Henderson's "When Sainthood was in Flower" will be placed in the Supplementary Reading Course for the Intermediate Classes. This is not only a compliment to him, but to the Sunday school work of the Conference in which he is so interested.

Tupelo had 225 present at Sunday school on Go-to-Church Sunday out of 237 on the roll. They have also started their one-time custom of having a lunch and Teachers' Meeting on Wednesday night and it is well worth while. The Tupelo Sunday school is a real inspiration.

Mr. Curtis reports a fine day at Water Valley on February 1. A Study Circle was organized and there were many volunteers to help carry on the work emphasized and outlined by the Secretaries. Water Valley is one of the best Sunday school towns in the Conference and Judge McIlwain is a great superintendent.

The Bynalla Sunday school and congregation increases in attendance and interest, and Mr. McIlwain is continually busy keeping things on the up-grade. His teachers, with their pertinent questions and ready willingness to get new books and papers and helps, are evidencing a commendable desire to do a better type of work.

Rev. R. H. B. Gidney has organized a Study Circle in his good school at Kosciusko and will soon reorganize his Adult and Teen-age Classes. Dr. Henderson is preparing to grade his Sunday school at Lexington. Mrs. Cross has graded her fine class and gradually this great feature of Sunday school work will be added to the successful teaching already done.

A "Boy Sunday" has done much for a certain Sunday school and church. The "Boy" Classes had the largest part in the Sunday school exercises. Each boy was asked to bring from 1 to 5 with him. The minister preached a "Boy" sermon to that interesting individual in the morning, and to the parents at night. We have now many special days to observe, but this one seems too good to omit.

Rev. W. N. Duncan has a fine church in Holly Springs and his Sunday school is interesting, with Hon. Lester Fant as superintendent. Mrs. Fant has the Elementary work in a room upstairs and the children, as usual, far excel in the type of work they do and their application. Several Adult Bible Classes will be organized soon, as well as those of the Teen-age. The large and enthusiastic audiences indicated fully how keenly the people are interested in this subject.

It is one of the real inspirations in Sunday school work to realize the keen interest taken in all of its most modern details by Dr. T. C. Weir, whose life and spirituality have blessed so many for so long. He writes that the Starkville Sunday school is taking on new life and growth. The Sunday school Annex is nearly completed and will give the school room to grow more and enable it to do better work. The W. S. Harrison Class has already contributed $30 to the Annex and will aid that splendid undertaking yet more as the days go by. With the new parsonage completed just across the street, Starkville Methodism may well feel that it is doing a great work.

How to Make Better Cough Syrup than You Can Buy

A Family Supply, Saving 50% and Fully Guaranteed.

A full pint of cough syrup—as much as you could buy for $2.50—can easily be made at home. You will find nothing that takes hold of the ordinary cough more quickly, usually conquering it inside of 24 hours. Excellent, too, for spasmodic croup, whooping cough, bronchial asthma and bronchitis.

Mix one pint of granulated sugar with 1/2 pint of warm water, and stir for 2 minutes. Put 2 1/2 ounces of Pinex (fifty cents worth) in a pint bottle, then add the Sugar Syrup. It keeps perfectly. Take a teaspoonful every one, two or three hours.

This is just laxative enough to help relieve a cough. Also stimulates the appetite, which is usually upset by a cough. The taste is pleasant.

The effect of pine and sugar syrup on the inflamed membranes is well known. Pinex is a most valuable concentrated compound of Norway white pine extract, rich in quaiacol and other natural healing pine elements. Other preparations will not work in this combination.

This Pinex and Sugar Syrup remedy has often been imitated, but the old successful mixture has never been equaled. It is now used in more homes than any other cough remedy.

A guarantee of absolute satisfaction, or money promptly refunded, goes with this preparation. Your druggist has Pinex, or will get it for you. If not, send to The Pinex Co., Ft. Wayne, Ind.

THE CONFERENCE COLLECTIONS MADE EASY.

I have been in the ministry eleven years and have used almost every method in raising the Conference assessments. My record will show that I have had some degree of success. In the beginning of my ministry the Conference collections gave me great anxiety and worry for fully two months before Conference. I was haunted with the thought of failure. As I used to say to the Carrollton Avenue Church, New Orleans: "Everywhere I look I see the $351 I haven't yet collected." Our Ruston Church was assessed $1061 last year. I knew it would be paid. It didn't give me a minute's worry. It was paid—and more.

Everybody knows that it is more difficult to raise the assessment in some places than in others. I believe it is possible, however, for every church to meet its Conference assessment in full. If it is not possible, then the church is hurt rather than helped—and the assessment ought to be reduced, ought to be put where the church can pay it. The purpose of this article is not to criticize nor find fault, but it is to help; if possible to suggest a way whereby every church may meet its assessment.

As to the methods of raising the Conference assessments, I think there is clearly the good, better, and best. We may not yet have found the best way—surely we have found the better way. I will indicate some of the methods I have used myself, and in the use of these methods I have not been alone.

Two Old Methods Used in Taking Conference Collections.

The method that is most generally used, is to wait until about a month before Conference and then start out, beggar fashion, from house to house. This method requires a lot of shoe leather, a lot of worry and embarrassment, and means failure seven times out of ten. Of all the methods of raising the Conference assessments this is probably the worst. Of course, weather conditions and other unexpected hindrances will make it impossible for all the members to be seen. Again, there will hardly be enough "ready money" to pay the assessment in a lump sum, even if the church is disposed to do so. The lump sum always seems larger than the same amount in installments. The giver feels that he has made a large gift, perhaps made a sacrifice, when his gift has been small indeed. When a man feels that he is giving too much, when, in fact, he is giving too little, he is robbed of the pleasure of giving, and too, the very sources of his generosity are dried up. For a month or more this method makes the preacher an "ordinary collector," for if he collects the full amount he must be in haste. He has little opportunity to explain the great causes, consequently a large per cent of the church membership looks upon the Conference assessment as a necessary evil—as a kind of charity.

Another method, is taking the Conference collections at some preaching service toward the end of the year. In most cases this is nothing more than taking a subscription, for the pastor or Missionary Committee has to go after it later. This method reaches only the members who are at church. The sermon preached on an occasion of this kind loses much of its force because the people feel that it is preached for a collection.

A "Single Envelope the First Step Toward a New Method."

I have used both of these methods and succeeded in getting the collections in full. But what an awful experience! I should regret exceedingly to have to go through it again. My first departure from the methods named above was to send out by mail a little envelope and a letter to every member of the church about a month before Conference asking that an offering be made before a certain date—about ten days before Conference. This leaves sufficient time to see those who failed to give through the envelope. I was agreeably surprised to find that more of the members gave in this way than had ever given to the Conference collections before. Nobody had to go after it. It was brought to the church and dropped in the collection plate as a part of the worship.

A Good Method For The Circuit And Small Station.

At this stage of our education and interest in giving, the following method is probably best for the Circuit and small station. Set a "Conference Collection Day or Month" in the spring, and one in the fall. Mail your envelope with a letter to every member of the church asking that the offering be made on the day set for it. Let us say we'll use April for Conference Assessment Month in the spring, and November in the fall. On our rounds in March and October let a clear announcement be made that the next month will be observed as "Conference Collection Month," and urge the people to be ready for it. Of course, every church of the circuit will have a "Conference Collection Day." It wouldn't be amiss to put up a poster. Literature can be distributed. A missionary sermon can be preached. Let the people believe that they can pay at least half of the assessment on this collection day in the spring. There will be few churches that will not co-operate in a plan of this kind. The envelope and letter are sent to every member of the church on Wednesday before the "Conference Collection Day." This will call to the attention of the church members the fact that every one is expected to give. Insist on the offering being made through the envelope and that the envelope be placed in the collection plate. Another point: An envelope should be sent to every member—children and grown folks alike. Urge the parents to give the children opportunity to earn something for the collection, even if it reduces the amount of their gift just so much. This makes the children feel that they have a part in the work and educates them to be the givers of the future. Money is not so plentiful in the country in the spring of the year as it is in the fall. Yet men get money to carry on their business, to pay their laborers—they get money when they want it. They will get it to carry on the Lord's work too. Let them have a chance. I used this method last year. It worked like a charm. I'll be glad to furnish a sample envelope to any who may want it, or to give any other help I can. It doesn't cost much to get out the letter and envelope. I always pay for them out of the collections.

A Good Method for the Stations.

This year I am using ten envelopes, February to November inclusive, instead of using two as I did last year. Where the majority of the church members receive their salary by the month this is a very fine method. It is much easier for most people to give $2 a month, than $15 in a lump sum at the end of the year.

The Duplex Envelope Method is the best, for some places. It will not work everywhere. My honest opinion is that it would be worth very little on most of our circuits. It may work after a while—and should be the ultimate goal of every church.

Every station in the Conference that possibly can ought to institute the Duplex System. It will make easy what would otherwise be a very difficult task.

Some Fundamental Facts.

Whatever method is used in raising the Conference assessments the following facts are worth considering:

Very few people can and will give as much as they ought to in a lump sum. By the installment method they will give more and feel it less.

No church can do its best in the way of giving when a large per cent of the membership give absolutely nothing. An every-member canvass is essential.

Where the preacher and officials of a church are whining because "the assessments are too high" it will be a modern day miracle if the church pays in full. The assessments are never too high; may be, sometimes, they are out of proportion.

The Conference assessments are "hard to understand." Too much explanation can not be given. Education in these great claims is needed by all our people. Distribute literature; preach sermons; deliver addresses—anything to emphasize their importance.

The Work of the Missionary Committee.

In the use of the Envelope Method for raising the Conference assessments the Missionary Committee can do a most excellent work. With the pastor's assistance, the envelopes and letters can be printed and can be mailed out to all the members of the church. The committee can use the month preceding the "Conference Collection Day" in working up an enthusiasm on the subject by distributing literature and pledging the co-operation of the people in making the "Conference Collection Day" a great success. Immediately after the offering has been made let them go over the church membership list and those who have not made a contribution can be seen during the following week. The Missionary Committee can do this work quickly and thoroughly. This of course refers to the circuits and small stations, or where two offerings are made during the year. Where the offering is made once a week or once a month, the Missionary Committee could have its meeting every quarter.

Our Great Need and Our Small Gifts.

The Minutes of the Louisiana Annual Conference, not yet from the press, will probably reveal the sad fact that we paid a little more than half of the Conference assessments last year. There is no "Jewtrick" in the assessments. They were not made with a kind of understanding that half payment would be all right. Every dollar of the assessment was needed last year. Every dollar of the assessment will be needed this year; and if we fail to raise the full amount, our Church and the Kingdom of God will be crippled just that much. We just can't afford to fall short. Our every interest in Louisiana stands almost in perilous need. Is it not a fact, that the Conference assessments are hardly regarded as an obligation by the majority of our churches? If the claims are paid, well and good; if they are not paid it is a matter of little concern to many of the church members. With reference to our Conference assessments we need to develop a church conscience. It is well-nigh criminal for a church to fail to meet its obligations to the great causes of missions, education, and world evangelization. If a church can meet the assessment, but through neglect and stinginess fails to do so, is it not like taking just so much from a most sacred fund? If the preacher, by a little extra exertion, by a little more prayer, by faithfully presenting the great claims, can raise the full amount of the assessment, and yet fails to do so, is he not himself responsible before God for the deficit? My brethren in the ministry, let us do our best this year, and may God open the hearts of our people that our gifts may be equal to our needs!

A TIMELY PAMPHLET.

"Thomas E. Watson Exposed" is the title of a pamphlet of sixty pages, issued by our Board of Missions, in which the Rev. Carlton D. Harris, editor of The Baltimore Southern Methodist, gives a calm and dignified and convincing refutation to numerous charges recently made by Mr. Watson under the heading, "Foreign Missions Exposed." Those charges were mainly a refurbishing of old and outworn calumnies. They scarcely merit reply, and this essay is really very much in the nature of an "exposure" of Mr. Watson himself. He should have been more careful than to give currency to charges against missionaries and missionary boards that merely by citing the facts are so easy to refute. The pamphlet ought to be widely circulated among our people, many of whom have been misled by their confidence in Mr. Watson. The honest and manly and frank letter of Rev. J. T. Meyers, of the Japan Mission, is alone worth the price of the booklet. Order of the Board of Missions, 310 Broadway, Nashville, Tenn. Price postpaid 10c per copy; $1.00 per dozen.—R. B. E.

Editorial

"If you would help to make wrong things right,
Begin at home—there lies a lifetime toil;
Weed your own garden fair for all men's sight
Before you plan to till another's soil."

Has God blessed you? Then make yourself a blessing to others. Thus may you best show your gratitude to the gracious Giver of all good. He is most like Jesus who most feels his debt of obligation to those about him and faithfully seeks to discharge it.

Sometimes we have little idea of how much radiance a light is emitting until it goes out. So, often we cannot tell what a Christian is worth to a community until God calls him home. The Church is not lacking in beautiful characters today, and the path to glory is kept bright with the feet of God's ascending saints.

It was said of Peter and John, "They took knowledge of them, that they had been with Jesus." So the world has ever done. They who live in touch with our risen Lord bear the marks of their discipleship. Their lives are perfumed with the fragrance of the matchless Rose of Sharon, and they carry it everywhere they go.

Of higher criticism Mr. Gilbert K. Chesterton says: "Its principle is to demand for indecision the most abject worship that was ever offered to certitude." Another characteristic of it is that you can scarcely ever corner one of its votaries: you hear one of them in the pulpit or read him upon the printed page and think that you know what he said, but when a protest is registered against what you believed to be his utterance, you find that you entirely misunderstood him. Indeed, we are inclined to the view that higher criticism is like Christian Science in one particular at least, namely, that nobody can understand it but those who accept it.

Paul declared that the Gospel of Christ is "the power of God unto salvation unto every one that believeth." Have you also faith in the efficacy of the Divine Word? If so, why not proclaim it in its simplicity and put it to the test. You need not fear that the Gospel if rightly presented will fail to produce results. It stirs and appeals to the human heart as nothing else can. The explanation of many a barren ministry is that that the glorious truths of the Scriptures have been so overlaid with the vain speculations of human wisdom that men do not see them in their strength and beauty. We occasionally hear a preacher who takes a text from the Divine Revelation and immediately proceeds to get away from it almost as if there were some contagion about it. Indeed, we have about come to the conclusion that one of the urgent needs of the day is a revival of expository preaching. In the language of one of our esteemed friends, "God has not ordained that that the world shall be saved by means of anecdotes."

OUR EDUCATORS GENERALLY LOYAL.

During the last fiscal year of the Carnegie Foundation for the Advancement of Teaching, 404 claimants (professors and widows of professors) were paid pensions, the aggregate amount thus applied being $618,000. No teacher in a church college can ever become a beneficiary of this fund. In thus applying this money Mr. Carnegie and Dr. Pritchett have struck religious educational institutions the most severe blow they have ever received from any quarter; and, as was to be expected, some persons connected with such schools have been tempted to try to break away from their denominational relations and bow down before the golden image which these men have set up. But it must be said, to their great credit, that the vast majority of our teachers, though poorly paid, have remained true to Christianity and the Church.

"ARE PRESIDING ELDERS UNPOPULAR?"

Under this caption, the Editor of the North Carolina Christian Advocate writes as follows:

"Some articles that we read in the church papers, and much that we hear in certain ecclesiastical circles, would lead one to conclude that the standing of presiding elders is not an enviable one. Is such a fact? Out of one hundred and fifty-eight clerical delegates elected to the General Conference in May, seventy-four are presiding elders. Of the six clerical delegates from the Western North Carolina Conference, four are presiding elders and the other two had been elders a little while ago. The Methodist Church is not yet ready to put the elder on the scrap-heap."

It has long been our conviction that the presiding eldership is one of the most valuable features of our remarkably efficient polity. The Church owes much to the faithful men who have served in this capacity. For our part, we favor the maintenance of this office without any new restrictions upon it, the creation of districts of not less than 25 or 30 appointments, and the assignment of only strong and able men to them at good salaries. Weak men ought never to be intrusted with leadership and the exercise of important administrative functions calling for good judgment, firmness, and resourcefulness.

A POINT WELL TAKEN

A correspondent in a personal letter makes the following suggestive statement:

"I attended a meeting of our citizens yesterday and while there witnessed a shocking sight. Mr. Blank was addressing the gathering in the interest of his home city, as was his custom, and after uttering a few sentences sank to the floor and expired almost immediately. One sentence that he uttered was: 'This city in which I live,' etc., little knowing that before its echoes died away he would be dead. Once before I witnessed a similar scene. When I was a boy at school I saw a timid fellow fall and die from fright when trying to make a speech. Some of our smart preachers have much to say about telling folks how to live, instead of how to die. What nonsense! 'Death is far more certain than life; indeed, life is about the most uncertain thing of which we have any knowledge."

There is a vast amount of truth in this utterance. Man is fitted for worthy achievements largely in proportion as he recognizes his relations to eternity and the brevity and uncertainty of human life. The pilgrim spirit must possess him before he can know the value and awful significance of passing time and make the use of it that he ought. It was the constant presence of this thought that made Wesley such a prodigious toiler—such a flame of fire. He said: "I am the creature of a day, passing through life as an arrow through the air. I am a spirit come from God, and returning to God—just hovering over the great gulf, till, a few moments hence, I am seen no more; I drop into an unchangeable eternity. I want to know one thing—the way to heaven; how to land upon that happy shore."

We are disposed to feel sorry for the minister who wants to exclude all references to death and the tomb from his discourses. In this respect he differs from the prophets and apostles who made much of the need of 'preparing to meet God,' and of the tremendous fact that "it is appointed unto men once to die, and after this cometh judgment." The right sort of "graveyard talk" is excellent preaching. Daniel Webster said the greatest thought that ever entered his mind was that of his accountability to his Maker. The mute lips of the dead and the open grave plead far more eloquently for a Christian life than can the most gifted human tongue.

SOME ENCOURAGING STATISTICS.

Prof. Tombo in a recent issue of Science gives the following figures showing how the attendance upon higher institutions of learning has increased within recent years:

1903—
Harvard	6,013
Columbia	4,557
Chicago	4,146
Michigan	3,926
Minnesota	3,550
California	3,477
Cornell	3,438
Illinois	3,239
Wisconsin	3,221
Yale	2,990
1913—
Columbia	9,929
California	7,071
Chicago	6,834
Michigan	6,008
Pennsylvania	5,968
Wisconsin	5,890
Harvard	5,627
Cornell	5,612
New York	5,508
Illinois	5,259

In the entire 30 universities reported in Prof. Tombo's article, the number of students has increased within the past decade from 67,000 to 113,000, a percentage of gain about three times as large as the population of the United States. This showing is, indeed, encouraging. A wider diffusion of higher education among our people cannot but have a wholesome effect in the coming years.

GOD'S PLAN.

A. G. Hunter.

I'd like to go back to yesterday
And live it over again,
For I know of so many little tasks
Which I neglected then.
I lived for myself, with little thought
Of the deeper things of life—
Things which would add to my usefulness
In the midst of toil and strife.

I'd like to go back, but God has planned
That I must go ever on;
The things undone, though not forgot,
Must ever remain undone.
I must make the best of my little life,
And do the best I can,
And plan the years still left to me
With worthy deeds to span.

HARD FIGHTING YET TO DO.

(An extract from the fraternal address delivered by Dr. A. H. Sutherland, of Canada, to the General Conference of the M. E. Church, South, in Memphis, Tenn., in May, 1894.)

It is a great mistake to suppose that every age needs a new gospel. Christ is the contemporary of all the ages, and human thought and progress never outrun his teachings. A recognition of this fact would save many so-called leaders of thought from perpetual blundering, and many a minister from the fatal mistake of preaching an emasculated gospel under the delusion that he is improving upon the old truth. Instead of doubting their doubts and believing their heliefs such teachers make the strange mistake of believing their doubts and doubting their heliefs. The world needs men of strong convictions, who, in regard to the great verities of religion, can say, I know. Goethe, floundering in a bog of habitual doubt, cries out, "Give us your convictions; as for doubts, we have enough of our own." And Spurgeon quaintly remarks, "It may be a great thing to doubt, but it is a greater thing to hold your tongue till you have got rid of your doubts." One firm conviction of truth is of more service to mankind than a thousand doubts or uncertainties. When a man reaches the point of thinking that his doubts are more trustworthy than his heliefs, it will not be long before he finds himself swinging out from all the moorings of truth and duty, on a tossing sea, whose clouds shut out the stars and fogs obscure the headlands and where without compass or chart he will drift blindly toward the wreck of all religious faith. Let us not be deceived in this matter. We are not heathen philosophers, groping in the dark for truth we do not know. We are preachers of a gospel, the truth of which is beyond dispute—a gospel that settles things, and is an authority on every question it touches. Our chief business is not so much to defend this gospel as to preach it in the demonstration of the spirit. As some one has quaintly said, "the best kind of apologetics is energetics," and the gospel we preach will usually find acceptance in proportion to the strength of our own convictions.

And now, as we look out over the world's great field of battle, what is the duty of the hour? We must not deceive ourselves with the idea that the future march of Christianity will be unopposed. By sacrifice and suffering the gospel was inaugurated; by sacrifice and suffering it must be carried to its final sway. A great and effectual door is opened, but there are many adversaries. Millions upon millions of heathen still sacrifice to demons, and know not the name of the Savior of men. The Crescent is still the symbol of undying hatred to the crucified, and Confucius has still more followers than Christ. In lands professedly Christian, Popery still enslaves the intellect, and putting human tradition in the place of the lively oracles, shuts up the kingdom of heaven from men; while ritualism following in its wake, though not professedly under its banners, puts external ceremonies in the place of heart religion, and putting more trust in the Sacraments than in the Savior, paves the way to a deeper deep, and makes the transition to Rome an easier and not uncommon thing. A thinly disguised atheism, not one whit kinder but only a little craftier than of yore, invokes the sacred name of liberty for its protection, that sheltered by Christian laws it may poison our literature, and thereby poison our homes. A secular press which ought to be one of the mightiest forces in the van of advancing civilization, is too often an opposing force, aiding the foes of Christianity by stirring up the evils of party malice and bitterness, and poisoning the pure minds of childhood by disgusting details of current crime; a press which, with a few noble exceptions, gives scant record of Christian work, but parades and magnifies every departure from Christian orthodoxy, and rejoices over a church scandal as if it had found great spoil. And above all, on every side comes the pressure of worldliness, sending one man to his farm and another to his merchandise, while they turn a deaf ear to the cry of the perishing, and withhold from God's cause the aid it so urgently demands. Such are the foes arrayed against us, and the hour draws near when the decisive conflict will begin.

On the day of a great battle, on the issues of which hung the destiny of Europe, the troops on one side were kept for many hours on the defensive. Stormed at with shot and shell they lay prone behind hillocks and hedge rows, and bore with stoical fortitude the tempest of iron hail. Assailed by hordes of cavalry, they formed in solid squares that flung back the charging squadrons as the rocks fling back the sea. On a slight eminence the Commander-in-Chief sat upon his horse, silent, immovable, as if man and horse were cast in bronze. From various parts of the field orderlies dashed up on foaming horses with the message, "Reinforcements are urgently needed at such and such a point," but to each the same quiet answer was given, "There are no reinforcements; tell the men to stand firm." At last came one with a more urgent message still, "General, if we can't have reinforcements our whole regiment must die." "Die, if you must," said the General, "but tell the men to stand firm." So the hours passed; but before the shadows of evening fell there came a moment when the Commander's watchful eye caught a gleam of helmets and a flash of spears that told him reinforcements were at hand. Then the gaunt form rose in the stirrups, and from the compressed lips shot forth the order so impatiently awaited through all the hours of that terrible day: "Let the whole line advance!" With a mighty cheer the troops sprang to their feet and like an avalanche rushed upon their foes, and in an hour all that was left of Napoleon's last grand army was swept from the field of Waterloo.

To-day the church of God approaches the great battlefield of the ages. Far as the eye can reach the opposing forces gather. In the center the serried ranks of heathenism; on the right a perverted Christianity; on the left the millions of the false prophets, while infidelity, through all its camps lies entrenched in the outworks of the understanding. With such a conflict approaching, with such issues in the balance, one thing is certain, the Church of God cannot afford to be divided in its counsels, its methods or its aims. We must rally on the center; we must call in the scattered lines; we must form the solid squares. And when we shall hear the voice of our great Commander, for which we have so long waited, saying: "Let the whole line advance!" I covet no higher honor for myself and the Church I represent than to stand shoulder to shoulder with the Methodism of the South and of the North and of the mother land across the sea, to keep step with them in the march, to share with them in the conflict, and at last to be with them to celebrate the triumph when a ransomed world shall bring forth the royal diadem and crown our Jesus Lord of all.

THE WORD "BAPTIDZO" IN THE CLASSIC GREEK FURTHER DISCUSSED.

My Dear Brother Meek: In pursuance of my promise at the end of my article in last week's Advocate, I am writing again to show by further examples from Greek literature that all those are greatly in error who maintain that "not one" case can be found in classic Greek where the word "baptidzo" means any thing else than "to dip."

Before proceeding with my discussion, however, I want to call attention again to the fact that I did not originally begin this discussion in order to turn any one of another persuasion from his way of thinking. My prime and only purpose, as stated in last week's Advocate, was to protest against the public (or private, for that matter) use of the Greek department of Millsaps College as a prop for indefensible postulates. I should not like to think that I could be so unmindful of the proprieties as to have entered the lists at all had my only purpose been to censor the public utterances of a minister of another Church than my own. Nor would I have pursued the matter beyond my first letter of protest had not (greatly to my surprise, in view of our conversation over the telephone), my article been severely criticised on the following Sunday from the pulpit. During this criticism, two of the four examples I had cited were not noticed at all and the other two were set aside as of "questionable merit." And the entire pronouncement was brought to an end by a reiteration of the statement of the previous Sunday that no example occurs in classic Greek of "baptidzo" with a sense other than "to dip."

The result of all this is that, while at first I was inclined to shrink from a possible implication of censorship which my first letter of protest might have justified, I now assume without hesitation and even with some pleasure the role of instructor for all those who continue to defend the thesis before us.

What now is this thesis? It consists, at this writing, of two parts: (a) that the Greek language contains no example of the word "baptidzo" meaning any thing else than "to dip;" (b) that my article which appeared in the Nashville Advocate under date of Jan. 21, 1910 and which was reprinted last week in this paper contains "only two" examples, which are "of questionable merit."

It is a matter of interest to note in passing that "(a)" says "no" example and "(b)" says "only two." It seems that in "(b)" the day is dawning and the shadows are fleeing away.

But to the point. Since we are discussing Greek themes we will adopt the Greek rhetorical device of "hysteron proteron." That is, we will take the last first and the first last.

Let us see then whether as "(b)" says my article of Jan. 21, 1910 contains "only two" examples of "baptidzo" with a sense other than "to dip," and whether these two are really "of questionable merit."

Referring to this article, reprinted in last week's Advocate, we find that after discussing one example from the Batrachomyomachia and one from the Birds of Aristophanes (these are the two which were discovered to be "of questionable merit") I say: "It is not necessary to cite further examples of 'baptidzo' meaning something else than 'to dip.' Such examples abound in classic Greek. The verb, 'to moisten,' or 'to wet,' for example, would admirably translate 'bapto' in many cases." (Compare Aes. P. V. 863; Soph. Aj. 95). "By this it is seen that I actually cite two other examples than the two which are of such 'questionable merit.'"

Laying aside now for a while these two examples from Aeschylus and Sophocles (we will elaborate upon them together with others when we come to the discussion of heading "(a)" of our thesis, let us look closely into the merit of the statement that the example from the Batrachomyomachia and that from the Birds are both of little value.

It was urged against the passage from the Birds where Pisthetaerus cries out, "O, Poseidon, here is another baptoed bird," that the birds had "perhaps been once dipped but that their feathers had now fallen out!"

When we consider (for the details see the discussion of this example in last week's issue) that the birds were not birds at all but human beings with merely a bird's-head mask on and that our specific attention had previously been strikingly and comically called to the utter lack (or even trace) of feathers on the bodies of the men such opinions and objections that "perhaps they had been once dipped" pass from the realm of philological criticism to that of childish conjecture. And I candidly confess myself wholly and completely estopped when such methods of "argument" are resorted to.

This for the "questionable" character of our bird. Let us see now what is the trouble with our frog.

We were told that the Batrachomyomachia is a poem of burlesque and exaggeration and that therefore the poet's words are not to be taken seriously; that they are all enlarged and purposely misused; and that when he said, "the lake was baptized with the blood of the frog" he really meant, for comic effect, that, as the frog fell, the lake was immersed and engulfed in the gushing copiousness of the blood!

This explanation in itself is a great burlesque. It far exceeds any thing to be found in the poem proper. For, in the first place, the Batrachomyomachia is not a comic poem in its use of words. They are used regularly and naturally, just as in the Iliad and the Odyssey of Homer. Any page or any line of the poem taken at random abundantly proves the truth of this statement. I have before my eyes at this writing line 218. I find the line contains one proper name, one participle, one adjective, one verb, and one noun. The proper name we, of course, neglect. It can prove nothing. The participle is "pheugonta," and means, what it means everywhere in Greek, "fleeing." The adjective is "bathus," and means, what it means everywhere in Greek, "deep," "steep," etc. So also with the verb "pipto" and the noun "ochthe." And this line 218 I took wholly at random. Every line shows the same phenomena. No, the comedy in the poem is not to be found in its words. It must be looked for in another direction. The poem is a parody of the Iliad. What the mighty heroes, Achilles, Ajax, etc., did in the books of the Iliad the frogs and the mice do in the Batrachomyomachia. They slay each other, they despoil the dead and the arms of the battling frogs and mice clang as mightily as did ever the arms of Hector or of Diomed. The fun is in the situations, not in the words. The words (even including "bapto"), are correctly used.

Let us look now for a moment at the passage itself. I will translate lines 216-221 so that we may have the actual setting.

216 "And Leichenor aimed at him (the frog) with shining dart."

217 "And (nor did he miss him) struck him in the liver. And as Leichenor watched.

218 "Kostophagus (the wounded frog's name) running away, (lo!) he (Kostophagus) tripped on the steep bank.

219 "But not even thus (tho) in the water, did he (Kostophagus) stop (running); and Leichenor pursued him (Kostophagus);

220 "And he (Kostophagus) sank—nor did he rise. And the lake was baptoed with the crimson blood."

We notice from this translation that the frog is already in the water when (and before) he dies and is moreover wholly submerged—"And he sank—nor did he rise," line 220. That is, the lake, in the first half of line 220, wholly contains the entire body of the frog. It is therefore past belief that, in the second half of the same line, when the poet says, "And the lake was baptoed with the crimson blood," he means us to understand that the lake, which a moment before wholly contains the entire body of the frog, is itself immediately thereafter wholly contained and immersed by a small portion—the blood—of the same frog's body.

If however, further proof is needed that the poet has no such absurd thing in mind as this we find that proof already prepared for us in the scholia on this line. The scholiasts were "school-men" who, handling in antiquity the manuscripts of the ancients, were accustomed to make on the margin of the manuscripts such comments as seemed good to them. These comments ranged all the way from labored explanations of intricate passages to a mere dash of the pen giving a synonym or indicating the trend of thought. The scholiasts found "ebapteto" of this passage so easy that they vouchsafed to it only a dash, so to speak, by indicating its synonym. And the synonym they give us for "ebapteto" is, mark the word well—"emoluneto"—"defiled!" It is positively shocking, is it not? to find that "bapto" was once translated, and by the Greeks themselves—think of it!—by the word "moluno"—"to defile!" Shocking—but true!

In concluding now the discussion of section "(b)" of our thesis I will merely ask one question and leave the answer to the judgment of those who read. Did my article which appeared in the Nashville Advocate of Jan. 21, 1910, and was reprinted in last week's issue of this paper contain "only two" examples of "bapto" with a meaning other than "to dip;" and were these two of "questionable merit?"

In view of the facts already adduced it seems utterly superfluous to take up section "(a)" of our thesis at all. For if nothing further could be said than has been already said about the bird and the frog we would have at least two magnificent and telling examples of "bapto" not meaning "to dip." And section "(a)" says that not even one such could be found.

I have however promised other examples and though it be useless and, perchance, tedious, I shall, for my promise' sake, give them. I will, however, seek to be as concise and as brief as clearness permits. We must note at this time, in passing, the fact that when our friends who emphasize "baptidzo" say it means "to dip" they always mean of course "to immerse."

We will take up first the two examples which I merely cite in my Jan. 21, 1910 article and which, as I have said above, were wholly overlooked in the public criticism of the article on Sunday the 8th, inst.

The first one is from Aeschylus' Prometheus Bound (line 863). The scene is this: Prometheus is on the rock bound in chains as punishment for his crime. A chorus of nymphs stands around him, and Io, too, who, stung by the gadfly, has just arrived at this place in her long and aimless wanderings over the world. Prometheus, being a god, has prophetic powers and Io asks him to tell her when the end of her journeyings will come. The chorus too begs at the same time that he tell them when his own punishment shall cease and who his deliverer shall be. Prometheus accedes to both requests and after a long preamble he comes to the part the Danaids shall play in the two events, the cessation of Io's woes and his own deliverance. Lines 862-863 run as follows:

"Each woman shall her Lord deprive of life,
"Dyeing (bapsasa) her two-edged sword with victim slain."

In order to see the real force of this example it is necessary to notice the preposition used in the Greek for our "with" in "with victim slain." It is "en." Now "en" is never used in classic Greek to express motion from one place to (into) another place or thing. To express such a relation, as for example, plunging a sword (hilt and all)—that is immersing—into the body of a victim—another preposition "eis" must be used. "En," however, on the other hand, is very often used from Homer down, to express the means whereby a thing is done or sought to be done. So that the Greek of this passage (bapsasa—en sphagais) can not mean, plunging the sword (hilt and all) into the victim, but must mean, dyeing her two edged sword with (by means of—"en") the victim slain. And I have so translated it.

The second example (Sophocles, Ajax 95) which I cited in my article of Jan. 21, 1910, and which was overlooked Sunday, Feb. 8, 1914, is quite similar to the one from the Prometheus just explained, except that "pros" with the dative is used instead of the more usual "en" with the dative. In this line Athena asks the crazy Ajax the question: "Hast thou well (note carefully the adverb; it is "well"—"eu"—not "completely"—"holos," panu," etc., but "well")—"Hast thou well dyed ("ebapsas") thy spear with (by means of) the Argive host?"

In the Anabasis of Xenophon (2:2, 9) after the battle of Cunaxa the Greek contingent becomes suspicious of Ariaeus, the lieutenant general of Cyrus, and fears that he is about to go over to the king. A conference is held, at which the Greek generals and Ariaeus and his men pledge mutual fidelity. In order, however, to invest their oath with greater solemnity they kill a bull, a boar and a ram and pour the blood of these animals into the hollow of a shield and then dip (bapto) into it, the Greeks, their swords; the Persians, their spears. When now we remember that the largest shield was never much larger than a man; that spears were from five to seven feet long; that swords were from a foot and a half to two feet and a half long; that not less than fifty men and possibly a much greater number performed this rite of dipping into the shield we can easily understand that the process here was not immersing the swords and the spears but a mere tingeing of their points with the blood in the shield.

In Plato (Euthydemus VII) we find a young man, Kleinias, who is seeking to qualify for admission into the ranks of the Sophists. He is being given a searching oral examination by the two Sophists, Euthydemus and Dionyodorus. They fling question after question at him until he is hopelessly confused. Whereat Socrates, pitying the youthful Kleinias and seeing that he was, as Socrates says, "being peppered (baptizo) and about to be floored"—but why go on? Why multiply or amplify further individual examples ad nauseam? Let us rather prove by one sweeping and irrefragable example the universal applicability to the Greek language as a whole of the statement that "bapto" occurs with other meanings than "to dip."

We will choose for this purpose an example from the Phoenician Maidens of Euripides (line 223). A chorus of young girls is describing, in a very elegant trochaic ode, their past wanderings and foretelling their future journeyings. Among these latter is a visit to the sacred temple where the waters of the Castalian spring are "to wet" (deusai) their hair.

For this word "to wet" Euripides uses, as I have indicated, the rare and poetic word "deuo." There is no doubt about the meaning of this word "deuo." It is universally attested to mean "to wet," "to smear," "to moisten." If therefore we can find any Greek author who tells us that "deuo" ("to smear," "to wet," "to moisten") is an exact synonym of "bapto" we shall have a general statement applicable to the Greek language as a whole and we shall be free from the necessity of citing any more specific cases.

But can we find any such statement in Greek? Fortunately (for us), yes. Hesychius, an Alexandrine lexicographer, of about the end of the 4th century A. D., in his alphabetical review of all the rare words and proverbs found in the classic authors gives as two of the synonyms of "deuo" the verbs "brecho" and "bapto." In other words, according to Hesychius, "deuo" (to wet) equals "brecho" (to wet) equals "bapto" (to wet).

Now do not let any one think for an instant that Hesychius is some old unimportant Greek lexicographer whose influence, never very great, has now entirely vanished. Hesychius is of great authority among the most learned of present day scholars. "Extensive use is made of his work

(I am translating from Croiset's Histoire de la Litterature grecque, vol. 5, p. 975) by modern editors to restore in a corrupted text an old and rare word for which the copyists have substituted a more usual expression." In short, modern scholars to this day go to Hesychius for information concerning the meaning and use of words.

Here, then, is the general statement which we set out to find. Here is the Noah Webster of the Greeks trumpeting down the ages to us that "bapto" means, among other things, "to wet," and means it not in any restricted case, but in an inherent, or at least, in a general and universally accepted sense.

What, therefore, may I ask, becomes of the two parts, "(a)" and "(b)" of our thesis, and of poor, old "bapto" with its solitary (?) meaning "to immerse?" Are they not buried deep down under the Ossa and Pelion of proof which I have piled upon them?

Before I close I desire to make this further statement: Just as a minute scrutiny of the word "bapt" offers, as we have seen, no solace to those who seek to make man's eternal destiny dependent upon its meaning, so also a like close philological investigation of the context of the passages in the New Testament where "baptizo" occurs, will offer just as little (if indeed as much) ground for ecclesiastical dogma. I promise myself the pleasure of discussing this topic in your paper at no very distant day.

Thanking you for your kindness in opening your columns to me, I am, fraternally yours,

M. W. SWARTZ.

There are thirty ministerial students attending Hendrix College, at Conway, Ark.

Bishop Neely, of the Methodist Episcopal Church, has gone to Cuba, where he will spend a few weeks.

The next General Conference of the Canadian Methodist Church will convene on September 23, 1914.

Rev. Walt Holcomb, of Nashville, Tenn., will begin a meeting at McKendree Church, Norfolk, Va., on March 15.

According to report, the Roman Catholic Church has forbidden its members to read the writings of Maurice Maeterlinck.

The next International Sunday School Convention will be held in Chicago, and already that city has raised $100,000 to finance the meeting.

Candler College, in Havana, Cuba, despite its late opening, has an enrollment of 67 young men and boys. The outlook for this institution is considered very bright.

Billy Sunday's audiences in Pittsburgh, Penn., have been of phenomenal proportions. It is stated that his congregations on some days have aggregated as many as 60,000 persons.

The Woman's Missionary Society of Morrisville, Mo., will undertake to raise $15,000 to endow the Bible Chair in the Scarritt-Morrisville College which bears the name of Miss Marcia Marvin, the well known missionary.

Dr. Louis Albert Banks, the distinguished author and evangelist, recently conducted a fine revival meeting at the Trinity M. E. Church of Chillicothe, Ohio, in which there were 126 additions to the membership of that congregation.

It is hoped that the guarantees of religious freedom contained in the treaties with the various Christian nations may restrain to some extent the evil influences that might possibly follow from the adoption of Confucianism as the State religion in China.

It is stated that the Roman Catholics of the United States will seek to bring the next International Eucharistic Congress to New York City. It is reported that some of the followers of Rome beneath our flag are even indulging the hope that at no very distant day a Pope may be chosen from among their number.

Including the New Mexico Conference which takes in a part of the Lone Star State, Texas

Methodists number 302,069, and the Sunday school enrollments foot up 247,412. The increase in church membership last year was 12,042. The number of organized churches is 2906, and the number of houses of worship is 2070, which are valued at $7,899,031.

The Salvation Army is showing wonderful missionary enterprise. Last summer General Booth issued a call to the Scandinavian people for volunteers for service in heathen lands, and his appeal brought him 100 responses, distributed as follows: 50 Swedes, 25 Norwegians, 18 Danes, and 7 Finns. Of the total number volunteering, 68 were women.

The Florida Christian Assembly at Enterprise, Fla., which was started only a few years ago by Miss Emma Tucker, has already proven to be quite a success, and apparently has a bright future. The property consists of 1200 acres of land, which has on it the famous Benson Springs and a fine hotel. Mr. James N. Gamble, of Cincinnati is the President of the Board of Directors, and Miss Emma Tucker is the Vice-President. We note also that Rev. J. A. Bowen, of Birmingham, Ala., is a member of this Board.

The Federal Council of the Churches of Christ in America is arranging for a nation-wide hearing for the Rev. Sydney L. Gulick of Japan, who will speak for the missionaries laboring in the Mikado's Empire concerning the relation of the United States to that country, as viewed from the Christian standpoint. Mr. Gulick is expected to deliver addresses in most of our large cities and before assemblies at such other places as would furnish him an opportunity to influence American public sentiment. He has been a missionary in Japan for twenty-six years.

At the recent session of the East Oklahoma Conference, Bishop Mouzon created a new district (the Madill District) and appointed Rev. J. W. Rogers, formerly of North Mississippi, the presiding elder of it. A few days since the Methodists of Madill, finding that their young presiding elder had no house in which to live, took things into their own hands and purchased and furnished one for him; so that he now has nothing to hinder him in his work of carrying forward the interests of the Kingdom. Methodism continues to forge steadily ahead in the growing young State of Oklahoma.

The Federal Council of the Churches of Christ in America is planning to do a large amount of Christian work during the Panama-Pacific Exposition in San Francisco. Its operations will be under the direction of a Committee of One Hundred, of which Bishop E. H. Hughes, of the M. E. Church, is chairman. Copies of the Scriptures will be distributed to immigrants, and an active evangelistic campaign will be carried on among them. The Travelers' Aid Society will be alert to assist all ladies traveling alone, and all the hotels and boarding houses will be investigated and listed in a directory. There will be various kinds of exhibits pertaining to religious work. The activity of the Churches of the United States to safeguard the public during this great exposition and to make the most of the opportunities which it offers for sowing the good seed of the Kingdom, is very much to their credit.

T. H. SELBY—AN APPRECIATION.

While I was absent at the Annual Conference, my beloved brother and warm personal friend T. H. Selby at Newton, passed suddenly to the other land. When I came in December, 1911, to take charge of our Church at Newton, he met me at the train; and from that moment to his going from us he was tenderly brotherly to me. So I learned to love him.

Everybody loved him. The farmer folks in the country round about trusted and honored him, spoke ever lovingly of him, and named their children for him. I have not in all my travels through the country where he is so well-known heard one single thing adverse to this general estimate of him.

He was specially thoughtful of the sick, visiting and tenderly ministering to them. Time and again I have gone with him to the bedside of some shut-in. About the last time I was with him was on an errand of this sort.

I shall never forget his cheery greeting, that I loved so well: "Good morning, young man! come, sit down and tell me what you know." So it was that his place of business was my resting place whenever I went to town for the mail.

Although his modesty withheld him from any effort or thought of leadership, yet he was made leader in his Church and in the business community, his modest worth was recognized and utilized for many years at Newton.

We miss him. Farewell my splendid friend and brother! We shall meet again.

H. WALTER FEATHERSTUN.

AN INTERESTING GATHERING.

Mid-Year Meeting of the Board of Missions of the Mississippi Conference, March 11-12, 1914.

To the Members of the Mississippi Conference:

Dear Brethren: A mid-year meeting of our Conference Board of Missions will be held at the Court Street Church of Hattiesburg, Miss., March 11-12, inclusive. A choice program has been arranged, and the occasion promises to be one of great interest. Dr. John M. Moore, Secretary of the Home Department of the General Board of Missions; Dr. C. F. Reid, the General Secretary of the Laymen's Missionary Movement, and Bishop W. B. Murrah, who has recently returned from an official visit to our Missions in the Orient, are expected to be present and deliver addresses on pertinent themes. Some of the speakers from our own Conference are Rev. George H. Thompson, Rev. Robert Selby, and Rev. G. S. Harmon. Prof. G. L. Harrell, of Millsaps, will discuss the question, "How May We Induce Our Laymen to Co-operate More Generally and Heartily in Our Missionary Campaign." Several round-table discussions will be conducted, and our various missionary problems will be dealt with in a practicable and helpful manner. The opening service will be on Wednesday, March 11, at 11 o'clock a.m., with Dr. J. M. Moore as the speaker.

The presiding elders and district lay leaders are earnestly requested to meet with us, and a cordial invitation is also extended to all our pastors to attend this important session of our Board of Missions, at which plans for the year will be formulated, and the means and methods necessary to success will be presented by our General Secretaries.

The pastors and laymen who expect to attend are respectfully requested to notify Rev. Geo. H. Galloway, pastor of Court Street Church, one week in advance of the meeting in order that entertainment may be provided. It is hoped that a goodly number of the brethren will be on hand. Let us come praying that we may have an inspiring and profitable meeting in every way—one that shall mark a decided advance in our missionary endeavors. Yours fraternally,

W. M. SULLIVAN,

Pres. Miss. Conf. Board of Missions.

M. M. BLACK, Secretary.

AN URGENT APPEAL.

Dear Friends of Temperance in Louisiana:

Unless you will observe Temperance Sunday or employ some other method of raising funds, your hopes for some good legislation at the approaching session of the Louisiana Legislature will not be realized. Friends who help us as they are able, are friends that count. Will you depend on the other fellow, and let our cause fail because you did not carry out the plan endorsed by the Louisiana Annual Conference? The pastor and Sunday school superintendent will no doubt have to take the lead, and if they fail our congregations will not have an opportunity to express themselves. Never in the history of our work have we been face to face with greater responsibilities, or greater opportunities. What will we do? Please help in our fight for the homes of Louisiana.

A. W. TURNER,

State Superintendent, Anti-Saloon League.

CHURCH EXTENSION NOTICE.

The Executive Committee of the Mississippi Conference Board of Church Extension will meet in Newton, Miss., on March 17, 1914. All applications to the General Board of Church Extension for aid for Churches and parsonages must be approved and graded by this Committee.

Applications to the General Board should be in the hands of the Secretary not later than the 14th of March. Application blanks for both churches and parsonages; also blank deeds will be supplied on application to the Secretary of the Conference Board.

THE CARROLLTON AVENUE BUILDING FUND.

Some weeks ago we wrote to a great number of Methodists and friends asking for a contribution of one dollar each to the building fund of the Carrollton Avenue Methodist Church. I desire to thank all who have responded to our request, and to ask those who purpose to send a contribution to do so as early as possible. The building will be completed by May 1st, and we are needing the help at this time. Yours very truly,

J. G. SNELLING.

A dispatch from Atlanta, Ga., makes much ado over the fact that that city, which boasts of being "the New York of the South," had a funeral last week in which only motor vehicles were used. New Orleans has been having such funerals so long that they have ceased to be at all novel. Nor does she need to borrow the name of another municipality to try to emphasize her importance. She has an individuality of her own and a name that is known all around the globe.

Mrs. Sarah Biddlewood, of Philadelphia, has declared in favor of the establishment of a Municipal Matrimonial Bureau. Have things come to such a pass that this needs to be done in the "City of Brotherly Love?" It became necessary for the Roman Government in the declining days of the Empire to do everything in its power to induce its citizens to marry, and if the present trend of affairs keeps up, ere many decades shall pass American statesmen may be scratching their heads over the same problem. History has a wonderful way of repeating itself.

Lord Strathcona, the late High Commissioner for Canada, made bequests for charitable and philanthropic purposes amounting to $2,325,000, distributed as follows: Yale University (United States), $500,000; Royal Victoria College (Montreal), $100,000; Royal Victoria Hospital, $500,000; Hospitals in the British Isles, $90,000; St. John's College, Cambridge, $50,000; University of Aberdeen (Scotland), $25,000; Presbyterian College (Montreal), $60,000; Queen's University (Kingston, Canada), $100,000; Fund for Aged and Infirm Ministers of the Church of Scotland, $50,000. Yale conferred the LL. D. degree upon Lord Strathcona a number of years ago, which is the only visible connecting link between that institution and the half-million benefaction which it is to receive from his estate.

OUR LIBRARY TABLE.

Mexico To-Day. By Rev. G. B. Winton, D.D. Smith & Lamar, Agents, Nashville, Tenn., Dallas, Texas, and Richmond, Va.

An exceedingly interesting and informing volume, dealing with the social, political, and religious conditions of our neighbor to the south. The history and characteristics of the Mexican people, the resources of the country, and the causes leading up to the recent disturbances in this land of violence and revolutions are touched upon in an illuminating manner. Having formerly been a missionary to Mexico, the author is well qualified for the task which he sets out to perform, so far as his information is concerned, and his ability as a writer is well known. The book was prepared at the instance of the Missionary Education Movement of the United States and Canada, and has been extensively used by the Mission Board of the M. E. Church, South. It is finely illustrated, contains maps, and furnishes various exhibits setting forth facts and figures. If one wishes to secure without extensive reading an insight into Mexican affairs, we do not know of any work that will give it to him more satisfactorily than this one.

Practical Studies in the Fourth Gospel (Volume II). By Warren A. Candler, D.D., LL.D. Smith & Lamar, Nashville, Tenn., Dallas, Texas, and Richmond, Va., Publishers. Price, $1.

This is the second of two volumes bearing on the Gospel according to St. John that Bishop Candler has recently given the public. It is quite up to the high standard of the preceding one in every respect; indeed, we think it is even more interesting because it treats of the later and more tragic events in the life of our Lord. To study such themes along with this great thinker is a rare privilege. He has in a most extraordinary degree the gift of profound insight into truth and the power of so expressing it that others can see it. When we hear Bishop Candler preach we are disposed to feel that he ought never to do anything but occupy the pulpit; but when we read after him we find ourselves inclined to wish that he would never lay down his pen. He has rendered his Church and the Christian world a fine service in the publication of his "Practical Studies in the Fourth Gospel." The two volumes ought to be in every Methodist preacher's library and in the homes of thousands of our people. They may be ordered of Smith and Lamar, Nashville, Tenn., and Dallas, Texas, or of Rev. G. W. Bachman, Winona, Miss. If both volumes are purchased at the same time, the set may be had for $1.75.

MANSFIELD COLLEGE CAMPUS.

Since my last report on the movement to purchase the old Methodist church property in Mansfield for Mansfield College, I have received the following subscriptions:

Miss Annie Mai Henderson.....$ 10.00
Rev. W. J. Porter 5.00

Total$ 15.00
Previously reported 557.00

Grand Total$572.00
Balance needed$428.00

The effort has now been on more than a year, and I regard the showing for Mansfield church as most excellent, as the local church is willing to lose at least $1500 on this property. The Methodists of the State have not appreciated the privilege and opportunity, to my great surprise. I make this final appeal to them to subscribe the additional amount needed in such sums as each can afford. I hope our Methodist people in Louisiana will remember:

1. Mansfield, with debts and other local burdens such as other churches have, sacrifices more than $1,500 for this cause.

2. That the institution is not a Mansfield institution, but a Conference institution, deserving the support of all the members of the church within the bounds of our Conference.

Let 43 Methodists write by return mail that they will each stand for $10 of this amount, and let's close the matter.

I hope the pastors will present the matter to their congregations, showing them the obligation and privilege offered.

Let all report within a week.

Mansfield, La. THOMAS H. MORRIS.

WHOLESOME DOCTRINE.

Speaker Champ Clark is quoted as having recently said: "I have cut out all dinners and functions except those I feel under obligations to attend in my official capacity. I did this for two reasons—(1) because I have not the time to attend them, I have too much to do; (2) Mr. Spofford, so long Librarian of Congress, once told me that most public men and Army and Navy officers who died in Washington 'dug their graves with their teeth,' a saying which I took to heart." If Mr. Spofford's doctrine would have the same effect upon others that it seems to have had upon Mr. Clark, we wish that it could be spread all over the country, especially in church circles. We frankly confess that we have always been a bit skeptical as to the real lifting power of a banqueting Christianity. At any rate, it can scarcely claim to be in the apostolic succession.

IMMIGRATION IN SOUTH MISSISSIPPI.

This is a question I think that is usually determined by the people of a State, or section of a State. I think this a question that should concern the people of Mississippi at the present time more than at any time past in the history of the State.

Some kind of people are going to settle up the large, unoccupied cut-over lands in the southern part of the State, within the next fifteen or twenty years, for the great Panama Canal is a certainty and people are going to come and take up these lands. The larger part of these lands are in the hands of companies and could be controlled by proper organization. I have noticed within the last few days in the daily newspapers that more applications for naturalization as citizens of the United States will be made at Biloxi than ever before in the history of the State. The question arises, Are these people the kind that will make good citizens? Can they be assimilated by our Southern people and made part of us? In fact, do we desire that they should be?

I do not know anything as to the price at which the owners of these lands hold them, but I do know that some of the companies refuse to sell only in large lots. I have been informed that companies are holding these lands for high prices, even asking more than they paid for the land, timber and all. I do not question their right to do this, for I believe a man has a right to do as he pleases with his own; but is it best for the State now and in the future? I will modify the statement above, by saying a man has a right to do as he pleases with his own, provided it does not work an injury to his neighbor or to his State.

If all of, or a large part of, this land could be thrown into the hands of a managing board, and divided into homestead tracts and every other lot given away to the proper kind of people who should come and make their homes in the State, and the Legislature would pass a law exempting these people from taxation for a number of years—until they got settled and started—it would be the greatest thing for the State that could be done. By this method, we could say what kind of people could have the land, and what kind of people we should have. The other half of the land, retained by the owners, would be worth twice as much as it is now and a market would soon be created for it.

The kind of people who usually build up a State are those who need help along this line. This would prepare the way for the possible failures that people of no experience in a new section are liable to make when they come, and help them to get settled. This would enable them to spend what cash they might have on a home and improvements, without the probability of losing it as the result of failure.

Some one may ask, "Who is to take this matter up and push it?" I say, "Everybody who can help make the thing go—the State, the railroads, the men who own the lands and the Churches of the State." These all co-operated when this plan was worked in Canada some years ago when they took from the United States hundreds of thousands of good families and settled up the great western Province of Manitoba, and made it one of the greatest and richest Provinces in the Dominion. I was told by the late lamented Bishop C. B. Galloway that the Methodist Church alone borrowed over a half million dollars to establish Home Mission work among these new people as they poured into this Province. A union home mission movement, composed of the three or four leading denominations of the State, could do much in aiding a movement like this.

The Catholics were the chief agents in settling up some of the Western States and if we sit still and let things move on as they are now, there will soon be pouring into Mississippi a class of people from Southern Europe that will be a menace to the moral and social life of the State, and create a problem for the Church that will be hard to handle. These people will become voters and we know how they will vote on questions of morals as well now as when they would cast their votes twenty years hence. The State should see that these people have the best schools at once, and an Agricultural Commissioner that will see that a market is found for what they produce. The railroads can do much—much more than they have done—to promote a movement like this.

I do not blame the Catholic Church for doing what it has done to settle up some of the large Western States; but I think the Protestants of Mississippi will be forever self-condemned if they sit still and allow this State to be filled with a population from Southern Europe. With a membership of nearly three hundred thousand, the Protestants in this State could, if they would, control the situation. This should be done to protect our children from the moral taint that will undoubtedly affect the future of the State if these people come with no Sunday, their whiskey and beer joints, and other evils that they will likely bring with them. It is to be hoped that our politicians will prove themselves real statesmen and turn their attention to measures that will prove constructive, and quit trying to see who can be elected to the highest office for selfish ends or spite, or to see who can be proven to be the biggest rascal. It does seem to me that the people, as a whole, would get sick of this eternal wrangle and put an end to it forever.

There is a day coming in this good old State of Mississippi when the old ship of state will show her wisdom, by offering the largest inducement to the right kind of people to make their homes on her soil and help develop her illimitable resources. It is not a question as to whether there will be a market for what they will grow in the way of truck, etc., but can they get proper facilities for handling it? They can if the railroads will do their part and other steps are taken to see that they are protected in the markets after the products reach them. With over a million people landing on our shores every year to become citizens of the United States and the larger part of these not expecting to become producers of something to eat, it will require all that can be produced to feed them; and we must remember that the United States is fast becoming a nation of cities.

"PRACTICAL STUDIES IN THE FOURTH GOSPEL."

Dear Dr. Meek: The Church and all Bible students are to be congratulated in that Bishop W. A. Candler has brought from the press an expository treatment of the Fourth Gospel. It is evident from the first page of the first volume that the author is a man of broad scholarship and deep piety. The work must be the result of years of study of this Gospel. From first to last Jesus Christ is exalted, and the purpose of the author of the Gospel, to establish Jesus Christ's identity as the Son of God, is never for a moment allowed to be in the background. There is nothing obscure in either volume. The literary style is charming, yet not a single sentence is expressed in words unfamiliar to the ordinary reader. Alexander Maclaren has been called, "the prince of expositors," and he deserves a place in the front rank; but our own Bishop has excelled him as an expositor of St. John's Gospel.

Perhaps the last generation did not furnish a scholar who had a keener insight into the Holy Scriptures, and a more attractive style of expressing his interpretations than Prof. Marcus Dodds. His expositions of the Fourth Gospel were the most exhaustive and illuminating it had been my pleasure to study, until I read these two volumes from the pen of Bishop Candler. There is not, according to my judgment, an exposition of the Fourth Gospel superior to Bishop Candler's extant. No young preacher can afford to be without these volumes. Every Methodist home should have them. They can be used to great profit in the family devotional service. The chapters are short and one could be used at each of the daily devotions. Those who wish to enrich their knowledge of this beautiful and mystical Fourth Gospel, and at the same time partake of spiritual food, should provide their libraries with these illuminating expositions.

The author has given these studies the title, "Practical Studies in the Fourth Gospel." This title is not a misnomer. This is not an attempted review, but an expression of appreciation which I think is due because of the personal benefit I derived from reading these books.

May this good Bishop be spared to give the Church many more such books!

HAYES HOWELL.

"PULL ALL TOGETHER."

March, 1914.

The Every-member Canvass has so manifestly proved to be the most efficient means of increasing the income for missionary and benevolent purposes, that the representatives of fifty-four Mission Boards of the United States and Canada at their annual meeting last year decided to ask all the churches to make a simultaneous Every-member Canvass during the month of March, 1914, and for several months conferences have been held all over the country to promote this work.

Where several or all of the churches of a community make the canvass simultaneously, public attention will be attracted through the press and otherwise, a generous emulation will be created, many will become interested who would otherwise remain indifferent, and each church will realize far larger results than could be secured by making the canvass alone in the midst of a neutral community.

It must be evident, too, that when several, or better still, all of the Protestant churches of any community can be induced to undertake the canvass simultaneously, there will be created a new sense of Christian unity, a consciousness of common interest, and the power of united effort which will place the Christian element of the community in a position to dominate any moral issue that may arise.

As Southern Methodists, we see every reason why our people throughout the Church should join heartily in the simultaneous canvass and use all possible influence to secure the co-operation of the other churches. Even if the other churches of any community are not prepared or do not care to make an Every-member Canvass in the month of March, it is still the best time for Southern Methodists, for the following reasons:

1. It is in accord with the united wisdom and expressed wish of representatives of practically all the Mission Boards, Home and Foreign, of the United States and Canada.
2. It will clear the deck for the other work of the year and give to the preacher a sense of relief and freedom from anxiety that will be worth much to him and the congregation he serves.
3. It will remove the necessity for "The Annual Tug" and enable the church with ease to come up to Conference with "everything in full."
4. It will enable the Board Secretaries and men on mission charges to work with confidence, without the fear of debt and deficit hanging over them.
5. It will enable preachers and laymen to come up to the District Conference with smiling faces and a good example. It sounds good to a presiding elder to have a preacher report at District Conference: "Missions and Conference claims all provided for."
6. Best of all, it will show loyalty and love toward Jesus Christ to provide promptly and generously for the cause nearest his heart, "The Redemption of a Lost World."

SIN IS SIN.

"Don't send my boy where your girl can't go, And say, 'There's no danger for boys, you know, Because they all have their wild oats to sow.' There is no more excuse for my boy to be low Than your girl. Then please don't tell him so. Don't send my boy where your girl can't go, For a boy or a girl sin is sin, you know, And my baby boy's hands are as clean and white, And his heart as pure as your girl's to-night."

THOSE PUNCTUATION MARKS.

"Oh dear!" sighed Warren, as he came in from school one day; "I wish we didn't have to learn so much about periods and commas and semicolons and such things. I hate them."

Mamma laid down her sewing and said: "Why do you hate them, Warren?"

"Why, it's so hard to remember when to use them, and, besides, I don't think they are of much use. I don't see why we couldn't write sentences without putting in any punctuation marks."

Mamma smiled, and then, rising from her chair, she went over to the desk and got out a piece of paper and a pencil. Then she wrote: "The little turkey strutted about the yard and ate corn half an hour after his head was cut off."

"Why, mummie, how funny!" exclaimed Warren when he had read it. "How could a turkey walk around eating corn without any head?"

"He couldn't," replied mamma, "and yet I have written just what I intended to write. I have, however, left out all punctuation marks."

Then she bent down and punctuated the sentence. It then read: "The little turkey strutted about the yard and ate corn; half an hour after, his head was cut off."

"Oh, I see," cried Warren. And then and there he resolved to learn all that he could about punctuation marks.—The Evangelist.

THE OIL CAN.

By Ruth Wyllys.

"It's not my fault!"

"Who said it was? If you take things to yourself that were never meant for you, you'll just have to be uncomfortable; so there!"

The door across the hall banged, and Cousin Molly looked up, somewhat startled, as steps approached her room with a tread more like a stamp than anything less emphatic.

"What's the matter?" asked the visitor mildly, as a flushed face looked in at her door. "Come in, do."

Pauline flung herself down into the nearest rocker with a very ill grace indeed. "Kit always gets rubbed the wrong way, somehow. It's not my fault; I don't say anything to make her flare up so. She always thinks I'm blaming her."

"Carries a chip on her shoulder, eh? That's unfortunate."

"I never meant to say that she was to blame because—"

"Never mind what. She has a chip on her shoulder ready to be knocked off, and you've forgotten your oil can."

"My oil can!" Pauline sat bolt upright in surprise. "What in the world do you mean?"

"You reminded me of a story I once read in a book written by a wise woman, about a workman she saw in a trolley car. He was a shabby, poor-looking man, and he sat near the door. It was winter, and every time a passenger boarded the car or left it, the door had to be opened and then shut again to keep out the bitter cold. It was one of those sliding double doors that squeak. You know the kind, in the old-fashioned cars?"

Pauline nodded.

"Well, the squeaking kept getting worse and worse, it seemed, until it was driving all the passengers nearly crazy, and they were getting more irritated and annoyed every minute. Finally the shabby workman rose deliberately and bent over the doorframe—I don't know what you call it, but the metal part which the door slides on, you know? Well, before anyone knew what he intended to do, he had pulled out of his pocket a little tin oil can, and began oiling that metal slide. When he sat down again the door had stopped squeaking, and everyone, including the conductor, drew a sigh of relief.

"How did you happen to have that with you?" somebody asked this public benefactor.

"Wa-al," he drawled, "I mostly always carry it around in my pocket. Seems as if I allus everywhere find so many things that squeak."

Cousin Molly stopped and looked steadily at Pauline. "See the point?" she asked. "It's a good thing to have some sort of oil can handy when people's tempers get squeaky. There are so many squeaky things in the world, that it's best to carry your oil of kindness with you all the time."

Pauline was very sober. She sat a moment longer, then rose. Her step as she went back to the room across the hall was no longer a stamp.

"Kit," Cousin Molly heard her say gently, "it wasn't your fault at all. I'm sorry you misunderstood me. Come, let's be friends."—The Comrade.

A MOTHER'S PRAYERS DID IT.

While Rev. Henry Ostrom, D.D., evangelist, was recently holding a meeting in Woodburn, N. Y., there came forward in response to the invitation, a young man who sought and upon the same evening, found Jesus Christ in the pardon of sins. This young man proved to be Mr. Albert Hole, Keith's headliner in vaudeville. He is barely nineteen years of age, but has been singing in public for the last ten years, having been such a great success both in this country and Europe, that his services are constantly in demand. He has been, possibly, one of the most popular and well-known of vaudeville singers, but that night after listening to the message of salvation he came to the altar, and from that moment on his whole life has been changed. He immediately offered his services to Dr. Ostrom, and they were instantly accepted, and to-day he is singing the message in conjunction with that evangelist.

His conversion is genuine. He is even more enthusiastic in the service of gospel song than he was in the popular music of the day. When Dr. Ostrom said to him, "Hole, no one will throw bouquets at you now—you will receive no applause," he replied, "I am singing with a different object in view to-day." The evangelist then said, "I can not begin to give you the money you have been receiving" (his income had been $250 a week and expenses). He replied, "I know that well, but there is one thing I can do; I can sing sinners to Christ, and that is compensation enough for any man."

What is the cause of this sudden and marked change in the life of a young man whose surroundings were such as to please and flatter one and cause him to continue in the way that he was going? Dr. Ostrom states that, so far as he is able to learn, a mother's prayers were back of it all. She said to the evangelist: "I locked myself in my room and determined to pray for my boy until he was saved." In speaking to Mr. Hole about it, the latter said: "It is this way. My mother's prayers lay across my path and I could not get over them. She not only prayed, but she told me that she prayed." What a remarkable testimony to the efficacy of prayer in this day when there is so much criticism, so much discussion, so much question, concerning this great duty of all Christians! Here is a young man whose environment was finely calculated to nurture him in sin and frivolity, who suddenly blossoms forth in a remarkable change of heart, and testifies that he "couldn't get over his mother's prayers."

For the next few weeks Dr. Ostrom will preach and Mr. Hole will sing at Waukegan, Ill., where a great work of grace is being wrought. This testimony to the power of a mother's prayers to finally win her boy is given in the hope that many other mothers who possibly have grown weary in their petitions may take fresh courage in holding their boys up to the throne of grace.—Northwestern Christian Advocate.

GOOD ADVICE.

An unprepared man went to address a Sunday school. Thinking to be funny, he asked this question: "What would you do before so many bright boys and girls, who expected a speech from you, if you had nothing to say?" "I'd keep quiet," replied a small boy.—St. Louis Mirror.

Telephone Always on Guard

There is never a moment, day or night, when your Bell Telephone is not a protection.

In the busy hours of the day and the silent watches of the night, the switchboard operator is always ready to answer a call.

The telephone is as much a part of the protective system of each community as the police and fire departments.

There's always a feeling of security in the knowledge that close at hand is the means of calling aid quickly when you most need it.

More than 70,000 cities and towns are protected day and night by the Bell Telephone system; 7,500,000 Bell telephones are on guard. In thousands of rural communities it is the chief reliance in emergencies and times of danger.

Editorial

NOW IS THE TIME.

This is the most favorable time of the year for placing the Advocate in the homes of our people. Nor is there any work more important than this, since the church paper pleads for and strengthens every other worthy cause. The testimony of our leaders is unanimous on this point. In the recent Newspaper Census published by the American Newspaper Annual and Directory occurred the following significant statement: "Every class, every cult, every trade, every profession, every fad, every 'ism' has its printed spokesman." The various evil agencies are scattering their literature all over the country, and the only way to counteract successfully its pernicious influence is to sow alongside of it the good seed of the Kingdom. The pastor is not more than half awake who does not realize the urgent importance of doing this. And, as we have said, the first months of the year constitute the most favorable season for accomplishing this work. Other things will be in the way later. And there are a large number of subscriptions now past due, which will be dropped if allowed to go uncared for much longer. Already, we have begun to discontinue the trial subscriptions which were sent in last fall; and if possible they should be renewed at once.

Let it be remembered that the New Orleans Advocate is the official organ of Louisiana and Mississippi Methodism. It deals with the work in these two States with a degree of fulness that no other paper does. No person who has any desire to keep up with what the Methodists of these two commonwealths are doing can afford to be without it. Many of our pastors have wrought well for the Advocate, and we highly appreciate the good service which they have rendered. If all the others would do as well as some have done, our circulation would have such a boom as it has never had. And who doubts that the beneficial influence would be felt in every department of our Church work? Lend us a hand in your charge, brother. The weather is fine and the opportunity to mix and mingle with the people is such as we often do not have in the winter. DO NOT FORGET THAT JANUARY, FEBRUARY, MARCH AND APRIL ARE THE BEST MONTHS TO GET SUBSCRIBERS. Two of these months are already gone. Those who let the other two pass by unutilized will find the task much more difficult thereafter.

SOMEWHAT OF A MUDDLE.

A press dispatch sent out from Atlanta, Ga., bearing date of Feb. 18, reads as follows:

"Judging from his comments in Atlanta, to-day, Bishop Thomas F. Gailor, of Tennessee, is not greatly concerned over the present day tendencies of women in the matter of dress. He has no censure for the slit skirt nor for any of the modern dances.

"The agitation about women's dress and modern dances is useless," said Bishop Gailor. "They have a right to dress as they please, and it is my belief that a respectable woman is going to remain respectable and conduct herself in a respectable manner whether in the street or in the ballroom. And if a woman is not respectable, agitation will not make her respectable. The reformers have inflicted upon the country a senseless and baseless agitation about white slavery, 95 per cent of which is pure sensationalism. The ceaseless agitation and shouting about 'white slavery' does not lessen what little traffic in women there is. It serves merely to increase it."

From Nashville, Tenn., on the same date the statement appearing below was given to the public:

"In a letter to the clergy of the diocese of Tennessee, Bishop Thomas F. Gailor, of the Protestant Episcopal Church, indulges in some strong criticisms of the present generation. He says:

"Our country swarms with the salaried representatives and agents of great eleemosynary, social, industrial, educational and religious foundations, and these agents must earn their living by advocating reforms in their several departments. Thus, the whole stress of thinking and planning for the improvement of the race is put upon mere material valuations. This is true to an alarming extent in educational movements, and is also true to a great extent in social and political affairs. Therefore the cold materialist, who regards this present life as comprising the whole of human destiny, takes advantage of the enthusiasm of the reformers and co-operates with them to create for us a condition of society that is rank with abominable deceptions, hypocrisies and impurities. Society and government, the drama and the novel, the dress and amusements of the hour are saturated with materialism, with the physical, sensuous interpretation of human life."

The spirit of these two utterances does not seem to us to be at all compatible. We scarcely need to say that we think the latter is far the sounder of the two, and we should like to think that it properly voices the sentiments of Bishop Gailor.

If we knew for a certainty that the first dispatch quotes the distinguished prelate correctly, we should be disposed to take sharp issue with him as to some of his affirmations. We are not willing to concede that women have a right to dress as they please. To be sure, they have a right to exercise their tastes in such matters so long as they keep within the bounds of decency and propriety; but when their garb becomes of such a character as to constitute a menace to the morals of society the question is one with which the public may legitimately concern itself; aye, more—it is then the duty of every right-thinking man and woman to speak out plainly on the subject. The fact that every civilized community recognizes in its laws that there are limits beyond which people may not go in failing to observe the ordinary proprieties in the clothing of their bodies, utterly refutes the contention that either the males or females of the race have a right to attire themselves as they please. Agitation may not make a non-respectable woman respectable, but it may have the effect of preventing some who are decent from being caught in the maelstrom of a society that is rotten and dragged down into the depths of degradation. Few things are more contagious than the immodesty and unchastity of persons who are regarded as being fashionable and as belonging to the class that sets the social pace.

Fully as objectionable is the Bishop's reputed sneer at the fight that has been going on throughout the nation against white slavery. In our humble opinion, never in the world's history has there been a nobler crusade than this, and there is little justification for any attempt to depreciate it. There may be some sensationalism mixed up with the agitation, but the evidence adduced by the various Vice Commissions of the country, by the Travelers' Aid Societies in our cities, by the courts of the land, and by every other agency that has probed into the matter, shows that the stern facts concerning this terrible "traffic in souls" are horrifying enough to warrant fully all of the excitement to which it has given rise. The declaration that the outcry against this monster iniquity "serves merely to increase it" is certainly a remarkable one; especially so in view of the number of convictions that have taken place under the law enacted against it by the Federal Congress. It will take something more than any man's mere empty assertion to convince the public that this widespread movement has been hurtful rather than helpful.

As we have said, we are disposed to view with favor the second utterance credited to Bishop Gailor; indeed, with practically all of it we are in the most hearty accord. But we confess that it has surprised us somewhat, since, if reports be true, he has been quite hostile to the claims of the Methodist Church in connection with Vanderbilt University and has been specially critical of Bishop Hoss in his relations to that institution, who has been standing for essentially the same principles that he is here represented as commending. Has he been misrepresented in his attitude toward that regrettable controversy, or has he had a new vision of things that has set him to talking in language that would not be unfitting upon the lips of Southern Methodism's great leader? And what is the explanation of these two dissimilar statements which come bearing the same date and which are credited to the same source? Has some irresponsible reporter, either in Atlanta or Nashville, drawn on his imagination and made "the Bishop of Tennessee" say things that he never dreamed of? If so, the matter should be cleared up and the mendacious quill-driver should be made to apologize. We fear there is really danger, unless this second utterance credited to the Right Reverend Bishop is in some way modified, that the pro-Kirkland-Carnegie Methodists in Tennessee and the contiguous States may cease to burn incense to him as some of them have been doing, apparently as a sort of means of making his extolled breadth disparage the reprobated narrowness of our chief pastors.

A MOST IMPORTANT MEASURE.

The Committee of the Mississippi State Senate having the matter in charge has reported favorably on the Bill submitting to the people of that commonwealth the repeal of Section 270 of the State Constitution, which prohibits bequests of money or other property to any institution owned and operated by a religious denomination. As we have before stated in the columns of the Advocate, we are most heartily in favor of this movement. There is little analogy between the present constitutional provision in Mississippi and the old European law of Mortmain, and, in our judgment, this prohibition has, under the conditions existing in this age, nothing to justify its continuance. It shows a suspiciousness of the Churches which is wholly unwarranted, and discriminates against them in a manner which is a reflection upon the State of Mississippi. Now is the time for every man who thinks that this reproach ought to be stricken from the State Constitution to make his influence felt. If you wish to see this done, why not exercise the inalienable of every citizen to express himself to those chosen to represent him in a legislative capacity? It would also perhaps be well to send such officials petitions signed by their constituents from every community. What is done in behalf of this important measure, will need to be done at once.

PERSONAL AND OTHER NOTES.

Mrs. H. G. Henderson and Miss Henderson, of Lexington, Miss., have recently spent several days in New Orleans. It was a pleasure to meet them, though we regretted that they did not bring Dr. Henderson along with them.

Mr. J. B. Streater, of Black Hawk, Miss., and Miss Marle Meek, of Lexington, Miss., have been appreciated guests of Mrs. R. A. Meek at her residence in this city, 5914 Coliseum street, for the past few days. Brother Streater spent last Saturday and Sunday in Gulfport, Miss.

We are pleased to know that Rev. M. L. Burton, the beloved pastor of the First M. E. Church, South, of Gulfport, Miss., who has been seriously ill for some weeks, is continuing to improve and that he was able to be present at the service last Sunday morning, when his pulpit was ably filled by Rev. W. M. Williams, Manager of the Mississippi Methodist Orphanage at Jackson.

We make grateful acknowledgment to Rev. W. R. Harvell for a club of 5 subscribers from Athens and Arizona, La. Of his work, Brother Harvell says: "Things are looking up in this charge. I am preaching to fine congregations. We have built and paid for one new church since Conference. I expect to preach in it for the first time on the first Sunday in March."

Rev. W. W. Perry, of Haynesville, La., is remembering the Advocate in his rounds, and the good effects of his work are already beginning to show upon our mailing files. It is our impression that Brother Perry sent in more subscriptions than any other man in our three patronizing Conferences last year. He believes that it pays to circulate the church paper, and knows how to succeed in doing so.

Brother F. A. Howell, of Durant, Miss., who has long been noted for his loyalty to the Church and the cause of Christ, favored us a few days since with a fine club of subscriptions which he had taken the trouble to secure. He is one of the Advocate's staunch friends, and has been doing a like service for our paper for a number of years. May the Lord continue to bless him and prosper the work of his hands!

In a personal note to the Editor, Rev. G. W. Bachman, the esteemed colporteur of the Mississippi Conferences, says: "I am writing by guess, as I can scarcely see the lines. I have hope of relief in a month or so by a surgical operation." We deeply regret that this faithful servant of the Master continues to be thus afflicted, and we earnestly pray that he may indeed have perfect relief from his impaired vision at an early date.

The Advocate has been brought out this week with the many interruptions and hindrances incident to the Mardi Gras season. We generally manage to get through the Christmas and New Year holidays pretty well, but we confess that the Carnival is rather too much for us. This statement will explain why our paper is a day later than usual.

Rev. E. G. Wood, of Pollock, La., says: "The work of the year has started off nicely. Since the Annual Conference I have received 13 members into the Church, have baptized two infants, and officiated at two weddings."

Rev. W. D. Bennett, of Randolph, Miss., reports that his people have received him kindly and that he is hard at work. He has called for sample copies of the Advocate, and will make an energetic effort to extend its circulation among his parishioners.

Rev. N. B. Harmon, in a personal note to the Editor, states that $9000 has been secured for the liquidation of the debt on our church at Yazoo City, Miss., the total amount of which is $10,000. This means, of course, that this incumbrance will become a thing of the past at an early date.

Rev. T. H. Lipscomb, of Starkville, Miss., gave us a club of 15 subscriptions (most of them new) from his choice charge a few days since. Brother Lipscomb is in Nashville this week, attending the Interdenominational Christian Workers' Conference and the Educational Conference called by Dr. Stonewall Anderson.

In a business note to the Advocate office, Rev. A. H. Williams, of Shannon, Miss., says: "I had a fine hearing at Troy last Sunday. Things look good hereabouts." Brother Williams is mindful of the interests of the Conference organ in his rounds and we heartily appreciate his kindness in this respect.

Rev. Hilary Westbrook, of Waynesboro, Miss., is happy in his work and is encouraged by the prospect ahead. He states that the recent visit of Rev. J. T. Leggett, the presiding elder of the Meridian District, was a great blessing to his people, his preaching on that occasion being of an unusually high order.

Bishop W. B. Murrah will spend the first Sunday in April at Ruston, La., and while there he will dedicate the new residence of the Superintendent of the Louisiana Orphanage, which is known as Higginbotham Memorial Home. We are grateful to Superintendent Vaughan for a kindly invitation to be present on this occasion.

Rev. W. M. Sullivan, of Shubuta, Miss., sent us on the 20th inst., 8 new subscriptions and 2 renewals; and he says that the end is not yet. We scarcely need to say that we highly appreciate this good work in behalf of the Conference organ. Brother Sullivan closed his good letter with the statement, "Our work is enlarging."

A note from Rev. B. P. Jaco, bearing date of February 19, contains among other things the following statement: "I have just received a telegram from Bishop Atkins in which he agrees to hold the Greenville District Conference at Jonestown, April 14-16, and the Winona District Conference at Tutwiler, April 17-19."

A neat little card in a tiny envelope brings the announcement of the arrival of an infant daughter, Mary Love, in the parsonage home of Rev. and Mrs. H. F. Tolle, at Newton, Miss., on February 19. We extend congratulations to the happy parents, and pray that a kindly Providence may watch over both the babe and the mother.

Rev. D. R. McDougal, of Kossuth, Miss., thinks that the outlook is propitious for a fruitful year's work in his charge. He finds that our church periodicals are circulated to a very small extent in his territory and is planning a campaign to supply this deficiency. His efforts in this direction are, we are glad to say, already producing good results.

Rev. W. R. Whatley, of Provencal, La., who is supplying that charge this year, favored us with some subscriptions a few days since. He states that our church at Provencal which was destroyed by a storm last March has been rebuilt. We are pleased to know that our people at that place again have a house in which to worship and carry on their work for the Master.

In renewing her subscription, Mrs. Blanche Thibodaux, of Gramercy, La., takes time to write a few words commendatory of the Advocate. We are grateful to our friends for their messages of encouragement, as well as for their patronage and support. They tend to heal the many wounds that the occupant of a tripod almost invariably receives, being, as he is, a public target.

A correspondent sends us the following statement: "The people of Homewood, Miss., and the surrounding communities greatly regretted to give up the Rev. and Mrs. E. H. Cooley. Brother Cooley was a most active and efficient worker, and the people of Walnut Grove, Miss., are to be congratulated upon having secured his services as their pastor. We pray God's richest blessings upon the labors of these worthy itinerants in their new field."

Rev. M. M. Black, the pastor of our Broad Street Church at Hattiesburg, Miss., has received 25 members since the Annual Conference and his work in all departments is going forward in a most gratifying manner. Among other things he is not forgetting the claims of the Advocate, having already favored us with 11 subscriptions from his charge. Brother Black is one of the most scholarly and cultured Methodist ministers in Mississippi.

Of the recent Conference of Sunday school workers at Hot Springs, Ark., Miss Elizabeth Kilpatrick says: "It was a forward-looking body of workers. The addresses of Dr. Chappell and Dr. Bulla were of a very high order. Bishop Atkins also contributed much to the success of the occasion. Twenty-eight Annual Conferences were represented. Besides myself, Rev. V. C. Curtiss was present from North Mississippi. Delayed trains cause me to miss my Little Rock engagement, much to my regret."

Rev. Hugh K. McKee, of Oak Ridge, Miss., writes: "A meeting will be held in the Methodist Church at this place at 10 o'clock a.m. on Saturday, February 28, for the purpose of organizing the Methodist Sunday schools of Warren County into an Association. All officers and teachers and one delegate for every 30 pupils will be entitled to participate in this meeting. It is hoped that every Sunday school in this county will be well represented. Brother R. A. Maddox is expected to be with us and other noted Sunday school workers have been invited."

We are in receipt of a most attractive card from Rev. C. A. Bowen, of Dadeville, Ala., which reads as follows: "Official Bulletin—Born on Feb. 14, 1914, to Mr. and Mrs. C. A. Bowen, a baby boy; weight, twelve and a half pounds; hair, black; eyes, blue; everybody happy. His name is Cawthon Asbury Bowen." We extend hearty congratulations to our worthy young friend and his accomplished helpmeet; and especially do we felicitate the honored grandfather, Rev. J. A. Bowen, formerly a member of the North Mississippi Conference, but now a force for righteousness in the good old State of Alabama.

Last Saturday, February 21, was an interesting day at the Rayne Memorial parsonage, this city. It was the birthday of Mrs. Felix R. Hill, Sr., and in commemoration of that event a family reunion took place, bringing all the members of it together for the first time in thirty years. Those present were Dr. and Mrs. Felix R. Hill, Sr., and Rev. and Mrs. F. R. Hill, Jr., and their daughter, Kathryn, of New Orleans; Dr. John S. Hill of Columbus, Miss., Mr. and Mrs. Edward Jay Hill of Louisville, Ky., Dr. and Mrs. David Spence Hill of New Orleans and Mrs. D. F. Scoffern (the mother of Mrs. F. R. Hill, Jr.) of Miles, Michigan.

From a business note written by Rev. W. H. Saunders, of Fernwood, Miss., to the Advocate office on the 18th inst., we glean the following items: "We are moving on very well and things are prospering with us. Dr. I. L. Peebles will preach a few days for us the coming week on doctrinal lines. We are to have Rev. J. B. Andrews of Siloam Springs, Ark., with us in June in a union meeting for the people of the town and the surrounding country. We will soon be ready to start on the construction of a Sunday school annex to our Fernwood church, and we expect to let the contract for our new church at Knoxville in a few weeks."

The new Washington Heights M. E. Church, South, of Memphis Tenn., will be formally opened next Sunday by Bishop J. H. McCoy. We acknowledge our indebtedness to our esteemed friend, Mr. J. W. Wyatt, who is one of the active laymen of this congregation, for a cordial invitation to attend these opening exercises and to be an associate guest of Bishop McCoy in his home while in the Bluff City. Brother Wyatt further adds: "We have been in our new auditorium since the first Sunday in February. Our Sunday school is doing nicely—is growing and enthusiastic; and as soon as we have become accustomed to our new quarters, I feel sure that we shall be able to do telling work."

Dr. James A. Ivy, who was a prominent figure in the Methodist Church of Louisiana for more than half a century, died at Mer Rouge, La., on Thursday, February 19, after an illness lasting several weeks. He was born near Georgetown, Ky., in 1825, and was educated and ordained to the ministry in that State. He came to Louisiana in 1853 and in the course of his ministerial career filled a number of important charges and also the office of presiding elder. He was a chaplain in the Confederate Army and later was in charge of an extensive colportage work maintained in this city by the Southwestern American Bible Society. He was a man of unusual gifts and made his influence widely felt. The body of the deceased was brought to New Orleans, and, after obsequies conducted at the home of his daughter, Mrs. A. H. Goodin, at 435 Audubon Street, by Dr. S. H. Werlein, was interred in the family tomb in Metairie Cemetery. We extend sympathy to the bereaved.

We are indebted to the following brethren, to whom we have not elsewhere made acknowledgment, for two or more subscriptions sent in within the past few days: Rev. John G. Sloan, Dubach, La., 6; Rev. H. E. Carter, Leakesville, Miss., 3; Rev. R. S. Walton, Bunkie, La., 2; Rev. W. D. Bennett, Randolph, Miss., 2; Rev. C. M. Crossley, Forest, Miss., 3; Rev. C. R. A. Brantley, Marie, Miss., 3.

The Minutes of the last session of the Louisiana Annual Conference are being distributed this week. Rev. J. F. Foster, their publisher, is entitled to much credit for the admirable manner in which he has performed the task committed to his hands. The printing and mechanical work was done in the Advocate office, and is up to a very high standard. Indeed, we have not seen it surpassed by that done in getting out Annual Conference Minutes anywhere in the South.

From Columbia, La., Rev. J. M. Alford writes: "Things are going on well in this delightful charge. The people of Columbia know how to take care of their preacher and his family. They gave us a liberal 'pounding' to begin with and almost daily valuable things are sent to the parsonage. Notwithstanding the discouraging conditions caused by the floods last year, over $200 has been paid for ministerial support during the two months since Conference. A few members have been added to the Church, and the attendance on public worship has doubled. The people have pledged their co-operation, and I feel that this will be a year of progress in this field." Brother Alford will at once begin a campaign for the circulation of the Advocate among his people, which we dare say will prove a success, since he usually succeeds in whatever he undertakes.

We make our most polite bow to Rev. J. A. Goad, the faithful pastor on the New Albany (Miss.) Circuit, who gave us a few days since 3 new subscriptions and 8 renewals from his charge. Brother Goad also sounds an optimistic note from his field of service. He says: "Our work is moving on nicely. Our first quarterly conference was held on the 14th inst. Rev. J. H. Mitchell, our presiding elder, was present and preached a fine sermon, to the edification of all who were present. Everything points to a good year. The Corinth District Conference meets with us this year and I here take the liberty of extending the Editor of the Advocate a cordial invitation to attend." We are grateful to Brother Goad for this courtesy, and should circumstances permit, we would count it a privilege to be with the Corinth District brethren in their annual gathering.

MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE JOURNAL.

The Journal has been out for nearly two weeks. If any one has failed to receive his allotment kindly drop me a postal card.

We had hoped to get out a flawless Journal this year, but in spite of our best efforts a few errors crept in.

In the Alphabetical Roll the address of W. M. Sullivan is given as Lumberton, instead of Shubuta.

The name of N. S. Loftus, Louin, should appear in the list of Supplies.

N. B. Harmon, Yazoo City, writes that his assessment for Conference Claimants should be $185, and not $200 as appears in Table No. 3.

There may be other errors we have not discovered, or had attention called to them.

MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE

Veterans' Day—Second Sunday in March.

An inspiring theme for March 8th:

"Pioneer Preachers, Makers of Mississippi History."

"Other men labored and ye are entered into their labors."

During the year 1914, what will the 57,510 members of the Mississippi Conference pay for the support of our veterans? We should pay them the average salary of an active Methodist preacher, which was during 1913 $767, but the largest amount paid any of them is $275.

Take the old preachers' collection on the 2d Sunday in March, and send it to S. A. Tomlinson, Gulfport, Miss.

JAMES WILLIAM CAPERS GRAYSON, one of the oldest members of the Church, at Moselle, Miss., has gone from us after serving the Church and his Lord for many years. He was born near Charleston, S. C., August 10, 1830; and joined the army of the Confederacy in June, 1861, and served as a first lieutenant for four years. In July 1869, he was married to Miss Mary E. Dickerson, who survives to mourn his death with a host of relatives and friends. He was sheriff of Jones County, for four years, serving in that capacity with great efficiency. Brother Grayson joined the M. E. Church, South, early in life, and was for a number of years one of the most useful members of our Church at Moselle. After a few days illness, he fell asleep in Jesus on January 9, 1914. We miss him from his accustomed place in the Church, but we bow in submission to the will of Him who doeth all things well. We realize that our loss is his gain.

J. F. McCLELLAN.

Died at the home of her parents, Mr. and Mrs. C. C. Phillips, at Keithville, La., MYRA ELIZABETH (their only child) aged 2 years and 15 days. This little darling was a bright sweet-natured child. She awoke in the morning with a smile on her face and was happy and good all the day through, and her presence made home the brighter. O the precious memory of her many little endearing ways during her brief stay in this earthly home, where her life began to unfold like an exquisite flower, but was plucked by the Master's hand to reach full blossom in heaven. We sorrow, but not without hope, for we expect to meet her after a season, and now as we linger here, we are comforted with the thought of her abiding joy. She went home before the chilling blasts of sorrow had ever swept over her soul. From a life of happiness here lasting only for a brief period, she passed on to one of eternal joy in a home not made with hands, whose builder and maker is God.

AUNT EMMA.

Died at her home in Greenwood, La., Dec. 22, 1913, Mrs. MARY H. HOWELL, aged 78 years. Her death brought deep sorrow to her many friends. She was a lovely character, leading a life of activity, cheering the sick, comforting the sad, and laughing with the merry. "Miss Mollie" was "Grandmother" to most all the babies in town. Her yard blossomed under the skillful touch of her hand. Much of her time was spent there. Trailing vine and flowering shrub alike obeyed her wishes, for did she not want them to express God's love by giving fragrance to the world—so like the life she lived, which as we view it now, seems so complete, filled with kind deeds to friends and neighbors? Any in need might draw on her time, strength and means. It seems to us that we never saw a woman who could crowd as much loving service to humanity into one day as she. For years she was the treasurer of our Woman's Foreign Missionary Society. A noble woman has gone, making earth poorer, heaven richer and leaving like an aftermath treasures in memory of her beautiful life. Praise God for Christian mothers!

A FRIEND.

The subject of this sketch, COLUMBUS K. HALL, son of William H., and Harriet A. Hall, was born in Marshall County, Miss., in 1863; and went home to God on October 29, 1913. Brother Hall joined the M. E. Church, South, at Old Asbury Church in 1882, during the pastorate of Rev. J. W. Anderson, and was licensed to preach in 1892. Brother Hall did not enter the itinerancy, because he felt that his service was needed among those whom he knew best. His father died many years ago, and he felt that it was his mission to take care of his mother. He was for many years superintendent of the Sunday school at his home church. He was always at his best when preaching to the children who had grown up in his own Sunday school. The writer has heard him in the silent grove pleading for the salvation of their souls, as earnestly as if they were his own. And I have seen him take them in his arms and pray God for their salvation. And I pray that the mantle of this good man may fall on the brother who remains to mourn his loss. Brother Hall was an independent thinker, and he stood firmly on Christ, the solid rock, realizing that all other ground was sinking sand. He was heard to say just a few days before the end came that he was not afraid to die. He had that perfect confidence in God that drove away all fear of death. He knew well in whom he had put his trust, and felt that his heart need not be troubled. May the blessings of our Heavenly Father be with those whom are left to mourn the loss of this true and worthy man and faithful worker. His pastor, G. C. GREGORY.

MRS. L. S. C. HOFFPAUR.

Mrs. L. S. C. Hoffpaur (nee Brown), wife of Silas Hoffpaur, was born in Chickasaw County, Miss., April 13, 1849. She came to Louisiana at the age of ten years, and was married to Silas Hoffpaur in 1869. To them were born ten children—eight sons and two daughters, all of whom are living. Their home was a Christian home. It was this writer's privilege to be intimately associated with Sister Hoffpaur during the three years that he was her pastor in the Indian Bayou Circuit. Their home was the preacher's home; here pastors always found a welcome and she did all she could to make them feel at home. I shall never forget her kindness to me, and the many encouraging talks she gave me. She always made it a rule to attend upon the ordinances of God's house. She looked upon the Church as a great institution, and in all her conversation she exalted it, and proved to the world by her life that she loved it and placed it first. She had cause to rejoice, as she saw the fruits of her life and Christian fidelity before her children. She lived to see them all married, and five of her sons called to the ministry—three of them are members of the Louisiana Conference, and two are local preachers. The other sons are prominent business men and faithful official members of the Church. Her two daughters were converted in early childhood, and are living consecrated Christian lives. Surely, she felt amply paid for the pains she had taken in raising her children. Her sickness was of short duration. She was taken ill about 2 o'clock in the afternoon on Sept. 7, 1913, and died the same evening at 15 minutes past eleven. She seemed to be impressed some time before that she would not live long and made all the arrangements concerning her burial, and she remarked on several occasions that she was prepared to go and meet her Lord. She was laid to rest by the side of her husband at the Bethel Church, on Indian Bayou Circuit, with Rev. Jas. I. Hoffpaur and the Rev. Mr. Loug, officiating.

Tidings From the Field

Lake Cormorant and Hinds (North Miss.)

Dear Brother Meek: We think it only justice to our people, and to the brethren, that we write you a few words with regard to our work, here on the Lake Cormorant and Hinds charge. Our first quarterly conference convened on February 14. Brother J. W. Dorman, our most excellent presiding elder preached us two strong, practical sermons. The attendance was small, on account of the sudden drop in the temperature, but the reports were good from all of the churches. We have made a much better beginning than was made last year, and hope for a successful ending. We were brought under renewed obligations to the good people of Eudora, when we returned home from the quarterly conference and found that they had been to the parsonage and had given us a "shower" of good things for the pantry—not only beautiful articles, but articles that are good, useful and valuable. Words cannot fully express our appreciation of this unmerited kindness. May God help us to feed their souls with the blessed truths of the Gospel, which shall make us all "wise unto salvation and give us eternal life."—A. F. Moore, P. C.

Byhalia, Miss.

We are closing our first quarter in this charge and feel that God has greatly blessed us. I have been busy, but the work has been a great joy and has been soul-strengthening. The good people have been thoughtful and helpful at every church that I am serving. I find wide-open doors in all the homes, a warm handshake, and souls who love God and want the Gospel. I find earnest Sunday school superintendents, teachers, and laymen, and consecrated women willing and anxious to help the pastor labor for the salvation of souls. The parsonage is located at Byhalia, and here we are happy and well cared for. At Fountain Head and Emory, I find every home has a room for the pastor. At Byhalia, we have Rev. R. M. Davis and his excellent family; and I count it a great privilege to be associated with them daily. We know him as the logician of our Conference, and it is a great treat to me to sit at his feet and learn things that I trust will abide with me through life. He has done a great work here and the people are strongly attached to him. Miss Kilpatrick was with us Sunday evening, February 1, in the interest of the Sunday school work; and had a full house. Her earnest appeal for better Sunday schools and her timely teachings were appreciated and profitable. We hope to have her come our way again. Brother Tucker, our presiding elder, was with us February 15, and gave us two splendid sermons. He held our first quarterly conference the following Monday morning. The congregation on Monday morning looked like old time Methodism. Many men and women were out, showing an interest in the work of the Church, and we had a spiritual uplift. The business part of the conference was gratifying, too. Nearly all the finances for the first quarter were paid, the pastor's salary was increased, the other assessments made, and all work attended to satisfactorily. Among other providences, I find I have a young wide-awake presiding elder, who is in great favor not only with the churches and pastors but with all who know him. He is deeply interested in the Church of our Master. My health is much improved and I have met every appointment except two, when the weather was such that there was no congregation, therefore no disappointment. I am working for the Master and hope to see souls saved this year. Pray for us.—L. A. McKeown.

STUDY TO MEET THE DEMAND.

It is true with many of us, that we desire to do great things for our blessed Lord, and when conscious that we are not able to do great things, we are so prone to feel excusable in sitting down and doing nothing at all. A feeling of this kind has been the cause of many a would-be valuable life being wasted.

What is the trouble? We do not study God's Word enough to enable us to have daily strength and help for our daily needs. The increasing strength and time required to secure our material daily bread is depriving many of the nourishment received only from the bread of heaven. This bread is necessary to those who are giving their strength to the building up of the Kingdom of Heaven on earth. Jesus said, "It is written, man shall not live by bread alone, but by every word that proceedeth out of the mouth of God." There are thousands of Christians who in their early life started out for the Celestial City, but they are famishing by the wayside because they do not daily partake of the bread of life, which is the Word of God.

Often I think of this Scripture, "Study to show thyself approved unto God a workman that needeth not to be ashamed, rightly dividing the word of truth." So let each of us strive to be a workman. How? By spending at least fifteen minutes each day in the earnest study of God's Word, so that we may not say: "Somewhere between sunrise and sunset two golden hours, each set with sixty diamond minutes were lost forever." If this time has been spent in earnest study of God's Word, you will feel that you have gained two hours, and not lost them. Since Jesus has put his spirit into us we ought to learn more fully of him and do more perfectly his will.

Jesus said: "If ye know these things, happy are ye if ye do them." If we only have good conduct and never speak in praise of our Lord, our friends will never know the religion that rules our lives. How can we know him? By studying his Word and keeping in mind the earnest desire to bring only honor to him, "whose we are, and whom we serve."

Let us so qualify ourselves that we may interest any children that we may come in contact with, by telling them Bible stories or speaking about the Sunday school lesson; and as soon as they can read intelligently they will seek to learn more of these things. Then, too, we might be God's instruments in winning them to Christ. Women who have qualified themselves can get into the hearts of women and children as no one else can do.

Let us feel that we are missionaries for God. He needs our service, but far more our souls have need of him. Oh! that each of us may press forward in this great work, never stopping because of hardships, for we may be the means of leading some soul to Christ, which if we do not prepare may go down to degradation and ruin. MRS. W. J. SARGENT. Cheraw, Miss.

BILOXI WESLEY HOUSE.

We are, to my mind, located in one of the most beautiful spots on the map. I guess one reason I feel thus, is because I love the place and the work so much. This beautiful property on the beach, covered with large live oaks hanging with moss, has recently been purchased by the Woman's Missionary Society of the Mississippi Conference, and to-day (Feb. 6) the lumber is coming to us to make the necessary changes in the building, that we may be better fitted to do more for the people here on Point Cadet. Work will soon begin on the Wesley House, and when complete, the Workers' Home will be upstairs; as will also our bedrooms, reception hall, dining room, kitchen and bath; and the lower story will be used exclusively for the work. The Chapel will be enlarged and a Day Nursery added; this will be such a help, for now the mothers have to take their little children with them to the factories, because they have no place to leave them. One mother told me she took her baby with her one cold day a few weeks ago—she made ten cents that day, and came near losing her baby that night. She seemed delighted when I told her that in shrimp season we hoped to have the Day Nursery ready for use. Our Sunday school keeps up well. We are using the "Star" system now, and the children are very much interested, and like the gold stars better than the silver ones, for they show to all that they brought an offering. Our Chapel on last Sunday night was almost full, and we had good attention, too. We have preaching each second and fourth Sunday morning by Mr. Carter, who is attending the school at the Camp Grounds; preaching every Sunday evening—Mr. Carter preaching for us again on first and third Sunday evenings. Prayer meeting each Tuesday evening. My cooking class for Tuesday afternoons grew too large for our kitchen, so I had to divide it, and now have another on Friday afternoons. We have a Story Hour on Thursday afternoons. I tell stories, we sing, play games, etc. Yesterday, I began reading a book to them, all seemed so deeply interested and were quiet and attentive. In our Missionary Society day, last week I started a new plan, giving out books for them to read, passing them out to others—we have three books out. On Friday evenings we have our Young Girls' Club. We are organized and pay ten cents a month dues. They are now cutting garments and sewing on the machine, and all seem to enjoy each meeting thoroughly. Occasionally we have a social meeting with games, songs, contests and light refreshments; each girl is allowed to invite a friend to the social meetings. Monday and Thursday evenings we have a night school, when all the children who work in the factories and can not attend during the day, are allowed to come.

THE WESLEY HOUSE SHOWER.

Let me tell you of our "shower," but I prefer calling it a "cloudburst." October 16, was the day appointed for "Wesley House Day," but even before then the "shower" began, and really all the clouds had not disappeared a few days ago when we received twenty-six towels and a sheet. On October 16, we had at least fifty guests, not including those of our community. The girls, with my assistance had prepared a short program, which all seemed to enjoy, and quite a pleasant afternoon and evening was spent by all present. The amount of our "shower" as estimated was (including sheets, pillow cases, towels (of which we received 275) blankets, table linen, fruit, pickles, etc.) about $250. Cash $26. I feel that we indeed have something to make our hearts rejoice, and friends of Mississippi, who have "showered" us so liberally, imagine if you can, how we appreciate and enjoy all this. You should have seen us as we opened boxes and packages; yes, and barrels, and you would have some idea of our appreciation of all these good things; each and every thing has its place in adding joy and comfort to the Wesley House. Oh! the joy in doing these little things for Christ and for his little ones. We surely find happiness in doing things for others. Just an incident showing how these people appreciate every little act of kindness. Last Sunday evening an Austrian woman came to the Wesley House for us to telephone for a doctor for a sick child. When she left I told her I would go with her and see if I could give the child any relief before the doctor could come, for he said it would be at least an hour and a half before he could reach them; they thanked me for every little thing I did. I told the mother we would go over after service to see her, so we went. When we started to leave they offered us wine; we tried to explain to them why we did not drink it, the grandmother turned to a picture of Jesus turning water into wine, we told them that was our King, that we confessed our sins to him. She said "My Jesus, your Jesus, everybody's Jesus." We told them we were their friends and loved them, if they did come from a far-away country. These foreign people are all Catholic, and we have to feel our way as it were, but how I trust and pray that the influence of the people of the Wesley House at Point Cadet, Biloxi, Miss., may be felt throughout our community and even beyond.

"Is thy cruse of comfort wasting? Rise and share it with another, and through all the years of famine it shall serve thee and thy brother."

"Is thy burden hard and heavy? Do thy steps drag wearily? Help to bear thy brother's burden, God will bear both it and thee."

MISSIONARY NEWS.

The Real Religion.

Our country thought that Confucianism was the foundation of a nation. After the government changed to a Republic, all knew that Confucianism cannot fit in with the Republic. Men from the high classes began to hear our gospel, and despise us no more. Now is the time for us to open wide the door for men want to find the real religion. Wherever there is a meeting, men fill the place. For this reason we built a tent and in it can seat more than five hundred men. We have had five tent meetings this year and their effects are great. All the churches are too small to accommodate the attendance. If we can build churches in all the great cities, we cannot imagine how prosperous they will be in the future, for the whole nation looks toward Christianity. Let us not lose the opportunities.—Tsa Suh Tsz, Presiding Elder, Shanghai District, China.

The Blind See.

One night a blind masseur passed in front of our little preaching place in Komatsu while Brother Maruyama was preaching. He stopped outside a minute and heard the preacher say: "Sometimes blind men learn to see God quicker than we who have two eyes." On June 22 I baptized him and also at the same time the daughter of the principal of the School of Navigation there, in our Komatsu Chapel. If the people who have been supporting the Oshima work could only look into the bright and happy faces of these two people, redeemed by the glorious gospel of Jesus Christ, as I have looked into them, they would feel repaid for all the money they have contributed. Mr. Hashimoto, the blind masseur, was taking medicine constantly and getting weaker all the time before his conversion; now he takes no medicine, has become much stronger and is letting his light shine.—S. A. Stewart, Hiroshima, Japan.

Sailors Find Comfort.

In the Seamen's Department 13 services were held, with an attendance of 159; Scriptures given 119; tracts 500; packages of literature 959; books and magazines 500; ships visited 23; hospitals 5; money kept for men $240, of which $90 was sent home for them; employment was found for 663 men and the total attendance in the reading and game rooms was more than 6000. This department is open from seven in the morning until ten at night every day in the week. It has reading, game and writing rooms, dormitories, kitchen and dining room, bath room and baggage room. The British Consul has his locker in our baggage room and makes our work one arm of his service in British shipping.—C. A. Long, Central Institute, Rio de Janeiro, Brazil.

A Ready Field.

Beppu is a wonderful place for seed sowing, with the 1,000,000 visitors a year, 450 hotels, many hospitals, to say nothing of the people who live in Beppu, we have a most inviting field. Many sad cases come to us. One, a young girl of nineteen who was sold by her own sister into a life of degradation, with tears rolling down her face, said, "Oh, if I had only known, but I know now, how wicked such a life is!" She is still owned by a respectable (?) member of the county court, but wishes to be free to lead a Christian life. This is but one of many similar cases to be found in this wicked city. We need greatly a Christian kindergarten, more money for Sunday schools and chapels, and more workers, so that ere long, those who want to hear may have an opportunity, and all these open doors may be entered.—W. J. Callahan, Oita, Japan.

SHE STAYED IN BED.

Ingram, Texas.—"Ever since I became a woman," writes Mrs. E. M. Evans, of this place, "I suffered from womanly troubles. Last fall I got so bad I had to stay in bed for nearly a week every month. Since I have taken Cardui I feel better than I have for years." You can rely on Cardui. It acts on the womanly organs and helps the system to regain its normal state of health, in a natural way. Prepared especially for women, it prevents womanly pains by acting on the cause, and builds up womanly strength in a natural way. Purely vegetable. Mild, but certain in action. Try it.

SALTS IF BACKACHY

AND KIDNEYS HURT

Drink lots of water and stop eating meat for a while if your Bladder troubles you.

When you wake up with backache and dull misery in the kidney region it generally means you have been eating too much meat, says a well-known authority. Meat forms uric acid which overworks the kidneys in their effort to filter it from the blood and they become sort of paralyzed and loggy. When your kidneys get sluggish and clog you must relieve them, like you relieve your bowels, else you have backache, sick headache, dizzy spells, your stomach sours, tongue is coated, and when the weather is bad you have rheumatic twinges.

Either consult a good, reliable physician at once or get from your pharmacist about four ounces of Jad Salts; take a tablespoonful in a glass of water before breakfast for a few days and your kidneys will then act fine. This famous salts is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia, and has been used for generations to clean and stimulate sluggish kidneys, also to neutralize acids so it no longer irritates, thus ending bladder weakness.

Jad Salts is a life saver for regular meat eaters. It is inexpensive, cannot injure and makes a delightful, effervescent lithia-water drink.

AS DR. HILLIS SEES IT.

The Rev. Dr. Newell Dwight Hillis, pastor of Plymouth Church, Brooklyn, speaking lately before the Chicago Sunday Evening Club, asserted that it is just as much the duty of every good citizen to observe the Sabbath and honor the Church, and equally as important, as it is for a man to shoulder a gun in the event of national danger. "A man may say that he is a free individual," he continued, "that he may spend the Sunday for drinking, amusements, or in whatever way he chooses. Likewise a man may say he is the master of his own house; he may throw the ashes in the parlor if he wishes; he may turn the sewer into the front room if he so chooses. Yes, but would that be expedient? Has any one the right to break down the one day on which the republic has to educate its people so that it may survive?"

THICK, GLOSSY HAIR FREE FROM DANDRUFF

Girls! Try It! Hair gets soft, fluffy and beautiful—Get a 25 cent bottle of Danderine.

If you care for heavy hair that glistens with beauty and is radiant with life; has an incomparable softness and is fluffy and lustrous, try Danderine. Just one application doubles the beauty of your hair, besides it immediately dissolves every particle of dandruff. You can not have nice heavy, healthy hair if you have dandruff. This destructive scurf robs the hair of its lustre, its strength and its very life, and if not overcome it produces a feverishness and itching of the scalp; the hair roots famish, loosen and die; then the hair falls out fast. Surely get a 25-cent bottle of Knowlton's Danderine from any drug store and just try it.

SHOES TO THE CONSUMER AT WHOLESALE PRICES.

Since catalogue was issued, we have added a great many new styles to our line. It will be several months before a new catalogue will be ready to mail. We have found that with rubber soles on English last, are very popular. We can furnish the Russia Calf with rubber soles at $2.00 and $2.50 per pair, the kind that retail for $3.00 and $3.50. We have a complete line of Ladies' White Duck Oxfords, with rubber soles, at 90c., the kind that retail for $1.50,—at $1.10 and $1.50. The $1.50 is the regular $2.25 shoe.

Ladies' Oxfords Made of Russia Calf and White Duck,

It is about time now for the wearers of shoes to think about the spring and summer styles, or oxfords, and we would suggest to the readers of this paper that they forward their orders now while our stock is complete. We have all the new styles and if there is anything not mentioned in the catalogue we would suggest that our customers describe the shoe wanted, we have it.

A BRIEF TRIBUTE.

In the death of Miss Claudia Alt-neave our church here, has lost one of its main workers and friends. She joined the Church when only twelve years of age and in early life began making her influence felt for good. She was ever active in the Master's service, and always ready to do good. On our arrival here last December, we found her at the parsonage with supper on the table, and as long as she was able, she was always in her place at church. Although she was never strong in body, she was always strong in spirit, and her pastor knew that in her he had a friend, for she was a friend to God and all of his people. It has been said that it takes death to bring out the beauties of life, and in some case this is true, no doubt; but this was not the case with Miss Claudia. The beauty of her life was always shining and she can not be more highly spoken of now than she was while living. She seemed to be always thinking of others more than of herself. When the new preacher came on the charge, she knew his wife would be lonely and that she would long for the friends left behind; so she came often and was not long in letting her find out that she had a friend in her. May God bless her loved ones and friends, and help them to be ready to meet her in the Sweet Beyond. Her Pastor,

J. G. JOHNSON.

FROM THE COLPORTER.

The Southern Methodist Hand Book for 1913-1914 is now ready for delivery at only 25 cents per copy, post-paid. This annual publication is of inestimable value to all who are interested in the past, present, and future of the Church. The present issue contains more practical matter than any former one. It abounds with such information as is needed by every wide-awake Methodist preacher or layman almost every day of the year. If you belong to this class, the sooner you get this very helpful book the better. We are prepared to fill orders promptly, and shall expect them to come rapidly.

While many of the preachers are reporting their good beginnings of the year on their charges, we are glad to note the fact that several of them are giving proof of the same by ordering for their churches and people supplies of Hymn Books, Disciplines, Bibles and other needed books. Especially is The Little Hymn Book having a fine run, and deservedly so. The publication of this abridged edition of the standard Hymnal is the best stroke the Church has ever made for supplying all of our churches with our own hymns and music, so that "every person in the congregation may sing—not one in ten only."

One pastor recently saw that every member of his official board was supplied with a copy of the latest Discipline. But few of them possessed it before. Who will be next?

Another pastor is sowing his field down with doctrinal pamphlets and tracts. Last year he did so and rejoiced in a rich harvest in the end. Who will do likewise?

Will the presiding elders and pastors in Mississippi combine in saying: "On with the work of circulating our books and papers until this year 1914 shall be made memorable for unprecedented success."

We sincerely thank all the brethren who have kindly and promptly responded to our mild request for remittances in the Advocate of January 29, and expect to hear from the remaining few concerned right soon. May the Lord bless all who are laborers together with us in sowing the good seed in our land.

A TEACHERS' BUREAU FOR SERVICE, NOT PROFIT.

The Board of Education of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, conducts such a Bureau. Being in touch with many teachers, schools and colleges in the South, this Bureau has excellent opportunities of serving its patrons. No per cent of salary is charged, but a registration fee of two dollars, to cover cost of correspondence, literature, advertisements, etc. Pastors and others can serve the interests of Christian education by referring teachers and schools to the Bureau. To help to bring capable, well-equipped teachers into touch with educational institutions desiring such teachers, the Bureau was organized, and is now conducted.

For full information, write The Board of Education of the M. E. Church, South, 810 Broadway, Nashville, Tenn.

FROM REV. W. C. HARRIS.

Dear Brother Meek: I desire to state that in response to my letter published in your issue of Jan. 22, I have received contributions amounting to $226.80. With these contributions have come letters of Christian sympathy and appreciation, that I prize more highly than words can express. God be praised for this goodly number and noble type of Christian friends!

We will not move back to North Mississippi as some seem to expect, but will stay where we are indefinitely. Your brother, W. C. HARRIS. Uvalde, Tex., Feb. 16, 1914.

THE WAVING GIRL.

A young girl whose home is on the banks of the Savannah River has a very pathetic history.

Her father was lost at sea, and his daughter's mind became affected to such an extent that she imagines she is living in a light-house, and so every time a river steamer passes the house during the day, she runs out on the porch and waves to it; and she gets up at all hours of the night, cold or hot as the weather may be, and waves a light, hoping and expecting that the vessel is bringing her dear father back to his home again in health and safety.

How beautifully the above story portrays, on the part of those who love their Lord and are watching for his appearing, the ardent desire they cherish for the coming of the Lord to take them away (the living and those who have died), to meet him in the air and receive at his hands rewards for whatever loving deeds they may have performed for his sake during their earthly pilgrimage here below. (1 Cor. 3, 8, 11-15.)

And, after this, more glorious still, they will have the honor conferred upon them of being called to the marriage supper of the Lamb. (Rev. 19, 7-9.)

This "Blessed Hope" of the coming of the Lord if kept alive in our hearts will lead us to purify ourselves and live the spiritual life which will enable us to keep in touch with the Giver of every good and perfect gift, "whose blessing maketh rich, and he addeth no sorrow with it." (Prov. 10, 22.) On the other hand, the imminence of the Lord's coming should serve as a warning to every unbeliever to make no delay in becoming reconciled to God. "For as the lightning cometh out of the east and shineth even unto the west, so shall also the coming of the Son of man be." (Matt. 24, 27.) "Watch therefore, for ye know neither the day nor the hour wherein the Son of man cometh." (Matt. 25, 13.) "Seek ye the Lord while he may be found, call ye upon him while he is near. Let the wicked forsake his way and the righteous man his thoughts, and let him return unto the Lord, and he will have mercy upon him, and to our God, for he will abund-

That is Transportation

Transportation Means Getting There—AND ON TIME

THE people we serve do not depend for their time upon the Government Observatory or The Western Union Telegraph Company; they set their clocks by our trains. Traveling is a pleasure when trains are on time, and the conductor smiling—for civil conductors are just as necessary now-a-days as civil engineers. Next to being on time we pride ourselves on the courtesy of our train men. It is their business to answer questions and help you in any way possible. Our double passenger service is dependable. Plan your trips so as to use these "ever on time" trains and ride on the road where there is never a grouch. The ticket agent will be glad to supply you with a folder showing the schedules in detail, and give you any other information you may desire. Trains arrive at and depart from our new Central station in Shreveport and the new Union Depot in Alexandria. Our freight service is equally reliable. Insert in your orders routing c/o L. & A. Ry. The Sunday School.

LOUISIANA NOTES.

By Rev. P. O. Lowrey.

Rev. Louis Hoffpauir in a note from Gold Dust says: "Our Sunday school at Bethel that you visited last year is doing excellent work. The reward plan that you suggested was adopted and is succeeding finely. It has created more interest and a much better attendance. We have a new school at Ville Platte that is doing well."

Rev. W. B. Perritt, our pastor at Selma, is beyond the average of his brethren in the ministry as a mechanic. When he wanted a miniature cradle for use in his Cradle Roll department instead of buying it he made one, and his product would compare well with those produced by the manufacturers. He also has his own device for filing magazine articles.

Mrs. W. B. Perritt had the pleasure of seeing five of her Intermediate class in the Greensburg school unite with the church last year. Since most people are converted at about sixteen years of age, to allow a pupil to pass from the Intermediate grade without being actively enlisted in Christ's service is a more serious matter than most people consider it. This brought every member of Sister Perritt's class into the Church.

Rev. R. S. Walton, the new pastor at Bunkle, says: "We are planning a greater Sunday school and have set our first goal for an attendance of 125, and will then make the school come up to our standard of efficiency." Before going into the pastorate, Brother Walton was a teacher, and he has a fine sense of the value of good Sunday school work and spares no effort to magnify this part of his pastoral responsibility; and Sister Walton is not one whit behind him in this.

The marvellous success of John D. Rockefeller as a financier is attributed to his excellent judgment in choosing the right men for the right work. He is a superintendent rather than a servant; therefore he can duplicate himself many times in those who do the drudgery while he does the planning. Thus it is with every good Sunday school superintendent. He puts ten men to work instead of doing the work of ten men, and his success is measured not by how much he himself does, but how much he can get others to do.

General Secretary Van Carter is beginning already to advertise the coming of the Louisiana State Sunday School Convention, which is to be held at Lake Charles, April 20-23. He announces that Mr. W. C. Pearce, Adult specialist; Mr. John C. Carmen, Teen Age specialist; Miss Nannie Lee Fraser, Elementary specialist; Dr. Wm. J. Williamson, Bible specialist; and Dr. Wilbur F. Crafts, Reform Bureau specialist, are to be among the speakers. This indicates a fine bill of fare, and we most cordially commend the occasion to our Sunday school workers as being worth their making a sacrifice to attend.

Mrs. Millsaps of our First Church at Shreveport tells of a very fine result from her Cradle Roll work in the conversion of a father of one of her cradle rollers. He was a carpenter and not a Christian but the name of his baby had been secured for the cradle roll, and as a first move the tactful superintendent asked him to help in some carpenter work in the Elementary room. After an acquaintance had been made and a friendship established as the work progressed, she called him to the platform and showed him her beautiful cradle filled with the names of some two hundred babies, and at an opportune time she held up and showed him his own baby's name. At this, great tears came to his eyes, and she then said that she wanted him too, and needed him to help sharpen pencils for the children at Sunday school, and he agreed to help, and the next Sunday was there on time, well dressed and with his knife sharp, ready for work. This marked the beginning of his Sunday school attendance, and of his active Christian life, as we remember. Thus it is with many, as it was with the good Samaritan: if they can only be gotten to where the wounded man is, and they really know the needs, they can be enlisted. May not more be led to the Church and the kingdom through the cradle roll babies? "A little child shall lead them."

NEWS AND NOTES.

By Miss Elizabeth Kilpatrick.

The every-member canvass of the entire church and of all the churches is set for the month of March.

It is not at all too early to emphasize and remind all our schools of Children's Day, and the best year that we have ever had along that line is confidently expected.

Rev. R. P. Neblett writes that every officer and teacher in his Council, 22 in number, were present on a recent Wednesday evening; and that four more Sunday school rooms are being added to the Primary and Junior Departments.

A certain Sunday school offered a prize not long since for the best life history of David. A 16 year old boy was the successful contestant, and the story he told is well worth reading. If teachers would remember that we need not only to make an impression but also to get an expression, they could develop many more such boys and girls.

Mr. Floyd, at Abbeville, Miss., certainly has a fine crowd of young people to do his singing and with whom to begin to organize and crystallize his Sunday school into the one he desires to have. A Teachers' Study Circle was organized there, as was done also at Potts Camp. Mr. Nabors is planning larger things for his school. Two Teen Age Classes of progressive boys and girls were also organized and Dr. Boatner, the superintendent, will find much inspiration from them.

Evangelism in the Sunday school is a subject of the keenest interest; and when we find how materially the Graded Lessons assist in bringing the younger children to Christ, the reasons given below for using these practical lessons for rural and town school alike, will appeal to us forcefully:

Graded Lessons Plan to Secure Decisions.

The purpose of the Graded Lessons is to meet the spiritual needs of every pupil at each stage of his development. The spiritual needs, broadly stated, are these:

1. To know God as he has revealed himself to us in nature, in the heart of man, and in Christ.
2. To exercise toward God, the Father, and his son, Jesus Christ our Lord and Savior, trust, obedience and worship.
3. To know and do our duty to others.
4. To know and do our duty to ourselves.

A study of the Graded Lesson material and memory texts shows that at certain definite periods in each department there is planned a concentration of effort toward natural, wholesome decisions for Christ and his service. For instance, during the second Junior year, 15 lessons in succession present "Incidents in the Life of the Lord Jesus;" the next seven lessons, "Early Followers of the Lord Jesus;" then eight lessons tell of "Later Followers of the Lord Jesus;" with the hope that this instruction may culminate in the decision of Junior boys and girls to be true, obedient followers also. This has occurred in many Junior departments among the pupils who are about ten years of age in this grade. During the first half of the fourth Junior year, all lessons are from the life of Christ (from the Gospel of Mark) arranged with the hope that they will culminate at Easter time in decisions for Christ on the part of the boys and the girls who may not have made an earlier decision and are now about 12 years of age.

COMB SAGE TEA IN LIFELESS, GRAY HAIR

Look Young! Common Garden Sage and Sulphur Darkens so Naturally Nobody Can Tell.

Grandmother kept her hair beautifully darkened, glossy and abundant with a brew of Sage Tea and Sulphur. Whenever her hair fell out or took on that dull, faded or streaked appearance, this simple mixture was applied with wonderful effect. By asking at any drug store for "Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Hair Remedy," you will get a large bottle of this old-time recipe, ready to use, for about 50 cents. This simple mixture can be depended upon to restore natural color and beauty to the hair and is splendid for dandruff, dry, itchy scalp and falling hair.

A well-known downtown druggist says everybody uses Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur, because it darkens so naturally and evenly that nobody can tell it has been applied—it's so easy to use, too. You simply dampen a comb or soft brush and draw it through your hair, taking one strand at a time. By morning the gray hair disappears; after another application or two, it is restored to its natural color and looks glossy, soft and abundant.

OUR FIRST GRADUATE

During a recent visit, accompanied by one of the most prosperous sugar manufacturers in Louisiana, to one of our large lumber manufacturers, the Sugar planter made this statement in introducing me to the Lumberman: "You are engaged in making lumber; I am devoting my energy to making sugar; Mr. Vaughan is engaged in a greater work than either of us—he is making human character, producing men and women." This statement represents the ultimate aim of all our endeavors in our great Orphanage work. If we fail of this achievement, our task is not worth while, the liberal support of our people is not justified, and this work will not stand.

For the past eight years we as a her the right to teach in the public schools of Louisiana for five years without further examination. We very soon placed her in a good position where she is now making a salary of $60 per month. From all the reports that have come to us she is making good, and is very much beloved in the community where she teaches. Because of the delicacy of the matter, we refrain from giving all the details; but we can assure our people that this is one of the most worthy and commendable cases of helpfulness on record—her mother dying when she was but 13 years of age, an afflicted father lingering helpless, penniless and dependent, dying two years after the death of the mother, leaving six Miss Lillian Reynolds.

Church have been engaged in the work of establishing and operating the Louisiana Methodist Orphanage. Have the effort, energy and money we have invested in this task been worth while? Have we been justified in our undertaking?

We sincerely believe the accompanying picture, the story of the record of this fine young lady, and the possibility of accomplishing a far greater work fully justifies the statement of a New Orleans merchant, widely known over the entire State: "I do not think there is a more worthy institution in the United States."

This picture is the likeness of Miss Lillian Reynolds, our first graduate. She completed her course at the North Louisiana Industrial Institute on Dec. 15, 1913. She immediately took the required examinations, passed with a very creditable mark, and now holds a first-grade certificate, which gives children, and Lillian the eldest. With no home, the rent on the wretched cottage unpaid for months, what prospect, what hope, was extended to this girl and her helpless baby sisters? They were left helpless and despairing on the mercy of the community. The Court took the matter up, and after consultation they were assigned by the Court to our Orphanage. This girl was immediately placed in school, and by the help of a kindly, generous-hearted Presbyterian friend, Miss Helen Graham, a teacher in the Industrial Institute who furnished most of her clothing, this girl was given a chance. To-day she is independent. She not only has a profession—an earning capacity that renders her independent—but far better, she has a Christian character which elicits the admiration and commendation of all who know her. Is such work worth while? We believe with Bishop Murrah: "Such work more nearly comports with the spirit of the Master than anything we are doing."

What we have done for this one girl we have the location and the facilities to do for every child that comes under our care. Here we believe that we can secure the finest expression of the consecrated faith, devotion and benediction of the people called Methodists in the State of Louisiana. May God bless those who by their donations and gifts make possible this great work! ROBT W. VAUGHAN, Superintendent Louisiana Methodist Orphanage.

Editorial

NOT A NEW QUESTION.

Drs. Rankin and Lovett—two of our favorite editors, whose leadership we are generally willing to follow without hesitancy—have lately been discussing in their papers the question of episcopal supervision in the Far East. The former thinks that "the Bishop sent to that field should be required to spend a quadrennium there," or that we should "elect some man on the field who will live there and give personal supervision to the work." The accomplished Editor of the Wesleyan Christian Advocate is not quite so definite in his proposals, but he insists that one of our chief pastors ought to be kept in the Orient for a term of years.

The issue which these brethren have raised is not by any means a new one. It was brought forward in 1886 by Dr. L. C. Garland, then Chancellor of Vanderbilt University, who was also at that time President of the General Board of Missions, and was ably combated by Dr. Charles B. Galloway, the brilliant Editor of the New Orleans Christian Advocate. It is not merely a simple matter of administration which the General Conference may, by itself, determine as it sees fit—it involves important constitutional principles. Bishop Galloway clearly showed this to be true in his masterful discussion of the subject, which, for the lack of space, we cannot reproduce now, but which we hope to do, in part, at an early date.

There is no place in our system of government, as it is at present constituted, for Missionary Bishops elected for a specific field. If that is to be done, the Constitution of the Church will have to be changed in the prescribed manner. Nor is it within the power of the General Conference to command the appointment of a Bishop to the same district for a number of years in succession. Ours is an "itinerant general superintendency," and so long as our organic law remains as it now is, it can not be thus modified and impaired. Such an arrangement would be little else than a mild form of diocesan episcopacy; it would take the right of superintendency from the College of Bishops as a whole, in which it legally inheres, and commit it irrevocably for a certain period to one of their number. Our Bishops are not mere creatures of the General Conference—that is the position of the Northern Methodist Church concerning its General Superintendents, but not ours. According to our view, the Episcopacy is a co-ordinate branch of our Church government, which is protected by restrictive rules, and which no other department may encroach upon, or modify except by constitutional methods.

In our opinion, quite as far as the General Conference could go in this matter, would be to request the Bishops to provide for continuity of episcopal service in the Orient. This they could of course do by annually assigning the same man to the work there for several years in succession. But if the Bishops should decide to adopt such a policy we sincerely hope that they will carefully safeguard the principle of making the appointment of the man thus used, yearly. This both clearly maintains the itinerant feature of our General Superintendency and keeps our Bishops under the same regulation as that which governs in the case of our pastors. There is something attractive, as well as an element of value, in uniformity of administration.

We have not now at our disposal the space to go fully into the matter, but we do not think that our distinguished confreres have yet demonstrated that the plan which they are advocating would, even if it were legal, be wiser and better than that which has heretofore been followed. Our work in the Far East is not very large. In Japan there is a united Methodism with a Bishop of its own; in China we have three presiding elder's districts, and in Korea, seven (some of these are very small). About the only work that an American Bishop can do there is one of counsel and administration; he does not understand the languages spoken and could not master them in a single quadrennium. Why then hold him there year after year, when he might be rendering useful service at home? We are inclined to believe that he would probably be able to do more even for the work abroad by coming back to the United States and helping to quicken the conscience and kindle the enthusiasm of the Church on the subject of missions, than he would by remaining where his unpreparedness for the field would so handicap him as a worker. Some of the Mission Boards have testified that the visits of Bishops to the various foreign lands where Christian forces are at work and the influence which they exerted upon their return, gave a tremendous uplift to the cause. What wisdom would there have been in keeping Bishop Galloway in China, instead of letting him come back home and pile up thousands of dollars for the Soochow University as he did? And every time a different Bishop goes and comes, another strong and intelligent champion is set to toiling throughout the country in behalf of our missionary interests. There is nothing like first-hand knowledge when the hearts of people are to be reached and stirred.

Nor do we believe that the financial argument brought forward in favor of the suggested scheme has enough in it to carry any great weight. In this day of rapid transit traveling is not nearly so expensive as it once was. All in all, we think the work of our Bishops in the mission fields may very well be let remain with them and the General Board of Missions. At any rate, the General Conference should study this question thoroughly in all its bearing before it undertakes to replace the present flexible system of operation which, in the main, has worked satisfactorily, by one under the control of fixed laws which would be largely in the nature of an experiment. What, for instance, would become of our missions in the Far East, or in any other foreign field where the situation is so delicate, if an impracticable and arbitrary Bishop should be placed in charge of them, with the requirement that he must have continued jurisdiction over them for a full quadrennium? This question of having the same General Superintendent for a number of years (by legal compulsion), whether abroad or in the home land, has two sides to it. Is it not worth while to remember possible contingencies and keep open a way of escape in case they should arise?

WHY NOT NEW ORLEANS?

The press dispatches reported that St. Louis last Saturday closed the last of its segregated districts, forcing 350 prostitutes either to reform or seek other habitats. Washington City recently enforced a similar order, and Atlanta did the same thing several months ago. This should also be done in New Orleans. A "red-light district" is a disgrace to civilization—a shameful reproach to any people. It is nothing short of amazing that any enlightened community would tolerate such a thing. To do so is to imperil the safety of its boys and girls and young men and young ladies to a frightful extent. Only a few days since a city in Mississippi was profoundly stirred because the daughter of a prominent family, yet in her teens, was enticed into such a place and disgraced and ruined. But why should it have been? Such resorts must have recruits. If the citizens of a community allow them to exist, they may be sure that they will find victims. Without such a wreckage of human character and life, they would soon have to close their doors voluntarily. To license or connive at them is to become in part responsible for the black outrages for which they open the way. It will, indeed, be a happy time on earth when these festering, reeking sores of society shall be given the only treatment that will heal them, namely, to cut them completely out forever. May God speed the day when New Orleans shall be added to the list of clean cities in the Nation!

AN INTERESTING REPORT.

We are publishing in this issue of the Advocate a statement giving the results of the recent meeting of the Federal Council of Methodism, which was held in Nashville, Tenn., the latter part of January, for which, as is indicated at its close, we are indebted to the New York Christian Advocate. We hope that our pastors and people will carefully read this summary of the proceedings of that distinguished body, since it bears upon matters of vast importance. We had hoped to have something to say concerning the work accomplished by this Council and the present and future relations of the two Episcopal Methodisms in America this week, but there were so many other things pressing upon us for editorial consideration that we were forced to pass over this subject until our next issue. In our humble judgment, there is no ecclesiastical question now engaging public attention in the United States that is of such large significance as that which has to do with the course of these two great Churches toward one another in the coming years.

The wealth of a man is the number of things he loves and blesses, which he is loved and blessed by.—Carlyle.

A MORNING PRAYER.

By Mrs. Fannie Minor Montgomery.

I crave not yesterday's provision;
Its needs are past; its light is fled;
To-morrow lies beyond my vision—
Give me this day my daily bread.

Give me to drink of lowly fountains,
Which close beside my pathway run;
The streams which gleam on distant mountains
I may not reach ere set of sun.

Give me to see in all its beauty
The life which waits for me to-day—
Each homely task, each humble duty,
Thy grace for these, dear Lord, I pray.

From morn' to eve let me be willing
In every word and work to see
Thy purpose all my moments filling,
And all I do be done for Thee.

SEVEN FOOLISH ONES.

By Rev. S. J. Davies.

Two were men, five were women. Folly is one of the worst heritages of sin, and men with women share alike its baneful results. Sex difference may account for much, and by its contrasts bring into bolder relief the weaknesses of each kind, but leaves no room for boasting. Men and women after all are on the same plane, in glory or in shame. Folly knows no sex.

The first one of these built his house on the sand. Down by the shelving slope where the river slips into the sea, and where for the most time the floods came not, while the sheltering bluff broke the wind's fury, and a roof of his own skilful making turned the torrent of rain. All was well except the foundation. Rain washed it in great trenches; winds drove the engulfing flood in swifter sweep upon it leaving no support for the pillars; then the ruin was borne to the sea.

Only the truth can save men. This divine spark lights every real beacon fire by which our souls are guided. Holy passion and lofty emotion may be stirred and point a pathway to the stars, or suffuse the heart with a light "never on land or sea," but these must walk hand in hand with truth, else the way shall be lost and the light disappear. All life worth the living is based on truth. It is by right of divine birth, supreme master of the soul. No rival can share its throne—its very completeness makes this impossible. The heart lesson of this nature parable shows truth as the basic principle of righteous character. That alone shall endure which is founded upon its rock-like quality. All else is subject to the change of time and state. It is changeless and perennial. The fool knew not this, hence his fatal error; or if he knew it, he did not profit by his knowledge, and so the greater became his folly.

Again, truth is not dependent. In its very self is written the Magna Charta of all human liberty. It is really amusing to see men in this day of unfettered thought attempt to plead tradition or precedent against the truth as held by men as righteous as the pleader. "Prevalibit," said the old Roman, because he knew that to it belonged all the ages for conquest and victory. Only the things which are true embrace the lasting heritage of the saints—the false die with the using. Men get nearer God day by day, in the same measured way, as they get nearer truth. There is no other highway to holiness. This is the shining path that leads to the beatific vision. Nor does it end at the throne—it rests there forever. Since all must build, building is life's business; "other foundation can no man lay than that which is laid, Jesus Christ," who declared himself the Truth.

The next erring one has been called the rich fool, because he was industrious and economical in so far as material needs were involved, but guilty of gross and criminal negligence of spiritual riches. The pity of his folly lies in the fact that he fooled himself. Bigger than his barns, vaster than the billowy reaches of his golden-crowned fields, of more enduring value than the shining shekels of silver stored in his treasury, was his soul, and he knew it not. When God begins to count, men do well to pause and listen, for his is not the unit numeral. The divine mathematics expresses itself in the infinite numbers of life eternal. "The glory of the terrestrial is one and the glory of the celestial is another" in a larger sense than we sometimes see or think. Not all the logarithms of Newton or Napier can measure the vast dimensions of the kingdom of God. It staggers human reckoning. Ministry of faithful service in the kingdom can not be expressed by your cunning statistician. The purchasing power of one dollar has diminished by forty-nine cents within the last decade, yet the value of the soul has not changed since the Christ said, "What shall a man give in exchange for his soul?" How startling was the comparison between infinite values and earthly standards revealed in the night-call of doom to this blind materialist! "Thy soul required of thee"—the one great spiritual trust committed to his keeping. Had he been true to this, he would have been true in all things. Self and soul are not necessarily antipodal, but this man's perverted course of life made them so.

It is then, we conclude, the dominating impulsive power which makes or unmakes life, character and destiny. Is thought, will and purpose projected on the plane of appetite, sordid pleasure or unholy ambition for wealth, fame or sensual gratification? Then be sure this power will shape and fashion character after these models. The saddest tragedy one can witness is a life polarized into a fixed purpose to revel in the low, the sordid, the vile. This is the real fate that weaves the very warp and woof of human destiny. But it is a fate whose decree was fixed by repeated disregard of calls to a larger and nobler life. At the close of this awful scene, we hear the ring of doom, after the tragedy of a misdirected and mispent life.

"And five of them were foolish." At the inception of this lesson of life and truth the line is drawn in broad clear outline. The "wise" and the "foolish" still divide the earth. The Master tells us that the central truth here taught is watchfulness. "Watch!" What a world of meaning here! I have served as watchman through the weary hours of the night, gazed into vast abysses of the starlit heavens, and watched the wheeling constellations as they marked the hours in their departing courses; then anon resumed the round of my beat lost in wonderful mazes of thought—for life is more than star-gazing.

"Took no oil with them." Here was the fatal error. The one opportunity—lost—gone, to return never. At midnight came the call to the marriage feast. No time for preparation now. "Behold, the Bridegroom cometh." No light for the foolish virgins. None to let or lend from the wise. The time for giving and borrowing is past. Every maid of the five wise ones needed her vessel filled with oil. God's grace is sufficient, but the apostle prayed that it might not be bestowed in vain.

Nothing is said concerning the readiness of the bride in this parable. She evidently was in waiting for her Lord, and ready for his coming. The foolish are those who heed not the call to repentance, faith and life. This call comes from the friends—"children of the bridegroom." It is a time of rejoicing, "a day of refreshing from the presence of the Lord." It well symbolizes a revived, quickened Church. The cry, the lights, the resounding voices, the procession leading toward the future home emphasized this interpretation.

Only the foolish ones are the unprepared, and it is a folly that is the more pitiable because it is thoughtless and insensate.

A WORD FROM DR. BORUM.

Dear Dr. Meek: In the issue of the New Orleans Christian Advocate of February 19, there is a communication from Dr. M. W. Swartz, in which he criticizes some statements alleged to have been made in two sermons recently preached by me in my pulpit; sermons that Dr. Swartz did not hear, and which were reported to him more or less inaccurately.

Dr. Swartz prefers a serious charge against me, which is stated in the first paragraph of a letter he wrote me upon hearing of my sermon, which letter he published in his communication to your paper, as follows: "I have been told to-day by reliable parties that in your sermon last Sunday, on baptism, when quoting your authorities, you mentioned a book which was used at Millsaps College, thereby putting the college back of your claim, etc., etc."

Upon receiving the letter and realizing the seriousness of Dr. Swartz' misunderstanding of the matter, I called him at once over the telephone, and made him the following explanation: "When preaching the sermon referred to, I held in my hand a Liddell & Scott's Greek lexicon. I read from it all the definitions of the words 'bapto' and 'baptidzo.' I then said to my congregation, 'This is not a Baptist book, but a dictionary that was used in colleges and universities generally in my college days, and I suppose that it is used in them now; doubtless it is used in Millsaps college here in Jackson.' This is the only reference I made to the college in my sermon."

I understood Dr. Swartz to acknowledge the general use of Liddell & Scott's lexicon, and I thought that he promptly saw the error that he had made. Instead of that he goes into print with the affair, and emphasizes his utterly groundless charge, withholding as I think, the important points of my explanation to him. This is his statement: "Immediately upon receipt of this letter, Dr. Borum called me up over the telephone, and stated to me that he did not mean to use the college in an improper way, but merely wanted to let the people know that the book that he was quoting from was not a Baptist book. This was just the point that I made in my letter, that he was using the college and its text books to fortify him in his claim that the position of the churches other than the Baptist church (and those of like belief) was wrong and was unsupported by philological testimony."

Dr. Swartz' statement is only a half truth. He ought to have said, if he said anything, that I read the definitions from a lexicon in general use over this country. (A graduate of Millsaps told me he used the book when a student there.) I did not "Quote from the college TEXT BOOKS." Reading definitions from a dictionary, and quoting from text books used in a college, are very widely different in their meaning, especially as it pertains to Dr. Swartz' charge against me, with the facts in the case as above stated.

I cannot believe that he did me an intentional wrong; but it was so far from my intention to make any kind of misrepresentation in the sermons preached that I am unwilling to let the published article pass without a full statement of the facts.

Very truly yours,

WM. A. BORUM.

THE LOWER COAST COUNTRY.

Mr. Editor: This is to challenge the correctness of Brother Gearheard's statement in a recent issue of the Advocate, that he had the distinction of preaching at Point Pleasant, on the Lower Coast, where there had not been a religious service conducted by a regular minister in fifty-eight years. This information is not correct. Rev. J. F. Scurlock now in heaven, than whom the Louisiana Conference never had a nobler spirit was the first Methodist Missionary to the Lower Coast, entering that field in 1887 or 1888. Point Pleasant was one of his regular appointments. Here he labored as a hero of the cross for four years and won souls for the Master. Then followed him Rev. J. R. Roy, and after him followed Rev. N. B. Norwood. Each of these noble ambassadors of the cross wrought with apostolic zeal and success in this needy and difficult mission and each had a regular appointment at Point Pleasant. And I think others of our preachers since their time, have preached at this place. The writer himself, as a local preacher, under the direction of his pastor Rev. J. R. Roy, used to hold forth as best he could once a month to good congregations at Point Pleasant, and I recall that there was in operation a fairly good Sabbath school there.

I can't imagine where Brother Gearheard got his information. Some years before the advent of the Methodist preacher in that country, as a boy, I remember accompanying an Episcopal minister, Rev. Samuel L. Wiggins, to that village where he went to hold service. Brother Gearheard will have to make another excursion into the outskirts of civilization even in poor old Louisiana to find a spot where a Methodist preacher has not already preceded him with the gospel of our Lord. O this ubiquitous itineracy, how it often balks our aspiration to preach in the "regions beyond" or lay our own foundations! I am almost tempted to quote Brother Gearheard the experience of the young Presbyterian missionary in the mountains of Arkansas. The story is relevant.

The mission on the Lower Coast at one time prospered. Under the consecrated and efficient leadership of Revs. Scurlock, Roy, and Norwood, souls were converted in the good old way and numbers were added to the Church, of whom some are now in heaven and others remain scattered here and there throughout the country, serving the Lord in the full consciousness of salvation to this day; and one converted skeptic has served joyfully his Lord in the capacity of an itinerant preacher for twenty years on some of the hardest circuits in Louisiana and among all the temptations common to a preacher, doubts of the divinity or mercy of Christ never occurring among them. The Lower Coast mission has not been in vain. The present religious condition on the Lower Coast is due to the exodus in later years of so many people from the east bank of the river, forced by the frequency of storms and tidal waves from the Gulf which desolated this one-time garden spot, impoverishing its population. Within recent years a large levee has been built at great cost to protect this fertile strip of country from the sea water and this suffering land will gradually recover and become a great fruit and truck country as it once was, and we must hold our ground there. Brother Gearheard is doing wise and excellent work, and if the Mission Board of our Conference will take hold of this work in earnest, something will be accomplished worth while down there.

While correcting Brother Gearheard's misinformation regarding Point Pleasant, I do most heartily admire and commend his truly missionary spirit and the good work he is doing and the sensible and business like way he goes at it. He has the right idea and plans. God bless him abundantly in his endeavors! J. W. LEE.

THE EVERY MEMBER CANVASS.

Dear Doctor Meek: The article by Brother W. W. Holmes, entitled "The Conference Collections Made Easy," published in the Advocate of the 19th Inst. was a good one and I wish to commend it.

The Every Member Canvass is becoming a well recognized feature of church finances. Only about one-third of the members of the Church are paying anything for the extension of the Kingdom of God. This is wrong in two particulars:

First, it hampers the church in her work delaying needed improvements and extensions or causing their complete abandonment; and secondly, it prevents the spiritual development of the non-givers. Shall we sit idly by and see these two wrongs done, thus giving our consent to them?

The Church generally is waking up to her shortcomings in this respect and nearly every Church in America is planning a great denomination-wide campaign during the month of March. The campaign contemplates a visit to every member of the denomination with a view to interesting them not only in the matter of offerings (or I should say, in the matter of paying their just debts to the Lord), but also in service for the Kingdom.

What are we as a church going to do about it? Are we going to work our field or sit down and see our talents taken away and given to some agency who will try to do its work?

After the Every Member Canvass has been made what method shall we use to secure the money pledged by the people? Almost any method will work if it is faithfully pursued. I have been connected with a board of stewards for a quarter of a century and have seen many methods tried, and in my opinion the Duplex Envelope System is the best.

Brother Holmes urges the setting of a "Conference Collection Day or Month" in the spring and one in the fall. He suggests two days because it is easier to pay in small installments than in large amounts. This is true, and for that reason the duplex envelope is better than the plan he suggests.

These envelopes are numbered and are dated; if weekly envelopes are used; there are 52 envelopes in a carton—one for every Sunday of the year. If monthly envelopes are used there are 12 envelopes in each carton—one for every month.

These envelopes are numbered and are dated so that each person can easily keep his own account seeing at a glance whether his account is behind. On circuits where every church does not enjoy weekly services the monthly system might be used, but I believe it is better even in that case to use weekly envelopes, the contributions being placed in the proper envelope every week and all of the envelopes containing offerings being taken to church on the days when services are held.

Referring to the great world-campaign mentioned in a foregoing paragraph, the United Presbyterian Church by a simultaneous canvass throughout the whole denomination added an average of $1.12 per member to their missionary contributions in a single year, and that Church is now paying an average of $6.11 per member for missionary purposes alone.

Brethren, let's plan for regular systematic offerings by all of our members and then work our plan.

W. S. HOLMES,

Lay Leader, Louisiana Conference.

Baton Rouge, La., Feb. 23, 1914.

BIGGER AND BETTER EVERY YEAR.

The Southern Assembly, at Waynesville, N. C., was projected as an institution for the physical, social, mental and spiritual uplift of the people called Southern Methodists, who contemplate with legitimate pride the fact that they represent a vast territory and a great Church with more than two million members and five million Church population, and with great enterprises which are ever growing greater. Therefore the Southern Assembly was projected on a big scale, a scale that will require not simply years but decades and decades for development and completion.

The public was surprised when they looked upon the Assembly last summer and saw that so much had been done. They were somewhat dazed by the magnitude of the plans. The huge dam had been completed at a cost of nearly $100,000. The lake had spread for miles like a silver mirror between the smiling wooded hills, and gave back here and there the reflection of some majestic mountain peak. All over the crests and along quiet streams serpentine avenues, walks, and drives had begun to trail. A magnificent auditorium, with a seating capacity for four thousand and nestling on the lakeside, had been constructed. Numerous picturesque cottages, beautified by the first roses of summer, had been planted on the hill-tops and on the shady slopes. A resting place for the large modern hotel, from whose extensive plaza one will look down upon the tranquil water, had been prepared. The attractive depot of the Southern Railway, which has entered so heartily into the spirit and plans of the Assembly, had been constructed. It was all an inspiring wonder. Yet it was plainly and impressively seen that it was only a beginning.

Visitors this summer will be surprised at the progress that will have been made since last summer. The lake will be more beautiful. A proud steamer for passengers from the station to the auditorium will plow the waters. The grass will more luxuriantly adorn the slopes, the yards, and the edges of the drives, and it will be so much greener. New cottages will be seen. And yet the work of development will be only in its infancy. Only our children and grandchildren will have the opportunity of looking upon the Southern Assembly in its completed glory.

We wonder if Southern Methodists are really beginning to take in the fact that the Southern Assembly is their own institution and not the institution of the loyal, far-sighted men who, through pure love for their Church, projected it. If Southern Methodists have not taken in this fact, the light should break in on them at once. If there has been the slightest suspicion that the projectors have been doing all this great work for their own interests, this suspicion should vanish. There is not the slightest foundation for it. The projectors did not begin their work with the expectation of making a cent for themselves. They have not made a cent. They cannot make a cent. They have made, however, financial and other sacrifices in order to establish a great institution for Southern Methodists. The Southern Assembly is ours, not theirs. Shall we not get this fact firmly fixed in our minds? If we do, there will be such a co-operation on the part of Southern Methodists that the rapidity of the Assembly's growth will be a marvel.

There was an important meeting in Nashville a few days ago. There were present Superintendent Cannon, Bishop Atkins, Mr. John R. Pepper, Dr. George Stuart, and the secretaries of our various educational boards. They met to make preparations for the meetings to be held at the Southern Assembly next summer. The whole situation was carefully and prayerfully canvassed. It was determined to give Southern Methodists an opportunity of attending next summer at Lake Junaluska the greatest meetings so far known in the history of our Church. "Better and bigger every year" is the motto of those in charge. The Conference of the Epworth League will be held July 15th-23d; that of the Sunday school, July 24th-August 2d; of the Educational Board, August 3d-6th; Mission Board, August 7th-16th; Bible Conference, August 16th-23d; Conference of Deaconesses, August 24th-26th. No pains will be spared to make these occasions full of interest and profit. The most capable men and women of the whole country will be selected for the programmes. There will be lectures, concerts, and other entertainments of the very highest character. You may expect a great summer at Lake Junaluska. Look out for the announcements and begin at once your preparations to be there.—Nashville Christian Advocate.

"THE ORIGIN OF ALL VIRTUES."

Goldsmith wrote: "Justice may be defined, that virtue which impels us to give every person what is his due. In this extensive sense of the word, it comprehends the practice of every virtue which reason prescribes, or society should expect. Our duty to our Maker, to each other, and to ourselves, are fully answered if we give them what we owe them. Thus justice, properly speaking, is the only virtue, and all the others have their origin in it." In all countries and in all times the study of and devotion to justice is a virtue to be embraced and practiced. Man's inhumanity to man is the outcome of injustice, and as sung by Burns, it has made "countless thousands mourn." The losses mankind sustain may be borne with unless they are the fruits of manifest injustice. If they come from injustice they rankle in the bosom so long as there is a beating heart. Justice is a thing too sacred to be used as an implement in the hands of a professional agitator, for the purpose of arraying men against men, but it is so used, and much of the bitterness and unprofitable strife in the world, especially in the country in which we live, may be traced to those who hypocritically profess to be the apostles of justice.—Knoxville Journal and Tribune.

Church News

The Baltimore Annual Conference will meet in Baltimore, Md., on March 25, with Bishop A. W. Wilson presiding.

The British Weekly of February 12 states that many of the Presbyterian churches of England are now having gratifying gains.

The faculty and students of Emory College, at Oxford, Ga., were favored last week with a series of lectures by Bishop W. A. Candler.

The Woman's Foreign Missionary Societies of the United States (all denominations) are said to have an aggregated membership of 12,000,000.

Bishop Collins Denny dedicated the First M. E. Church, South, of Gainesville, Ga.—a fine structure valued at $60,000—on Sunday, February 15.

The Committee of Appeals of the Southern Methodist Church, of which Bishop James Atkins is chairman, met in Nashville on Tuesday of this week.

The Main Building of the Blackstone Academy, at Blackstone, Va., was destroyed by fire on February 16. The estimated loss is $20,000, and the insurance is $8000.

Dr. John Poisal Hyde, of Winchester, Va., a prominent member of the Baltimore Conference, died of paralysis at the home of his daughter, Mrs. Charles H. Hart, in Clarksburg, W. Va., on February 17. He has been in declining health for several years.

The Board of Missions of the Methodist Episcopal Church has received a gift of $175,000 from a person who will not allow his name to be made known. This was the kind of giving that the Master commended, but it is not the kind that is practiced by most of our multi-millionaires.

According to report, there are eighteen downtown churches in New York City for sale, with an estimated value of $12,000,000. It is doubtless often wise to change the location of a church, but we hope that the day will never come when houses of worship will be wholly absent from the business areas of our great municipalities.

Miss Margaret Quayle, daughter of Bishop Quayle, of the Methodist Episcopal Church, died of cancer in Chicago a few days since. Miss Quayle recently went to Baltimore and took the radium treatment, but it was unavailing. Bishop Quayle will have the sympathy of many friends and admirers in the South in his sore bereavement.

Bishop J. S. Key, who resides at Sherman, Texas, recently visited Dallas and while there inspected the buildings in process of erection on the Campus of the Southern Methodist University. He pronounced them to be admirable in every respect, and expressed gratification at the progress that has been made in their construction. The educational campaign in the Lone Star State is still going on.

Rev. H. H. Martin, a Baptist minister at Petersburg, Va., in a sermon to his congregation a few days since highly complimented Dr. James Cannon, Jr., for the service that he has rendered the prohibition cause in the Old Dominion, and compared him to the Prophet Elijah. Among other things he said: "Dr. Cannon has been called 'a troubler of the State.' The great need of this nation and of Virginia is men like Elijah of old, who was pronounced 'a troubler of Israel.'"

Dr. John R. Mott, who is perhaps the first Methodist layman of world-wide Methodism, was recently tendered the position of General Secretary of the Young Men's Christian Association, but declined it. There seems to be a growing demand for the services of Dr. Mott and Col. Goethals. We see that even far-away Alaska is asking for the services of the latter to construct the great railway that is being projected there. Never was there a time when efficient workers were more needed than they are now.

The Charlotte (North Carolina) Chronicle is authority for the statement that Bishop J. C. Kilgo has decided to change the place of his residence from Durham to Charlotte. The Bishop's reason for this action is said to be the fact that he is kept constantly traveling over our widely extended Connection, and that the latter city is much more accessible. This move will locate Bishop Kilgo within the bounds of the Western North Carolina Conference, instead of his home Conference—the North Carolina.

MISSISSIPPI'S NEW LIQUOR LAW.

The Anti-Saloon League's Anti-Liquor Bill has passed both Houses of the Mississippi Legislature by a vote of 4 to 1. It was stubbornly fought by attorneys for the liquor interest, express companies and other co-operant interests with all the vigor they could command.

Twice Dr. Eichelberger, superintendent of the Anti-Saloon League, and others managing the passage of the bill withdrew it from the Legislature in order to fortify by the foremost legal counsel some points of law involved. It is a very rigid measure, and it is no wonder that the liquor interest and liquor newspapers fought it. But its constitutionality as to every point involving inter-State commerce has been passed upon by able lawyers and it is predicted that every section of it will hold water. Thirty days' time was allowed before the measure will take effect in order to give the express companies and other common carriers time to get out their blank form receipts in shape and distribute them.

The following are some of the provisions of the new bill:

No Club or other social organization can keep liquor in lockers or anywhere else in the building, nor can liquor be carried to the building.

It prohibits newspapers published in Mississippi from advertising liquor for sale.

It prevents any one from ordering more than one gallon of liquor at a time.

Every shipment of liquor delivered to any one in Mississippi must be recorded in the office of the Circuit Clerk in that county, giving the name of the consignee, the kind and amount of liquor, when it was received, where it came from, and who shipped it.

When the common carrier receives notice from the Anti-Saloon League or from other sources, that any one is keeping liquor enough to make him a suspicious character, or when a common carrier has reason to believe that any one is going to use the shipment in violation of law, then the common carrier shall demand a statement signed, giving the name and residence of the consignee, and that he is going to use this liquor for his own use in his own place of residence and will not violate any law thereby. If he violates the law after signing this, he is then subject to two penalties: one for selling, and one for signing a false statement.

It provides heavy penalties and imprisonment for violating any single section of this Act.

It provides heavy penalty for the common carriers failing to record these statements with the Circuit Clerk and for not otherwise complying with the law.

The League has another bill pending which amends a bill enacted two years ago and makes it to say that Boards of Supervisors and Boards of Aldermen SHALL appropriate one-third of the fines from liquor to help pay the expenses of securing conviction. It now reads they MAY and not more than half of them do this on account of liquor influence, it is said. This bill will doubtless pass, and the district attorneys over the State will then have a fund by which they can clean up their districts. A WORKER IN THE CAUSE.

Jackson, Miss.

NEWS NOTES.

An energetic campaign to increase the attendance upon the Sunday schools of the various Churches has recently been inaugurated in Aberdeen, Miss.

Nearly five hundred persons filled the pews of the First Methodist Church of New Orleans on Mardi Gras Sunday to hear Dr. Werlein. Fifty-nine have been added to the membership of this Church since Conference.

Rev. W. G. Henry, pastor of the Galloway Memorial Church of Jackson, Miss., conducted an interesting series of revival services at Millsaps College last week. The preaching was done in the chapel of the Training School.

Have you seen the Southern Methodist Handbook for 1913-14? If not, you should send for a copy at once. The price is 25 cents. No up-to-date Methodist can afford to be without this informing and highly interesting volume.

The work of building the new Carrollton Avenue Methodist Church is progressing rapidly. Brother J. G. Snelling will have done a monumental work for New Orleans Methodism at the end of his quadrennium, at Carrollton, which will come in December next.

Rev. John F. Foster was a welcome visitor to the Methodist Preachers' Meeting on Monday morning not long since. He gave a vivid description of the work that is to be done at Amite. Under his wise administration we feel sure his charge will show much progress at Conference time.

Louisiana Methodists will be glad to know that under the strong leadership of Brother W. L. Doss the portion of Epworth Church of this city which has been built has been freed from debt, and that

New Orleans Methodism has been invited to attend the dedicatory services to be held Sunday afternoon, March 22, at 3 o'clock.

We were grieved to notice in the Commercial Appeal a few days since an announcement of the death of Mr. Z. T. Harper, of Tupelo, Miss., which occurred in that city, after a lingering illness, on February 25. He was one of the best known merchants in Northeast Mississippi, a high-minded citizen, and a loyal and active Methodist. He was about 65 years of age. We extend sympathy to the bereaved.

Mr. S. H. Meyer, Treasurer of the Louisiana Conference Board of Missions, requests all pastors who may have in their possession any funds secured from the observance of the Week of Prayer and Self-Denial to send them to him at once. He has received a letter from Dr. W. W. Pinson asking him to do what he can to get all such moneys into the hands of the General Board of Missions at the earliest date possible. This is a matter of much importance.

We wish to remind contributors once again that we cannot accept articles written with a lead pencil. We desire also to state that it is quite impossible for us to print programs of meetings of any sort, though we are glad to carry notices of reasonable length concerning them. What we do for one, we have to do for all, and there is so much copy of this kind offered us that were we to undertake to publish it, it would fill a large part of the Advocate.

A correspondent writes us of the illness of Rev. J. C. Park, our pastor at Tupelo, Miss., who is reported to be suffering from erysipelas. There is no choicer preacher in the North Mississippi Conference than Brother Park and it has been a source of deep regret to his many friends and admirers that for the past two or three years his health has not been robust. Let the readers of the Advocate pray for the speedy and complete recovery of this true and capable pastor.

Through the kindness of Mrs. Christian Keener, who sent it to us, we are publishing in this issue of the Advocate a beautiful poem, entitled "A Morning Prayer," from the gifted pen of Mrs. Fannie Minor Montgomery, which first appeared some time ago in a Tennessee paper. Of Mrs. Montgomery, Mrs. Keener says: "She was a resident of our city some years ago and was widely known in Methodist circles. She then sometimes wrote for the Advocate. In December, 1913, she died in Memphis, Tenn.—a devoted Christian."

Rev. T. J. Durrett, of the North Carrollton (Miss.) charge, has brought us under obligation to him for a club of 7 subscriptions, forwarded on Feb. 26. He reports that the people have received him most kindly, and that they seem disposed to take good care of him, but that his health since he has been among them has been far from good. We greatly regret to know that Brother Durrett is not strong physically, and we pray that a favoring Providence may bring him increased vigor at an early date.

We are indebted to Rev. Robert Selby, the energetic presiding elder of the Brookhaven District, for the following item of interest: "The Evangelistic Committee of this District has arranged for an Educational Campaign beginning the first of the last week in March and continuing through the entire month of April. The purpose of this movement is to inform and inspire our people concerning all the interests and claims of the Church. This plan has the hearty endorsement of all our pastors, and we are going in to win."

Success is crowning the labors of Rev. G. D. Purcell at Oak Grove, La., as is attested by the following brief statement concerning his work: "Things are moving along nicely here. We have moved our church into the town, and have had up to the present 15 accessions. We have been 'pounded' twice already. This is a fine country, and several hundred families have moved into this community within the past six months. We are expecting to have at least 100 members added to the Church by the time that the next Annual Conference convenes."

Brother and Sister A. L. Monroe, of Sycamore, La., when renewing their subscription last week, jointly wrote the Editor a kindly note commending him for his stand on the various issues before the Church. Brother Monroe has been a Methodist steward for 35 years, and he and his worthy helpmeet feel that the Bible, the Methodist Hymnal, the Discipline, and the Advocate are indispensable in their home. We are grateful to these unseen friends for their encouraging message, but we do not feel that we are entitled to any special credit for the poor service that we have tried to render the Church. We have simply sought to do what we conceived to be our duty.

Panola County, Mississippi, was organized, along with eleven other counties, in 1836. Its name is said to be the Indian word for cotton.

It is reported that hereafter each new "dread-naught" battleship constructed by our Government will cost over $15,000,000. Few of our institutions of learning have an endowment equal to that sum.

The American Jewish Historical Society has appointed a committee to prosecute investigations in Spain with a view to sifting the claim that Christopher Columbus was a Jew and not a Roman Catholic.

Former United States Senator Henry M. Teller, of Colorado, of free-silver fame, died on February 23. The most dramatic episode in his career was when he and Senator Du Bois of Idaho walked out of the Republican National Convention, held in St. Louis in 1896, because it declared for the maintenance of a gold monetary standard.

The Alabama State Superintendent of Education, Mr. William F. Fagan, has issued instructions providing that March 6 shall be observed in all the public schools of that commonwealth as Temperance Day, and a suitable program has been prepared for the occasion. It is his purpose to see that such a day is observed annually in Alabama.

A summary recently made public shows that 1311 students at the University of Chicago, the total attendance upon which was more than 6000, earned in part their expenses last year, and that of those doing this, 117 were females. The aggregate amount earned by these students is said to have been $109,604, or an average of more than $83 each.

The Carnival Buyers' Convention of this city, according to report, extended the business of New Orleans into new and more distant territory and resulted in the sale to merchants of $1,000,000 worth of goods above the city's usual wholesale trade. More than $12,000 will be refunded to the visiting buyers for their railroad fares, the managing bureau having agreed to pay for the transportation of every merchant buying goods to the amount of $500 and over.

It is stated that on January 7th, the first self-propelled boat passed entirely through the Panama Canal, going from the Atlantic to the Pacific Ocean. It was the crane boat Alex. La Valley. No passengers were carried. Thus, to a plain, ordinary working vessel came a distinction that has been coveted by some of the proudest crafts afloat. So we again have illustrated the great truth enunciated by the Master, that service is the pathway to the highest honors.

Mrs. Robert Louis Stevenson, the widow of the famous novelist, died at her home in Moncton, Cal., on February 18. She is said to have been the first infant baptized by Henry Ward Beecher, the ceremony having taken place when he was pastor of the Second Presbyterian Church of Indianapolis, of which her father, Jacob Vandergrift, was a member. Mrs. Stevenson requested that her body should be laid to rest beside her distinguished husband upon the summit of the mountain near Apia, Samoa, which he chose and prepared for his burial place.

One hundred cases containing 36,000 eggs imported from China were received in St. Louis on Feb. 23. At that time American eggs were selling at 26 cents a dozen in that city, and the dealer receiving the imported eggs said that he could sell them at 20 cents a dozen and still make a profit. Truly, modern inventions are drawing the nations of the earth close together when the hens of the Orient are made to help to feed the inhabitants of the Occident! Apparently the day is near at hand when there will be no far-away lands and all the nations of the earth will be neighbors.

The Texas authorities have issued revocable paroles to fifty selected convicts who will be put to working the public roads on a profit-sharing plan, without guards. This experiment will be made in Smith County, which will pay the State $15 a month for each convict, one-half of which will go to the penitentiary fund, and the other half will be placed to the credit of the man earning it. The men selected for this test are all white and are between the ages of 20 and 26; none of them were sent to prison for a term longer than five years, and all have served the major part of their sentences.

Mississippi's appropriation to her public schools this year is $1,659,031, an increase over last year of $225,000, and it will be the same for the year 1915. Far the larger share of this money is apportioned for the colored population of the commonwealth, which is considerably in the majority.

The National Child Labor Committee will hold its tenth annual meeting in New Orleans, March 14-18. Among the distinguished speakers during this conference will be Miss Jane Addams, of Chicago, and United States Senator R. L. Owen, of Oklahoma. Gov. Brewer has named as Mississippi's delegation to this meeting Hon. A. T. Stovall of Okolona; Mrs. R. L. McLaurin of Vicksburg; and Hon. J. R. McDowell, Hon. Clayton D. Porter, and Hon. W. H. Watkins, of Jackson, Miss.

REV. B. W. SEWELL—AN APPRECIATION.

Rev. B. W. Sewell was born in Marietta, Georgia, Sept. 7, 1830, and departed this life at the residence of his son, Dr. B. N. Sewell, Dec. 26, 1913. In 1860 he was married to Miss Augie Coleman of Maryland who preceded him to the better world in 1897.

Of this union were born five children, all of whom survive, viz: Mattie, the wife of Dr. E. G. Sewell of Bonke, La.; Dr. B. N. Sewell of Boyce, La.; Mary Leigh, the wife of Rev. W. J. Palmer, of Hastings, Florida; Sallie, the wife of Dr. W. J. Roberts of Collax, La.; Dr. J. A. Sewell of Boyce, La. and Miss Anna Belle Sewell, of Folsom, La.

In early life Brother Sewell went from Georgia to Texas. Shortly after his marriage he moved to East Feliciana Parish, Louisiana, and settled near Jackson. Here for many years he formed a part of that interesting group of Methodists which clustered around Centenary College and Jackson. For many years he was active as a local deacon, responding to many calls to preach in East and West Feliciana Parishes. In those days the local arm of our ministry played an important part in the activities of the Church.

Brother Sewell not only rendered valuable service as a local preacher, but was also the main support of his local church. Many of our preachers who ministered at the altars of Old Salem will bless, with us, the memory of Brother and Sister Sewell as they recall the many hours spent in the charming family circle of this godly couple. Here his children were born and reared, the family availing themselves of the excellent educational advantages furnished by the neighboring town of Jackson.

After the breaking up of the old home consequent upon the death of his wife and the coming to maturity of his children, Brother Sewell taught in the public schools of Louisiana for several years until the increasing infirmities of age made it necessary for him to lay aside the burdens of an active life. In these days wherever he worked as teacher or sojourned with his children, he became an active and interested participant in all the work of the church.

Our brother was a man of unassuming modesty and retiring disposition. In his labors for the Master he had much of the grace which esteemed others better than himself. And yet with the absence of the boldness of self-assertion, there was no lack of positive conviction or sturdiness of Christian principle. Those who associated with him soon discovered the Gibraltar-like strength and steadfastness in his faith.

The last few years of his life were years of great suffering. His physical condition forbade all activity either social or religious. Yet those who visited him in his room can testify to the Christian fortitude with which he bore his sufferings. Here faith ripened and hope brightened to the end. Frequently while presiding elder of the Alexandria District this writer visited him and always found him ready to talk of the deeper things of the spiritual life, as well as those pertaining to the activities of the Church which he loved. His rapt attention to the reading of the Scriptures and his fervent amens during prayer were an inspiration; and having gone to be a comfort, if possible, we went away feeling that we were the debtor to this aged saint in Israel.

His eldest born thus describes a scene which took place in his bedroom a few days before his death: "I do wish you could have heard the last prayer I heard him make for us all. He asked me to play 'The Haven of Rest,' and then called on us to pray. Just as we were about to conclude he began, and it seemed to me that we were in the very presence of God. His prayer for his two boys and little Bennett (his motherless grandson) was wonderfully tender and pleading."

And thus he has gone to join his comrades of other days. Andrews, Miller, Rush, Wiley, Brown, McKeown, and many others were there to greet him.

As one by one our fathers in Israel slip away from us, we are reminded how the throng on the other side is swelling and we feel with the poet, "how thinly the veil intervenes between that fair country and us." God grant us a double portion of their faith and righteousness, that we may be as faithful in our day and generation as they were in theirs.

PAUL M. BROWN.

A REVIVAL AT BOND, MISS.

Dear Dr. Meek: We have just closed a meeting at Bond that resulted in a great victory for righteousness. Those of our preachers who are familiar with the condition of the town morally and religiously will understand. Brother Dan E. Kelley did the preaching and did it most effectively. He is an evangelist after mine own heart, and after 22 years of experience as a Methodist preacher, I can sincerely say that I have never been with an evangelist of whom I could more thoroughly approve than he. About 75 persons professed to be converted or reclaimed and there were 28 accessions to our Church, and 3 will go to the Baptist Church. Of those joining the Church, 11 were grown men. The membership of the Church was wondrously revived. The Baptists came in and worked with us harmoniously. The two churches were drawn together very closely and will present a more united front against all evil than ever before. One of the blessed results of the meeting was the burying of old differences and enmities between town officials and citizens. The blind tigers were mercilessly scored and an overwhelming majority of our leading men pledged themselves to work for their complete banishment from the town. We take courage and go forward.

WHY A LOSS?

The Annual of the Louisiana Conference has arrived very much earlier than in former years. It is a credit to the Editor and the Publisher.

At our conference in Crowley, we were apprised of the fact that there was a loss in membership of 1158. This was humiliating to hear after a year of hard, strenuous work by so many consecrated men of God.

Does the record bear this out? We find there were 1876 additions on profession of faith and 3317 additions by certificate and otherwise, making a grand total of 5193 additions from all sources. While on the other hand, the removals by death and otherwise were 4901. This gives a net gain of 292.

Only two districts show a loss, while five report a gain. In the column of present total membership for the Alexandria District there has been a transposition of numbers in the addition. The number given is 4081 which should be 4801, making a difference of 720. To make this correction in the recapitulation would give us a loss of 438.

The question I wish to ask is, why a net gain of 292 should show a total loss of 438?

MID-YEAR MEETING OF THE MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE BOARD OF MISSIONS.

To the Members of the Mississippi Conference.

Dear Brethren: We desire to call attention once more to the fact that a mid-year meeting of our Conference Board of Missions will be held at Court St. Church, Hattiesburg, Miss., March 11-12. Dr. John M. Moore, Secretary of our Home Department, will deliver the opening address on Wednesday, March 11, at 11 a.m. The presiding elders and district lay leaders are respectfully requested to meet with us, and we invite also every pastor who will come.

THE FEDERAL COUNCIL OF METHODISM.

Commissioners of the Two Great Methodist Bodies Agree Upon Rules of the New Court.

The Federal Council, at Nashville, Tenn., on January 22, adopted a preamble and important rules governing the hearing of cases by that body as a final court of arbitration in matters of conflict or misunderstanding between the two branches of Methodism.

The preamble recites that "The General Conferences of both Churches through repeated declarations have approved the principle that when either Church is doing the work expected of Methodism in any community the other Church should not organize a society or erect a church building in that community.

"The General Conferences have also directed the administrative officers of Annual Conferences and of the various Church boards, organizations and societies interested, to regard carefully the decisions and recommendations of the Federal Council.

"In its consideration and decision of cases the Federal Council will always follow the spirit of the various existing joint agreements in the effort to relieve misunderstandings and conflicts and to prevent this waste of means and forces in unseemly rivalry, and as far as practicable the very letter of the agreements will be carried out.

"It is apparent that the agreements entered upon by the General Conferences make it inconsistent for the Federal Council to approve the use of missionary, Church Extension or other connectional or Conference funds to enter communities where the other Church is doing the work expected of Methodism. It is equally apparent that the spirit of the existing agreements demands that when in communities where both Churches are represented, questions are raised regarding the expansion or strengthening of existing work dependent upon the use of connectional or Conference funds, they shall also be adjusted by reference to the Federal Council. And in disposing of same the council will be guided by the spirit of the foregoing declaration."

RULES OF PROCEDURE.

Relative to the formal presentation and hearing of cases of conflict coming under the provisions of our General Conferences:

Conference Commission of Federation.

"1. That all Annual Conferences in territory occupied by both Churches be requested and urged to appoint Conference Commissions of Federation, consisting of not less than three members nor more than five each, some of whom may be laymen, for the settlement of all cases of local irritation and complaint arising between the two Churches. That during the application or hearing of a case, either by the Annual Conference Commission or on appeal, the status quo shall be preserved until the case is heard and finally determined, but when a complaint duly filed is not presented to a first hearing within ninety days, where a Conference Commission exists, the complainant forfeits its right to a hearing.

Complaints and Appeals.

"2. All complaints shall be submitted in writing by the Quarterly Conference to the presiding elder and district superintendent officially concerned, who shall investigate, and if possible adjust the matter amicably. In the event they fail to reach an agreement on the case, then the same shall be submitted to a joint meeting of the Conference Federation Commissions of the Annual Conferences concerned, who shall hear and determine the same, and their records with the conclusion reached shall be spread on the records of the respective Annual Conferences involved. If, however, either party feels itself aggrieved by the decision, it shall have the right of appeal to the Federal Council, provided notice of appeal is given within thirty days after the said decision, and all the papers and records of the case as heard before the joint Conference Commissions shall thereupon be sent to the secretary of the Federal Council, and a duplicate copy of the same furnished at the same time to the party or parties against whom the appeal is taken. Where from any cause Conference Federation Commissions may not have been appointed, the presiding elder and district superintendent having been unable to adjust the trouble, then the complaint, if indorsed by either of them as worthy of a hearing, shall be forwarded to the secretary of the Federal Council for the complainants' Church.

"3. All sessions of the Conference Federation Commissions, as well as those of the Federal Council, shall be private and held with closed doors, unless otherwise determined unanimously by said Commission or Federal Council.

"4. No statement, brief or proceeding shall be of a personally offensive character or in unbrotherly language, nor oral evidence, statements or pleadings be allowed in hearings by the Federal Council, unless ordered by the Council.

"5. All decisions as made by the Federal Council shall be recorded with the proceedings in permanent form and preserved by the secretaries, for the use of future Federal Councils.

"6. The expense of the Conference hearings and preparing appeals shall be provided for by Conferences concerned. The expense of the Federal Council shall be paid by the General Conferences."—New York Christian Advocate.

RUSTON DISTRICT NOTES.

So far as I have gone this year the prospects are fine for a forward move. The preachers are going to work with the determination to bring something to pass. What we want to do is to bring up everything in full for once in the history of the District. We would like very much to "hist" the Conference on that key. By the way, the figures handed me were wrong as to Minden.

In my last notes I reported that charge as failing to pay out. Minden, Homer, and Ruston paid everything in full. There are three places or works where the number of Sunday school scholars is in excess of the membership of the Church—Jonesboro, Minden, and Ruston.

So far there have been reported 63 accessions on this round—45 by letter, 10 by vows, and 8 by baptism. No doubt there are a good many more by now, and I have not got round. Blenville, Minden and Ruston are leading so far on the first round. Our new preachers have made a fine impression on their respective works. They have got into a good crowd of workers, and we all expect to be helped by their presence and example. Our new men are Harvell, Howell, Bogan, Sloane, Cady, Cudd, and Akin. All these brethren have entered with zeal on their work and their people are pleased and are looking for great things.

The greatest changes, as regards the arrangement of works in the District, were Athens and Dubach. The Lisbon Circuit disappears from the Minutes. Athens, takes 2 Sundays, and with it go Arizona and the New Church, Wesley Chapel, which is a consolidation of Tulip and New Hope. Dubach takes 2 Sundays, and with it go Lisbon and Harmony Chapel—the old parsonage at Lisbon being sold and a new one built at Dubach. This house is already finished and the preacher is in it. Bennett, at Gibsland, is building a nice parsonage on the site of the old one. This will be a great improvement. Perry at Haynesville will soon complete a church at Shongaloo. Harvell was due to preach in the new church at Wesley Chapel the first Sunday in March. Porter is bringing to completion a church at Bryceland, having organized a society there with 26 members.

We want to do a good deal of such work this year. We are projecting arbor meetings for the summer in places where we have no churches. We are going to do more evangelistic work outside the run of the churches. We expect to have churches where we have the meetings. I think that is a good way to get a church.

We had a fine Missionary Institute. The discouraging feature was that only 12 out of the 20 preachers thought it worth while to go. Don't know how long it will take the preachers to find out that now the Missionary Institute is not optional with the P. E., but obligatory. It has been in the law now for nearly four years but most of them do not "pay it any mind," as the darkeys say. Not here alone is this true, but in nearly every District it is the same. And yet if the P. E. was to literally enforce the last clause of Paragraph 117, they would want to join hands and cast him out of the synagogue instant. Brethren, let's awaken to the fact that ours is a connectionalism and that our work is more than our little patch that lies near our own doors. I wish the preachers would accept the offer of the Laymen's Missionary movement, get their helps, and go to work to take up the collections in the month of April.

I wish all the people as well as the preachers would read Holmes' article in the Advocate of February 19. That is a practicable method that he outlines. Make the getting of the assessment the minimum. Let us learn to exercise liberality. This District ought to go away beyond the assessments. We are able. If we fail to measure up to our obligations, what will be the reaping for us? The sin of omission does not carry with it a light penalty. If I am going to be damned, I want to be damned for doing something—not for not doing anything. I don't even believe in the unrighteousness of a negative character. It is better to have tried and failed than never to have tried at all. BRISCOE CARTER.

Ruston, La.

THE MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE AND EDUCATION.

From the Journal of the Mississippi Conference of 1913 the following figures have been gleaned, and they speak for themselves: Thirty-nine charges paid the assessment in full, to-wit: two from the Newton District; four each from the Hattiesburg and Port Gibson; five from the Meridian; seven from the Brookhaven; eight from the Jackson; and nine from the Seashore.

The following show an increase in payments over 1912: Brookhaven, $95.73; Jackson, $92.35; Hattiesburg, $24.95; Port Gibson, $13.60; Seashore, $9.05. The Meridian District shows a decrease of $56.23, and the Newton a decrease of $49.

According to the statement sent out by Dr. Stonewall Anderson, Corresponding Secretary of the General Board of Education, the Church paid last year (1913) $254,750, which is $23,000 in excess of the amount paid in 1912. The Annual Conferences paid last year, on an average, sixty-eight per cent of the educational assessment. The Mississippi Conference paid sixty-one per cent of its assessment for education. This is an advance over the previous year, but not up to the general average.

I am very anxious that the preachers, and officials especially—in fact, all our people—shall study these figures and make an earnest effort to reach the one-hundred per cent mark for the present year. Understand, I am not asking that there shall be a discrimination against other assessments that this may be accomplished, but that we all do our part to bring up all the assessments: at least, that there be no discrimination against the Educational assessment. With the increasing demands upon us EDUCATIONALLY, and with the proper effort to educate our people to these demands, there is only one thing ahead, and that is SUCCESS.

With Christian love for all the people called Methodist, and, with a call upon the pastors to do their best for Education, I am, very cordially,

PETER'S PROMISE.

By Sydney Doyer.

Said Peter Paul Augustus: "I have made up my mind
To always be considerate, and gentle too, and kind
To all the little girls and cats and kitteus I may see
Or any small or weaker things or helpiesser than me.
Because if you will think about it, any one would say,
That people who are cruel to a smaller one than they Are meanest of all mean things—cowards, don't you see?
And a coward is a person that I never want to be."

WHAT GRANDMA THREW.

There was a game of ball in progress in the back garden. Grandma, busy with her basket of darning, smiled as she watched her three grandsons from town through the window. She was not the only one who watched them, however. Out in the road were three or four poorly-dressed boys who, attracted by the shouting and laughing in the garden usually so quiet, were looking through the fence. "Town kids," muttered one to another, beginning to dislike the ball players at once, though they could not have told why except that the newcomers were better dressed and seemed to be having a good time, in which those outside the fence were not sharing. Presently one of them called his comment aloud: "Toffs!"

"Ragbag!" promptly responded Guy.

"Call that playing!" sneered the boys outside.

"If you don't like it, you needn't watch it. Clear out!" shouted the boys inside.

Back and forth over the fence the sharp words flew, and of course it was a few minutes before an occasional stick or stone was flying also. Then, by an unlucky toss, the ball went over, and that ended the game, for the boys outside refused to give it up.

"Oh, no, we won't throw it back! You don't know how to play with it, so 'tain't no use to you," they answered mockingly to all the demands for its return. "You needn't have thrown it over, and we needn't throw it back."

Angry, and afraid of losing their ball altogether, the young visitors hurried into the house with the story of their wrongs. "They're spoiling all our fun, and we can't drive them away; and now they've got the ball."

"And you can't make them go away and let you alone?" asked grandma.

"No. We talked to 'em and threw things at 'em, and everything."

"Well! well! Maybe you didn't throw anything that hit them in the right place," said grandma severely. "I won't have them tormenting you in any such way. I'll throw something that will send them off in a hurry."

She marched into the pantry, and the boys looked at each other with surprise mingling with satisfaction. They wanted the intruders driven off, but the idea of sweet-faced grandma throwing stones. Or had she gone for bricks or hot water? She hurried out of the door, and they followed her, but they could not distinctly see what missile she sent over the fence. "Don't say anything to them. Wait and see what they'll do," she said to the wondering boys on the step.

But after a few moments of silence they could not resist the temptation to tiptoe over the grass and peep into the road. There sat the enemy round a torn paper bag, eating some of grandma's delicious doughnuts!

"Humphy!" said Charlie.

"Here's your ball," said a rather subdued voice outside, and the treasure dropped at Charlie's feet. "We didn't mean to keep it. We was only pretendin'. We're goin' now."

"They've gone, haven't they?" inquired grandma, as the boys came back to the house. "You can nearly always make people peaceable by throwing at them if only you throw the right things."

The boys laughed, though they looked a little ashamed; and often afterwards, when there was danger of getting into a quarrel, one of the others would say warningly: "Better throw a doughnut."—The Messenger for the Children.

THE MOST "HONORABLE MENTION."

Dorothy and Uncle Ralph were having one of their twilight talks. It was Saturday evening.

"How about the essay, Dot? Did you finish it?"

"Yes." Dorothy sighed a little. "Yes, Uncle Ralph, I finished it."

"And will it take the prize?"

"Uncle Ralph!" Dorothy's voice was reproachful and protesting. "It isn't fair to make fun of me; and you know very well I never dreamed of taking the prize for anything. But I'll tell you"—this confidentially—"I did rather hope I might succeed in getting 'honorable mention.' You and father would have been just a little proud of that, wouldn't you? But—"

"Well?"

"Nothing, only it did seem as if there were nothing but interruptions from the moment I sat down with my paper and pen. First, there was Nora to ask something about the puff tarts—as if any other dessert wouldn't have done just as well to-day. Then Clarice came with her doll's bonnet-strings in a knot that must have taken at least ten minutes to untie; and directly after her Fred, with a button off his coat. Before I had finished the second page little Kitty Conrow ran in to ask my advice about the trimming of her hat, and Harry, to see if I could not do something for his kite, and—oh, I can't tell you half of them! Even mother had to come once. Poor mother!—she was so sorry to disturb me; but I don't think one of the others thought it mattered a bit. Positively I felt quite cross sometimes. Now what kind of an essay could a girl write under those circumstances—a girl like me, you know, who isn't very clever anyway? I did my best, but there'll be no 'honorable mention' for Dorothy Evans!"

"I don't know, Dot," Uncle Ralph spoke reflectively. "Having to stay in this corner—that's the bother of a broken leg, you know—I can't help hearing a good many things. I heard Nora, for instance, saying to herself as she came away from the library door this morning: 'Bless Miss Dorothy's heart for a rale lady!' And I heard Clarice singing her doll to sleep in the little rocking-chair yonder. The tune of her lullaby was 'Sweet Galilee,' but the words were just 'Dear Dor-o-thy! dear Dor-o-thy!' over and over. And it must have been your neighbor Kitty whose voice I heard under the window telling some one delightedly that Dorothy had given her 'just the loveliest idea' for her hat. At any rate, it was Harry and no other who was declaring so emphatically to his playmates, 'I tell you, fellows, our Dot's a brick!' Fred too—Fred said to me as he was going out to the office this afternoon: 'Have you ever noticed what pretty hands Dorothy has, Uncle Ralph? I have thought of the very thing for a graduation present for her!'"

"It's a silver thimble!" laughed Dorothy, who is an October child, and was longing for an opal ring.

"It's no such thing. But I never tell secrets. I was only going to say that the best of all the things I heard to-day was the ring in your mother's voice when she said: 'Dorothy is such a comfort!' Won't that do for 'honorable mention,' Dot?"

"I should think it would!" There was a little quiver in Dorothy's low voice, and the brown head went down on the arm of the invalid's chair. "Why, Uncle Ralph, it's better than the prize itself, if only—" and then she could say no more at all, but Uncle Ralph understood.

What do you think about it, girls? This, at least, is the kind of 'honorable mention' that every girl can earn.—Boys and Girls.

HOW IT LOOKED TO HIM.

An Arab who visited New York City is said to have sent this letter home: "People in America travel like rats under the ground (meaning the subway), and like squirrels in the air (meaning the elevated railways), and the buildings are so high that people have to be put in square boxes and pulled to the top by heavy ropes (meaning the elevator). In the day the sun furnishes light the same as in Morocco. At night the light is as strong as the day, but people here do not seem to have much use for sleep, as the streets are just as crowded at night as in the day."

"WHO IS IT?"

A suburban housewife relates overhearing this conversation between her new maid and the cook next door:

"How are you, Hilda?"

"I'm well," said Hilda. "I like my job. We got cremated cellar, cemetery plumbing, elastic lights and a hoosit."

"What's a 'hoosit,' Hilda?" the puzzled cook exclaimed.

"Oh, a bell rings. You put a thing to your ear and say, 'Hello,' and some one says, 'Hello,' and you say, 'Hoosit?'"—Continued.

MORE ABOUT MR. CARNEGIE'S "CHURCH PEACE UNION."

Since we touched upon the subject more of the circumstances attending Mr. Carnegie's $2,000,000 gift for the establishment of the so-called "Church Peace Union" have been made public. The Iron Master on February 10 gave a luncheon to which he invited a number of clergymen and laymen, and at which he made an address in which he unfolded his purpose and announced the trustees of his new Foundation. There are twenty-nine of these gentlemen and the new society of which they are to be the managers is to be incorporated under the laws of New York. The following were selected as the first Board of Administrators of this new trust:

E. R. Hendrix, Bishop of the Southern Methodist Episcopal Church, Kansas City; Francis E. Clark, president of the Christian Endeavor Societies of the World, Boston; John R. Mott, head of the Student Volunteer Movement of the Y. M. C. A., New York; Henry Wade Rogers, formerly dean of Yale Law School; W. H. P. Faunce of the Baptist Church, president of Brown University; Robert E. Speer, Presbyterian Board of Foreign Missions, New York; Hamilton Holt, editor of the Independent, New York; J. J. Glennon, Catholic Archbishop of St. Louis; James J. Walsh, M. D., New York; Prof. William I. Hull, Swarthmore College; Cardinal Gibbons, Baltimore; William Lawrence, Episcopal Bishop of Massachusetts; Luther B. Wilson, Methodist Episcopal Bishop of New York; Junius B. Remensnyder, president of the Lutheran Evangelical Synod, New York; Charles E. Jefferson, pastor of Broadway Tabernacle (Congregational), New York; Arthur Judson Brown, secretary of the Presbyterian Board of Foreign Missions, New York; Peter Ainslie, chairman of Christian Unity Commission of the Church of Disciples, Baltimore; G. S. MacFarland, secretary of the Federal Council of Churches of Christ in America, New York; Frank O. Hall, pastor of the Church of Divine Paternity (Universalist), New York; William Payson Merrill, pastor of Brick Presbyterian Church, New York; Francis Lynde Stetson, lawyer, New York; Edwin D. Meade, secretary of the World's Peace Foundation, Boston; Marcus M. Marks, president of the Borough of Manhattan, New York; James J. Walsh, M. D., New York; Shailer Mathews, dean of the Divinity School of the University of Chicago; Jenkin Lloyd Jones, Abraham Lincoln Center (Unitarian); Rabbi Emil G. Hirsch, Sinai Temple.

In the course of his remarks to his trustees Mr. Carnegie said: "Certain that the strongest appeal that can be made is to members of religious bodies, to you I hereby appeal, hoping that you will feel it not only to be your duty, but pleasure to undertake the administration of $2,000,000 in 5 per cent bonds, the income to be used as in your judgment will most successfully appeal to the people in the cause of peace through the arbitration of international disputes."

Bishop Greer, the Episcopal Bishop of New York, was elected President of the Union; Dr. Frederick Lynch, Secretary of the Peace Commission of the Federal Council of Churches, was chosen Secretary; and George A. Plimpton, a New York publisher, was named as Treasurer. As will be noted, the Methodists on the Board are represented by Bishop Luther B. Wilson, Dr. John R. Mott, and Judge Henry Wade Rogers, of the M.

E. Church, and Bishop E. R. Hendrix, of the M. E. Church, South.

It may seem at the first blush that Mr. Carnegie is quite inconsistent in depreciating the influence of the Churches in the field of education, while bidding for their influence in behalf of his scheme to promote the cause of peace. But a careful examination of his utterances shows that he has safeguarded himself from criticism at this point better than may be imagined from a mere surface view of the question. For instance, when he made his famous offer to Dr. Kirkland for the Medical Department of Vanderbilt University, he said: "I do not believe it is wise for any sect to control educational institutions such as universities, whether the organization be a Methodist Conference, or a Presbyterian Assembly, or a Catholic order. * * * The objection to denominational control of colleges and universities is not due to lack of sympathy with religion. It lies in the fact that such control by a single denomination rarely means religious development, but means that both education and religion are subordinated to the interests of the particular organization which is in control."

From this, it would appear that Mr. Carnegie has no objection to enterprises fostered by all the religious sects acting in concert—it is only when one proceeds to act independently that it encounters the frown of his disapproval. And let it be observed that Mr. Carnegie in his Peace Union places all the sects upon precisely the same footing. Unitarians, Universalists, Jews, Catholics, and Protestants are all alike given places therein and are made to stand shoulder to shoulder as equal recipients of what favor he has to bestow. In reality, however, he has given nothing at all to the Churches; he has merely created another outside organization, with a view to having it work through the various religious denominations—a sort of conscripting them into his service. He still adheres to his policy of independent management. The Churches are not even asked to sanction his Union through any of their official bodies; they are not allowed to name representatives upon this Board of Trust. They are to have things managed for them by men picked out by Mr. Carnegie. Their influence is sought, but they are treated in this, as in all of the Iron Master's other projects, as if they were incapable of speaking and acting for themselves.

The New York Independent, the Editor of which is one of the trustees of this new Foundation, even ventures to suggest that, in part, Mr. Carnegie in this undertaking is playing the role of a teacher or missionary to the Churches. It says: "While the main purpose of this new gift is to promote the cause of peace, a secondary object and result will be to emphasize the fellowship of religion in every good cause. Were the Churches of the world to utter a united voice declaring that war must cease, that ways of peace must settle all differences, war would come to an end. But the Churches are not united against war. They quarrel too much among themselves, jealous rivals for their own way of worshipping God; and if they cannot agree, how can they expect nations to agree?" Manifestly Mr. Carnegie and the Editor of the Independent think that one sect is about as good as another, and that it would be a great achievement if they could all be blended into one cosmopolitan whole. But so far as we are concerned, we must respectfully decline to accept either of these gentlemen as our leader or instructor. The Laird of Skibo showed conclusively what his ethics and ideals are when, while the Vanderbilt case was pending in Court and the end of the litigation was only a few months off, he stepped with unblushing effrontery into the arena and threw $800,000 into the scale for a verdict against the Southern Methodist Church. No man with high conceptions of right and honor would have allowed himself to be beguiled into such a performance as that.

In this connection (though we do not mean to give it our unqualified sanction), it may not be amiss to quote the following editorial utterance by the Memphis News-Scimitar, to show how this transaction is viewed by one of the prominent dailies of the South:

"Pacifying the Pulpit."

"Mr. Carnegie's latest benefaction is an appropriation of $2,000,000, in trust, the income from which is to be used for the instruction of clergymen in the United States in the ways of peace. Was there ever a more cruel satire or a more brutal sarcasm than the grateful acceptance of this donation by the various ministers of the gospel of the Prince of Peace? In times of great popular agitation, especially when moral or humanitarian issues are involved, the pulpit is likely to be belligerent. Wars do not spring from the spirit of conquest or from commercial greed alone. Very few of them have lacked the sanction, even the incitement, of the clergy, as in Ulster. Mr. Carnegie's devotion to peace is greatly to his credit, but is there not a little craft, not to say guile, in this spectacular attempt by a man, himself an unbeliever, to pacify the pulpit?"

THE OLD MISSISSIPPI CAPITOL.

One of the most important questions before the present Legislature of Mississippi is what to do with the Old State Capitol on the Pearl River Bluff, in Jackson, which has been standing since 1839. There are some who advocate tearing down the old structure and selling its valuable site for commercial purposes; while others insist that it should be repaired and preserved for both sentimental and practical reasons. In our opinion, the latter are right. Historic and sacred memories cluster about this time-worn yet stately edifice that plead eloquently for its preservation. Its floors have felt the tread of giants whose achievements have been woven into the fabric of the State and Nation, and its walls have echoed the voices of such men as Davis, and Prentiss, and Foote, and Lamar, and George, and Walthall, and many another who by his life and labors shed luster upon the commonwealth of Mississippi. Within the borders of the State there is no other building that is anything like as rich as this one in inspiring associations and recollections, and to permit it to be demolished would be little less than treason to the glorious past. It would be to throw away an opportunity to secure a noble historic shrine both for our own and future generations, that could never be recovered.

Furthermore, the additional room that the Old Capitol would furnish if put in repair is urgently needed. The splendid new State House completed in 1904 has already been outgrown and several of the Governmental Departments are operating in quarters that are cramped and inadequate. It is doubtful if the enlarged facilities for which they are asking could be secured more economically in any other way than by overhauling and bringing into use this old structure which is now rendering no service. So, by all means, let this be done. And the sooner the progress of decay is arrested the better; to delay will be simply to increase the expense if it should be undertaken in the future. The present Legislature should shoulder the responsibility and make the needed appropriation for this work. If there must be economy in the use of the public finances, let it be at some other point. This worthy and appealing cause has already been required to wait too long. The voices of patriotic Mississippians should at once speak out in its behalf from the Mississippi River to the Alabama line, and from the Tennessee border to the Gulf Coast. As we write these words, the eloquent utterance of the lamented Bishop Charles B. Galloway on the occasion of the laying of the corner stone of the new State House is ringing in our ears: "Dear Old Capitol, treasury of nearly a century's hallowed and historic memories—memories of peace and war—may the day long delay its coming when the violent hand of an aggressive commercialism will profane thy sacred pillars and command that not one stone shall be left upon another!"

SHALL WE LET LOUISIANA LAG?

Nearly everywhere the forces for prohibition are moving forward with an earnestness and aggressiveness that presage victory. Virginia has recently passed an Enabling Act and the people of that commonwealth will vote on the question of State-wide prohibition next September. In Texas, a few days ago, a great meeting was held in Fort Worth and an agreement was reached to place the temperance sentiment of the State behind the Hon. Thomas Ball, of Houston, in the Democratic primaries, and provision was made for a campaign fund of $16,000. In Arkansas, the workers in the various counties are busy, and Tennessee, inspired largely by the splendid eloquence of ex-Gov. Patterson, is struggling for the enforcement of the salutary laws upon her statute books, which, in some of her cities, have hitherto been openly defied (576 dramshops went out of existence in Memphis last Saturday night). The Legislature of Mississippi has just passed a stringent bill for the better protection of her citizens against the nefarious liquor traffic, a brief synopsis of which we are publishing on another page. In Georgia, Alabama, the Carolinas, and Kentucky, in fact, throughout the entire South, those who believe in ridding the land of the terrible curse of intemperance are making their influence increasingly felt. National Constitutional prohibition is no longer looked upon as a wild dream of vagabonds, but is fast becoming a burning and practical issue. Already our public men at the National Capital are beginning to recognize the fact that they must reckon with it—that it can be evaded no longer. Senator Kenyon said a few days since: "If you wish to test the courage of any Washington official ask him about the liquor question."

At such a time as this, the temperance forces of Louisiana must not lag in the procession; they must catch the forward step and bravely take up the gauge of battle. It is true that with such a liquor stronghold as New Orleans in the State, the fight will be a hard one; but it is not by any means hopeless. Truth and right, if properly championed, must ultimately win. Within less than two months the Legislature will be in session and there will be a chance to secure the enactment of laws more favorable to the prohibition cause. We should get things in readiness to make the most of this opportunity. In the person of Rev. A. W. Turner, the Superintendent of the Louisiana Anti-Saloon League, we have a capable and tactful leader. Let us rally around him and give him our active and enthusiastic support. Funds are needed to organize for the struggle. Let every pastor ask the good people among whom he lives for a subscription and forward it at once to Brother Turner. This is an urgent and important call. Not a day should be lost in responding to it. The liquor men will be in Baton Rouge equipped with full purses and ready for the fray. In their recent meeting in New Orleans they brazenly avowed it to be their purpose to try to secure the repeal of some of our best temperance laws. This pronouncement upon their part ought to serve as a bugle call to the moral people of every community to be up and doing. How dare we to remain indifferent and inactive under such circumstances? If we sit idly down and do nothing and the saloons fasten their grip more tightly upon the suffering commonwealth of Louisiana, we may be sure that God will not hold us guiltless. Methodists in all parts of the world have been in the very forefront of this noble crusade, and we must not fail to exert the full measure of our strength in its behalf in this beautiful State of which we are citizens. Even if we knew that others would do the work, we should be ashamed to let them take our crown.

PERSONAL AND OTHER NOTES.

Rev. L. W. Cain continues to make proof of his ministry at Leland, Miss. He is serving a kind people, and Methodism has been strengthened at that point under his aggressive leadership.

Dr. and Mrs. A. F. Watkins entertained the married members of the Millsaps Faculty and their wives one evening last week. A delightful six-course luncheon was one of the special features of the occasion.

We make grateful acknowledgement to Rev. J. C. Chambers, of Collins, Miss., for 5 subscriptions to the Advocate, received on February 28. No interest of the Church is overlooked by this faithful and energetic pastor.

Rev. W. W. Mitchell, of West Point, Miss., says: "We find here a pleasant people to serve. I think that the prospects are favorable for a fruitful pastorate." Brother Mitchell's letter brought us a number of subscriptions.

The New Orleans District Conference will convene in Rayne Memorial Church on April 15. Dr. J. M. Henry states that there have been about 200 additions to the Church in the District since the last Annual Conference.

Rev. Robert Randle, of Eros, La., writes: "We have been received kindly here, and our work seems to be getting on very well. We shall try to use every available means of doing good, and we are hopeful of gracious results."

Mr. Bennie W. Johnson, of Mansfield, La., and Miss Juanita Micheltree were united in marriage at the home of the bride, in De Ridder, La., on February 26, Rev. P. A. Swann officiating. We extend congratulations and best wishes.

Rev. J. E. Gault, of Calhoun City, Miss., is the physical director in the high school at that place and also in the school at Pittsboro. He began last week in the Dixie Herald, the local paper, a series of articles on the "Care of the Body."

Rev. R. W. Evans, of Caledonia, Miss., is taking care of the interests of the Advocate among his parishioners, as is attested by our mailing files. He says: "I am trying to put our paper into as many homes as possible. I feel that it is equal to an assistant preacher."

The cornerstone of the new Methodist Episcopal Italian Church—Chiesa del Redentore—at the corner of Esplanade and Chartres Streets, was laid by Bishop Thirkield last Sunday afternoon. His remarks on that occasion were eloquent and exceedingly appropriate.

Rev. W. L. Duren, pastor of the First Methodist Church of Columbus, Miss., gave us a good club of subscriptions from his charge, with a check to correspond, a few days since. We have learned from several sources that Brother Duren is preaching to fine congregations.

"Our work is progressing nicely. We have begun work on our new brick church, and the prospects for the year are promising." So writes Rev. L. L. Roberts, of the Gibson Memorial Church of Vicksburg. The things to which Brother Roberts sets his hand usually go forward.

It was our pleasure to worship in Rayne Memorial Church, this city on Sunday, February 22, where we heard a most superior discourse by Dr. Felix R. Hill, Jr., the pastor, on "The Mystical Union." We shall not soon forget that sound and timely message. Dr. Hill is a thinker.

Rev. A. M. Broadfoot, pastor of the Southside Church of Meridian, Miss., writes hopefully of his work. He says: "I find many good people here; our Sunday school is in fine condition. We expect to begin a series of revival services in the near future. The outlook is very encouraging."

Rev. B. H. Rawls reports as follows from the Prentiss (Miss.) charge: "We have been well received and I am pleased with the outlook. We have three thriving Sunday schools. I am sowing down the Circuit with missionary literature, and am expecting good results from faithful service."

Writing from Nashville, Tenn., under date of February 26, Dr. R. H. Wynn says: "A very helpful Educational Conference is in progress here, with a splendid representation from our Church schools. You may announce that Bishop E. D. Mouzon will preach the Commencement sermon of Centenary College on June 7."

The Hon. J. D. Thames and family, of Vicksburg, Miss., visited Mr. Thames' father and mother, Rev. and Mrs. S. M. Thames of Hernando, Miss., last week. Mr. Thames is one of the best known lawyers in the Magnolia State and a gentleman of scholarly acquirements. He is an alumnus of the Southern University at Greensboro, Ala.

Rev. C. H. Ellis writes hopefully of his work at Moscow, Miss. He gave us several names for our subscription files a few days since. We are thankful to him for being mindful of the Conference organ as he moves in and out among his people. Brother Ellis is a veteran in the service who has fought a good fight and kept the faith.

Dr. Andrew Gillies, pastor of the Hennepin Avenue Methodist Episcopal Church of Minneapolis, Minn., has lately spent several days in New Orleans, preaching and lecturing a number of times while here. He is a man of intellectual vigor, and a pleasing and forceful speaker. He made a very favorable impression in the Crescent City.

Rev. J. H. Holder, of Okolona, Miss., says: "Things are moving on well in this charge. We will begin our new parsonage in a few days." Good! The Methodists of this flourishing town have long needed a better home for their pastor. They have had for several years one of the most attractive houses of worship that can be found in Mississippi.

In renewing his subscription, Brother James H. Ramsey, of Houston, Miss., takes time to express his appreciation of the Advocate. He furthermore says: "Our pastor, Rev. R. P. Neblett, is doing a fine work here, as is also his good wife. This is their last year with us, and the congregation to which they are assigned next year will be fortunate indeed."

The following friends, to whom acknowledgement has not been made elsewhere, have our hearty thanks for two or more subscriptions sent in within the past few days: Rev. R. S. Walton, Bunkie, La., 3; Rev. S. A. Brown, Boonville, Miss., 10; Rev. R. H. Bamburg, Calhoun, La., 7; Rev. A. J. Bonnette, Sulphur, La., 2; Mrs. Joe Bailey, Conehatta, Miss., 5.

We regret to know that Rev. W. A. Bowlin and Sister Bowlin, who reside at Booneville, Miss., have recently suffered from an attack of ptomaine poisoning, but are pleased to know that they have about recovered. Brother Bowlin also reports that Rev. S. A. Brown and several members of his family have lately been ill with la grippe, but that they are now convalescent.

Besides Rev. T. H. Lipscomb, of Starkville, Miss., the Nashville papers reported the following representatives from Mississippi as present at the Conference of Southern Educators held in Nashville last week: Rev. J. R. Countiss, President of Grenada College; Dr. I. W. Cooper, President of Whitworth College, and Prof. A. H. Shannon of the Agricultural and Mechanical College.

Rev. O. P. Armour, who is serving the Macon (Miss.) Circuit, writes: "The spirit of progress seems to be prevailing among my people. The parsonage has been considerably improved, and the pastor's salary has been advanced $200 over that paid last year. We are having excellent attendance upon the ordinances of the Church, and we already feel the revival fire in our hearts."

A Biloxi (Miss.) dispatch to the Times-Democrat on March 2 announced the death in Amarillo, Texas, of Miss Helen Huntley, daughter of Dr. W. H. Huntley, presiding elder of the Seashore District. The body of the deceased will be brought to Brookhaven, Miss., for interment. Our heart goes out in tenderest sympathy to Dr. Huntley and the other bereaved ones in this trying hour.

Rev. J. V. Bennett and Sister Bennett, of Monticello, Miss., came to the city several days ago and placed their baby under medical treatment at the Presbyterian Hospital. The little one is very ill with pneumonia, complicated with other troubles, but was thought to be improving when we had our last information. Let this anxious father and mother be remembered at the throne of grace.

The Woman's Board of City Missions met in St. Mark's Hall last Friday afternoon and appointed a number of committees. The Board decided to give an entertainment at St. Mark's on Friday, March 13, to which the men of all the Methodist churches in the city will be invited. The annual meeting of the Woman's Missionary Society of the Louisiana Conference will be held at Rayville, La., beginning March 24.

Mr. Henry Jones, of New Orleans, aged 65, passed to his reward last week. He held his membership in the Mary Werlein Mission, but was buried from the First Methodist Church, Dr. S. H. Werlein, assisted by Dr. J. T. Sawyer and Rev. H. W. Jamieson, officiating. He was an active worker for Christ and will be greatly missed. A more extended appreciation of Brother Jones will appear in the next issue of the Advocate.

Rev. A. S. Lutz, of New Iberia, La., in a note to the Advocate office, thus refers to his charge: "The work is moving along well. We held a two weeks' meeting in the beginning of the year in which I preached from the Sermon on the Mount. We had 19 accessions and paid $610 on our church debt. During Lent we will hold services on Wednesday and Friday nights, which we trust will result in quickening the spiritual life of our people."

Rev. K. W. Dodson, of Lake Charles, La., writes: "We have just closed a great meeting in our church here. The church was greatly revived and there will be more than 100 accessions as a result of the meeting. We have received 115 since Conference. Rev. Thurston B. Price and Mr. B. E. McCleskey were with us. Brother Price is a safe man. If all evangelists were like T. B. Price in preaching and methods no complaint of them would be heard."

Brother W. A. Powell, a citizen of Amite County, Miss., who resides near Liberty, has been spending several days in the city with his brother, Mr. J. G. Powell, who resides at 1456 Camp Street. He paid his respects to the Advocate office on last Monday, and we were pleased to see him. Brother Powell is a member of Day's Church (old Bethel) on the St. Helena (La.) charge. He spoke appreciatively of his pastor, Rev. R. V. Fulton.

Rev. O. W. Bradley, our gifted pastor at Winona, Miss., has within the past few weeks sent 35 subscriptions to the Nashville and New Orleans Christian Advocates. All departments of his church are in fine working order, and his people hold him in the highest honor and esteem. And Sister Bradley's popularity does not lag the least bit behind that of Brother Bradley. They are both workers who know how to accomplish things worth while for the Master.

Our office was brightened Wednesday of last week by the presence of Mrs. J. N. Dunn of Greenville, Miss., and Mrs. J. E. Landry who resides at 2419 Milan Street, New Orleans. Sister Dunn had been spending some days in the city as the guest of Dr. and Mrs. Landry, the latter of whom used to live in Greenville. She was a Miss Benoit and a granddaughter of Mrs. Theobald, one of the loved matriarches of our Mississippi Delta Methodism. Sister Dunn brought us welcome news from our many friends in the Queen City of the Delta, and had generous words of praise for her pastor, Rev. J. T. Lewis.

We are indebted to our stirring young pastor at Tutwiler, Miss., for a program of the opening service in our attractive new church in that growing town which was conducted on Sunday, Feb. 22. The exercises were most elaborate and appropriate and the occasion was one of great interest. The report of the Building Committee was made by Mr. H. L. Bruister, and the speech of acceptance by Mr. R. P. Turner, representing the Trustees. Dr. T. F. Clay discussed "The Church—Why it is Needed in Tutwiler." Mr. E. O. Whittington spoke on "Buildings Not Made With Hands," and the pastor handled the theme, "A Century of Methodism." The music, including a beautiful solo, was up to a high standard. This church was erected at a cost of about $5000; it has a Sunday school room and pastor's study, and presents a fine appearance. It was started and carried practically to completion during the pastorate of Dr. J. W. Price which terminated last fall, and the people were much disappointed that he found it impossible to be with them in their first service in it. The Winona District Conference will be held in this splendid new structure, April 24-26.

On Tuesday, Jan. 13, 1914, Mrs. MOLLIE L. SMITH passed away from this earthly life. She was the youngest daughter of Rev. L. B. and Mrs. M. O. Moore. She leaves a husband, three bright little girls, several brothers, two sisters, and a host of friends to mourn her going away. She was a true and faithful Christian, having united with the Church at 8 years of age. Her sufferings were intense during her illness, but she bore them patiently and was perfectly submissive to the will of the Father. Our loss is her eternal gain. We hope to meet her some day where parting is no more.

FROM ONE WHO LOVED HER.

Miss EDNA WILLIAMS died at North Carrollton, Miss., in the home of her sister, Mrs. J. M. Powers, December 19, 1913. Miss Edna was 20 years of age, just entering womanhood, when our Heavenly Father bade her come up higher. She praised God on her dying bed in the words of the first five verses of the Fourteenth Chapter of John; and exclaimed in her last hours: "The Lord is my Shepherd: I shall not want." She joined the M. E. Church, South, when about 15 years old, and was of a bright, cheery disposition. She said many times that she wanted to get well so that she could work for her Master. Words are inadequate to express the worth of this fair, sweet girl, in whose face we caught for a moment a glimpse of glory, and of whose heroic spirit we catch the strength and sweetness in the hush of the dim twilight of her life, as, self-forgotten, she thinks alone of her Savior.

MRS. T. E. GREGORY.

Mrs. EMILY ANGELINE HOUSTON was born on November 16, 1839 in Claiborne Parish, La., and died on January 24, 1914, at Reid's, La., in Allen Parish; was married on March 1, 1859 to John C. Houston; and was the mother of five sons and two daughters, all of whom survive her, except one son who died four days after her decease. Sister Houston professed religion and joined the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, in the year 1881, and lived an upright Christian life until the date of her death. This writer visited her two weeks before her death and found her enjoying a strong faith in her Savior. Her children have every reason to rise up and call her blessed. The sweet aroma of her Christian life had been shed upon them for many years. She always brought sunshine into their homes and hearts when she came. Her remains were laid to rest in the Hopewell Cemetery in the presence of a large number of relatives and friends, after religious services conducted by her pastor. May they all make preparation to meet her where partings are no more.

P. A. SWANN, Pastor.

A LOVING TRIBUTE.

Our precious grandmother, Mrs. Druzilla Lockley Spell, departed this life on Dec. 22, 1913, at the age of ninety-two. She was a charter member of old Kimball Chapel Church, now called Indian Bayou. She was born and reared in this vicinity and here was married to Benager Spell. She never was away from the old home and the church she loved. It was hard for the children to give her up, even at her age. "Aunt Zille," as everyone called her, could be seen helping with the duties of everyday life, until a few days before her death. She never professed her religion very much, but on one occasion she told the writer how she remembered her grandchildren in prayer, especially by her bedside as the evening shades appeared. One of the old couple's favorite songs was "The Day is past and gone," and another was, "Will they know when we are coming?" The funeral services were conducted by Rev. J. I. Hoffpauir. As we looked upon her for the last time, they sang, "How Firm a Foundation." Oh, what a consolation she leaves with us to know that she had the promise of a firm foundation, the Rock, Christ Jesus. The pall-bearers marched slowly to the grave, led by her son "Uncle" Jasper Spell. She was laid to rest by the side of her husband in the Indian Bayou Cemetery. She leaves to mourn her loss four sons and two daughters, fifty-three grandchildren, one hundred and twenty-one great-grandchildren, and eleven great-great-grandchildren.

CHATMAN PERRY.

T. H. SELBY.

Talbot Henry Selby, late of Newton, Miss., was no ordinary man. I read the modest memoir of his life and character by his devoted son, Rev. Robert Selby, now presiding elder of the Brookhaven (Miss.) District, published in the Advocate of February 12 with much interest and appreciation. The lives of such men are an example and an inspiration to upright living.

Left an orphan in infancy, the writer's earliest recollections were in the hospitable home of this good man and his first wife, who stood in the place of parents to him, and where he resided for several years as a member of the household. The teachings and early impressions received in that Christian home, where God was worshipped around the family altar and honored in the lives of its members, have helped to guide my wandering footsteps through the intervening years. His ideas of child-training and home government might be considered too strict for the liberalism of to-day. He inclined to the Puritan as a religious type. A man of positive convictions, he never compromised with evil. But beneath a seemingly stern exterior beat a warm and loyal heart, ever open to the cry of the needy and distressed, always responsive to the claims of family and friends, of God and country. And our age would have nothing to lose but much to gain by reverting to the high standards and rigid requirements adopted by him in family rearing.

Henry Selby's word was as good as his bond. He had character. "Mr. Selby said so," was the end of controversy. In the little town of Newton, where he spent his long and useful life and where everybody knew him, people trusted him, loved him, honored him—many naming their sons for him, telling him their troubles, seeking his counsel, following his advice. Mammon worship was no part of his nature. Life meant more to him than mere money-getting. He declined inviting offers that promised wealth, preferring the sure if less tempting rewards of steady industry. The strong and manly Christian virtues that adorned his life and made him the commanding figure he was among his fellowmen came only with struggle against the foe of man's upward climb; at the end, his well rounded character stands forth, the object of admiring gaze, like the sculptured figure chiseled from the Parian marble.

A fine Christian gentleman has gone from among us—one who was true in every relation of life, and whose place in the business life of which he was a part, in the family circle, in the church life of his community, can never be filled. Peace to his ashes!

Tidings From the Field

Harrisville, Miss.

Dear Dr. Meek: I wish to tell you about our woman's prayer meeting at this place, which we have been holding regularly since last September. Although it is a union meeting, we are united in a spirit of love, and are praying for our churches and our community. We bless God's holy name for what our hearts have felt in these meetings; and we desire to ask the prayers of all the Christians who read this. Pray that it may be with us as with the little band of women who went out to the riverside to pray in the long ago—that we may have among us the presence of the Holy Spirit. Pray also for our pastor, Brother Waldrop. He is a good preacher.

NANCY TAYLOR.

Dubach, La.

Dear Doctor Meek: Thinking it might be of interest to some of the former pastors, I give you a few dots from the new charge of Dubach. This charge now embraces Dubach, Harmony Chapel, and Lisbon, which make one of the best and most logically arranged circuits in our Conference. We have sold the old parsonage at Lisbon at a fair price, and built and furnished one of the neatest parsonages in the Conference at Dubach, which is now the base of the circuit. The people of this charge are first-class in every respect, and believe in and know how to take care of their preacher. When good Bishop Candler read out my name for this place my heart bounded with joyful anticipation of the pleasure of serving a people most of whom I knew in former days, and some of whom were my converts in the years that are gone; and, thank God, they are standing true and faithful to Christ. When we arrived at Dubach our house was not finished, and the good people met us at the train and provided lavish hospitality for our entertainment for more than three weeks, until we could move into the new parsonage. And then the next day after moving, what a "pounding" we had—bringing many good things to eat! We have hardly had to buy any provisions yet. And then on going to Lisbon that princely layman, Brother R. T. McLendon, loaded my buggy down with many good things, too numerous to mention. Surely the lines have fallen to us in pleasant places, and we have a goodly heritage. May our heavenly Father grant us a year of great spiritual growth and increase in membership, and make the humble ministry of his unworthy servant a blessing to all his people!

I would write more but I see you looking toward the waste basket, and I am afraid this will be consigned to the trash pile. JOHN G. SLOANE.

SECOND CHURCH, COLUMBUS, MISS.

Dear Dr. Meek: Please give me space in your good paper to tell its readers that I am hard at work trying to pay for our new church lot. This is a hard job, but if we never attempt things worth while for the Lord, we will never accomplish much for his cause. Bishop Atkins passed through our city a few weeks back and I drove him around in my buggy and showed him our lot and our present location. He said he thought that we were doing a very wise thing in moving our church—that we had his hearty approval and that he stood ready to help us in any way he could. It is the view of some of the best business men of the town that we have one of the very finest locations for a church to be found in the city of Columbus.

Just as soon as we pay our debt on the lot we are going to take up the task of planning for our new building. Our biggest job is to pay this debt. Here is where we need help, more than we will anywhere else. When this work is completed the Methodists of the State will be glad of it. It will do you good to know that your daughter attending the I. I. & C., our great State institution for girls, can look just across the street to the north at any time and see the steeple of a Methodist church. This will be the only house of worship of any denomination in sight of the College.

I wish every one who reads these lines would send me a contribution to help me pay this lot debt off. It will do you good and the Lord will bless you in doing it. Some of you preachers of the North Mississippi Conference will be the pastor here at some time and you could preach better if you had five or ten dollars in the very foundation of this new and beautiful house that we are going to build. May God bless you, each and all.

J. H. BASS.

IN MEMORIAM.

Mrs. Ernest Green, daughter of J. H. and M. J. Havens, was born in Jackson County, near Van Cleave, Miss., on December 30, 1833; and died on September 7, 1913. She joined the M. E. Church, South, when about 10 years old, under the pastorate of Rev. N. B. Young (being converted soon afterwards), and was faithful to the Church and her Christian duties and lived a consecrated life until death. She taught school three years, and while engaged in teaching school did all she could to teach the children to live right and to plant in their hearts a desire to be Christian. She hated wrong and loved the right; and while always willing to look over the mistakes of others, she was strong in her own belief. She made many friends wherever she went. She possessed a wit and humor that made her a congenial companion while here in her old home.

She cheered us with her happy songs while at her daily work. She possessed a cheerful and hopeful disposition, and made her life pleasant to all those associated with her. She was married to Mr. Ernest Green on April 19, 1911 and moved to George County, near Leaf, and spent the remaining part of her life there. Two little sons were born in that home—Henry Justin and Ernest Huntley, who will never know the love of their mother. She leaves a husband, two children, a father, a mother, and four sisters and one brother to mourn her departure, besides a host of friends. Two brothers preceded her into the Master's presence. How hard for us to give Jennie up! But she has only crossed over and we are left to follow on. God bless the two little children, and help us all to live so that we may all meet her in heaven. Her remains were brought to the old home and deposited in the family cemetery, in the presence of a large crowd. The funeral service was conducted by her pastor Rev. J. M. Lewis, assisted by Rev. W. W. Brown, and Rev. J. W. Brown. Her father,

JEFF H. HAVENS.

GIVE "SYRUP OF FIGS" TO CONSTIPATED CHILD

Delicious "Fruit Laxative" can't harm tender little Stomach, liver and bowels.

Look at the tongue, mother! If coated, your little one's stomach, liver and bowels need cleansing at once. When peevish, cross, listless, doesn't sleep, eat or act naturally, or is feverish, stomach sour, breath bad; has sore throat, diarrhoea, full of cold, give a teaspoonful of "California Syrup of Figs," and in a few hours all the foul, constipated waste, undigested food and sour bile gently moves out of its little bowels without griping, and you have a well, playful child again. Ask your druggist for a 50-cent bottle of "California Syrup of Figs," which contains full directions for babies, children of all ages and for grown-ups.

DON'T WORRY—EAT.

Memphis, Tenn.—Mrs. Emma D. Looney, of this place, says: "I suffered misery for nearly eight years, but since taking Cardui, I am much stronger, and I haven't missed a single meal. I hardly know how to express my gratitude." Don't worry about your symptoms. Cardui doesn't treat them. What you need is strength. Cardui helps you to get it. Take Cardui, because other tonics do not contain its peculiar and successful ingredients, imported especially for its manufacture. Half a century of success has stamped Cardui with the seal of public approval. During this time Cardui has benefited a million women. Why not you? Try it to-day.

TAKE MR. SHIVAR AT HIS WORD.

You will have no cause to regret it. Mr. Shivar, Proprietor of the celebrated Shivar Mineral Spring, makes you this remarkable offer:

Having observed the remarkable curative effect of Shivar Spring Water in thousands of cases, many of which were considered hopeless, we unconditionally guarantee satisfactory results to all of our customers. We agree to refund the entire price in case of dissatisfaction, the customer to be the sole judge. If you suffer with DYSPEPSIA, INDIGESTION, GAS-TRITIS, DISEASES OF THE STOMACH, LIVER, KIDNEYS, OR BLADDER, BRIGHT'S DISEASE, DIABETES, RHEUMATISM, GALL STONES, NERVOUS HEADACHE, URIC ACID POISONING, OR CHRONIC SORES DUE TO BAD BLOOD, fill out the order blank below and if the water does not give you perfect satisfaction simply advise us and we will promptly and cheerfully refund the amount paid.

Shivar Spring,
Box 17E, Shelton, S. C.
Gentlemen:

I accept your guarantee offer and enclose herewith two dollars for ten gallons of Shivar Mineral Water. I agree to give it a fair trial, in accordance with instructions contained in booklet you will send, and if the results are not satisfactory to me you agree to refund the price in full upon receipt of the two empty demijohns which I agree to return promptly.

EAT LESS AND TAKE SALTS FOR KIDNEYS.

Take a glass of Salts before breakfast if your Back hurts, or Bladder bothers you.

The American men and women must guard constantly against Kidney trouble, because we eat too much and all our food is rich. Our blood is filled with uric acid which the kidneys strive to filter out, they weaken from overwork, become sluggish; the eliminative tissues clog and the result is kidney trouble, bladder weakness and a general decline in health.

When your kidneys feel like lumps of lead; if you suffer with sick headache or dizzy, nervous spells, acid stomach, or you have rheumatism when the weather is bad, get from you pharmacist about four ounces of Jad Salts; take a tablespoonful in a glass of water before breakfast for a few days and your kidneys will then act fine. This famous salts is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia, and has been used for generations to flush and stimulate clogged kidneys; to neutralize the acids so it no longer is a source of irritation, thus ending bladder disorders.

Jad Salts is inexpensive; cannot injure, makes a delightful effervescent lithia-water beverage, and belongs in every home, because nobody can make a mistake by having a good kidney flushing any time.

$2,500 IN CASH FOR YIELD

Two good prizes offered in each State for the best cotton yield and the best corn yield—Open to Five States.

To stimulate the interest in larger and better crops of cotton and corn in this section, the Meridian Fertilizer Factory, one of the best known and largest concerns in the Middle South, will offer this year, in each of five States, prizes of $150 and $100 for the most productive acre of cotton and prizes of $150 and $100 for the most productive two acres of corn in the crop of 1914.

These prizes are open to all who will comply with the conditions laid down in a booklet sent on request. That proper control over the contests may be had, all who enter enroll in the Two Bale per Acre Cotton Club or the Two Hundred Bushel Corn Club. No admission fee is charged.

THIS HELPFUL BOOK FREE

As a help to contestants the Company will send each member, free of charge, a book on the cultivation of corn and cotton. This book tells of the successful experiences of farmers who have won prizes heretofore and contains expert advice and suggestions from the Agricultural Department and experimental stations.

Not only are you sure of a better crop from following the plans outlined, which in itself pays for all you may do, but you have an excellent chance to win a substantial prize for yourself.

Write for full particulars regarding the contest to the

TRUE MISSION WORK.

Bacon, in his "Advancement of Learning," endeavors to show that knowledge, whether gained empirically or by pure intuition, great or small, is an assistance to the solving of the problems of life. Many, he says, have been of the opinion that too much knowledge isolates one from the practical affairs in that they become, in their own opinion, too great for the common place, and in that they are separated from the common lot through a difference in taste, a difference in subjects of thoughts, and a difference in habits. He goes on to show, however, that these are erroneous ideas. Some of the greatest rulers of earth were learned men. Solomon was the wisest of men, and under him the kingdom of Israel was peaceful and widespread. Rome was prosperous under the rulership of Seneca during the minority of Nero. It was in great glory under the hand of Misithus, a pedant, during the youthful days of Gordianus. Mr. Bacon further states that knowledge does far more for the practical side of life than philosophy. People have been reasoning and philosophizing since the days of Aristotle. They have torn down systems of thought in morals and religion and other fields they have analyzed and denatured; but actual and potential knowledge is the true builder of progress. And the spread of this knowledge has been the glory of mankind. The discovery of the use of electricity, the building of a steam engine, the inventing of a cotton gin, the invention of printing, and such, have done more for the advancement of the world than all the philosophy. The pure knowledge of these things has modified the world.

The Christian religion is not a philosophy in its working principles. If it did not advance beyond mere theories its death would have occurred two thousand years ago and its grave would have not been marked by a headstone. Further, the world cannot truthfully say to the Christian that the presentations of his heart are merely his "ideas," and that his practices are merely the various forms of an "art" to ease the perturbed soul. The Christian religion is not a mere balm or a soothing syrup.

The fact of the resurrection of the soul is in the realm of knowledge. The soul can be resurrected from sin. This stupendous discovery shook the world and changed its social and moral and religious complexion far more than electricity or printing ever could. For what difference can it make after all as to the methods of living just so people live rightly?

The pure knowledge of Jesus Christ needs, then, to be spread through all the world. Bacon says knowledge is always an assistance and this seems to be an accepted fact among men. They are striving for that knowledge which they think will bring about their ends. But the Christian knows that the knowledge of Jesus Christ will work the greatest reformation that is possible. The world does not know Christ. He should be taught to the heathen nations. The experience of the Christian should be demonstrated to the heathen.

JOHNSON'S TONIC

Before the practice of the art of medicine, the relieving of the physical necessities, the teaching of the art of handiwork, the training of the mind in the knowledge of the world, should come the teaching of Jesus Christ. Schools in heathen lands are mighty good things, but they should teach Christ. Physicians are very necessary, but they should also heal the soul. Cleanliness and needle work and domestic science are very fine, but cleanliness of heart and the knowledge of Christ are better. All these things will be added when Christ is first taught and an actual knowledge of him is gained. Preach Christ, preach the gospel, tell the story of the cross, let people know one's actual experience with Christ, show that one knows Christ and is not a mere doctrinarian; demonstrate that one is not a propagator of a theory or an idea or the representative of a sect, but there is a knowledge in the soul of Christ! The true mission work is to tell from experience the actual knowledge of Christ to the world.

Dr. Blosser's Catarrh Remedy.

Trial Package Mailed Free to Any Sufferer.

If you have catarrh of the head, nose, throat; if catarrh has affected your hearing; if you sneeze, hawk or spit; if you take one cold after another; if your head feels stopped up; you should try this Remedy discovered by Dr. Blosser, who has made a specialty of treating catarrh for over thirty-nine years.

This Remedy is composed of herbs, flowers and seeds possessing healing medicinal properties; contains no tobacco, is not injurious or habit-forming; is pleasant to use and perfectly harmless to man, woman or child.

Catarrhal germs are carried into the head, nose and throat with the air you breathe—just so the warm medicated smoke-vapor is carried with the breath, applying the medicine directly to the diseased parts. If you have tried the usual methods, such as sprays, douches, salves, inhalers and the stomach-ruining "constitutional" medicines, you will readily see the superiority of this Smoking Remedy.

Simply send your name and address to Dr. J. W. Blosser, 204 Walton St., Atlanta, Ga., and he will send you a free package containing samples of the Remedy for smoking in a pipe and made into cigarettes, together with an illustrated booklet which goes thoroughly into the subject of catarrh. He will send by mail, for one dollar, enough of the medicine to last about one month.

The Quickest, Simplest Cough Remedy

Easily and Cheaply Made at Home. Saves You $2.

This plan makes a pint of cough syrup—enough to last a family a long time. You couldn't buy as much or as good cough syrup for $2.50.

Simple as it is, it gives almost instant relief and usually conquers an ordinary cough in 24 hours. This is partly due to the fact that it is slightly laxative, stimulates the appetite and has an excellent tonic effect. It is pleasant to take—children like it. An excellent remedy, too, for whooping cough, spasmodic croup and bronchial asthma.

Mix one pint of granulated sugar with ½ pint of warm water, and stir for 2 minutes. Put 2½ ounces of Pinex (fifty cents' worth) in a pint bottle, and add the Sugar Syrup. It keeps perfectly. Take a teaspoonful every one, two or three hours.

Pine is one of the oldest and best known remedial agents for the throat membranes. Pinex is a most valuable concentrated compound of Norway white pine extract, and is rich in guaiacol and other natural healing elements. Other preparations will not work in this combination.

The prompt results from this mixture have endeared it to thousands of housewives in the United States and Canada, which explains why the plan has been imitated often, but never successfully.

A guaranty of absolute satisfaction, or money promptly refunded, goes with this preparation. Your druggist has Pinex, or will get it for you. If not, send to The Pinex Co., Ft. Wayne, Ind.

The Sunday School.

NEWS AND NOTES.

By Miss Elizabeth Kilpatrick.

Dawson says "Everything in a child's surroundings should be interpreted religiously." What a wondrous home life we'd have if just this was done.

One of the agreements in the contracts of the Pittsburgh baseball team for 1914 is a pledge to let liquor alone. This requirement has been made for two years and it is well evidenced that it has made for good playing and general efficiency.

Rev. J. H. Bass has a well organized and growing Sunday school at the Main St. Church, Columbus, and proposes building a new and commodious house of worship when quite convenient. His congregation is receptive and hospitable and is ready to help along Sunday school lines.

It will be of genuine help to the teacher who is keen to utilize every pedagogical advantage if she will read Matthew and Luke, studying our Lord's method of dealing with the individual comment or question, for often that question is a key to the mental and spiritual condition of the questioner. Note especially Luke 12:31-34.

"Discussion" Adult Bible Classes are desirable, but only where discussion leads to doing; in fact, the emphasis should be placed on doing. The striking feature of the men's and women's classes lately springing into such prominence, is their way of making themselves responsible for some special thing that needs to be done, either in the church or town.

A certain class of nine year old girls in a community where mothers do their own work and are often too busy to attend Sunday school themselves, go round for the Cradle Roll babies and Primary little folks and see them safely to and from Sunday school. These girls have a watchword for each month, such as: "Before I'm Asked," "On Time," "Mother First," "The exact Truth, and the Other Girl." Many of these girls are seriously trying to live up to these watchwords. The character building qualities of this simple exercise are self-evident.

First Church, Columbus, has a fine Sunday school now, but its enthusiasm and hospitality quite overshadow its present excellence. Rev. W. L. Duren is leading along all the above lines, perfecting plans for numbers, equipment and service. Mr. A. H. Pegues is a superintendent who loves his work and means for his school to reach its proper place. Hon. Jennings Sturdivant teaches a live men's class. Mrs. Sheffield has a growing married ladies' class and Mr. Kennedy and many more excellent teachers are doing corner-stone work. It was a real joy to speak to a great congregation of these cultured and splendid people.

A teacher of 20 and more fine girls in their teens assumed an attitude not long since that proves at least, how humanly selfish even good Christians and skilled head-teachers may be. The superintendent of this school stood in great need of teachers for his Junior and first year Intermediate Departments. He appealed to this class, and six volunteered, with the joy of contemplated service flashing into their sweet faces. The teacher appeared greatly hurt and said: "If these six girls left the class, she would resign. How can that teacher, or any teacher, impress service and self-sacrifice on her pupils and not set the real example before them?"

LOUISIANA NOTES.

By Rev. P. O. Lowrey.

Among the unreported contributions to our Sunday School Board last year was $25 from Dr. Scales, of Shreveport, a special of $20 from the Carrollton Avenue Church, New Orleans, and the Children's Day collection of $49 from the Algiers Sunday school. Other smaller amounts totaling about $90 were reported at Conference through the Auditing Board. Excepting possibly some of the larger contributions that were noted as subscriptions, all other amounts were acknowledged in these columns.

On the 14th of February, Mrs. J. B. Magee, of Kentwood, sent each of her primary pupils a valentine remembrance in the form of a heart of white paper on which was written in her own hand, "I love you." This was covered with a red heart of tissue paper, over which was still another of white tissue paper, all tied together by a red cord. This same aggressive teacher also recently gave the members of her class an afternoon social at her home, each child bringing two sandwiches and two pieces of fruit, the extra provision being for the guest that each child was privileged to invite. Of course, this went a long way in raising the worth of the class in the esteem of its members.

Mrs. J. R. Ables, the wife of an esteemed member of our Conference Sunday School Board, has recently undergone an operation in the Presbyterian Hospital in New Orleans by which it now seems that she is freed from a malady of a number of years' standing. Brother Ables is the teacher of a fine class of Junior boys in his home school at Ponchatoula, the President of our Baton Rouge District Sunday School Conference, and an enthusiastic friend of Sunday school extension and improvement in any way that may offer a field of service. We join with him in giving thanks for the hopeful outlook for the recovery of his faithful and devoted wife, and pray that her health may be entirely restored.

Mrs. S. L. Riggs has built up a new junior class in St. Francisville this year, where Brother Riggs' family is residing, and her class is to have charge of the missionary program of the school in March. Sister Riggs reports the school there to be in a live and growing condition, and that it is the aim of the leaders to bring it up to our standard of efficiency. We congratulate the pastor and the local church at St. Francisville upon having the splendid help of Brother and Sister Riggs. They have left their mark of zeal and fidelity everywhere they have been in the Conference, and we expect nothing less of them at St. Francisville, where they are well-known through their former pastoral relations at that place. We are glad to note that Brother Riggs' health is improving.

A YANKEE VETERAN'S STORY.

"My entire body," writes Thos. Larkin, Soldier's National Home, Maine, "was broken out with some peculiar skin disease, and I thought sure I would never find a cure for it. But after making a few applications of Gray's Ointment I began to improve, and being encouraged continued its use until now I am entirely cured. Words are inadequate to express my gratitude." Gray's Ointment is older than the veteran who wrote this. For 93 years it has been a priceless boon to sufferers from skin troubles—blood sores, boils, ulcers, festering wounds, etc. 25c at drug stores. Write Dr. W. F. SAGE AND SULPHUR

DARKENS GRAY HAIR

Brush this through faded, lifeless locks and they become dark, glossy, youthful.

Hair that loses its color and lustre, or when it fades, turns gray, dull and lifeless, is caused by a lack of sulphur in the hair. Our grandmother made up a mixture of Sage Tea and Sulphur to keep her locks dark and beautiful, and thousands of women and men who value that even color, that beautiful dark shade of hair which is so attractive, use only this old-time recipe.

Nowadays we get this famous mixture by asking at any drug store for a 50 cent bottle of "Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Hair Remedy," which darkens the hair so naturally, so evenly, that nobody can possibly tell it has been applied. Besides, it takes off dandruff, stops scalp itching and falling hair. You just dampen a sponge or soft brush with it and draw this through your hair, taking one small strand at a time. By morning the gray hair disappears; but what delights the ladies with Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur is that, besides beautifully darkening the hair after a few applications, it also brings back the gloss and lustre and gives it an appearance of abundance.

TAKES OFF DANDRUFF, HAIR STOPS FALLING

Save your Hair! Get a 25 cent bottle of Danderine right now—Also stops itching scalp.

Thin, brittle, colorless and scraggy hair is mute evidence of a neglected scalp; of dandruff—that awful scurf. There is nothing so destructive to the hair as dandruff. It robs the hair of its lustre, its strength and its very life; eventually producing a feverishness and itching of the scalp, which if not remedied causes the hair roots to shrink, loosen and die—then the hair falls out fast. A little Danderine tonight—now—any time—will surely save your hair.

Get a 25 cent bottle of Knowlton's Danderine from any drug store. You surely can have beautiful hair and lots of it if you will just try a little Danderine. Save your hair! Try it!

Freckle-Face

Now is the Time to Get Rid of These Ugly Spots.

Do you know how easy it is to remove those ugly spots so that no one will call you freckle-face?

Simply get an ounce of othine, double strength, from your druggist, and a few applications should show you how easy it is to rid yourself of freckles and get a beautiful complexion. The sun and winds of February and March have a strong tendency to bring out freckles, and as a result more othine is sold in these months. Be sure to ask for the double strength othine, as this is sold under guarantee of money back if it fails to remove the freckles.

SOME WORDS CONCERNING THE WORK.

Dear Doctor: Please allow me to advise and kindly urge the pastors of the Durant District to do their best to raise assessments for missions and to put the Missionary Voice and the New Orleans and Nashville Advocates in every home, through the months of March and April, and also to be planning to observe "Children's Day," in the months of May and June.

My dear brethren, I know we are much disposed to put off the hard pull as long as possible—until we have to pull—and you know then it often means less money than early efforts would have given. Do your best to put our literature in the homes of your people.

And, at the most opportune time, I do hope that you will observe "Children's Day" in every congregation, so that you may be able to report to Bishop Atkins at the next Conference, "Children's Day observed at every Church, Bishop." This would certainly make the good Bishop feel that his earnest efforts with us last winter were not in vain. I know, brethren, it takes work, much work, all-the-time work to accomplish such results; but let us not lose sight of the fact that this is our only business, and that the people are more and more demanding that we attend to it. So, in the fear of God, and by his help, let's give him the best year's work of our lives. There are too many demands upon the pastor now for the sluggard to find this an enjoyable place for him. I suppose the Lord is demanding more of the pastors; I am sure the people are—not for stilted preaching, but faithful service. They want nothing unreasonable, but they want our time—want to see an honest effort made to save souls and to do the work of the Church. Oh, that we may strive to show ourselves workmen that need not to be ashamed!

A DELIGHTFUL TRIP TO BIENVILLE, LA.

On Thursday, Feb. 4, I started for Bienville to join Brother W. J. Porter and his devoted Christian wife in the celebration of their silver wedding. Their children had insisted upon and persuaded them to celebrate it, and as soon as they determined to do so they wrote me that I must be present if possible, as I united them in wedlock twenty-five years ago; so I went. At Gibbsland I had great pleasure in my association with Brother Bennett, and especially with Sister Blulock who has passed her ninety-sixth year, and retains remarkably her physical and mental powers and is in high spiritual enjoyment—or as she expressed it, is in constant communion with her Lord and Savior—just waiting his call to go up higher. I have known her for nearly thirty years. She has ever been the same reliant, consistent child of God. I spent the night at the house with her niece, who is an exemplary and experimental Christian. I do not remember a time that I spent more pleasantly religiously and socially. May God's blessings ever attend them. The niece, Sister Bird, being a particular friend of Brother Porter's family, also went to the wedding.

We were met at the depot at Bienville by Brother Porter and his accomplished and lovely daughters and cared for until evening came, when at seven o'clock, we, with many friends met at the church and had a short sermon on the subject of marriage. We then repaired to the parsonage where we spent the time very pleasantly in social entertainments, conferring honors upon the bride and groom in the form of presents, and in

A PARAGRAPH FROM DR. MORGAN.

In a ringing address at the recent International Bible Conference in Nashville, Tenn., Dr. G. Campbell Morgan, of London, said: "The Bible in the nation is the word for morality. Deny man's relationship to God and all these things—the sacredness of life, the sanctity of marriage, and the value of the child, will perish. God is love. That is not love which cries over the cancer and dares not cut it out. That is not love which allows the wayward child to run its own way without correction or direction."

Two important truths are contained in this paragraph: the indispensableness of religion, and the fact that love means vastly more than mere caressing. There can be no enduring and forward-moving civilization that is not undergirded and vitalized by the inspiring and uplifting teachings of the Divine Revelation. They only can produce high-minded men and women who spend their strength to create a social order that is clean and worthy. And it is the love of God that leads him to discipline persons and send his judgments upon them. It is an utter misrepresentation of the Heavenly Father to say that he is too good to punish any one. He must chastise his children to save and perfect them, and he must punish the wicked to prevent them from destroying all good with the ruinous contagion of evil. There is strength and firmness, as well as gentleness and tenderness, in the mighty love that sent Jesus to die upon the Cross.

A NOBLE UTTERANCE.

We take from the Nashville Christian Advocate the following words of Bishops Denny and Wilson spoken at the reception given the latter on the occasion of his eightieth birthday at the Trinity Methodist Episcopal Church, South, of Baltimore, Md.:

"Then Bishop Denny presented Bishop Wilson with a purse filled with eighty gold pieces. Bishop Denny said: 'I have traveled around the world with him. We have slept under the same blanket more than once, and I have picked him up from the sands of China, where a pony with not even civilized manners had unseated him. In the episcopacy we turn to him, listen to his counsel, and follow him as you do.'

"Bishop Wilson received an ovation when he arose to speak. He said: 'I want you to know that this is not my doing. I had no hand in it. I did not even know of it until it had gone too far to be stopped. It is not my fault, even, that I have reached four score years. I owe a debt to the Baltimore Conference which I can never repay. It has always held me in affection and esteemed me far beyond my worth. I am in the office I now hold not through my own seeking. I was told by my Church to go, and I went, as I have obeyed all her commands. I have tried to finish my course with the true faith kept. I have been preaching the gospel for nearly sixty-two years and now I had rather be the preacher in the poorest mission in the Baltimore Conference than to occupy the highest secular position. I have been a preacher, nothing else, and I expect to be that until the end.'

This testimony of our revered and honored Senior Bishop is, indeed, a beautiful and inspiring one. The spirit of modesty with which it is permeated is worthy of all praise. And, best of all, the life and labors of this faithful servant of Christ are in perfect accord with the noble sentiments that he expressed. Bishop Wilson will in the coming years be ranked with the most apostolic men that world-wide Methodism has produced.

NEW ORLEANS ENTITLED TO ONE.

If the fitness of things is to govern, one of the eight regional banks to be established in the United States will be located in New Orleans. Barring St. Louis and Baltimore, there is no other municipality in the South which in commercial importance can remotely approach the Crescent City, and neither of the other two mentioned is so strategically situated commercially as is this great mart of trade. There is scarcely a doubt that in the near future it is to Central and South America that our country must look for the largest expansion of its commerce, and New Orleans is the natural gateway through which, under normal conditions, this increasing volume of business may be expected to flow. It is only a short distance from here to Cuba and the other islands of the West Indies group, and the Panama Canal which is expected to be opened to navigation next July is only 1300 miles away, while from San Francisco the distance is more than 3000 miles. It is said that persons from the Pacific Coast in visiting the great waterway really find it more satisfactory to come to New Orleans by rail and embark from here, than they do to make the voyage from any of the ports on our western shore. Such an advantage in the way of location is bound to exert a telling influence in the years to come, and if the United States desires to reach out after the trade of the neighboring nations to the South she needs to develop here a strong and solid basis for her operations.

As a coffee, rice, molasses, fruit, and cotton market New Orleans is scarcely second to any city in the Western Hemisphere, and how she stands in comparison with other Southern cities as a banking and manufacturing center is shown by the two following tables:

Banking Resources:
	Capital and Surplus.	Deposits.
New Orleans	$18,797,000	$86,032,110
Atlanta	15,000,000	33,000,000
Houston	13,400,000	42,000,000
Birmingham	7,083,100	27,289,000
Memphis	8,804,600	35,130,000
Value of Manufactured Products:
New Orleans	$78,794,000
Richmond	47,358,000
Atlanta	33,038,000

Memphis	30,242,000
Nashville	29,650,000
Dallas	26,959,000
Birmingham	24,128,000
Durham, N. C.	23,271,000
Houston	23,015,000

New Orleans as a port also stands next to New York as is attested by the figures for the year ending June 30, 1912, given below:

	Exports.	Imports.	Shlpplng.
N. York ...	$817,945,803	$975,744,320	$1,793,690,123
Boston	69,692,171	129,293,016	198,985,187
P'd'phia ...	69,069,730	85,038,185	154,107,915
Balt.	92,210,877	26,438,400	118,649,277
N. Or'ns... ..	149,160,910	75,089,887	224,250,797
San Fran... ..	49,249,734	59,235,471	108,485,205

A regional bank domiciled here would be in a position to serve a vast stretch of territory in an inland direction and would have an outward reach such as it could not have situated anywhere else in the Southern States. Hence, if politics are disregarded and the good of the monetary system alone is considered, it is difficult to see how New Orleans can be passed over by the authorities in Washington in establishing these eagerly sought institutions. But whether her claims in this respect are recognized or not, the future of the Crescent City is brighter with promise to-day than ever before in her history. The world currents will soon be sweeping with increasing force and velocity through her streets, and people will doubtless come pouring in from all parts of the globe to swell her population.

MANY MEN, BUT LITTLE MONEY.

Some weeks ago under the caption, "Wanted—A Little Money and A Big Man," I printed an appeal on behalf of a most urgent situation in the Isle of Pines.

About a score of very worthy brethren have volunteered to go and undertake the work. But I have had few responses in the form of contributions to build the house required. Only some of God's poorer children have responded, and they with small amounts only.

Is the money of some men dearer than the lives of others? A field upon which more than twenty brave, true men are ready to lay out the lives of themselves and families ought to command the small amount of money which is needed. The people on the Isle of Pines will support the man and give half the amount required for the building.

Surely we have in all Southern Methodism some man or men who will furnish the other half. The work can be done, if I can get the small sum of $3500. Four thousand would be better, however.

Can not this small sum be had? It is scarcely the price of a first class automobile.

"Alas! Alas! that gold should be so dear and flesh and blood so cheap."

The man will be on the field soon, and I want the money to meet him there.

THE PEN OF LIGHT.

Lord, place within my hand thy pen of light,
To write to some discouraged, suffering one
A word of cheer—strong, glowing words of help;
And brighten all his day like shine of sun.

Lord, close my fingers round thy pen of light,
That I may tell the tempted one, astray,
Whose path is lost in worse than darkest night,
How he may turn, and find the straight home-way.

Lord, may it always shine, thy pen of light,
And inspiration give, and help divine.
Oh, pass it on and on, from hand to hand,
Illumined pen, no word to write but thine.

WHY CHINA'S RELIGION LACKS VITALITY.

China has a long way to go yet.

Nothing caused a greater impetus in China's movement toward free government than the influence of Western civilization, and in that influence no more vital spark existed than that lighted by the Christian missionary.

Now the standpatters of China have gained a momentary victory and purpose to establish the religion of Confucius as the formal religion of the republic.

Confucius was a man who lived about 550 years before Christ. He was an early office holder in China. He was a corn inspector in the markets of his province when he was only 17 years old. He held other jobs and lost them. He lived the varied up and down life of a man dependent upon the friendship of kings, but the characteristic thing about him was his honesty and the deep understanding he had of moral principles.

It seemed so remarkable for a man to be honest in all the sublime sense of the simple statement in those days, that the more Confucius's neighbors thought over it after he died the more they liked it, and after awhile they gathered up the philosophy of his life any sayings and put his teachings into a book, and in a few hundred years they made a religion around it. It is fitted to the Chinese habits of life and Chinese tradition. It worships no God; its only vital spark is its reverence for ancestry. Whatever religion it teaches centers about the family ancestors to whom people offer prayer. It is not a religion that goes out to conquer the world after a divine program and make men everywhere better all the time.

It is merely a gentle, comforting substitute for the individual who feels he would like to have the respectability of a religious life without any of its sacrifices, and like all other religions that make this appeal, it lacks the virility of a real faith.

If China's effort to have a republican form of government succeeds, Confucianism will fail because it will not be strong and vital enough, and for another reason: a republican form of government recognizes as its first principle the liberty of all men to worship God according to the dictates of their consciences, and will not seek to give State recognition to any particular brand of religion. This will happen in China and then the brand of religion which is the most vital will win.—H. J. Allen, in Wichita Beacon.

THE MISSION TO LEPERS IN INDIA AND THE EAST.

By Rev. Theo. F. Hahn, M. D.

I.

When John the Baptist in the loneliness and oppression of the prison desired to see a proof that Jesus was indeed the Messiah sent by God, Jesus sent back word to him: "The blind receive their sight, and the lame walk, the lepers are cleansed, and the deaf hear, the dead are raised up, and the poor have the gospel preached to them" (Mat. 11:5). Thus it had been prophesied of the Messiah (Isa. 61:1; 35:4-6), and thus it was fulfilled by Jesus. The works, therefore, which Jesus did testified of him as the Son of God (John 10:25).

And do we want proofs of the divine origin and nature of the Christian Church—the visible body of Christ on earth now—the answer is the same: the works which she does, they testify of Him who is her divine author and head. Hospitals, orphanages, homes for the aged, the blind, the incurables, all these, as originally called into being by the Church, and though to-day no longer exclusively in the hands of the Church because, thank God, the Christian spirit has already largely permeated our Christian civilization, still borne by her almost exclusively into heathen lands now, are the "works which bear witness" of Christ.

Paganism knows no works of benevolence and charity. All through the history of pagan antiquity we look in vain for any charitable institutions. From the Spartans who exposed their sickly boys, who did not promise to be of any help to the country, to the wolves in the wilds of the Taygetos Mountains, to the Chinese who drown their "superfluous" girls in a tub of water, and the Africans who mercilessly leave their aged parents to die of hunger, heathendom, whether ancient or modern, knows no pity for the feeble and needy. There may be found in India temples in which sacred monkeys are kept, or asylums in which sacred cows are tenderly cared for till their death, but no provision was ever made by pagan Hindus for the aged, the widows, the orphans, or the thousands of those most unfortunate and destitute people, the lepers. Shunned by their own families, ostracized by the community, without hope of recovery, and taught to believe that they were forever shut out from the joys of heaven because of some unpardonable sin committed in a former existence, of which leprosy is the irrevocable punishment, these poorest of the poor were simply left to die of hunger or to be torn by wild beasts.

It is therefore the peculiar glory of Christianity that, with respect to these outcast sufferers the word of the Master is literally being fulfilled: "The lepers are cleansed."

Foremost among the agencies to carry on work among the lepers is the Mission to Lepers in India and the East. It was founded in 1874 by Rev. Wellesley C. Bailey, who since 1869, had been a missionary of the Presbyterian Church at Ambala, India. Mr. Bailey writes of his first contact with the lepers in the following manner: "It was in December of 1869 that I was first led to work for lepers. I found near Ambala City a small institution for lepers called the Ambala Leper Asylum. At that time there was no regularly-organized work for lepers, though a few individual missionaries were doing what they could to relieve them in a small way, and were, of course, as every true missionary would do, taking every opportunity to tell them of the lepers' Friend. I began visiting the lepers, and every time I went I felt I would like to go again. Their condition was the most pitiable I have ever seen: their poor mutilated bodies, their disfigured faces, their hoarse voices—in a word, their utter helplessness and hopelessness appealed forcibly to me: my sympathies were drawn out to them, and very soon a bond sprang up between us. I looked forward to my visits and they eagerly watched for my coming. Soon I discovered that I had there, at my very door, under my very hand, a splendid sphere of work for the Master."

Returning from India to England in 1874, Mr. Bailey related his experiences and gave the results of his study of leprosy. A movement was at once started to relieve these unfortunates, and this has grown into the Mission to Lepers. Mr. Bailey has been the Superintendent of the Mission and its work from the beginning. His life in India, his actual experience with lepers, and these years of experience as administrator have admirably fitted him to oversee this work. It is a work of striking interest both from the circumstances of its beneficiaries and from the character of the support it receives. It is interdenominational, denominations working together to sustain and administer it; over thirty missionary societies in America, Great Britain, and on the continent of Europe co-operate in this effort. It is international both in its field of support and its field of operation, and is therefore a notable example of the union of Christians to relieve direct distress. The Dowager Marchioness of Dufferin is the Patroness, and the Lord Primate of Ireland the President of the Society, and among its representative committee are such gentlemen as Sir Andrew H. Frazer, lieutenant governor of Bengal, vice president; John Jackson, organizing secretary; Fleming H. Revell, treasurer, and W. M. Danner, secretary, for the United States.

As regards the relation of the Mission to Lepers to America, it is working in hearty co-operation with eleven Foreign Mission Boards of the United States. It does not send out its own missionaries to work exclusively among the lepers, but works through the missionaries of such societies as are already on the field. Whenever an appeal is made by any duly appointed missionary, or missionary society, the cost of the erection of buildings, the maintenance of the lepers and their children, the medical aid supplied, and the pay of the native workers are entirely defrayed by the Mission to Lepers. Thus all the money given is used directly for the support of the lepers themselves, the missionaries in charge receiving their support from their respective societies. In this manner the Mission to Lepers spends about $40,000 annually on work among lepers in charge of American Foreign Mission Boards, the Boards permitting their missionaries to act as honorary superintendents of the asylums. The land is usually either purchased by or presented to the Mission to Lepers, and in such cases it is vested in the name of "The Leper Mission Trust Association," a corporate body duly chartered.

At present the Society's operations are carried on in 80 different centers which are distributed over India, Ceylon, Burma, Sumatra, China, Japan and the Philippine Islands, 50 of these institutions are owned by the Society, while 30 are stations not owned by the Mission, but given aid for the care of lepers. Besides these are 20 homes for untainted children of leprosy parents for which the Society is responsible. In the Asylums and Homes nearly 4000 lepers are cared for, receiving food, shelter, medical care, nursing and Christian teaching; and 600 untainted boys and girls have been received from their leprosy parents and are being educated under the care of the Mission.

NO NORTH, NO SOUTH—ONE METHODISM.

The late Bishop McCabe was impatient of administrative restrictions. One day while he was Corresponding Secretary of the Missionary Society, having been irritated by some uncommonly exasperating limitation, he turned to the Recording Secretary, Dr. Stephen L. Baldwin, and said: "Baldwin, take pencil and paper, and let me give you the draft of a new constitution for our Missionary Society. Here it is:

"Article I. This society shall be known as the Missionary Society of the Methodist Episcopal Church.

"Article II. Whatever ought to be done shall be done.

"There, that will do!"

The story may be apocryphal in some detail, but it is true to the spirit of its central figure, and it has a reasonable application to the embarrassments which have attended the effort to bring together the dissevered family of American Methodists.

Elsewhere in this issue we present a digest of the action taken a few weeks ago by the Federal Council of Methodism, together with the address issued by the representatives of the Methodist Episcopal Church to the members of their communion. It will be seen by an examination of this matter that the persons composing the Council are resolved that what ought to be done shall be done to repair the breach by which Episcopal Methodism was rent into two main divisions nearly three quarters of a century ago. (The digest referred to was published in the New Orleans Advocate last week.—Ed. N. O. Advocate.)

We deem it expedient * * * to recount

some of the steps which have been taken to secure what has frequently been called "formal fraternity" between these two great branches of American Methodism, the organic unity of which has been officially regarded as visionary up to this hour.

In 1846, two years after the bisection of the Methodist Episcopal Church, Dr. Lovick Pierce was commissioned as a Fraternal Messenger from the first General Conference of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, to the General Conference of the Methodist Episcopal Church in 1848. On the alleged ground that the plan of separation had been violated by the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, its fraternal messenger was denied official recognition by the General Conference of the Methodist Episcopal Church, though he was tendered personal courtesies. Dr. Pierce thereupon informed the body that the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, could never renew the offer of fraternal relations between the two great bodies of Wesleyan Methodists in the United States, but that the proposal could be renewed at any time by the Methodist Episcopal Church.

There the negotiations ceased until 1869, when the Bishops of the Methodist Episcopal Church invited the Bishops of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, to confer on "the propriety, practicability and methods of reunion." The former were admonished by the latter that "the establishment of fraternal relations" should precede such an interview, and the General Conference of the Methodist Episcopal Church in 1872 appointed a delegation consisting of two ministers and one layman to convey fraternal greetings to the General Conference of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, at its next session in 1874. The latter body reciprocated by selecting a similar delegation to carry fraternal salutations to the General Conference of the Methodist Episcopal Church, in 1876, and also to propose the formation of a Joint Commission "to adjust existing difficulties."

The commissioners appointed under the action of both General Conferences, in response to this proposal, met at Cape May, N. J., August 16, 1876, and continued in session seven days. They issued a declaration and basis of fraternity and laid down rules for determining disputed questions. "Their conclusions were embodied in an address to the Bishops, ministers and members of the two Churches."

The absolute unanimity with which these proceedings were conducted and the fine spirit which animated the commissioners gave assurance of larger results than have actually accrued. Fraternal salutations have been officially exchanged through subsequent quadrenniums, a common hymnal, a common catechism, a joint publishing house in China, and other outward fruits of essential unity have been developed. The sentiment in favor of a closer federation has steadily increased. The latest and perhaps the highest expression of it is the Federal Council of Methodism which met last month in Nashville, Tenn. But organic union still seems distant, though it should, and hence some time will be consummated.

We venture to illustrate the situation by an anecdote which is accredited to a Methodist presiding elder in Georgia. A Negro pastor did not give satisfaction to his flock. A committee waited on him to request his resignation.

"Look here!" demanded the preacher. "Whut's de trouble wid mah preachin'? Don't I argufy?"

"You sho does, eldah," agreed the spokesman.

"Don't I 'sputify concernin' de Scriptures?"

"You suttinly does," admitted the other.

"Den whut's wrong?"

"Well, eldah," stated the head of the committee, "hit's dis way: You argufies and you 'sputifies, but you don't show wherein!"

The representatives of each main division of Episcopal Methodism have been eloquent in their arguments for fraternity and unity, and cogent in their disputations, but the bodies they represent have made it hard for them to show wherein. At this very moment the Methodist Episcopal Church is reinforcing its establishments among the white people of the South, and the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, is pursuing a counter invasion of the Northwest.

Before the Federal Council of Methodism, created by the authority of the Churches in interest, it is now proposed to bring for adjudication all questions of conflicting administration. There will be much business for such a court. May the Lord prosper its efforts in behalf of peace! The continued disunion of Methodism in the United States is an unnecessary embarrassment to the Kingdom of God.—Editorial in New York Christian Advocate.

THE WOMAN QUESTION.

By Miss E. L. Kidd.

Editor Christian Advocate: I am glad that you are giving your attention to what is, without doubt, a most vital question—the stability of our family life.

Statistics show that the South is the only section of our country where the native stock is not dying out, and until recently it was far behind other sections in the percentage of divorces. But the heaven is with us, and working so rapidly, that it behooves our thinking men and women to search out the true causes of the many evils that afflict modern society and to be ready with remedies before we are helpless in the throes of this undesirable evolution.

What has been referred to as the "feminist movement" has many phases, and from the fact that woman is the center of the home, this movement deserves careful study; and from this study an ideal of womanhood must be evolved worthy to take the place of those that have gone forever. Education of course is the only way in which any lasting reform can be effected, but there are many educative forces besides the school. Legislation is of value since it represents the ideals of a community.

Laws should be enacted granting to women the right to work at an equitable wage in whatever field she has the ability to labor. For the gospel of work she must learn, especially in the South. She must have no excuse for being a useless member of society. I heard a young lady say the other day, "I gave up my position as teacher because I could not live on the salary that I received." We are behind many States educationally, and the cost of living has advanced here as it has everywhere.

While I consider work—work for every human being—the greatest safeguard of society, that individual is happiest whose work, consciously or not, is in the nature of a calling to that person. There should be no law nor social convention in the way of what a woman wants to work at. This, I consider a legitimate reason for giving woman the ballot. Women might in social reforms find an opportunity for work useful to the community, and not spend so much time in frivolities. Have you ever heard a comment like this, emanating too from a sensible man? "Oh, that movement is of no account; it is just something started up by the women and the preachers." If the preachers and the women stood for a considerable vote they would be regarded as entitled to more respect, and would receive it.

Besides not being as active and energetic as they should, our southern women are too frequently sickly and nervous, and our girls should have something more than the smattering of the laws of health, now being taught. Herbert Spencer was not far wrong when he said that the most important thing to learn is how to take care of your health, and that the next most important thing, is how to care for our offspring. Nothing is more productive of unhappiness in a home than a sickly, fretful, complaining, and usually nagging woman. Our girls should be taught that it is almost a sin to be sickly. And since freedom for the individual is being demanded by them so strongly, they should be instructed as to what kind of freedom they need. Women should demand a style of dress that does not militate against health, and have the courage to refuse to follow a foolish style.

When the Church was introduced into Europe by way of Rome, rather than by way of Germany, it naturally brought with it, not the high ideal of the Teuton for woman, but the semi-patriarchal family life of the Orient, and of Greece and Rome. We hope that the Church of to-day will not shirk its part in working out a sane practical solution of the woman question, remembering that "God is no respecter of persons," and that Luther, the German reformer, married a nun.

Another very vital phase of the woman question is that of her relation to the liquor traffic. I wish some of you people in New Orleans would find out and publish the different causes of the divorces granted last year. Such information would be interesting and illuminating, no doubt. However, intemperance, and other immoralities, are another story, and need another chapter for their treatment.

Ruston, La.

NOTICE TO OUR FRIENDS.

Through the kindness of Dr. Meek you were given a view of our first graduate in the Advocate of week before last. Brother Holmes said to me: Your statement that you have the facilities to do for the other of our children what has been done for this one girl is not strong enough; you should have said, "What you have done for her, you are doing for the others." We feel sure that those who are in close touch with our work will agree with Brother Holmes.

But to carry on this work requires money, and the time has come when we must have more help. The expenses have been heavy this winter. We have met all our obligations, including a large payment on our indebtedness, but our treasury is now empty. We can pay our February accounts in part only. I have not been able to get out to solicit funds since Conference, and we have received but little over $300 during the last two months. We appeal to our people for help.

By Conference resolution Easter Sunday is set apart as "Orphanage Day." We trust that every church and Sunday school in Louisiana will remember the Orphanage and give the Easter collections to our work. Make ready for it, and let nothing get in the way of this important matter. I appeal to our preachers and Sunday school superintendents to begin to talk and plan at once for this Day. We need $5,000 to carry us through the dull summer months and meet our obligations. If we are to secure this money, all must help.

With 85 children to feed, school and provide for, salaries to pay, and our running expenses to meet, it means money, and we must have the united effort of all our people NOW.

Sincerely,

ROBT. W. VAUGHAN.

Superintendent,
Louisiana Methodist Orphanage.

ANNUAL MEETING OF WOMAN'S MISSIONARY COUNCIL.

The Woman's Missionary Council, M. E. Church, South, will hold its fourth annual meeting in First Church, Fort Worth, Texas, April 8-16, 1914.

A Workers' Conference will be held April 8 at 2 o'clock Wednesday afternoon, and the first public session at 8 o'clock Wednesday evening.

Delegates and visitors will correspond with Mrs. W. F. Barnum, 1518 Cooper St., Fort Worth, Texas, Chairman of Committee on Entertainment, who will furnish lists of hotels and boarding houses.

Winter tourist tickets may be secured, good until May 31, with stop-over privileges going and returning.

Bishop John H. Vincent celebrated his eighty-second birthday on February 23. His home is in Chicago.

Dr. R. S. MacArthur, the distinguished Baptist minister, entered upon his work as pastor of the First Baptist Church of Baltimore on February 12.

Dr. C. D. Bulla spent Sunday, February 22, in Little Rock, Ark., and preached at the Winfield Memorial Church at 11 o'clock a. m. a sermon that is said to have made a fine impression.

Dr. C. B. Riddick is publishing in the Pacific Methodist Advocate a series of personal reminiscences concerning Methodism in the West. It scarcely needs to be said that his articles are interesting and informing.

Baylor University, at Waco, Texas, the leading Baptist college in the Lone Star State, has lately completed the task of raising $400,000 for the further strengthening of its endowment, and will receive a gift of $200,000 from the General Board of Education of New York (Rockefeller).

On Sunday, February 15, Dr. W. W. Pinson and Dr. E. H. Rawlings, two of our Missionary Secretaries, spent the day in Winston-Salem, N. C., and secured from our two largest churches in that city—Centenary and West End—a pledge of $2000 each for missionary specials.

The well-known Hebrew philanthropist, Nathan Straus of New York City, is reported to be doing much to improve the condition of the poorer classes in Jerusalem. A thorough investigation is said to have shown that every fifth person there has malarial germs in his blood, and that every third person has an enlarged spleen.

Zion's Herald of February 26 carried on the first cover page a fine picture of ex-Governor M. R. Patterson and published an extended extract from an address that he delivered to a great audience in the People's Temple in Boston. Mr. Patterson seems to have made a great impression in New England, as indeed he has everywhere that he has gone.

Dr. Matt S. Hughes, the fraternal messenger from the M. E. Church to our approaching General Conference, is pastor of the First Church of his denomination in Pasadena, Cal. He is also one of the contributing editors of the New York Christian Advocate. The congregation that he serves contributed last year to various benevolences $25,633, and raised for its own use $19,567.

At the recent session of the Florida Conference in Tallahassee, Bishop Morrison made the following episcopal decision: 1. Does Paragraph 143 of the Discipline forbid the re-marriage of a minister during the life of his divorced wife in the case where the divorce was not granted for the one Scriptural cause? It does. 2. Is such a marriage contrary to the law of our Church? It is.

The Board of Education of the M. E. Church, South, will hold its annual meeting for the year 1913-14, in Oklahoma City on May 5. The Committees will meet at 9 o'clock the previous day, May 4. The Committees are as follows: Classification, White and Colored Schools, Ministerial Supply and Training, Religious Training in both State and Church Schools, and Ways and Means.

The Temperance Board of the Northern Presbyterian Church will send 250 workers, with motion picture films teaching lessons as to the evils of intoxicants, into California, Colorado, Washington, and Oregon with a view to trying to swing these States into the prohibition column when the elections are held next fall. Is the prohibition cause so needy as this where woman has the ballot?

The China Christian Advocate states that very few of the people of the Chinese Empire have really accepted the Christian Calendar. The officials in Peking and some other places in the Empire celebrated the "Foreign New Year" and more was made of it than ever before, but the masses of the nation celebrated the Chinese New Year as heretofore. We confess that this news was to us a little disappointing, but our Lord will yet reign in the Orient.

We are in receipt of the first number of the China Christian Advocate, a monthly publication, printed in English, which will be issued from the Methodist Publishing House in Shanghai by representatives of the Methodist Episcopal Church and the Methodist Episcopal Church, South. Dr. A. P. Parker of our Church is the Editor, and Mr. William M. Lacy, a member of the Northern Methodist Church is the Business Manager. It is a neat journal of 16 pages, and the subscription price in the United States is 50 cents per annum, in gold. By means of this periodical, "Those in Asia may salute us" twelve times during the year.

At a called meeting of the Presbyterian Synod of Mississippi in Jackson last week it was decided to place all the schools owned in whole or in part by it under one management. Rev. M. E. Melvin, of Port Gibson, was named as the General Superintendent of Education, and an Executive Board composed of the following persons was constituted to co-operate with him: Dr. J. B. Hutton, Oscar Newton, Jr., W. C. Wells, Jr., W. S. Lindamood, George D. Booth, and Geo. S. McLean. The Rev. Mr. Melville and Rev. R. L. Waldrop, Superintendent of Home Missions, will establish headquarters in Jackson. It is expected that a campaign to raise $100,000 for the several institutions of the Synod will be launched at an early date.

TIN WEDDING AT THE MARY WERLEIN MISSION.

Something very unique in the way of a wedding anniversary will be celebrated on Saturday evening next at 8 o'clock at the Mary Werlein Mission. Dr. and Mrs. R. C. Root who are among the active Methodist workers of the city will celebrate their tenth anniversary at that time. A very interesting and entertaining program will be carried out in which a number of friends from different sections of the city will take part.

Dr. and Mrs. Root have been for some time very much interested in the work at the Mission and have been rendering most valuable service there in many ways. So they have decided to make use of this occasion in a most worthy and unselfish manner by holding their anniversary at the Mission and requesting that the "tin offering" be contributed to Sister Meekins for her use at the Mission. All of the Methodists and other friends of the city are most cordially invited to attend and bring some kind of a tin offering for the mission. Such an offering will also be gladly received from any interested friend out of the city. Mrs. Root is a daughter of Rev. Robert Randle, one of the older members of the Louisiana Conference.

NEWS NOTES.

The J. B. Andrews' meeting is under way at Starkville, Miss., and the services are being largely attended.

Rev. V. D. Skipper filled his pulpit at Delhi, La., last Sunday, and the Woman's Missionary Society is expected to conduct a meeting at the church there to-night (Thursday).

Prof. J. N. Powers, the Mississippi State Superintendent of Education, is being prominently mentioned for the Chancellorship of the University of Mississippi, made vacant by the resignation of Mr. A. A. Kincannon.

Our long-time friend, Rev. G. W. Gordon, of Sherman, Miss., gave us a club of 8 subscriptions on March 5. It scarcely needs to be said that his work is moving on well. Brother Gordon is one of the strong preachers of his Conference.

The Southern Reporter (Sardis, Miss.) states that the Hon. J. B. Eckles will be a candidate for Circuit Judge in his judicial district. We do not believe in an elective judiciary, but since it has been decided that the judges must be chosen in this way, it is pleasing to observe that such a man as Mr. Eckles is available for this position.

We are indebted to Mrs. A. C. McKinney, of Ruston, La., for the following important item of news: "The Queen of the Methodist parsonage in this city enjoys a distinction not accorded to many of her sisters, they being a homeless set, while she now owns in her own right one big and three little Holmes. W. W., Jr., the last of the number, was acquired on February 27, 1914."

We acknowledge ourself indebted to Dr. W. P. Few, the accomplished President of Trinity College, at Durham, N. C., for a neat folder giving a list of books for young preachers carefully selected by Bishop J. C. Kilgo and Dr. F. N. Parker. For the benefit of the young ministers of Louisiana and Mississippi, we hope to publish this selection of helpful volumes in our next issue. What to read is a most important, and often quite a perplexing, question.

Our hat is off to Rev. C. A. Northington, who gave us a club of 30 subscriptions from his charge, the Corinth (Miss.) Circuit, a few days since. Of his work, this faithful and energetic pastor says: "My people gave me a warm welcome upon my return from Conference. Our new church, at Gains' Chapel, is now ready for use; new seats have been placed in the church at Shady Grove, and our new church at Chapel Hill is nearing completion."

Rev. W. H. Huntley, having been called to Brookhaven, Miss., to attend the obsequies of his daughter, Miss Helen, who died at Amarillo, Texas, the quarterly conference of the Coalville (Miss.) charge was held by the pastor, Rev. C. C. Griffin, on March 2. Brother Griffin reports the work of the circuit as progressing favorably. Resolutions of sympathy for the beloved presiding elder, Dr. Huntley, were adopted. They will be published in the next issue of the Advocate.

The pastors of the different denominations in Hattiesburg, Miss., have effected a ministers' organization that will meet regularly and give them an opportunity to confer, from time to time, concerning the religious needs and work of the community. At a recent meeting they decided to register with the municipal authorities a protest against immodest and improper scenes in the moving picture shows in their city. Their watchfulness in this respect is to be commended, and our preachers elsewhere would, we think, do well to imitate their good example.

From the charming little city of Como, Miss., comes a club of 14 subscribers, two of them being new. They came of course from our diligent pastor there, Rev. J. B. Randolph, who makes the following reference to his charge: "The Junior League and Missionary Society have raised the money to paint the parsonage. We have also organized a Home Department in our Sunday school with 75 members. The attendance upon the school yesterday (Feb. 22) was the largest in its history. We expect to dedicate our new church in the near future. Rev. E. B. Ramsey has promised to hold our meeting in June."

Rev. W. F. Henderson, Jr., of Pelican, La., favored us with a nice club of subscriptions a few days since, and added the following note: "My work is progressing very satisfactorily. I am serving a fine people. Our Sunday school work is going forward; we have had a gratifying attendance and interest of late. We have recently added Oxford to our work. The Standard Oil Company is improving its plant there, and building new tanks to care for the oil from the New De Soto field; and the door of an excellent opportunity is now open to our Church there. We are planning and praying, with a determination to do our best for the Master this year."

We have in hand an interesting communication from Rev. H. M. Ellis, Field Secretary of the Methodist Hospital (Memphis), which reached us too late for this issue, but which will appear next week. Brother Ellis requests us to state that the name of the proposed institution has been changed from the Tri-State Hospital to the Methodist Hospital, since a part of the territory of the Memphis Conference is in Kentucky, so that in reality four States are interested. This change is doubtless wise, but with all due deference to its managers, it seems to us that a little geography ought to be inserted into the new designation as, for instance, the Memphis Methodist Hospital, to indicate where it is. Simply the Methodist Hospital is, we think, entirely too broad and indefinite.

AUTOBIOGRAPHY OF Rev. H. P. LEWIS OF THE MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE

As it Appeared in the Advocate a Few Years Ago, has been put into book form, making a book of 75 pages, with eight cuts, showing the pictures of himself, first wife and six children in the Methodist itinerancy.

As a true story of the joys, sorrows, hardships, trials and triumphs of a humble Methodist preacher, it makes splendid, helpful reading.

Price, 25 cents per copy, at the Advocate office, or from the author, Rev. H. P. Lewis, 826 N. West St., Jackson, Miss.

—THE— Telephone Always on Guard

There is never a moment, day or night, when your Bell Telephone is not a protection.

In the busy hours of the day and the silent watches of the night, the switchboard operator is always ready to answer a call.

The telephone is as much a part of the protective system of each community as the police and fire departments.

There's always a feeling of security in the knowledge that close at hand is the means of calling aid quickly when you most need it.

More than 70,000 cities and towns are protected day and night by the Bell Telephone system; 7,500,000 Bell telephones are on guard. In thousands of rural communities it is the chief reliance in emergencies and times of danger.

There is talk of constructing a $6,000,000 bridge across the Mississippi River at New Orleans.

Arrangements have been made for the installation of a wireless telegraph station at the Mississippi Agricultural and Mechanical College.

The United States troops in Hawaii are to be increased from 2,000 to 11,000 or 15,000 as soon as the men can be transferred from the States, according to a statement made a few days ago by Major General W. H. Carter.

During the recent extremely cold weather in the Northern States, in some sections the rural free delivery mail carriers played the part of Good Samaritans to the birds by scattering grain along their routes, the Government having given permission for them to perform this service.

Figures compiled by Auditor J. E. Smith of Mississippi show that since January 1, 1908, 66 banks chartered in that State have failed, 14 of the number having suspended during the past two months of the present year. These 66 defunct banks had an aggregated capital of $2,976,180, and deposits to the amount of $8,637,845.

The French Chamber of Deputies voted a few days since an appropriation of $400,000 for an exhibit at the Panama-Pacific Exposition. It is said that Italy also will have a fine exhibit there, but Sir Edward Grey, the British Foreign Secretary, announced in the House of Commons on Feb. 24 that England would not reconsider her decision not to participate officially in the big show.

It is claimed that the income tax in the State of New York alone will amount to more than $30,000,000 per annum, and that of this amount John D. Rockefeller will pay about $6,000,000. The President of the United States is expressly exempted from taxation on the $75,000 salary which he receives as the Nation's Chief Magistrate, but his income from other sources is not spared.

The daring of surgeons seems to know scarcely any limit. At a meeting of the Chicago Medical Association held on March 4, Dr. G. Frank Lids-ton stated that he had recently in two instances transferred organs from the bodies of individuals who had been dead several hours to those of living persons. One of these experiments was made upon himself by his own hand. As yet these operations are too recent to tell what the final results will be.

Bright's disease, according to report, is now claiming 100,000 victims annually in the United States; and it is affirmed that 60,000 of these could probably be cured if the malady were discovered in its incipency. It is one of the most insidious of human ailments, and the percentage of its increase since 1900 is quite alarming. In some of the cities many Negroes, who until recently were thought to be comparatively immune from it, have been stricken down by it.

Sir Lionel Carden, the British Minister to Mexico, was in Washington City last week en route to England, and while there conferred with President Wilson. The press dispatches represent him as having stated that he thinks that Huerta has made some headway in establishing his authority in Mexico during his year's incumbency as President. The relations between the United States and Mexico seem to be becoming steadily more acute, and some things indicate that the authorities at Washington, though bent upon preserving peace if possible, now recognize that armed intervention may become necessary. There is little telling what a single day may bring forth.

EPWORTH CHURCH DEDICATION.

As was reported in the New Orleans Christian Advocate last fall, the Epworth Church building has been freed from debt. On Sunday, March 15, at 3 o'clock in the afternoon the building will be dedicated. Dr. L. W. Cooper of Whitworth College will be with us and preach the sermon. The people of the city are cordially invited to attend this service. The church is located at the corner of Banks and Scott Streets and may be reached by taking either the Canal or the Tulane Belt cars and getting off at Scott Street, then walking to Banks.

The movement that has now resulted in the Epworth Church was begun years ago. The people of the Carrollton Avenue Church were especially attentive to this work in the beginning. However, the people of all the Methodist churches of the city have had something to do with the work at different periods of its advancement.

The present condition of the work speaks well for the wisdom of those who first enterprised it and also for the devotion of those who persisted in carrying it forward under many difficulties. Still, what has been done in the past and what is being done now, give but a small indication of the great possibilities and future that are before this church. The nearest Methodist church is almost fifty blocks away. There are great stretches of the city that are looking to this church for Methodist instruction. The Sunday school gives magnificent promise for the future. It is now in a most flourishing condition. The present building is far too small for taking care of the school as this should be done. We now have completed only the Sunday school room and the auditorium is a present and an imperative need. We cannot increase the Sunday school to any great extent until we have the additional room that the completed building will give. We want the Methodist people of this city, and other people too, to come out and see what we are trying to do here and learn something of the Epworth Church. This is the result of united effort on the part of the different Methodist churches of the city. Come and renew your interest in the work.

A STATEMENT BY DR. SWARTZ.

Dear Dr. Meek: I have just seen Dr. Borum's letter in the Advocate of March 5. I do not wonder that he desires to make excuse and to present his action in the most favorable light. Every one would who found himself in his predicament, for it is really a sad one.

Let the issue, however, not be beclouded: for there is no "half truth" anywhere—at least, not on this side. The whole truth, as I have repeatedly said, is this:

Dr. Borum preached a sermon from his pulpit on Feb. 1 on Baptism. This he had a perfect right to do. He fortified his argument by saying that a book he was going to quote from was used at Millsaps College. This he had no right to do. I did not, to be sure, hear his sermon (I was at my own church). The reference was such, however, as to offend some five or six Methodists who were in his congregation and who reported the matter to me. I wrote him the letter which appeared in the Advocate of Feb. 19, and he telephoned me an apology. That should have ended the matter, but it did not, for the following Sunday he returned to the charge and publicly criticised an article which I had written for the Nashville Christian Advocate some time before.

Of course he did not think of this fact, that I had a forum in which to present my side of the case. I had one, however, and used it. This he calls going "into print with the affair," which seems to have been a gross thing to do! Well, it may have been; but if it was, what were his public utterances which I have mentioned above which were made when I appeared helpless to reply?

I used the occurrence to write a series of articles which I have had in mind to write for some time and which his action rendered particularly opportune at this time.

This is all there is to the matter. I am through. I will not be drawn into an acrimonious dispute. I am no adept in hurling the words, "half-truths," etc. I yield. He may have the arena to himself. I am willing to stand on my three printed articles.

Very truly yours,

M. W. SWARTZ.

"WHY A LOSS?"

Rev. A. S. Lutz, of New Iberia, has placed the Louisiana Annual Conference under lasting obligation to himself for calling attention to the inexcusable error of the Statistical Secretary in reporting the heavy loss of 1,158 members last year. The Secretaries were astonished at the heavy loss the figures showed, and in an effort to find if we had not made an error one of the assistants, with the Secretary, worked over the difficulty until after 2 o'clock in the morning, checking over the figures, trying to find the error. Unfortunately we made the same error each time, and the transposition of the figures 4,801 to 4,081 was never discovered. This led us into the error of stating our loss to be 1,158 members, when it should have been only 438, as shown by Brother Lutz. According to the corrected figures, our present total membership is 33,760, whereas the minutes show only 33,040. The error is entirely due to the carelessness, or oversight, of the Statistical Secretary, and while it is humiliating, he fully accepts the blame and responsibility for the mistake.

Brother Lutz is again right in showing that the figures show a net gain in the columns of Additions and Removals of 292. Still the figures must show a total loss of 438 for the reason that many of the preachers do not make the report of column for Members Reported Last Year correspond with the figures in the last Minutes. When we take the totals we are compelled to refer to the last issue of the Minutes to get the total reported as Present Total Membership and take the difference between the figures in hand for the year closing. In this case a loss is shown as indicated above.

None can be more grateful to Brother Lutz than the Statistical Secretary, who offers a vote of thanks to him, which we feel sure will be given by unanimous consent.

We beg pardon of the Conference for this error and shall feel it fully justified if the Conference will elect, at the next session, a more careful and painstaking person to this important position.

Sincerely,

ROBT W. VAUGHAN,
Statistical Secretary.

STATE EPWORTH LEAGUE MEETING, Louisiana Conference.

Dear Dr. Meek: Please announce in the Advocate that the Louisiana State Epworth League Conference will be held in the First Church, at Shreveport, June 17-21, 1914, and that we will spare no means to make this the best Conference ever held in the State. The program and other arrangements have been placed in my charge, and, I hope, with strong committees to carry out the whole scheme suggested by the central office. The program will be built around the "Third Department," with "Recreation for Culture" as our slogan. A team from the central office will handle the Institutes and Parliaments, and there will be other experts for addresses, etc. We trust that every chapter, Senior and Junior, will begin at once to pray and plan for a large delegation.

The Shreveport Leaguers will extend a most cordial invitation and welcome all who may come. Yours "All for Christ,"

MRS. SUDIE J. LINGLE.

1215 Oakland St., Shreveport, La.

A SORE BEREAVEMENT.

Dear Dr. Meek: Brother and Sister O. S. Lewis of Brandon, Miss., are greatly bereaved in the death of their infant son, Osmond Clayton, which occurred Wednesday night, March 4. For only twelve days he was spared to brighten and bless the home and hearts of the parents. Yesterday afternoon we laid the little body away in the Brandon Cemetery, the funeral being conducted at the parsonage by Dr. A. F. Watkins and the writer. Sister Lewis has been critically ill, but I am glad to report that her condition is much improved. Let us remember at our Father's throne our brother and sister in their hour of suffering and sorrow. Sincerely,

P. D. HARDIN.

Jackson, Miss., March 6, 1914.

CHURCH EXTENSION NOTICE.

North Mississippi Conference.

Dear Dr. Meek: The Executive Committee of the Board of Church Extension of the North Mississippi Annual Conference will meet in the Methodist Church in Winona, Miss., on March 26 at 11 a.m. All those who desire to make application for loans or donations to churches or parsonages will please have their applications in the hands of J. R. Bingham, at Carrollton, Miss., or Rev. V. C. Curtis, at Grenada, Miss. Any application received after the meeting of this Board will have to go over for twelve months. We would ask the presiding elders and pastors to look over all applications carefully and see that they are in due form before sending them to us. W. S. LAGRONE, President Board of Church Ex.,
North Mississippi Conference.

COMMUNION.

Psalm 91-1.

Alone with God when morning flings
Her streaming banners far and wide,
The waking world its new life sings
By brook and bird on yon hillside—
Oh, soul rejoice, hear now his voice!

Alone with God when noontide glows
And all the earth in splendor stands;
Be still my soul—he only knows,
The need, the task of heart and hands—
All glorious light, surpassing bright!

Alone with God, when evening falls
In mantling folds o'er weary men;
For strength from thee my lone soul calls;
Be thou my Guide, my Help, my Friend—
No day shall fail, beyond the veil!

Alone with God when darkening night,
Draws o'er the world her restful shade;
Nor sound, nor care, nor garish light
Disturbs the soul his hand has made—
Until the end, be near. Amen!

LOUIS A. ANA.

THE GARLAND-GALLOWAY DISCUSSION.

In 1886 an extended article appearing in the Nashville Christian Advocate, Dr. L. C. Garland discussed the Church's administration of affairs in the mission fields, and toward the close of his communication offered the following suggestions, the last of which is quite similar to the proposal recently made by Dr. G. C. Rankin:

Dr. Garland's Suggestions.

"There are three modes by which our organization of foreign missions may be to a greater or less degree conformed to episcopal government.

"The first is to send annually a Bishop to visit each of our missionary fields. The objection to this system is that the stay of the Bishop is too short to accomplish all the good to be expected from a more extended and minute episcopal supervision; and further, that it does not dispense with the inadequate government of a local superintendency.

"A second mode is to assign annually a Bishop to each mission who shall reside in it during the entire year, save only the time of reaching it and returning from it. This would bring the work sufficiently under episcopal oversight and control, but it is not practicable with Bishops having families, to say nothing of the great expenditure of money and time in traveling.

"A third mode, and the only one that seems to meet all the requirements of the case, is to assign a Bishop to each of the fields, who shall reside in it, and assume the whole responsibility of the work; who shall send up annually to the College of Bishops his official decisions for review, and make to the Board of Missions annually quarterly reports relative to the financial condition and wants of the mission. He must himself be present at the General Conference, with the journal of the mission, there to have his religious character and all his official transactions brought under review, as in the case of other Bishops.

Bishop Galloway's View.

In the New Orleans Christian Advocate of Feb. 4, 1886, of which he was then editor, Bishop Galloway made the following comment on the constitutional aspect of the question raised by Dr. Garland:

"Against the plan of a resident Bishop in the foreign field there are constitutional objections. Around our Third Restrictive Rule, which jealously maintains 'the plan of our itinerant general superintendency,' the great battles of Episcopal Methodism have been fought. On that question Bishop Soule made some history that ought to be known and read of all Methodists. The great controversy over an elective presiding eldership, which came near disintegrating the Church, involved the integrity of that constitutional provision. If one man could be appointed without the power or authority of the Bishop, it was rightly argued that the constitutional prerogatives of the episcopacy were violated and a principle admitted, that would necessarily destroy the 'itinerant general superintendency.' That tendency was toward congregationalism. But the measure proposed by Doctor Garland is obnoxious to the third restrictive rule, in that it restrains or limits the itinerant feature of our general superintendency. The tendency is in the direction of a diocesan episcopacy, albeit the Doctor says: 'This objection has no real force.' If a Bishop is elected by the General Conference with the understanding that he is to reside in China, Brazil, or Mexico, and because of his supposed qualifications for that work, we thereby in spirit and purpose limit his jurisdiction and designate his episcopal district. In the Methodist Episcopal Church provision has been made for a Missionary Bishop with certain specified functions. But that has occasioned unseemly controversies and has hardly been satisfactory. Dr. Garland's plan does not contemplate such technical restrictions and limitations, but is no less at variance with the spirit of the Third Restrictive Rule. He says: 'His assignment to China or Brazil is no more diocesan in principle than the assignment of a Bishop to the Pacific Conferences, or one to the Atlantic Conferences.' Granted, provided he is assigned for one year. But when it is stipulated that he is to reside in China or Brazil and return to the United States once in four years for a few weeks, the principle of an 'itinerant general superintendency' is surrendered. A Bishop may be assigned for two or more successive years to the same Conferences, but the assignment is made annually with the possibility of change to another part of the connection. * * * The free interchange of the Bishops, and the unrestrained play of the itinerant feature of the General superintendency, have been our strongest bond of connectional sympathy and the secret of our great and gratifying success."

Again referring to this question in the New Orleans Advocate of Feb. 18, 1896, Bishop Galloway further said:

"A resident Bishop as a substitute for the local superintendent we insist is a dangerous, doubtful remedy. There are constitutional objections to it. If not in plain violation of the Third Restrictive Rule, it is a manifest evasion of it, and for evasive legislation we have no sympathy, but a well-grounded fear. Nothing so readily destroys the integrity of a government. If the proposed measure is the only or best remedy, let the Constitution of the Church be changed in the prescribed way. The election of a Bishop, for a foreign mission and to reside therein, is beyond question an evasion, if not violation, of the law that defines our 'itinerant general superintendency.' But, it may be said, that was not the Doctor's view. Well, so his language reads. He says: 'The Bishops elected to preside over a foreign mission would be elected and ordained in the same manner, and clothed with the same authority, as any other Bishop.' Nothing could be more explicit. A Bishop is to be elected for a special work, and with the distinct understanding that he is to reside in the foreign field. Shades of William McKendree and Joshua Soule! Such a doctrine ought to disturb the precious dust of those constitutional fathers on the Vanderbilt campus.

"But if the election of a Bishop for a foreign mission is in violation of the Third Restrictive Rule, a resident episcopacy is an evasion of it. It necessarily restricts the field of the Bishop, and so far contravenes the spirit of the constitution. And if this precedent is once allowed, who can tell whereunto it will lead? If a Bishop be elected for China, or assigned to residence there, why not one for Mexico, another for California, another for Texas, etc.? And then what becomes of our 'itinerant general superintendency'? We do not claim or affect profound judicial discernment, but there is too much in this question to be waved aside as sentimental or hypercritical."

MR. HENRY JONES.

A good man and faithful Christian worker was Brother Henry Jones. Born in Weston, Mass., August 9, 1838, he died in his room at the Mary Werlein Mission in New Orleans on Feb. 25, 1914, aged 75 years, 6 months and 16 days. He left three children—two sons and one daughter. His eldest son, Mr. H. Whitford Jones of Garrettsville, Ohio, was with him when he died. The other two children are Mrs. Helen Smith, residing in Garrettsville, Ohio, and Mr. Frank Jones, residing in Covena, California. He lived in England for some years, but about 22 years ago he came to New Orleans. Among his first acquaintances was Mr. James Sherrard, at that time Secretary of the New Orleans Y. M. C. A. Brother Sherrard introduced him to Mr. H. N. Harrison, who was conducting a mission on Tchoupitoulas Street, and who cordially invited him to come out there and help in the good work. Brother Jones accepted the invitation, and at once became an earnest helper, and ever after was thoroughly identified with all the interests of the mission. He removed his membership from old Carondelet Street Church and united with the Mission Band, organized by this writer when presiding elder of the New Orleans District.

Through Mr. Sherrard, Brother Jones was enlisted in prison work in New Orleans, holding services with regularity in jail and prison every Sunday, speaking for hours to prisoners in the services held, and also personally, his efforts resulting in the saving of many a soul. When he became a traveling man with a large territory to cover he did much prison work in every city where he went and great spiritual good resulted therefrom. Mr. Sherrard says he was called "Prison Jones." Brother Jones was always abounding in kind words and deeds when about the Werlein Mission and everywhere else he happened to be. On the trains, where he spent so much time, he would with wonderful tact find out whether the one who happened to be occupying the seat next to him was a Christian or not. In his travels he sold goods and talked for Christ at the same time, and his patrons had perfect confidence in the goods he sold. In the various missions and churches all over the territory covered by him he was a familiar figure and always welcome. He was ever ready to pray, talk for Christ, and also to teach the young folks and children in the Sunday school.

In his letters to friends he always closed with, "Happy on the way." His physician, whom he dearly loved, said he was a benediction to him in his visits. At morning prayer held in his room he started and sang through the hymn—"Leaning on the Everlasting Arms;" and the day before his death he said: "I am happy." "I am just waiting." "Ready to go, ready to stay." Also this: "I would rather go to glory from this mission than from any other place." He daily exhorted his visitors to "serve the Lord." He loved his Bible; and, before taking of nourishment in the morning, he would say: "Let me get my morning feed from the blessed Book first."

A first funeral service was held in the mission, the room being crowded by the men, women and children of the mission; and many came during the day to look on the face, ever so cheerful and kind in life. There was a long, sad procession over to the First Church, the Sunday school children in the lead, carrying a beautiful wreath of flowers, the little ones crying as they went; and, following these, there was a long line of sorrowing men and women. The second service was held at First Church, with a large assemblage present, the Pastor, Dr. Halsey Werlein, assisted by Rev. H. W. Jamieson and the writer, conducting it. The remains were carried to the cemetery, and laid away in mother earth. Then the words, so fitting for the dear departed, were spoken: "I heard a voice from heaven, saying unto me, Write, Blessed are the dead which die in the Lord from henceforth: Yea, saith the Spirit, that they may rest from their labors." We shall meet him again in our Father's house in heaven.

A LITTLE PROVERB.

There's a knowing little proverb,
From the sunny land of Spain,
But in northland, as in southland,
Is its meaning clear and plain.
Lock it up within your heart;
Neither lose nor lend it:—
"Two it takes to make a quarrel;
One can always end it."

DICK'S STAR.

Dick had been going to school a month. Each day Miss Margaret, the teacher, wrote a new word on the blackboard, and the children copied it.

But one morning, instead of writing a word, as usual, Miss Margaret gave each child a sheet of paper.

"Now, little folks," she said, "I am going to see who can write what we learned yesterday, without having a copy to help."

Several of the children smiled, and went to work.

But Dick sat still, with the sheet of paper on his desk, and with his new yellow pencil held tight in his hand. Travis, Dick's deskmate, was scribbling on his paper.

Dick knew what the word was—"Mother!"
But he couldn't remember how to make an M!
He knew just how the other letters looked, and after a while he slowly began to make them,
"o-t-h-e-r." Over and over he wrote the letters.

"I can put the M in afterward if I think of it," whispered Dick, to himself.

Presently Miss Margaret spoke.

"Two minutes more, boys and girls!" she said.
"Do your very best. I am going to put a bright golden star on the best written papers, and you may take them home."

Dick's heart beat fast. How pleased mother would be if her boy carried her a star paper!
But, try as he would, he could not think of the way to make an M. You see, he was a very little boy, and had not learned much about writing.

All at once Dick's eyes fell on some words on a blackboard at the other side of the room. Miss Margaret had written them for the reading class.
There, at the very beginning, was a big M! Dick remembered now! He had thought it looked like two V's joined together.

The new yellow pencil began to work very fast.
All at once Dick stopped.

Hadn't Miss Margaret said the class was to write the word without any help, and wasn't the big M on the blackboard helping?

The little boy sighed and swallowed a lump in his throat. But somehow he couldn't write another curly M. Instead, he stood the yellow pencil on its rubber head, and began slowly to rub out the two M's he had made. Before he had quite finished Miss Margaret stood by his desk.

"Why, Dick, you musn't rub out your M's, little boy! See, you haven't any all the way down the page! Why are you rubbing out the only ones you have made?"

All the children were looking at Dick, and his face grew red.

"I—I couldn't remember how to make M's, Miss Margaret, an'—an' you said we musn't have anything to go by—but I couldn't help seeing that one on the blackboard over there! An' I started to make some, an' then I thought it would be like—like stealing M's; so I was rubbing them out!"

And then, even if he was a six-year-old boy, Dick put his head down behind his desk, and the children knew he was crying, even if he did pretend to be looking for something in his desk!

Miss Margaret did not collect any more papers.
Instead she went over to her table, and worked busily for a minute. Then she came back to Dick's desk.

"Children," she said, and Dick raised his head, winking hard to stop the tears from running out of his eyes, "I want you all to see what I have put on Dick's paper."

Then Dick forgot his tears; for there, right where everybody could see it, was a beautiful golden star.

"Listen to what I have written by the star, boys and girls," said Miss Margaret. "This star is given Dick Hastings, the boy who would not steal an M!"

Dick has a good many star papers now, and his mother keeps them in a special corner in her desk. But she says the first star is the most precious one of all!—London School Times.

A LIFE ANNUITY BOND.

1. What it is and Does:

A Life Annuity Bond is an Insurance Policy
"turned 'round!" In life insurance you pay an uncertain number of small amounts, and one large amount is paid at death.

In a Life Annuity Bond you pay a large amount at once, and receive a number of small amounts annually, semi-annually, quarterly or monthly, until death.

A person who must have an absolutely sure, fixed income until the last day of life, or who desires to make a benevolent distribution of his property without litigation, expense or failure, should buy a Life Annuity Bond. The money is at once carefully and safely loaned on first-class security by the Board of Church Extension, and the holder of the Bond receives regular, fixed and assured payments during life.

A Life Annuity Bond pays a higher rate than the current interest rate, because the claim of a Life Annuity Bond terminates with the death of the annuitant, and a conservative and economical management of the business without commissions or heavy expense and without taxation makes it possible.

The rate paid on a Life Annuity Bond is determined by the age of the annuitant—the older the person the higher the rate. No medical examination is necessary.

Life Annuity Bonds may be purchased for any amount, and upon the life of one or more individuals, or for one or more beneficiaries designated by the purchaser.

Life Annuity Bonds are not experimental. They date back to the days of the Roman Empire. The English Government and other nations have issued such Bonds for more than a century.

Had the Southern Methodist part of the $120,- 000,000 paid to Life Insurance Companies for Life
Annuities since 1890 been invested in the Life Annuity Bonds of the Board of Church Extension of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, these millions would be to-day and forever building churches and parsonages, and a life income would have been given to the purchasers.

Life Annuity Bonds are safe, for back of them is the Board of Church Extension, a splendidly equipped department of the Church with its invested resources which at the present time are fifty times the amount of bond liability, with investments increasing daily. Back of the Board is the General Conference which authorized it, and the State of Kentucky which incorporated it.

Back of them is the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, with its Two Millions of members, and with that habit of financial responsibility and intelligent co-operation which has made its great Boards and Business enterprises the admiration of many, and has given to them the very highest commercial rating.

11. What our Annuitants Think of Them:

"Dr. W. F. McMurry,

Dear Brother: I received the check the 3rd inst. Please accept my sincere thanks for your help in arranging this business so satisfactorily to me. It is indeed restful to know that I need not be anxious about how or what to do. Wish
I had known of this plan sooner.

With prayers and best wishes for your health, and that of your family, and success in your great work for the extension of our Father's Kingdom."

"Rev. W. F. McMurry,

Dear Sir: I am glad to have an opportunity to write a word to you on two "counts": one of which is to thank you for "filthy lucre" (it is anything but that to me now, Doctor), and the other for the always acceptable literature which I received some weeks ago. In the midst of all your duties you have time to remember me. A few days ago
I also received a pretty, bright copy of the new Hand Book of Church Extension in its usual cheering, comprehensive style. We are little, but not unknown."

"Rev. W. F. McMurry.

Dear Brother: Thanks for your promptness in sending interest due January 1, 1914. I have been declining in health since October 3. May not be here to acknowledge receipts for drafts due July 1. My sister, ———, will write if I cannot. I must say I have had great satisfaction in my dealings with Church Extension as regards Annuities. Pray that I may be faithful to the end of life's journey, so I may have a happy greeting from my Heavenly Father whom I have tried to serve many years."

Editorial

THE RELATION OF THE TWO EPISCOPAL METHODISMS.

We printed last week an interesting statement from the Federal Council of Methodism concerning the relation of the two great Methodist Churches (Northern and Southern) in the United States and its conception of its own powers and work, and in this issue we are reproducing an able editorial bearing on this subject by Dr. George P. Eckman, Editor of the New York Christian Advocate. As we stated a week ago, we regard the question as to what course these two leading denominations shall pursue toward each other in the coming years as one of vast and far-reaching importance; and, in our judgment, there is a more urgent need for considering this matter carefully and prayerfully now than at any preceding time since the division of American Methodism in 1844. Before we undertake to justify this conviction, however, we desire to touch briefly upon the present relation of the two Churches.

For the object that we have in view, it is needless to recite the circumstances attending the separation of Episcopal Methodism into two branches and the bitter contention that soon followed, and which was renewed to some extent in the years immediately succeeding the Civil War. Excitement was high and fanaticism was rife during that stormy period, and over any unkind words that were spoken and any wrong things that were done we can well afford to spread the mantle of Christian charity. Those pages of our history are irrevocably written, and nothing is to be gained by fighting over again the battles of the unchangeable past. We are not better than were our fathers, and it is doubtful if we had been in their places if we would have acquitted ourselves as creditably as did they.

Of the steps which led to the restoration of fraternal relations between the two bodies and by which they have been gradually drawn closer together, Dr. Eckman tells us in his admirable discussion. As he states, they now have "a common hymnal, a common catechism, a joint publishing house in China, and other outward fruits of essential unity." They have the same order of worship; they came to an understanding as to what part of the new territory acquired by the United States in the Spanish-American War each should occupy; they are co-operating to some extent in their work in Mexico, Central America, and Japan, and have just commenced to publish jointly the China Christian Advocate. But as Dr. Eckman says, perhaps the most significant and promising action that has yet been taken was the establishment of the Federal Council of Methodism. This tribunal was recommended by the Joint Commission of Federation in its meeting at Cincinnati, Ohio, on April 13, 1910, and was duly authorized by our General Conference held in Asheville, N. C., in May of that year, and by the General Conference of Methodist Episcopal Church which convened in Minneapolis, Minn., in May, 1912. It is composed of eighteen members—six Bishops, six traveling preachers, and six laymen—as follows: Earl Cranston, John M. Walden, Naphtali Luccock, John F. Goucher, Ezra S. Tipple, A. B. Storms, R. T. Miller, J. A. Patten, and G. W. Brown, of the M. E. Church; and A. W. Wilson, E. E. Hoss, Collins Denny, W. J. Young, F. M. Thomas, C. M. Bishop, M. L. Walton, R. S. Hyer, and W. B. Stuhls, of the M. E. Church, South.

As will be noted, this Council has been fully constituted slightly less than two years. It met in Nashville, Tenn., on January 22, 1914, and after careful deliberation adopted the rules and regulations set forth in the statement which it was our pleasure to publish last week. These guiding principles are in substance as follows: (1) Where either Church is established in a community and is doing the work expected of Methodism, the other should not enter it (both General Conferences have endorsed this position); (2) that the General Conferences have directed the administrative officers of Annual Conferences, Church Boards, Societies, etc., to regard carefully the decisions and recommendations of the Federal Council, which is expected always to follow the spirit, and as far as practicable the very letter, of the various joint agreements reached by the two Churches; (3) that the declarations of the General Conferences make it inconsistent for the Federal Council to approve of the use of Missionary, Church Extension, or other Conference funds upon the part of either denomination to enter a field where the work is being satisfactorily done by the other; and that where both Churches are established in a community before connectional funds are drawn upon to extend the work of either the Federal Council should be consulted; (4) that provision has been made for the appointment of Annual Conference Commissions where the two Churches occupy the same or bordering territory, from the decisions of which appeal may be made to the Federal Council; or if such Annual Conference Commissions are not constituted in such places, and differences that can not be locally adjusted should arise they may be brought direct to the Federal Council.

Such are the powers and purposes of this new court as it has interpreted and stated them. If it is sustained in the exercise of these powers and the application of these principles, it will, in our opinion, accomplish a greatly needed work and its creation will mark a new epoch in the history of American Methodism. But we fear that this tribunal's proposed plan of operation, just and wise as we think it is, and though, either directly or inferentially, it has been given General Conference endorsement, will meet with not a little opposition. Movements are now proceeding in various parts of the country which are in open conflict with the principles that it has enunciated. Perhaps the most conspicuous of these at the present moment is Bishop Leete's scheme to erect an expensive church for white people in Atlanta, Ga., for which structure he has recently bought a site at a cost of $50,000, the Home Mission Board of his denomination having given $10,000 toward this enterprise and having pledged $20,000 more. There is no possible explanation that can be given for undertaking thus to invade the Georgia metropolis except that it is proposed to establish churches everywhere in the South as rapidly as it can be done; for nowhere in our entire territory is our Church more strongly entrenched than it is in Atlanta. Indeed it is doubtful whether in the entire American Union—North or South, East or West—there can be found another city in which Methodism is numerically stronger in proportion to the population, or is more virile and aggressive than it is there. We have within its limits 30 ministers, 20,000 church members, 16,000 Sunday school scholars, a resident Bishop, a fine hospital, and other splendid enterprises. Leaving out of consideration the question of obligation arising out of antecedent agreements between the two denominations, and viewing the matter simply in the light of Christian duty and opportunity, how can such an expenditure of missionary money possibly be justified? Will Bishop Leete and his counselors consent to let this project be passed upon by the Federal Council? Will Bishop Thirkield who is reported to be contemplating some forward movements in New Orleans agree first to submit his plans to this tribunal and to abide by its decisions? And will our people agree to do the same thing along the border and in the Northwest? Such are the issues which are now before us. It is now up to both communions to show whether they are sincere in their affirmations of fraternity, or whether it is all as sounding brass or a tinkling cymbal. Federation is being practiced in some parts of the country between denominations that differ widely in doctrines and polity to an extent sufficient to avoid unseemly competition and the wasting of men and money; and if the Methodist Churches in their treatment of one another cannot even measure up to this general standard, surely it is time that we were ceasing to prate of our common history and teachings and of the spirit of brotherhood.

We have said that there are imperative reasons why the present and future relations of Northern and Southern Methodism should receive special consideration at this time. Of these, we now have at our disposal the space to mention only one. It is that both denominations have grown to be very strong—ours numbering 2,000,000 members and the other 3,500,000—and that each of them seems increasingly disposed to adopt an aggressive policy of expansion into other parts of the United States than those which it now occupies. The Northern Methodists are trying to push their way more and more into the South, and there appears to be a growing sentiment among Southern Methodists in favor of projecting their operations upon a larger scale into the Northwest. In our opinion, this jingo spirit is largely responsible for the continued agitation to change the name of our Church so as to drop the suffix, "South;" and if that movement should ever carry, we predict that it will be followed by a determined effort to levy heavy assessments upon other portions of the connection to furnish the means for an attempt to establish our Church in fields now chiefly occupied by our Sister Methodism. So the present hour seems to be a pivotal one—an hour "big with destiny." If we sit still and allow the tendencies now manifest to pursue an untrammelled course, it is probable that new and numerous points of friction will be developed between the two denominations and that the task of effecting a satisfactory adjustment of their relations in the future will be rendered vastly more difficult. But if, on the other hand, these tendencies are checked before they awaken a spirit of rivalry and hostility, such as they are certain to produce, and the two Churches are brought to exhibit toward each other a spirit of genuine fraternity—a fraternity evidenced by deeds, and not merely by empty words, there is no telling what may come of it in the course of time and in the workings of Providence.

Let us not be misunderstood. We do not mean to indicate that we are convinced that the union of Northern and Southern Methodism in one great body will ever come, or that it is to be desired. That is too large a question and involves too many considerations to be hastily and superficially passed upon. The union of ecclesiastical organizations does not necessarily make for the extension of the Divine Kingdom on earth. That depends upon what they stand for and the spirit that animates them after they have been blended into one. But unholy rivalry between denominations that concede each other to be essentially sound in the faith and the wasting of the Lord's money in unnecessary, not to say harmful, competition, while vast unoccupied fields are white unto the harvest and millions are perishing for the want of the Gospel, certainly cannot be justified. Those who pursue such a policy may be sure that it will not receive the Master's approval in the day of final reckoning. The talents thus squandered will have to be accounted for.

But we do not take a despairing view of the outlook. The Atlanta incident has stirred up considerable opposition among Northern Methodists. Zion's Herald, the ablest of their weekly journals, has spoken out plainly against it, and some of their leading men have pronounced the venture unwise and unwarranted. President W. H. Crawford, of Allegheny College, affirms it to be a "colossal blunder." Let our General Conference endorse and strongly support the Federal Council in its work, and wherever conflicting interests arise, let our people bear themselves in a brotherly and magnanimous manner, and doubtless gratifying results will follow. And it may be that eventually terms of agreement can be reached as to a division of territory from the Atlantic to the Pacific Ocean, with the two denominations co-operating in special missionary work that needs to be done in the home land as, for instance, that among the Negroes and other races, whether in the North or in the South.

We should like to see all the Methodist Churches on the globe so related as to secure the maintenance of their denominational integrity, because we believe that Methodism has a teaching for the millions of mankind that can best be propagated by leaving her free to proclaim it without having "to put on the soft pedal" to avoid giving offense to others. We wish that the spiritual children of the great Wesley everywhere would remember and act in harmony with his last words to his followers in America: "Lose no opportunity of declaring to all men that Methodists are one people in all the world." Such they are, or may be, in many important respects—one in a common parentage, in a common early history, in a common theology, in a common glorious experience of conscious sonship, and in a common earnest desire to kindle in every other human soul the fire of love and rapturous hope burning in their own.

AN INTERESTING VOLUME.

Rev. H. P. Lewis, Sr., of Jackson, Miss., has recently brought out an Autobiography which is well worth reading. For more than half a century he has been a member of the Mississippi Conference, and being endowed with the faculty of close observation, he touches upon many things that were of interest in the years that are gone. As a narrator of events, Brother Lewis is gifted, and there is not a dull paragraph in his book from the first page to the last. And it contains not a little valuable historical matter. It gives pictures of the members of his family and recites the story of his labors as an itinerant preacher through many changing scenes. The volume was printed in the Advocate office, and its mechanical make-up is excellent. We hope that it will be widely circulated and read. The price is 25 cents, or five copies for $1. It can be had either at the Advocate office, or from the author at 526 N. West Street, Jackson, Miss.

PERSONAL AND OTHER NOTES.

The New Orleans Association of Methodist Ministers' Wives will meet with Mrs. W. L. Doss, Jr., at 123 South Pierce Street, on March 20, at 2 o'clock p.m.

We have learned that Dr. G. S. Sexton has made a fine impression upon our First Church congregation at Shreveport. He is preaching to large audiences every Sabbath.

Rev. J. R. Countiss, President of Grenada College, says: "Our work is progressing favorably. Bishop Murrah will preach our Commencement sermon on May 24. The other speakers will be announced later."

Rev. P. H. Fontaine says: "Please announce that my address for this year will be Clinton, La., instead of Jackson, La. We have organized a Sunday school at Buetoville and have services there twice a month."

Brother J. T. Otts, of Homer, La., gave us on the 6th inst. a fine club of subscriptions from that prosperous and growing little city. A choice flock indeed are the Methodists of Homer, and we are glad to have our paper circulate among them.

The following brethren, to whom acknowledgment has not been made elsewhere, have our thanks for two or more subscriptions sent in within the past few days: Rev. H. G. Roberts, Grenshaw, Miss., 6; Rev. T. M. Bradley, Shelby, Miss., 2.

The infant son of Brother and Sister R. V. Bennett, of Monticello, Miss., is still desperately ill at the Presbyterian Hospital in this city. Let the readers of the Advocate continue to remember this little one and the anxious watchers by his bedside in their prayers.

Rev. J. A. Bowen, of Birmingham, Ala., will assist Dr. H. G. Henderson, the pastor, in a meeting at Lexington, Miss., beginning on April 8 and embracing two Sundays. The people of Lexington may count themselves fortunate in having secured the services of this gifted revivalist.

Rev. R. P. Goar, of Toccoola, Miss., reports encouragingly of his work. His first quarterly conference went beyond the high water mark, and the promise is for a year of activity and growth. Brother Goar has our thanks for the good work he is doing in behalf of the Conference organ.

Rev. S. D. Roberts, of Oaknolia, La., in a business note bringing several names for our subscription files thus refers to his work: "We are serving the East Feliciana charge and are pleased with the outlook. We have a fine people, a good board of stewards, and we are expecting a fruitful year."

Dr. R. H. Wynn writes as follows: "We are in the midst of a revival in Centenary College. Quite a number of the boys have been converted, and we are praying that every one will take a stand for Jesus before the meeting closes. Brothers Coleman, Sexton and several First Church laymen have given us assistance."

Rev. Paul D. Hardin, presiding elder of the Jackson District, writes: "Please state that Rev. R. W. Thurman, of Terry, Miss., has surrendered his credentials as a local deacon and voluntarily withdrawn from the ministry of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South."

A personal note from Rev. V. C. Curtiss, written on March 6, stated that Miss Elizabeth Kilpatrick had been taken ill the week preceding and had not been able to do any work for some days. We are sorry to be apprised of the physical indisposition of this tireless toiler, and we trust that she will soon be able to take up again her loved employment.

Our esteemed young friend, Rev. R. I. Collins, of Cockrum, Miss., continues to bring us under obligations to him for service rendered the Advocate. He believes in placing the church paper in the homes of his people, and has the happy art of getting them to take it. He is serving a worthy flock, and the work of the Lord is prospering in his hands.

Rev. J. L. Nabors favored us with some subscriptions from the Pott's Camp (Miss.) charge a few days since. He states that his work is moving on nicely and that he is hopeful of a successful year. Brother Nabors will be the host of the approaching session of the Holly Springs District Conference, and has our thanks for a cordial invitation to be present.

Our heart goes out in tenderest sympathy to Brother and Sister O. S. Lewis, of Brandon, Miss., who lost their babe on March 4th. A notice of the little one's decease from the pen of Rev. P. D. Hardin appears upon another page. May the Heavenly Father draw these stricken parents close to him in this time of sore bereavement, and comfort them with his sustaining grace.

In sending in his second round of appointments, Rev. J. H. Mitchell, the faithful presiding elder, says: "The Corinth District made the best showing on the first round that it has made in the opening of any Conference year since I have been serving it." Brother Mitchell's District Conference will be held at Ecru, June 18-21. We are grateful to him for a kindly invitation to attend.

Dr. Fitzgerald S. Parker, of Nashville, Tenn., writes: "The name of Dr. John T. Sawyer, long a useful and honored member of the Legal Conference of the Louisiana Annual Conference, was inadvertently omitted from the printed list in the Annual. Though now holding a superannuate relation, Dr. Sawyer is still interested and active in the affairs of his Church and continues to hold membership in the legal body."

Rev. J. M. Morse, of Jackson, Miss., says: "Capitol Street Church is moving on well. We have had 45 accessions since Conference, and within the past three years over 400 have been added to the Church. Now is the time for the Methodists of Mississippi to rally to Millsaps College. We must have a main building costing not less than $75,000 and a $50,000 dormitory. Let us rise up and show our worthy founder that we appreciate his generous gifts."

Elsewhere in this issue of the Advocate appears a notice of the meeting of the Woman's Council, which is soon to take place in Fort Worth, Texas. Now is the time to send in subscriptions to the Council Daily, the price of which is 25 cents. No Methodist who desires to keep well informed should fail to have this paper come to his hand. The women of Southern Methodism are doing a great work and the proceedings of this gathering will be highly interesting.

Rev. M. B. Sharbrough, of Columbia, Miss., sends us the following note: "We broke ground for our new church Thursday, and the excavation for the foundation is well under way. The old church is being moved to an adjoining lot which it will temporarily occupy, through the kindness of Dr. Ford, to whom it belongs. The old house had not quite accomplished the journey last Saturday, and so we worshiped on wheels on Sunday, the 8th. Our work generally is in good condition."

Dr. Chesley Daniel, an honored citizen of Holly Springs, Miss., and a useful member of our Church at that place, died in the Baptist Hospital in Memphis on March 2. The obsequies were conducted at Holly Springs by Rev. I. D. Borders, of Aberdeen, and Rev. W. N. Duncan, the pastor. In a note to the Editor, Rev. O. W. Bradley, who recently served the congregation of which Dr. Daniel was a member thus refers to him: "I never knew a choicer spirit. What a man he was!"

Rev. G. B. Love, writing from Kossuth, Miss., informs us that he has had a large amount of sickness in his home within the past twelve months and not a few other sore trials, but that the Lord has been with him through all his misfortunes and that the skies now seem to be brightening above him. He speaks in terms of high commendation of both Rev. T. H. Mills, who served the Kossuth Circuit last year, and of Brother D. R. McDougall, the present pastor.

Rev. D. E. Vickers, of Rose Hill, Miss., sends us the following notice: "Any one desiring the assistance of a good singer in a meeting would do well to secure the services of Rev. Otto Porter, of Rose Hill, Miss., who is now at Millsaps College preparing for the work of the itinerancy. He has had experience in work of this kind, and is a valuable helper in other ways besides singing. He would be glad to make engagements that can be filled during the vacation season."

Sister J. W. Chisolm, of Jackson, Miss., writes as follows: "My husband, John W. Chisolm, a member of the senior class of Millsaps College and also a member of the Mississippi Conference, was operated on for appendicitis at the Baptist Hospital in this city on the 4th inst. He stood the ordeal well and his condition seems to be as satisfactory as could be expected. We ask the brethren to remember us in their prayers." We regret to be informed of Brother Chisolm's attack, and we trust that he may have a speedy and complete recovery.

We regret to note that Dr. Joseph J. Price, of Clarksdale, Miss., died at his home in that city on March 3. He had been in failing health for several years and had been confined to his home for many months. Dr. Price had been a citizen of Clarksdale since 1875 and was held in high esteem by all who knew him. He was a loyal and consistent member of the M. E. Church, South, and in the days when Methodism was weak in the Delta was one of its active and ardent supporters. We extend sympathy to the bereaved, and pray that the Heavenly Father may have them in His gracious keeping.

Rev. H. Wade Cudd, of Alberta, La., has lately been presenting the claims of the Conference organ to his people, with most gratifying results. He gave us on the 3rd inst. 6 new subscriptions and 6 renewals, accompanied by a check that made the Publisher smile. Of course, Brother Cudd's charge is making good progress—the stamp of Centenary is upon him and he knows how to make things go. He says: "My work is moving along nicely and I am well pleased. I have organized a Woman's Missionary Society, and its members are becoming much interested in the activities of that splendid organization."

A Baton Rouge dispatch to the New Orleans Item on March 7 reads as follows: "Superintendent A. W. Turner, of the Louisiana Anti-Saloon League, is here establishing headquarters for an assault on the liquor traffic when the State assembly convenes May 18. Mr. Turner will seek to stop the shipping of liquor into dry parishes, by making it legally possible for police juries to penalize such shipments. A law proposing that 35 per cent of the registered voters may have authority to call local elections in dry or wet parishes is being framed by the Superintendent and he will introduce it early in the session." Now let all our temperance people lend Brother Turner a helping hand.

Bishop W. B. Murrah spent last Sunday at Laurel, Miss. The Jackson (Miss.) News of last Friday contained the following reference to the Bishop: "Since his recovery from his recent illness, Bishop Murrah has been spending most of his time in Jackson, and his friends have been gratified to note that he has rapidly regained his strength and is now in splendid physical condition. It is hardly probable that at the meeting of the College of Bishops this year that Jackson's beloved divine will be sent on another trip to the foreign field. Appointments of this character are usually alternated, and Bishop Murrah's friends feel that he is now entitled to stay at home awhile."

Ground for a new church at Gunnison, Miss., was broken with imposing ceremonies on March 6. Among those who took part in the exercises were Rev. J. H. Smith, the pastor, Rev. J. W. Ward, of Rosedale, and Brothers W. C. Boyd, S. M. Seaton, and J. M. Kirk, members of the local congregation. The old church which was recently demolished was first erected at old Concordia, on the Mississippi River, in 1864, and was moved to the town of Gunnison, the corresponding railroad point, in 1892. It is stated that the new structure will be a handsome one, heated by steam, lighted with acetylene gas, and equipped with other modern conveniences. We congratulate Pastor Smith and his worthy flock upon this forward movement.

We publish on another page a statement from Rev. R. W. Vaughan, Statistical Secretary of the Louisiana Conference, concerning the error to which Brother Lutz called attention in the Advocate of last week. As a matter of course Brother Vaughan deeply regrets this mistake, but he should not let it annoy him for a moment. If there is a person on earth who does not make errors we should like to see him. And it is a very common thing for an individual whose competency is beyond question to overlook an error again and again, and for another man to detect it at the very first glance. Such occurrences are so common in printing offices that those of us who work in them regularly are not in the least surprised when they take place.

After a trip to Enterprise, Fla., where he sought rest and recuperation some weeks ago, but where he did not improve, Rev. W. D. Wendel went to Atlanta, Ga., for medical treatment. He is now at home in Pontotoc, Miss., where he seems to be steadily gaining, and the present indications are that his recovery is only a matter of a little time. Brother Wendel speaks in terms of high appreciation of the kindness shown him by his presiding elder, Rev. J. W. Beil, and the other brethren who have assisted him in taking care of his work during his illness; and he furthermore says, "I have a noble people, and I love them with all a pastor's heart and I long to prove myself a worthy and efficient minister of Jesus Christ among them." Let the brethren remember Brother Wendel and his faithful helpmeet, who has been so anxious about him, at the throne of grace.

One of the most remarkable works accomplished by any preacher in the connection within recent years was that done by Dr. G. E. Cameron at First M. E. Church, South, of Shreveport. Within the short space of three years more than 350 members were added to the Church; the old house of worship was torn down and replaced by a magnificent new structure costing $125,000, and under the leadership of Dr. and Mrs. Cameron the Sunday school enrollment was increased from 150 to the largest in Southern Methodism. Dr. Cameron is a wide-awake Sunday school man, while his accomplished wife is said to have no superior as a worker in the Elementary Department of that organization. It is no wonder that the Methodists of Shreveport gave Dr. and Mrs. Cameron up regretfully. We are pleased to know, however, that they are already making their influence graciously felt at Alexandria, their present field of labor.

THICK, GLOSSY HAIR FREE FROM DANDRUFF

Girls! Try it! Hair gets soft, fluffy and beautiful—Get a 25 cent bottle of Danderine.

If you care for heavy hair that glistens with beauty and is radiant with life; has an incomparable softness and is fluffy and lustrous, try Danderine.

Just one application doubles the beauty of your hair, besides it immediately dissolves every particle of dandruff. You can not have nice heavy, healthy hair if you have dandruff. This destructive scurf robs the hair of its lustre, its strength and its very life, and if not overcome it produces a feverishness and itching of the scalp; the hair roots famish, loosen and die; then the hair falls out fast. Surely get a 25-cent bottle of Knowlton's Danderine from any drug store and just try it.

Why that Corn?

Why that pain, when Blue-jay would stop it instantly?

Why have a corn, when Blue-jay would remove it in two days?

Why that discomfort, when millions of people could tell you a way to get rid of it?

These are the facts:
Blue-jay is applied in a jiffy.
And from that instant all pain is stopped.

Then, while you work or sleep or play, Blue-jay undermines the corn. In two days you can lift it out, without any pain or soreness.

Think how easy, how simple.

While you pare corns, or doctor them in other petty ways, Blue-jay is taking out a million corns a month.

It is simply folly, in these modern days, to suffer from a corn. A single test will prove this.

BERNICE MARIE KROSP was born February 15, 1901, and died February 4, 1914. After a short period of illness, little Marie passed away to be with God, in Memphis, Tenn., where her parents had taken her for special medical treatment. Her body awaits the resurrection call in the cemetery at Clarksdale. Marie joined the Methodist Church, South, in Alligator in the spring of 1913. Her's was a beautiful Christian life. The Church and Sunday school will miss her. May heaven's blessings abide with the loved one left behind, and may the door of the home be ever opened heaven-ward! Her PASTOR.

Mrs. ELIZA C. BLAIR (nee Orr), was born in Mecklenburg County, N. C., on April 4, 1835. She was converted at the age of twelve years and joined the Presbyterian Church, but soon afterwards joined the M. E. Church, South, and in that Church lived a happy and most useful life to the end. On December 24, 1865, she was happily married to J. L. Blair. To them, five children—three sons and two daughters—were born. Sister Blair, with her husband and children spent many years in Yalobusha County, Miss., where she died on Feb. 22, 1914. She was buried in the family burying place at Bethlehem Church. The funeral service was conducted by Rev. R. F. Cole, assisted by the writer. There were many tokens of appreciation of the life of this good woman. T. H. DORSEY.

Mr. F. M. REMBERT was born in Wilkinson County, near Woodville, Miss., on May 27, 1823, and died in Wesson, Miss., on March 2, 1914, aged 90 years, 9 months and 2 days. When he was quite young his parents lived in Copiah County near Brown's Wells. In 1871 he moved to Hazlehurst, Miss., where he was engaged in the mercantile business, and in 1892 he moved to Summit, Miss. The later years of his life were spent in the home of his daughter, Mrs. J. S. Rea. The Lord blessed his home with 9 children, two of whom preceded him to the spirit land; the others—five sons and two daughters—live to mourn their loss. Brother Rembert joined the M. E. Church, South, when a boy, and was loyal and true to the Church as long as he lived. He always took his Church paper and lately renewed his pastor's subscription instead of his own. His children have lost an affectionate father, the community a useful citizen and his Church a constant friend. We pray God's blessing upon all the loved ones he has left behind. May his grace be sufficient in this time of sorrow. J. H. FOREMAN.

MR. E. P. GAULT.

On February 2, 1914, our Father slipped away and left us, on the voyage "from whence no traveler ever returns." In Memphis, Tenn., on the above named date, Father was accidentally killed. Then began the saddest experience of my life. But for the grace of God, I could never get over the trouble, but I have found him a "friend that sticketh closer than a brother." His grace is sufficient for us.

Elijah Payne Gault was born in Lime-stone County, Alabama, November, 1837. He enlisted in the Civil War some time in 1862, in Company B, 4th Alabama Cavalry; and served his country faithfully till the close of the war. He was born of Irish parents, but was a true Southern gentleman of the old type. He was a patient father and a devoted husband, who loved his home, and stood for honesty and fair play to every one. He was a fine mechanic, made a great deal of money, and could have been well-to-do, but was open-hearted, and gave away his hard-earned money—not only to good causes (which he ought to have done), but was too easy with those who owed him. He never seemed happier than when he was helping some one who was in distress. He was a member of the Presbyterian Church for forty-five years, and always had very high regard for his Church and its principles. It seemed to be the pride of his life, that God called one of his sons (myself) to the ministry. I went to see him just a week before he was killed, and he told me of a certain passage of Scripture he wanted me to preach a sermon from. Father, we miss you so much! It is hard to part with you, but by God's help, we will see you again on yonder shining shore, where partings shall be no more. To my poor broken-hearted mother and brothers and sisters, I say, God can comfort us and give consolation in this sad experience. That our Heavenly Father may bring us out of this sadness with a brighter and richer Christian experience, is my prayer. J. E. GAULT.

Calhoun City, Miss.

RESOLUTIONS OF APPRECIATION.

On the morning of February 4, 1914, one of our loved ones passed away—Mrs. Henderson, the wife of Dr. C. R. Henderson. She was aged 72 years, and had lived among us all our lives. Now we loved her, and how we shall miss her, though we know our loss is her eternal gain. Her charity was known and felt among all classes. She loved the cause of Christ, and was a member of the Baptist Church and was also a member of our Woman's Home Missionary Society for a number of years.

We know God's judgments are sure and true; and he will reward her according to the deeds done in the body. Because we loved her, we miss her and wish to honor her noble character; be it therefore, Resolved:

1. That we will strive to make our lives more fruitful by following her example in charity and loving deeds.

2. That we tender to the bereaved family our sincerest sympathy, and deepest sorrow in their sad loss, and pray that God's grace may sustain them.

3. That these resolutions be placed on the minutes of our Society, and a copy of the same be forwarded to the family of our deceased sister.

Signed by: Mrs. Mable Ewing, Mrs. S. E. Ewing, and Mrs. M. S. Exum, Committee.

SAGE TEA PUTS LIFE

AND COLOR IN HAIR

Don't Stay Gray! Sage Tea and Sulphur Darkens Hair so Naturally That Nobody Can Tell.

You can turn gray, faded hair beautifully dark and lustrous almost overnight if you'll get a 50 cent bottle of "Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Hair Remedy" at any drug store. Millions of bottles of this old, famous Sage Tea Recipe are sold annually, says a well-known druggist here, because it darkens the hair so naturally and evenly that no one can tell it has been applied.

Those whose hair is turning gray, becoming faded, dry, scraggly and thin have a surprise awaiting them, because after one or two applications the gray hair vanishes and your locks become luxuriantly dark and beautiful—all dandruff goes, scalp itching and falling hair stops.

This is the age of youth. Gray-haired, unattractive folks aren't wanted around, so get busy with Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur to-night and you'll be delighted with your dark, handsome hair and your youthful appearance within a few days.

Tidings From the Field

Queensborough, Shreveport.

We have received 17 members at the Queensborough Church since Conference, 6 by profession of faith and 11 by certificate. We have organized at Cedar Grove (the factory division of the city) with 50 members. We have some of the material on the ground for a new building, which will have six Sunday school rooms, with an auditorium. Work was begun yesterday. We have an organized Bible class with about 30 on the roll. They have two committees, one of which holds service at the Parish Prison, and the other at the Charity Hospital each Sunday. Gratifying results have already been reported.

F. J. McCOY.

Carrollton, Miss.

Dear Brother Meek: We have had Rev. W. M. Young, of Amory, Miss., in a great meeting recently, as a result of which nine joined our Church—two by letter and six by profession of faith. Our people were greatly pleased, and, what is better, our church was greatly edified by Brother Young's practical gospel preaching. Brother Young is an able expounder of our doctrines, and knows how to reach the heart and conscience of his hearers. His labors in Carrollton will be long remembered. It was a great pleasure to have him in our parsonage home. Our people will look forward with pleasant anticipations to a time when he will come this way again.—Walter Jones, P. C.

McDonald, Miss.

The Bishop last fall again read my name out in connection with the McDonald charge. This will make our 4th year on this charge, and its name has been changed four times. It was first called Stallo; second, Stallo and Indian Mission; third, McDonald and Indian Mission, and fourth, McDonald. But, thank God, the name is not all that has undergone a change. Three years ago we moved into a house here in McDonald for which we paid rent for fourteen months, during which time we built a parsonage. We now have a good home and five acres of land. We have built two churches—one at Stallo and one at Mt. Pisgah—and we need three more. We have built the Mt. Pisgah church since Conference. We laid the corner-stone on December 13, 1913, and finished the building on January 20, 1914. It is worth $1500 and was built by the people; not a man received a penny for his labor. I have never seen a community work together better than the people of Mt. Pisgah. Since they finished the Church, they have organized a Sunday school with 75 members, and I received 8 members into the Church there last Sunday (March 1). We expect our second quarterly conference to go there, at which time we expect to have our house dedicated.

This is some change. But the greatest and best of all changes is in the spiritual condition of the work; we have had some great revivals in the three years that we have been here. A goodly number have been converted and a good many have been sanctified wholly. The last of the three years was the best. Some of our people became so much concerned about their souls' welfare that they never let up seeking until they obtained the blessing, although the meeting had closed; and there are others seeking still.

some for regeneration and some for sanctification, and I am expecting to hear of them coming through at any time. Glory to God! "The gospel is the power of God unto salvation to every one that believeth."

It seems to me that I have one of the best works in the Mississippi Conference. It affords one such an opportunity to do good. I have eight regular appointments and would take on just as many more as I can get. Truly, the field is white unto harvest. My presiding elders have been very helpful to me in this great field. Rev. T. J. O'Neil was with us the first two years and rendered us faithful service along all lines. He was with me in a meeting at Stallo the last year of his service on the Newton District, in which we had a great ingathering into the Church. In this meeting several came to us from the Baptist church and two of them asked to be re-baptized. The first experience that I ever had of this kind was with a Choctaw, who came to us from the Missionary Baptist Church. Dr. H. Walter Featherstun was with us last year and he did some faithful work. He was with me in my meeting at Stallo and did some strong preaching on the doctrines of our Church. He preached two sermons that will not soon be forgotten—one on Water Baptism, or Why Methodists Baptize by Pouring and Sprinkling; and the other on Holiness. The latter was greatly honored of the Lord. I was very glad, indeed, when the Bishop read out, "Newton District, H. W. Featherstun, P. E." and especially so when I found that he was to be my presiding elder for another year.

A FINE MEETING AT DEEMER, MISS.

Dear Advocate: Plans and specifications are being drawn for the new Methodist Church at Deemer, and the structure will be pushed to completion in a short time. Deemer is a saw-mill town of several hundred people, a mile and a half from Philadelphia. Recently a meeting was held there by Rev. W. J. Ferguson, pastor of the Philadelphia Church, assisted by Rev. Dan E. Kelley, Conference evangelist. A Methodist Church was organized and 132 members were enrolled before the close of the meeting. A few of these were by transfer, but the majority of them were received on profession of faith. The religious tone of Deemer was completely changed by the meeting and the good work still goes on. Many of the converts are taking an active part in religious work. Brother Ferguson, who as pastor at Philadelphia, arranged for the meeting at Deemer, is a preacher of more than ordinary fluency and fervor. The spiritual welfare of his flock is his great concern, and his friends rejoice with him over this reaping time, which not only means the garnering of souls into the Kingdom, but the transformation of some who were extremely wicked into zealous workers for the good of others. Brother Kelley, who did the preaching, is peculiarly fitted for evangelistic work. He is at once bold and tender and winsome—an impressive personality, consecrated to constant soul-winning. From developing conditions, we hope to report good tidings from the Church at Philadelphia in the near future.

A GOOD WOMAN CALLED HOME.

Dear Dr. Meek: I have just heard through a friend, that Aunt Fannie Owen of Buena Vista, Miss., is dead, and as I was her pastor for the past three years, I can say that a more consecrated Christian spirit I never knew. She has been a life-long Methodist and one of that true Christian type that counts. She was truly devoted to her Church. She was sick a good part of last year and I visited her often; and it was always an inspiration to be with Aunt Fannie. She was so good—another mother in Israel is gone. She leaves one son, Tommie, and two daughters, Mrs. J. H. Parker and Mrs. Reno Westbrook, who is herself a widow, to weep for mother. My wife and I send our heartfelt sympathy to them through the Advocate.

T. J. DURRETT.

PINE GROVE, LA.

Our work here is progressing nicely. The first quarterly conference was fixed for last Saturday and Sunday, but we were rained out Saturday, and held the conference the next day at Pipkin's Chapel. Our beloved presiding elder, Brother Bowman, was with us and preached two very strong sermons (one at Grangeville). That night, when we started to leave the church, we found that some one had been at our buggy. They had not taken aught therefrom, but had rather increased our store. On close examination we found the things were designed for the home and made a nice little pound- ing, which is the third one here this year. So in this, at least, we have a great deal better interest than we had last year, and I hope that it will increase until we can pound the Editor with a "batch" of subscriptions for our paper.

DUMB CHILLS AND FEVER.

Douglasville, Tex.—"Five years ago I was caught in the rain at the wrong time," writes Miss Edna Rutherford, of Douglasville, "and from that time was taken with dumb ebills and fevers, and suffered more than I can tell. I tried everything that I thought would help, and had four different doctors, but got no relief, so I began to take Cardui. Now I feel better than in many months." Cardui does one thing, and does it well. That's the secret of its 50 years of success. As a tonic, there is nothing in the drug store like it. As a remedy for women's ills, it has no equal. Try it. Price $1.

"Habits, soft and pliant at first, are like coral stones, which are easily cut when first quarried, but soon become hard as adamant."

"It is better to fail in trying to do good than not to try."

DRUGS EXCITE YOUR KIDNEYS, USE SALTS

If your Back is aching or Bladder Bothers, drink lots of water and eat less meat.

When your kidneys hurt and your back feels sore, don't get scared and proceed to load your stomach with a lot of drugs that excite the kidneys. Keep your kidneys clean like you keep your bowels clean, by flushing them with a mild, harmless salts which stimulates them to their normal activity. The function of the kidneys is to filter the blood. In 24 hours they strain from it 500 grains of acid and waste, so we can readily understand the vital importance of keeping the kidneys active.

Drink lots of water—you can't drink too much; also get from any pharmacist about four ounces of Jad Salts; take a tablespoonful in a glass of water before breakfast each morning for a few days and your kidneys will act fine. This famous salts is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia, and has been used for generations to clean and stimulate clogged kidneys; also to neutralize the acids so it no longer is a source of irritation, thus ending bladder weakness.

Jad Salts is inexpensive; cannot injure; makes a delightful effervescent lithia-water drink which everyone should take now and then to keep their kidneys clean and active. Try this, also keep up the water drinking, and no doubt you will wonder what became of your kidney trouble and backache.

MERIDIAN FERTILIZERS SELL ON MERIT.

In Mississippi they supply more than 25 per cent. of the entire sales. With honor in their own territory, and a quarter century of manufacture, they have a constantly growing use elsewhere. The reason is simply this:

The manufacture of Meridian Fertilizers is a scientific compounding, in our own factories, of the best plant food.

No one can have a monopoly on the manufacture of fertilizers. There must be a reason for the rapid growth and generous patronage of this Company. It is found in the extreme care, the generous value, the uniform quality and the peculiar adaptability of Meridian Fertilizers. Look for the red bag on the back of the sack. It is your guarantee of full value for your money.

MISSISSIPPI STATE SUNDAY SCHOOL CONVENTION.

Plans are about perfected for the 35th annual Sunday School Convention which will be held in the First Baptist Church at Meridian, March 31, April 1 and 2.

The visiting speakers are Rev. Wm. A. Brown, Missionary Superintendent for the International Sunday School Association of North America; Dr. Lansing Burrows, Recording Secretary Southern Baptist Convention, and Mr. Hugh Cork, General Secretary, Illinois Sunday School Association. Mr. E. O. Excell and Mr. Roper will have charge of the music.

The program provides for a Conference of Pastors, a Conference of Superintendents, a Conference of County Workers, a Conference of Elementary Workers, a Conference of Secondary Division Workers, a Conference of Adult Workers.

Probably seventy-five of the leading workers of the State and denominational leaders will take part in the program.

END STOMACH TROUBLE, GASES OR DYSPEPSIA

"Pape's Diapepsin" makes Sick, Sour, Gassy Stomachs surely feel fine in five minutes.

If what you just ate is souring on your stomach or lies like a lump of lead, refusing to digest, or you belch gas and eructate sour, undigested food, or have a feeling of dizziness, heartburn, fullness, nausea, bad taste in mouth and stomach-headache, you can get blessed relief in five minutes. Put an end to stomach trouble forever by getting a large fifty-cent case of Pape's Diapepsin from any drug store. You realize in five minutes how needless it is to suffer from indigestion, dyspepsia or any stomach disorder. It's the quickest, surest stomach doctor in the world. It's wonderful.

Magnifying Misery Into Joy

Dyspeptics, Stomach Sufferers and Appetiteless People May Quickly Find Relief in Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets.

When a stomach sufferer gets relief he is one of the happiest of human beings and he looks back at his old self with a distinct feeling of horror.

Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets quickly readjust the out-of-proportion stomach and digestive machinery and bring joy of life and love for food to the man or woman who will use them after each meal for a short time.

"Hully gee, I used to feel just like that fellow"

The action of Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets is a purely natural one. When taken they enter the stomach just like food. They mix with the juices of the mouth. Then they enter into and correct build up or dilute the juices of the stomach, go into the intestines and there when the nourishment from food is taken into the system so follows the ingredients of these wonderful tablets.

They correct the faults of the blood and thus at the next meal the body is better able to produce a stronger and more normal digestive juice.

A short use of these tablets will re-establish your digestion, stop gastritis, heartburn, indigestion, foul breath, catarrh of the stomach and do away with dangerous stomach ulcers and many other unbearable conditions.

Go to your druggist to-day and begin the Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablet habit. It is the habit of health and appetite. Learn how to yearn for food, not how to spurn it.

Obtain a box from any druggist—price 50 cents. Sold wherever you can find a drug store.

THOSE BAD SPELLS

Lebanon Jct., Ky. — Mrs. Minnie Lamb, of this place, says: "I believe I would have been dead by now, had it not been for Cardui. I haven't had one of those bad spells since I commenced to use this medicine." Cardui is a specific medicine for the ills from which women suffer. Made from harmless, vegetable ingredients, Cardui is a safe, reliable remedy, and has been successfully used by weak and ailing women for more than fifty years. Thousands of women have been helped back to health and happiness by its use. Why not profit by their experience? A trial will convince you that Cardui is just what you need.

A CALL TO PRAYER.

Great and mighty things have been accomplished through prayer. Indeed only through prayer can the great things of the kingdom of God be accomplished. At the Student Volunteer Convention in Kansas City, the fact was brought out that the convention eight years ago in Nashville, stressed the money-power; four years ago in Rochester, the life-power; and this year in Kansas City, the prayer-power—indeed that the money-power, and the life-power are waiting upon the prayer-power. It takes the prayer-power to move all else in the kingdom of God.

Will You Invest?

People invest their money and their lives in things of greatest interest to them. The investment of the prayer-power must be made by his children if his kingdom is to come. We come now to call on the women of Methodism to invest their prayer-power toward a given end—for a specific purpose—

The Council.

The Council will convene in Fort Worth, April 8-16. Great issues involving the extension of the kingdom will be considered there. A great responsibility rests upon these women who represent the woman's work of the Church in this meeting. The issues cannot be met except in the strength of God. Shall we leave these women to bear their burdens alone or shall we enter into their labors through the Ministry of Prayer?

Let us invest our prayer-power at this time that God's spirit may direct and control the Woman's Missionary Council at Fort Worth, that his will may be done. We here and now call upon every woman in the Church to invest her prayer-power to this end and to make of herself a real for our women who meet together in the Council in Fort Worth, April 8. Then may we expect a meeting that will fire the Church because of its spirit and power and Christ-like plans.

Will You Pray?

ANNUAL MEETING OF THE LOUISIANA CONFERENCE WOMAN'S MISSIONARY SOCIETY, MARCH 31 AND APRIL 1 AND 2.

One hundred delegates are wanted at Rayville, on March 31 to April 2, for the fourth annual meeting of the Louisiana Conference Woman's Missionary Society. The opening service will be held at 9:30 Tuesday morning, the closing service, Thursday night. One hundred women are wanted to get information and enthusiasm from such speakers as Dr. George S. Sexton, of Shreveport, for the anniversary sermon; Miss Daisy Davies, Field Secretary of the Woman's Council; Mrs. S. S. Harris, China; Mrs. Nellie O'Beirne, Mexico; Miss Martha Nutt, from St. Mark's Hall, New Orleans; Miss Ella Iles, French Mission Field, Houma; and Miss Cora Godat, our new missionary. You can't afford to let pass such an opportunity for linking your auxiliary to every part of the world's work. Elect delegates immediately; send names to Mrs. J. C. Calhoun, at Rayville, La., for free entertainment. Send one delegate at least from each department and one from each Young People's and Junior organization. If one hundred delegates are in attendance a rate of one and one-third fare will be granted by the railroads. Be sure you secure a certificate when you purchase a ticket. For the first time in seven years it will be our privilege again to send one of our own girls to the foreign field. The blessing of Miss Godat's life work can be shared by each auxiliary increasing the pledge of last year. In this way alone will we be able to care for our own. The splendid increases made in 1913 make our hearts glad, and while we cannot rejoice in pledges fully "redeemed," we do see the way open for larger things. If we would advance the work, dear co-workers, and really extend Christ's kingdom, our offerings must increase. Forward is the watchword. Let us say with Alexander Duff, "Lord, never let me look back nor make a half-hearted work of this. After a thousand thoughts, now, one fixed purpose"—won the Battle of the Sea. It will win the one for Christ in Louisiana Conference—"Forward!"

Rayville Church and women of that Auxiliary are cordial and urgent in their invitation to the women of Louisiana. The auxiliaries in North Louisiana are expected to send all officers, and all others interested are invited. Pray earnestly that the Holy Spirit may direct all plans for this meeting and that the women shall come prepared to receive a blessing.

A VISIT TO MORTON, MISS.

Several weeks since, I, as Secretary of the Newton District, received an invitation from Mrs. Young to go to Trenton for the purpose of organizing several missionary societies in that charge. About the same time I received an invitation to visit the Morton auxiliary. Upon investigation, I found that Morton was the nearest railroad point to Trenton and decided to accept both invitations. All arrangements were made for me to meet the Morton ladies February 13, and notwithstanding the fact that it was Friday, the 13th, and fearfully cold, with a slight rain constantly falling, the attendance at the meeting was about 35 adults and 30 children of the Junior Division. We met at the home of Mrs. Henry Holmes. The meeting was opened with a beautiful duet, faultlessly sung by Mines A. Lewis and W. O. Norden. After asking God's blessing and guidance the great needs of the Foreign fields were stressed, and although the people of Morton are exerting every effort to build a new church and are assisting in the great work of Home Missions, several of the ladies caught a new vision of our Lord's command to "preach the gospel to every nation," and they promised at their next meeting to organize a Foreign Department. The Junior Division deserves special mention. They are very enthusiastic and splendidly trained. God grant the time may soon come when every auxiliary will eliminate the distinction between Home and Foreign Missions and become as the children, all working for missions. The social hour was made doubly pleasant by the singing of the children, and the serving of a lovely salad course with hot chocolate. The next morning Brother Young telephoned that the weather was so cold and the roads so bad to travel sixteen miles, we decided to postpone the trip to Trenton until spring. But the generous hospitality and loving kindness of Brother and Sister J. T.

SHOES TO THE CONSUMER AT WHOLESALE PRICES.

Since catalogue was issued, we have added a great many new styles to our line. It will be several months before a new catalogue will be ready to mail. We have found that with rubber soles on English last, are very popular. We can furnish the Russia Calf with rubber soles at $2.00 and $2.50 per pair, the kind that retail for $3.00 and $3.50. We have a complete line of Ladies' White Duck Oxfords, with rubber soles, at 90c., the kind that retail for $1.50,—at $1.10 and $1.50. The $1.50 is the regular $2.25 shoe.

It is about time now for the wearers of shoes to think about the spring and summer styles, or oxfords, and we would suggest to the readers of this paper that they forward their orders now while our stock is complete. We have all the new styles and if there is anything not mentioned in the catalogue we would suggest that our customers describe the shoe wanted, we have it.

10 CENT "CASCARETS" IF BILIOUS OR COSTIVE

For Sick Headache, Sour Stomach, Sluggish Liver and Bowels—They work while you sleep.

Furred Tongue, Bad Taste, Indigestion, Sallow Skin and Miserable Headaches come from a torpid liver and clogged bowels, which cause your stomach to become filled with undigested food, which sours and ferments like garbage in a swill barrel. That's the first step to untold misery—indigestion, foul gases, bad breath, yellow skin, mental fears, everything that is horrible and nauseating. A Cascaret tonight will give your constipated bowels a thorough cleansing and straighten you out by morning. They work while you sleep—a 10-cent box from your druggist will keep you feeling good for months.

The Sunday School.

LOUISIANA NOTES.

By Rev. P. O. Lowrey.

Plans should be made at once where the matter has been overlooked to observe an effective "Decision Day" in each Sunday school. This is our main source of ingathering into the kingdom, and it is of vital importance both to the Church and to the pupils that each member that we have enrolled in our schools be led to an open confession of Christ. In making the plan it is necessary that the teachers confer together and have united prayer and co-operative effort. Those who are to be the trainers of the pupils should also be the ones to lead them to Christ. Following "Decision Day" let those who are to join the Church be gathered together for a few afternoons in a catechism class for instruction in the duties of Church membership by the pastor. And on the occasion of receiving them into the Church, let their teachers and parents be invited to the altar and join with them in taking the communion.

We are sorry to report that Miss Fannie Reames whose faithful and efficient service has meant so much to the church at Kentwood is so indisposed as to be confined to her bed for the greater part of the time. She spent some weeks before Conference in a hospital in New Orleans, and hoped that she had entirely recovered, but of late has not been doing so well. She is one of that type of real "sisters of charity" that we find too rarely numbered in the ranks of the Kingdom. At present she is the teacher of the Beginners' class of her Sunday school, the president of the Woman's Missionary Society, first vice-president of the Epworth League, and the Elementary Superintendent of the East Baton Rouge District Sunday School Conference. Her sister, Miss Mamie Reames, a deaconess in our Wesley House in Biloxi, is at home on a month's furlough, in order that she may be of assistance to the mother in the affairs of the home. Let the friends who know and love Miss Fannie join in prayer for her speedy recovery.

Brother R. B. Fulton is planning to use the fifth Sundays during the year in institute work at various places in his circuit, and we think that he is on the right track. Our commission is to teach as well as to preach, and the institute is one of the needed aids to efficient teaching. In many places our people are so ignorant of our doctrines and usages that in any kind of an argument with representatives of other churches they would be worsted. Not a few of us find who love the Methodist church for its fraternity and good works, and for its doctrines of grace, but believe that we are not Scriptural on baptism, church government, and other minor things that others constantly preach and teach. The Baptists use the fifth Sundays for institutes in which such things are taught their people, and as a consequence many of their members are grounded in their doctrines and tenets. And then the whole field of Bible knowledge, methods of teaching and general church work, and training for various lines of service are open to such a program. Neighboring pastors and workers can be invited and a time of general counsel and fellowship may be had. We are persuaded that some such feature should be connected with every camp meeting, and should follow every protracted meeting. How could the fifth Sundays be better used on circuits?

NEWS AND NOTES.

By Miss Elizabeth Kilpatrick.

More Sunday schools were organized in our Church in 1913 than in the three previous years.

John Wanamaker says, "Save a man and you save a unit, save a boy and you save a multiplication table."

Holston Conference has a fine record of 75,000 church members and 73,000 in the Sunday school. This great Conference has contributed much to the history and making of Methodism.

Speaking of goals, read this one and ponder what it may mean if you do not accept it and work for it: "Every member of every family in our church a member of some department of our Sunday school."

Method is good; equipment, labor-saving and learning are a great power; but do not depreciate the inestimable value of enthusiasm. "It gives wings to weary feet; puts luster into the eyes, a ring into the voice and gives attractiveness to the whole personality."

"Any road will lead you to the end of the world," said Carisle. Livingston said: "Anywhere, so it's forward." Begin to go forward in the best and easiest line of Sunday school endeavor, and then the acceleration of motion will lead to a final complete awakening and splendid conquest.

Abbeville's Adult Bible Class of 23 is certainly promising. Many who have never been in Sunday school before are vitally interested and ready to help make over the church and the school; and with 24 in the Teacher-training Class, their future excellence is well assured.

We have 128,000 officers and teachers in our great Methodist army of volunteer Sunday school workers, and with these becoming better trained, with better equipment, and ready for greater efficiency in their work, much greater gains will doubtless be registered in the next few years.

Mr. Jno. R. Pepper, who has been a superintendent 34 years, says that he has never used the same program any two Sundays—and Mr. Pepper knows wondrously well how to win, hold and educate men along such lines. He is superintendent of the First Methodist Sunday school at Memphis, Tenn.

Mrs. R. M. Weaver, Corinth, has a fine class of young ladies. One of the members lost everything by fire last week and on Friday night she was given a "surprise" shower of beautiful and useful articles, and her appreciation was almost beyond expression. Just one more line of possible, every-day social service.

Rev. D. W. Babb writes from Charleston that both the Sunday school attendance and the amount of literature used have been doubled within the last twelve months. Curtains have been stretched to give more and better class-rooms and greater and better work is being done every Sunday in his school.

Rev. W. S. Selman writes that he has organized one new Sunday school on the Lamar Circuit, and is in the act of organizing two more, which will complete his list. This is the very best way to accomplish results; look over the field, see the deficiency, and make it good; and the pastor is the real and best leader along this line of organized development.

All Methodism, and especially Sunday school Methodism, will be delighted to know that Dr. E. B. Chappell, our great Sunday school Editor, will soon issue a new book, which Dr. Bulla will place in the reading course for Adult Classes, and which will be eagerly perused by every Sunday school worker. We are proud of Dr. Chappell's literary achievements, and trust that we will get many more good things from his pen.

SIX BIG FEATURES OF THE NEW ORLEANS Christian Advocate Piano Club

Here are a few of the attractive features which have made the Club the most popular and successful piano buyer's opportunity that has ever been offered. The plan was originated and perfected by the Advertising Manager of the New Orleans Christian Advocate and Ludden & Bates, one of the oldest, largest and most reliable piano houses in the country. Its central idea is to absolutely insure PERFECT and PERMANENT satisfaction and delight to every subscriber who orders his piano or player-piano through the Club. Read these features, then write for a copy of the handsomely illustrated catalogue and special Club prices.

1. BIG SAVING IN PRICE

The Club offers you the greatest price concession ever made on high-grade Pianos and Player-Pianos. By uniting our orders in a Club of one hundred buyers, each gets the benefit of the big Factory discount. You are responsible only for your own purchase; we assume all responsibility for securing the ninety-nine other Club members.

2. SAFE AND CONVENIENT TERMS

In providing easy terms of payment the Club has carefully avoided all the unpleasant and unfair features of the installment plan and has retained all of its conveniences. You get the full benefit of the spot cash price and pay only a legitimate rate of interest on the deferred payments, instead of having to pay the extortionate price commonly demanded of installment buyers.

3. PROTECTION TO YOUR FAMILY

The chief objection to the old installment plan of payment is that it works a hardship on the family in the event of the death of the bread-winner. We have absolutely avoided this by providing a splendid insurance feature which costs you nothing, yet protects your family against debt or loss of the instrument.

4. GUARANTEE OF INSTRUMENTS

Most guarantees are of little value for the reason that the guarantor may die, move away or go out of business so that you are unable to find him when you need him. The Club provides a permanent guarantee against all imperfections of workmanship and materials, made by one of the oldest and strongest piano houses in America. If any defect ever develops you know exactly where to find the guarantor, and your interests will be perfectly protected.

5. EXCHANGE PRIVILEGES

The Club gives you the most perfect plan ever devised by which you can exchange your old Piano for a new Player-Piano, or a Grand Piano. You receive the full and actual value of your old instrument, applied on the net cash Club price of the new. The customary deception is thereby entirely avoided.

6. EXCHANGE OF MUSIC ROLLS

Do not make the serious mistake of purchasing your Player-Piano from a house which does not provide a full and free service, by which you can exchange your old music rolls for the newer compositions. The Club affords a complete service at a nominal cost to cover postage and clerical expense. Club members say it is the finest service in existence.

The Club affords you many other attractive features, such as Free Music Lessons, given by one of the best Correspondence Schools in America. Write for your copy of the Club catalogue to-day. It pictures the beautiful styles, describes their construction, gives the net Club prices and tells all about the greatest piano opportunity ever presented. Old Club members express themselves as "delighted."

It is your time next. Address

Ludden & Bates, NEW ORLEANS CHRISTIAN ADVOCATE PIANO CLUB DEPT., Atlanta, Ga.

But the greatest feature of all is the superior quality of the Pianos and Player-Pianos, selected by the Club. In beauty of design and finish, exquisiteness of tone and responsiveness of action, in the permanent durability of construction—they are superb.

THE SECRET OF POWER AND USEFULNESS

"Without me ye can do nothing." Such were the words of the Master spoken in the great sermon delivered when the shadow of the Cross was upon him. And he re-enforced and emphasized them with his wonderfully illuminating parable of the vine and branches. A most tremendous truth is this—one which cannot be overstressed, and which should ever be kept in mind. We are far too prone to forget it and to imagine that men and women, in their own strength, can lift the world upward toward the light. Says the British Weekly: "Not a few believers grow weak and exhausted by sporadic efforts to assist in countless good causes. They forget in their breathless activity that Christ has not set up his Church on earth primarily to do things, but to bear witness that he has done everything, and that the burden of humanity lies upon the Rock of Ages. Often when we stand bewildered among manifold projects to save and succor the world, we turn with unspeakable rest to Him who is Himself the World's only Savior."

This is a most suggestive utterance. The only fault that we find with it is that it puts things too much in the past tense. Christ has not only done great things, but he is still doing them. It is he alone that can touch a human soul with life-giving power and transform and ennoble it—that can overthrow the deadly evils that are blighting human society and purify and redeem it. He who goes forth to work in any good cause without being in touch with the living Christ is certain to accomplish but little. For this reason, allies who repudiate the Deity of the Son of God, or who have not learned how to abide consciously in him and let his power operate through them, add no real strength to the forces of the kingdom. Better had we learn anew the lesson taught Gideon in the days of old and shake them off as hurtful incumbrances, as we go forward into the battle. It was Mr. Moody—was it not?—who said, "It remains yet to be seen what God could do in the world with one human life that is wholly in his hands." In proportion as we surrender all to Jesus and let him use us, shall we be useful in saving our fellow-beings and extending the glorious reign of our Lord on earth.

The following statement by Dr. John R. Mott bears pertinently on the point that we are seeking to impress and is well worth meditating upon:

"When I made my first journey around the world I went home and wrote a book in which I laid great stress upon the need of an increase in the number of foreign missionaries. When I returned from my second tour I laid stress upon the need of a great army of native workers, sons and daughters of the soil. When I came back from my third extended journey to the East I was led to see that I had taken a very superficial view. What we need is, not so much an increase in the number of missionaries, not so much a vast army of native workers; what we need is the discovery of the hiding place of God's power, and the secret of the releasing of that power. We need more workers through whom God shall have his opportunity.

Here and there he is accomplishing through one worker what many workers could not accomplish where the hiding of his power is not discovered. Since then I have found the same thing exemplified all over the home field. God has his ways, and they are not always our ways. One of the most striking passages in the Old Testament is the one representing God's eye searching up and down the world trying to find a man whose heart is right toward him, that he might show his power through that man. The discovery of that secret is the great thing needed all over the world to-day in our Christian enterprises, the discovery of the secret which enables God to find the object of his quest, that he may realize his consuming desire, and show himself strong."

AN INTERESTING LAWSUIT.

An exceedingly interesting lawsuit that may seriously affect the Roman Catholic Church is under way in the State of New York. It arose in connection with the estate of Augustine Wirth, who died in Springfield, Minn., in 1901. He joined the Order of Benedictine Monks in Pennsylvania in 1852, and was later transferred to New Jersey, and for many years lived in a monastery in Newark. Subsequently, he disagreed with some of his associate monks, and went to Minnesota, where he became a secular priest and lived and wrought until his decease. He was an author of some note, and through his writings amassed about $10,000. His relatives in the West employed attorneys to secure possession of the estate, and they went to New York City and demanded of his publishers an accounting for the royalties due on the works of the dead priest. The publishers refused to comply with this request on the ground that these royalties belong to the Order of St. Benedict in New Jersey, by reason of "the poverty vow" that the monk had taken. Legal proceedings followed and the publishers won in the Circuit Court, but the case was appealed to the United States District Court, where it was reversed and decided in favor of the relatives. It has now gone to the United States Supreme Court, where it is pending.

The Federal District Court in passing upon the matter laid special stress upon the following part of the Benedictine "poverty vow":

"The vice of personal ownership must above all things be cut off in the monastery by the very root, so that no one may presume to give or receive anything without the command of the Abbot; since monks are allowed to have neither their bodies, nor their will in their own power; * * * and let it not be allowed for any one to have anything which the Abbot does not give or permit him to have."

In commenting upon this requirement of the Order, the Court said: "Such an agreement is no more enforceable in the civil courts, at least, than would be an agreement by one to forfeit to another his life. In this country it is the inherent right of every person to acquire and hold property in his own right, and the State is interested in preserving the liberties as well as the lives of its citizens, and they are guaranteed against the deprivation thereof either by the State or by any person, individual or corporate, without due process of law."

It is, of course, obvious that if the contention of the relatives of Augustine Wirth is sustained and the "poverty vow" of the Roman Catholic Church is held to be unenforceable by law, much of the property of every monastic order in the United States (not simply the Benedictines, for other monks and nuns are required to make a similar pledge) will be placed in jeopardy and lawsuits involving millions of dollars may follow. We note that in a brief reference to this litigation the Northwestern Christian Advocate suggests that it may also affect the Methodists, but we fail to see how it can do so to any appreciable extent. The only thing in our administration as a Church that such a decision might invalidate, that at present comes to our mind, is that provision of the Discipline which declares that no preacher shall have any claim upon a congregation for a deficit on his salary for the preceding year or years; and it seems to us that in such cases there are other principles involved that would probably make nugatory any attempt upon the part of pastors to invoke the assistance of the strong arm of the law to collect what is due them.

MORE LAURELS FOR LEE.

The further we get from the Civil War and the more the mists of prejudice lift, the larger looms the figure of General Robert E. Lee. Lord Wolseley's famous tribute to him has been published, and republished, all over our country and is well known. And new voices from high sources are ever and anon speaking out in terms of lofty appreciation of the South's great chieftain. One of the latest of such expressions is that of an English writer in the London Spectator, which is as follows:

"He is probably the finest soldier since Napoleon—the embodiment of every soldierly gift of mind and character. His superb daring in the early stages was no more brilliant than his stubborn defensive warfare in the terrible wilderness struggle. He took the measure of his adversaries and could treat Pope cavalierly and Grant with respect. Every day his power grew and his last campaign is a flawless example of how a great force may be baffled with slender resources. And with it all he remained the ideal of a Christian soldier, humble, courteous, brave and gentle, so that with Sir John Moore he may stand as a type of the happy warrior,—

Who doomed to go in company with pain,
And fear, and bloodshed—miserable train,
Turns his necessity to glorious gain."

OBSERVATIONS.

A writer in The Youth's Companion says: "It is no honor 'to hold the record' for jumping at conclusions."

"There is no standing still in the spiritual life. Unless we are progressing steadily toward the goal, there is certainly retrogression. Degeneration is as common a phenomenon in the spiritual world as it is in the natural."

DID YOU?

Did you give him a lift? He's a brother of man,
And bearing about all the burden he can.
Did you give him a smile? He was downcast and blue,
And the smile has helped him to battle it through.

Did you give him your hand? He was slipping down hill.
And the world, so I fancied, was using him ill.
Did you give him a word? Did you show him the road,
Or did you just let him go on with his load?

Do you know what it means to be losing the fight,
When a lift just in time might set everything right?
Do you know what it means—just the clasp of a hand,
When a man's borne about all a man ought to stand?

Did you ask what it was—why the quivering lip?
Why the half-suppressed sob, and the scalding tears drip?
Were you brother of his when the time came of need?
Did you offer to help him, or didn't you heed?

—Tid Bits.

THE "OLD-FASHIONED MOTHER."

Thank God, some of us have an old-fashioned mother. Not a woman of the period, painted and enameled, with all her society manners and fine dresses, whose, jeweled hands never felt the clasp of baby fingers, but a dear old-fashioned mother, with a sweet voice, eyes into whose clear depths the love light shone, and brown hair, just threaded with silver, lying smooth upon her faded cheek. Those dear hands, worn with toil, gently guided our steps in childhood, and smoothed our cheek in sickness, ever reaching out to us in yearning tenderness. Blessed is the memory of an old-fashioned mother! It floats to us like the beautiful perfume of some wood blossoms. The music of other voices may be lost, but the enchanting memory of her will echo in our soul forever.—Grenada (Miss.) Sentinel.

A COLOSSAL METHODIST BLUNDER.

By President W. H. Crawford, of Allegheny College, Meadville, Penn.

Having been out of the country for some weeks, I have only just heard of what seems to me a blunder of colossal proportions—the purchasing in Atlanta, Ga., of a "valuable estate" at a cost of $50,000, on which is to be erected "a fine new church" of our denomination for the use of white folks. It seems that the Board of Home Missions and Church Extension has appropriated $10,000 for the purpose, and is pledged to $20,000 more. If all this is true, and it seems to be, it is certainly not to the glory of Methodism. No wonder Dr. Edward Laird Mills, of the Montana Conference, describes it as "An amazing procedure," and "belligerency, pure and simple."

Can any one doubt that a storm of righteous indignation would be aroused among our people if the Methodist Church, South, should attempt such a thing in New York, Chicago or Pittsburgh? We would not stand it. Instant appeal would be made to the Commission on Fraternal Relations, or to the two Boards of Bishops. Our church papers, all of them, would be filled with articles protesting against the action. Ringing editorials would appear, and the whole Church would feel the sting of attempted injustice. I cannot imagine how our proposed scheme can otherwise affect the ministry and laity of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South. Atlanta was my home for four years, and I know something of conditions there.

The city of Atlanta is in the very heart of the South. It is one of the battle fields of the Civil War. My home was within a stone's throw of the street through which General Sherman rode as he began his famous march to the sea. But the war is supposed to be over, and the differences of the war buried under the benediction of our immortal Ulysses, "Let us have peace."

Since the war Atlanta has grown to be a city of which the whole nation may be proud. In none of the prosperous and flourishing cities of the South has our sister denomination more fully and perfectly proved herself worthy of the mission entrusted to her by our common illustrious founder. Statistics at hand as I write show that the Church, South, has in Atlanta thirty preachers, 20,000 church members, and 16,000 Sunday school scholars. The church buildings are adequate, organization under episcopal leadership is effective, and the pastors are men of commanding influence, not only in their own denomination, but among the Christian people of the city. Knowing the situation as I do, I cannot see how we shall be able to justify the action taken by our Home Mission Board from any point of view. If there were a congregation of our people in Atlanta who could not be made to feel at home in the Methodist churches of the city, and they desired to build "a fine new church" on a $50,000 estate, the money being in hand, not so much could be said against it, even though the proposition might be regarded as one of doubtful propriety in view of the close fraternal relations existing between the two churches. But when the building venture is in the nature of a missionary enterprise, our Home Mission Board promising, or tacitly promising, $30,000, with the expectation, no doubt, that generous laymen in the North will turn in and help, the proposition is altogether a different one, and smacks of bellum days rather than the new days of peace which some of our prophets are describing as near at hand.

My soul is stirred, and neither my conscience nor my judgment will allow me to rest until I enter protest against this reactionary movement which can only bring harm to ourselves and embitter the spirit of the members of the Church, South. I protest against what is proposed: First, because it is an impeachment of the work which has been done, and is being done, by the Methodist Episcopal Church, South. Second, because it is a violation of the agreements of the Cape May Commission of 1876, and of the Joint Commission on Federation of 1898. Third, because it is altogether out of harmony with the spirit and letter of the program adopted by the Federal Church Council. Fourth, because it is utterly at variance with the spirit of Christian unity and fraternity to which we are pledged by the actions of our General Conference and of our Annual Conferences. Fifth, because no such church as the one described is needed. The work of Methodism is already being done in Atlanta, and better done than we could do it. It is too far away from our base of supplies. Sixth, because great injustice would be done to other fields. Think of $10,000 from our Home Mission Board for "a fine new church in Atlanta," where a Methodism, blood of our blood, is doing royally the work of Methodism, and giving only $6,850 for church extension purposes in the great States of North and South Dakota, and in Montana, and in considerable portions of Idaho. The Oregon and Montana Conferences, with fifteen church building propositions on hand, receive $500. This is only a sample. Brothers, it won't do. To use the language of a fine lot of young men with whom I associate daily, "We won't stand for it." When all the facts are known, Methodism won't stand for it, either. I believe better of the church I love than to think she will do such a thing. It is out of harmony with the spirit of Methodism, and out of harmony with the spirit of Jesus.

Congress not long ago did a bad piece of business in the matter of the Panama Canal tolls. But we are going to right the wrong. The unanswerable arguments and the scathing rebukes of such men as Elihu Root have so aroused the American people that President Wilson is seeing the necessity of asking Congress to undo the bad business and thus set ourselves right in the eyes of the nations. It is not too late to undo what has been done in Atlanta, but there must be speedy action. Protest should be made to the Home Mission Board to hold the $10,000 until the church can be heard from. When the church is heard from on this matter, it will be clear enough for everybody to see that our $30,000 can be used more profitably elsewhere.

I hope no one will misunderstand me. We have a mission in Atlanta, and a great mission, but it is among the colored people. Our Gammon Theological Seminary is there, and our Clark University. We have a large colored membership, and it is increasing. No other city will have more influence in determining the future of the black belt and the future of the colored people in the South. At the last General Conference our colored people asked for more supervision. All we gave in the way of episcopal supervision for all the Conferences south of Mason and Dixon's Line was three men—one in Chattanooga, one in Atlanta, and one in New Orleans. Not all their time, by any means, can be given to the colored people. The work is still sadly in need of more adequate care and direction. It ought to be understood, and I think, is generally understood, that our real mission to the South is to the black man. Only recently a commission has visited our schools in the South. Much they found to praise, but they also found much to be done. It is our chief business in the South to do the things that most need doing. Personally, I do not see how "a fine new church," on a valuable $50,000 estate, built largely with missionary money, can be placed in the list of the things that most need doing. It is one thing to maintain a modest church home for our white members in Atlanta, as we have one for many years, and at no inconsiderable expense; it is an altogether different thing, and, as I see it, a reactionary thing, to use missionary money for a church building of almost cathedral-like proportions, when we do not have a membership, or any prospects of a membership, to justify it, and where a sister Methodist Church is strong, vigorous and aggressive, and devoted to the task of preaching the witness of the Spirit and spreading Scriptural holiness.—Zion's Herald.

THE MISSION TO LEPERS IN INDIA AND THE EAST.

By Rev. Theo. F. Hahn, M. D.

II.

It is impossible to estimate the total number of lepers in the world. In India alone the number is variously stated from 500,000 to as many as 1,500,000. There are large numbers in China, many in Japan, Korea, Burma, Siam, South Africa, Norway, and a considerable number in the United States. Compared with the total number needing help, the number reached by the Mission is only a small fraction; but the work is being largely expanded as funds are provided. Moreover the Mission presents a most practical and effective object lesson to the local authorities, stimulating them to more efficient measures in dealing with the problem as a national necessity and protection. Thus, in India, government officials have long recognized the value of this Society as an adjunct to the government in its efforts to deal with the problem—how best to care for this class of its afflicted subjects, and stamp out from the country the disease which has wrought such havoc in the past. Grants of land and money have been made to the Mission by several of the provincial governments of India, and in the management of asylums, hitherto much neglected, the Society's co-operation has been cordially welcomed by municipal bodies and local boards. There is great need for a national sanitarium for the care of lepers in the United States, and the writer is exceedingly glad to notice that there is now a bill before Congress for the establishment of a national leprosarium.

But as yet the extent of the beneficent work of the Mission to Lepers depends on Christian benevolence. It is supported wholly by voluntary gifts. The task is a great one; the need is appalling; the demand is imperative. The cry is that of the most helpless and abject class of human beings on earth. It appeals to the religious, philanthropic, humanitarian, and scientific motives, and even almost to the selfish impulses of protection. The Mission needs about $400 a day to sustain its established work, while there are unknown numbers whose mute appeal is continually rising for the help which Christian love alone can give.

"I, laid beside thy gate, am Lazarus;
See me or see me not, I still am there,
Hungry and thirsty, sore and sick and bare."

As we said, there is a considerable number of lepers in the United States. They are right here among us in Louisiana. The State has a small Home for Lepers in Carville, La. But the domestic management being entirely in the hands of the Roman Catholic Sisters, no Protestant religious work had ever been done there. The Protestant Ministers' Association of New Orleans has recently started preaching services for the Protestant inmates of the Home. The writer who went there was really touched by the eagerness, the almost famished soul-hunger with which those Protestant patients received the blessed Word, as believed by them and dear to them, and of which they had been deprived so long. One good old Lutheran lady, 92 years of age, had actually embraced Roman Catholicism, despairing of the hope of ever seeing a Protestant minister, or hearing a Bible sermon again.

The Mission to Lepers, through its American Secretary, Mr. W. M. Danner, has kindly offered to assist the Protestant Ministers' Association in this work. The impression seems to have gone out among our Roman Catholic brethren that Protestants hesitate to do work for and among lepers. Perhaps they do not know of the noble work the Mission to Lepers is doing, and the many experienced, efficient and sympathetic men and women that have been and are connected with this work. But even in the smaller circle of our own State it is the opinion of the writer that we must dispel any impression that may have gone abroad, as to the unreadiness of Protestants to engage in this work by a sympathetic and willing co-operation in behalf of the lepers.

It is Christ's command: "Cleanse the lepers." The command stands quite by itself alone and is differentiated from the others: "Preach the gospel," and "heal the sick" (Mat. 10:7, 8). And, indeed, the work for lepers is quite unique in its character. Not only is it of necessity separated from other work on account of the nature of the disease, but the moral significance of the disease puts the leper in a class by himself alone. This is especially true in Oriental religions. The Hindu, for instance, as above indicated, considers the leper as being under the special judgment of the gods for some unpardonable sin committed in a former existence, and therefore cut off forever from any hope of heaven. He is a religious outcast. Contact with him is feared not so much because of the danger of physical contagion (the writer has seen lepers move freely about the streets and markets of India, and even ride on the trains), but because of the moral or religious contamination. For this reason the leper is ostracized and shunned. No Hindu of any caste would "touch" him. This explains the reason why the gospel of the Son of God who "touched" the leper and cleansed him, who said that he would in no wise "cast out" whoever came unto him, is so eagerly and even hungrily received by those who have been taught that they have been cast off by God forever.

A similar opinion was held by the ancient Hebrews. Leprosy even under the Mosaic law was a picture of sin, and for the moral training of the as yet undeveloped moral Hebrew conscience, no doubt, rightly so. The leper lived "without the camp," not only in the bodily sense, but spiritually he was shut out from the congregation of Israel. The diagnosis came under the jurisdiction of the priest, not that of the physician. We therefore also read that, while Jesus "healed" the sick, he always "cleansed" the leper. No doubt he healed him as well, but above all he removed the moral stigma of religious uncleanness, wherefore he also sent the thus "cleansed" leper to the priest to be reinstated in the Jewish Church.

It is therefore the primary object of the Christian Church to "cleanse" the leper, i. e., to bring to him the gospel of moral and spiritual cleansing and acceptance with God through Jesus Christ, and we might say, in Christian lands, even of human brotherhood. For though we as Christians do not regard the leper as a religious or moral outcast, yet we are in danger of regarding and treating him as a social outcast. Not, of course, that he is to mingle freely with society; he himself very well understands that he is to live segregated for the good of the community. But yet we are to "touch" him, again not necessarily in any bodily sense; he very well understands that too; but in the sense that we put ourselves in loving, sympathetic contact with him in his seclusion, thereby making him feel that he, too, belongs to the great family of human brothers, who, by the redeeming grace of God in Christ, are to become the children of the Father in heaven.

IN FAVOR OF LAITY RIGHTS.

Dear Doctor Meek: I enclose a remittance to renew my subscription to the Advocate. I could not well get along without it after having perused its pages for over a half century. I have no recollection of the time when it began to visit the home of my childhood, and when, thirty-eight years ago I became the bride of a certain Louisiana Methodist bachelor, I found it in his home; two and a half years ago it followed me to Missouri; you see we've gotten to be good friends. My humble opinion is, that you are giving us an excellent paper. In these days of card signing Christians and worldliness in the Church, it does the heart of an old-time Methodist good to note that the general tendency of all the articles in your paper uphold the Bible doctrines of repentance, faith, conversion, and the way of the cross to the goal of eternal happiness. Yes, Mr. Editor, the principles of your doctrine are as sound as a dollar with one exception—you are so bitterly opposed to woman's rights. I must say of you as Samantha Allen did of Josiah: "A better man there never was with just one serus failin," Josiah's failin was—he prayed for prohibition and voted for license. You pray for God's kingdom to come and then use your influence to prevent the women from doing the work that they might do and are longing to do to hasten its coming. But I'm glad to note that you've revoked your edict of last year that "no more article or clippings on the subject of 'laity rights for women' were eligible for publication in your paper." Am I right in this? I am impressed this way by the clipping from the Nashville Advocate entitled, "The silent Women of Methodism," by Evelyn Baker Dodd, published in your issue of February 5. It is very strange to me that Mrs. Dodd could find three men of Bible fame who were hurt by the influence of women, but not a single one could she think of that was ever known to help or encourage a man. I wonder if she ever read the fourth and fifth Chapters of Judges. What would poor cowardly Barak have accomplished had it not been for Judge Deborah, the prophetess, the wife of Lapidoth, and Jael, the wife of Heber. Deborah evidently had something more than "laity rights." When King Josiah became so alarmed at the reading of the book of the law which Hilkiah the high priest found; and "commanded Hilkiah, Ahikam, Achbor, Shapan and Asahiah, saying, go ye, enquire of the Lord for me and the people"—wasn't it surpassingly strange that they should hasten to Huldah, the prophetess, the wife of Shallum? Just think of it, five men going to one woman to "enquire of the Lord for them;" and Huldah did not say (as I imagine Mrs. Dodd would have), "Brethren you're mistaken in the woman. I do not belong to the noisy few, but am one of the silent women of Methodism. You'll have to go to a man for your information. It's not in God's plan for a woman to do anything but stay at home, obey her husband and attend to the babies. I wouldn't for the world hurt Mr. Shallum's feelings as I should by doing as you request." On the other hand, she did not hesitate to utter that scathing prophecy found in the 22nd Chapter of 2nd Kings. Do you think Deborah and Huldah were out of their place? What about Miriam, the prophetess (Ex. 15:20), who led the way while all the women followed her in a parade of rejoicing after the children of Israel had passed over the Red Sea? Time would fail me to tell of Anna, the prophetess, who preached Jesus while he was yet in his swaddling clothes; of Philip's four daughters who did prophesy; of Mary who was first to tell the doubting disciples (men) that their Lord had arisen from the dead; of Priscilla who helped her husband—Aquila—to "expound unto Apollos the way of God more perfectly;" and of "those women that labored with Paul in the gospel."

I notice that Dr. S. A. Steel says "maternal rights are the concern of Southern womanhood." If "laity rights" are not maternal rights," I don't know the reason why. If he only knew it, he's badly mistaken when he says "it is only a noisy few among Southern Methodist women who want 'laity rights.'" They may be a noisy majority, but not a noisy few. The very idea of his placing such a woman as Miss Bennett in the class of the noisy few! He thinks "the Kentucky Conference honored itself" when it voted down laity rights. I'm so glad that dear old gallant Louisiana went so largely for it. Will you please tell Brother Steel that "laity rights for women" will have to be buried more than "ten thousand fathoms deep" "not to bob up again." I'm sixty-five years old and I would not be a bit surprised if I live to see it incorporated in the Code of dear old Southern Methodism. I am not "one of the silent women of Methodism," but one of the noisy majority.

OUR LITTLE PEOPLE.

There are millions of little people in the world to-day, upon whom the work and business of future days will depend. And their minds, hearts, and bodies must be properly, and rightly cultivated, to make their lives beneficial to God and man. In order to have the enjoyment of a bounteous harvest, we must give the necessary nourishment and cultivation to the plants. So, good food must be given to the child, if we expect good fruit. The Good Book says: "Train up a child in the way he should go, and when he is old he will not depart from it." The present conditions indicate much negligence in the discharge of this all-important duty. But let us make a change for the better, and go on with this indispensable work.

Our public schools should be imbued with the spirit of Christianity and be able to join the strong arm of God's Church, in giving support to the parents in the performance of this grand and noble work. Let us help each other in guiding our children to the right side of life. Surely, we should be awake to the welfare of the souls of our children. Tell them about Jesus and the wonderful life he lived here upon earth, and help them to love him and his teachings, that they may be able to ward off the temptations of life, and live for God. The doorway of opportunity is open, and to be successful in this great field of labor, we must enter it with clean hearts.

Church News

Dr. Jowett, pastor of the Fifth Avenue Presbyterian Church of New York City, was due to leave New York for a trip to the Holy Land Tuesday of this week.

Bishop Waterhouse's slate of engagements from March 6 to April 4 embraced seven district conferences. He has shown himself to be every inch a Bishop during his first quadrennium in the episcopacy.

President Collier, of the British Wesleyan Conference, and Gipsy Smith, have lately been jointly visiting a number of Wesleyan churches, and have everywhere been greeted with large and enthusiastic audiences.

The Central M. E. Church, South, of Hot Springs, Ark., which was destroyed by fire some months ago, will be rebuilt soon at a cost of $100,000. The site of the new structure will be on Central Avenue, about a block from where the old house of worship stood.

Having been accused of being influenced in his support of a measure in Congress by the Roman Catholic Church, United States Senator James P. Clarke, of Arkansas, declared on the hustings a few days since that his religious affiliations are with the Methodists.

Dr. S. A. Steel, pastor of the Washington Street M. E. Church, South, of Columbia, S. C., reports a great revival among his people, in which 200 persons surrendered to Christ. He was assisted in the services by Rev. Raymond Browning, a North Carolina local preacher.

Dr. Hugh Black, who is now on this side of the Atlantic, delivered a lecture at Princeton, Illinois, a short time ago entitled, "America Through Scottish Spectacles," in which he declared that American writers are superior to those of Great Britain in the matter of preserving the purity of the English language.

The Northern Presbyterians are striving to increase their pension fund for retired ministers to $10,000,000, and $200,000 was added to it in one week recently. Of this increment, $100,000 was given by Mr. W. H. Dunwoody, a millionaire miller of Minneapolis, and $50,000 came from an anonymous contributor.

Cardinal Gibbons, who for some days has been in New Orleans on his usual annual visit, stated last week that he will go to Rome in May to report the work of his diocese. The College of Cardinals, when full, numbers 70, but at present there are less than 60 members. Of these, three are in the United States, their places of residence being Baltimore, Boston, and New York.

The Raleigh Christian Advocate says: "He (Mr. Carnegie) has set aside $2,000,000 in five per cent bonds to further the cause of peace, and committed the administration of it to the Churches." He has committed nothing to the Churches. He has constituted to manage his new Foundation a conglomerate, independent, self-perpetuating Board that no Church has the power to influence to the slightest extent.

According to Spectator in Zion's Herald, the church paper problem is still acute in the Methodist Episcopal Church. In the quadrennium preceding the last General Conference approximately $200,000 had been lost on the periodicals of that denomination, only two or three of them having paid expenses; and as an experiment the prices of all of them under General Conference control except the New York Christian Advocate was reduced to $1 per annum, and plans were devised to try to swell largely their circulation. Their subscriptions, under the leadership of the Bishops, have been greatly increased, but their advertising patronage has not come up to expectation, and it is said that most of their Advocates are yet losing considerable money. Spectator declares that the $1 paper scheme will go at the meeting of the next General Conference.

REVIVAL AT MILLSAPS COLLEGE.

Our annual revival meeting, conducted under the auspices of the College Y. M. C. A., came to a close on March 2. Services were held in the chapel of the preparatory school, twice a day, and were well attended throughout. Dr. W. G. Henry, pastor of Galloway Memorial Church of this city, was in charge, and his preaching was of a high order, heart-searching and convincing—the plain, powerful gospel of Jesus. There were a number of conversions, and a good proportion of the student body committed themselves to more definite Christian service. An appeal to the young men to give serious consideration to a call to the ministry, the mission field, or other form of special religious work, was not without results. One of our best college students decided definitely for the ministry, and others are considering a like step. It was refreshing to see noble young men and boys, under no excitement whatever, give deliberate and clear testimony to a religious experience, and then approach their classmates and friends in an effort to lead them to Christ. Much of the good result of the meeting was no doubt a product of prayer. For one week previous, many of the students gathered after supper in various rooms for prayer, and it was the privilege of the writer to attend a number of these meetings when every boy in the room prayed earnestly for the success of the meeting in the salvation of his friends.

Such a meeting in the midst of a scholastic year argues much in favor of Christian education by the denominational school. Brother Henry has endeared himself to the Millsaps community, and his deep interest in the students is greatly appreciated. It is needless to say that the two very appropriate sermons preached by Dr. Watkins during the meeting were enjoyed. Surely Millsaps College can be recommended, not only for its high scholastic standard, but also for the emphasis placed on the religious life, and its definite Christian influences.

A CHOICE LAYMAN CALLED HOME.

Chesley Daniel, M. D., was born in Marshall County, Mississippi, February 3, 1849, and passed into heaven from his home in Holly Springs, Miss., on March 2, 1914. After his graduation from the State University at Oxford, he received a thorough medical education at Louisville, Kentucky, and at Tulane, New Orleans, from which latter institution he received his degree. He was married December 2, 1880, to Miss Fannie B. Fort, of which union four children, James Fort, Maria Voorhees, Frances and Lucy Hill, were born. Uniting early in life with the Methodist Church, he was not only a consistent and faithful member, but a steward and the Recording Steward for thirty-five years.

These are the simple facts of his life. It were as well to leave them to speak their own story, for no words seem quite adequate to express the singular beauty and nobility of his character. It was my privilege to know him intimately, and no other man whom I have ever known so much reminded me of the matchless Man after whom our brother so earnestly sought to fashion his life, the Great Physician. When the great plague of yellow fever decimated Holly Springs in 1878, he remained through it all, his heroic efforts to relieve distress being interrupted only when he was himself stricken with the dread disease. His skill was always at the command of the poorest, with never an inquiry regarding a guaranty of payment; his service was as unto his Lord. His beautiful family life, irradiated with tenderness, consideration and love, makes the loss which his home has sustained a heavy one; the loyalty and earnestness of his Christian faith and the zeal of his labors, constitutes the church a severely afflicted loser; and the unusual unselfishness and conspicuous ability which united in his professional career impoverishes the community which mourns him. But we are not left to conjecture or to hope regarding the present home of his soul; he lived in Christ, he died in Christ, he is with Christ!

ALEXANDRIA DISTRICT STATISTICS

Dear Dr. Meek: It so happens that the transposition of the figures which led the Statistical Secretary to make the erroneous report of loss of membership at the last session of the Louisiana Conference, occurred in the total for the Alexandria District. While this error was maintained throughout the recapitulations and was shown in the grand totals, it was especially unfortunate for the Alexandria District. The total for the Alexandria District should be 4,801 instead of 4,081, as shown in the minutes. This shows a net gain for the Alexandria District of 382, whereas the error in the Minutes indicates a loss of 337. In fairness to the charges of the Alexandria District I will thank you to give this correction as prominent a place in the Advocate as you can afford.

ROBT. W. VAUGHAN,
Statistical Secretary.

A PULL ALL TOGETHER.

Fifty-four mission Boards in the United States and Canada have agreed upon the present month, March, 1914, as the time for a UNITED EVERY MEMBER CANVASS of their several churches for the securing of missionary funds. For several reasons it is important that our churches should take part in this great "Pull All Together" of the Protestant Churches of the American continent.

In the first place, our Discipline requires that an every member canvass of each church shall be made to secure our missionary assessments. The united wisdom of all our General Boards has provided for us a "Financial Method for Methodists," which includes the every member canvass and the duplex envelope as the ideal method of gathering up the pledges made during the canvass in regular payments. So that whether the movement is recognized by other Boards or not, it is the authorized method of the M. E. Church, South, to provide for our missionary obligations.

Again, this method of the every member canvass has been demonstrated over and over again, in city and country, in large churches and small, in wealthy and poorer congregations, to be eminently effective in largely increasing missionary zeal and contributions. In the Louisiana Conference several of our leading churches have tried it for several years, with very satisfactory results and marked increase. This fact, taken in connection with the fact that our Conference last year paid just a trifle over half of the assessments for Home and Foreign Missions, and similarly on other Conference claims, seems sufficient reason for trying a new plan that has met with success wherever it has been tried.

Aside from these excellent reasons for adopting this plan, it would certainly be a great inspiration to our churches to realize that they were taking part in a great continent-wide movement, which, if thoroughly carried out, means a long step forward in the establishment of the Kingdom of God—no less a step than laying definitely and directly upon the conscience of each member of the church in America, the missionary obligation laid upon us by our Lord. If we do not take part in such a united movement, we shall certainly lose the benefit of a great inspiration.

Of course it is understood that those churches which have already made the every member canvass for the year, are not included in this exhortation. It is encouraging to learn that several of our leading churches, and a number of smaller ones have already adopted the plan this year, in addition to those which were already using it.

The responsibility of leadership in such a movement rests necessarily with the pastors. In response to the call of our own Board of Missions, which has heartily entered into this movement, and that of the combined missionary forces of America, will not each pastor in the Louisiana Conference AT ONCE (because March is passing) enlist his Missionary Committee, Board of Stewards, and all other willing workers, in a determined effort to reach each member of the Church now with the definite presentation of the missionary obligation?

Any one wishing more specific instructions may obtain them by writing to the Laymen's Missionary Movement, 810 Broadway, Nashville, Tenn.

W. WINANS DRAKE.

Conf. Missionary Secretary.

Telephone Always on Guard

There is never a moment, day or night, when your Bell Telephone is not a protection.

In the busy hours of the day and the silent watches of the night, the switchboard operator is always ready to answer a call.

The telephone is as much a part of the protective system of each community as the police and fire departments.

There's always a feeling of security in the knowledge that close at hand is the means of calling aid quickly when you most need it.

More than 70,000 cities and towns are protected day and night by the Bell Telephone system; 7,500,000 Bell telephones are on guard. In thousands of rural communities it is the chief reliance in emergencies and times of danger.

The Newton County (Miss.) Agricultural High School has been located at Decatur, which agreed to donate to it a brick school building, a dormitory, and twenty-five acres of land. This class of institutions is exerting a tremendous influence for good throughout the South. We like that form of education which is democratic in spirit and which opens the door of opportunity to the masses of our young people. It would, no doubt, be startling if we could see how our schools are "classified" by the ascended Christ. We dare say that those that are doing most to uplift the benighted and most needy of the race would stand first in his column. Every school ought to be pronouncedly missionary in spirit.

Mr. J. M. Gwinn, Superintendent of the New Orleans Public Schools, was elected President of the National Society for the Promotion of Education at the recent annual meeting of that organization in Richmond, Va. In a statement appearing in The Item since his return Prof. Gwinn declared that a majority of the school superintendents in attendance upon this conference seemed to favor leaving the teaching of sex hygiene to the parents of the children. In our judgment, this is a trend in the right direction, and it is to be hoped that our Sunday school workers will soon come to take the same view of the matter. If teaching of this kind is to be done, let it be in classes of mothers and classes of fathers organized for this purpose. Give them the needed information and let them impart it to their sons and daughters.

PRESIDING ELDERS' MEETING.

The presiding elders of the Louisiana Conference met in the First Church, Baton Rouge, Thursday, March 5, all being present except J. I. Hoffpauir. J. M. Henry was elected Chairman and Wm. H. Coleman, Secretary.

The subjects discussed were Christian Education, Temperance, Missions, and Evangelism. P. M. Brown, Conference Secretary of Education, A. W. Turner, Anti-Saloon League Superintendent, W. W. Drake, Conference Missionary Secretary, and W. S. Holmes, Conference Lay Leader, were all present and presented certain vital features of their work. The elders unanimously endorsed the work of these faithful leaders in these various important interests of the Kingdom of God, and the following resolutions were passed:

On Christian Education.

Whereas our great State with its rich endowments and marvelous possibilities cannot come to its highest development, nor our people to their richest inheritance of prosperity, happiness and usefulness until there is among us a stronger public sentiment for righteousness and justice, and for a clean manhood in every avenue of life; and whereas our institutions of learning are among the most potent factors in fixing the ideals, molding the characters, and determining the type of citizenship of our men of to-morrow; and whereas the Bible, the basis of our civilization and source of our highest standards of life, is debarred from our public schools, therefore, be it resolved:

1. That we rejoice in and heartily commend the efficient work being done in Centenary and Mansfield Colleges under the able leadership of Dr. Wynn and President Bobbitt.

2. That we hereby appeal to all our people and friends to respond liberally to the appeals of Rev. P. M. Brown in his efforts to raise an endowment for Centenary College that is so urgently needed to save this great and historic old institution to still greater days of usefulness in this time of our sorest need of its work.

On Temperance.

Be it resolved that we, the presiding elders of the Louisiana Conference, endorse the work of Rev. A. W. Turner, Superintendent of the Louisiana Anti-Saloon League; that we hereby request our pastors and Sunday school superintendents to observe Anti-Saloon Day in May; and that we endorse the plan to hold a temperance rally in Shreveport on Tuesday evening before the opening of our Annual Conference.

Missions and Evangelism.

The plans of Brothers Drake and Holmes for the distribution of missionary literature, the every-member canvass, and a great Laymen's Rally on Friday afternoon at the Annual Conference were heartily endorsed.

The afternoon session was devoted to the question of evangelism, and it was the unanimous opinion and conviction that our greatest need is a spiritual awakening; that this, more than anything else would bring success to all our enterprises and prosperity and joy to all our people. To this end, the elders all pledged themselves to seek greater spiritual power in their own lives, to pray for one another and for their respective pastors and people, and to urge throughout their respective districts that much prayer be made and earnest efforts put forth for a genuine revival that will deepen the consecration and enrich the experience of every Church member, and break the awful hypnotic spell of sin that is deluding our people, lowering our standards of manhood and womanhood, destroying homes, degrading characters, defying God's holy law, and sinking souls into eternal ruin. As we looked out over our great State with its glory dragged into the dust by the blighting scourge of sin, our hearts yearned for the salvation of the people; and as we got still before the throne He, who is our leader, seemed to reveal it to us that it is his pleasure to send this great awakening this year, if we of the ministry are unselfishly devoted to his glorious service and so consecrated as to be filled with the power of his Spirit.

The characteristic hospitality of the good people of Baton Rouge was demonstrated in the kindness shown us during this one day's visit to the Capital City. WM. H. COLEMAN, Sec'y.

AN IMPORTANT REQUEST.

To The Preachers of the Louisiana Conference.

Will you kindly take the trouble to send me promptly the names of all the boys in your charge of Methodist persuasion who will complete the high school course this session. At the same time send me the names of any boys in your charge, Methodist or otherwise, who for any reason might be induced to attend Centenary in the near future. If you are too busy to give personal attention to this matter, please ask some one else to do so. I consider it a very important request.

R. H. WYNN,
President Centenary College.

ANNUAL MEETING OF BOARD OF MISSIONS.

The Board of Missions will hold its Annual Meeting in Nashville, beginning April 22, a little earlier than usual owing to the meeting of the General Conference. This will be the last meeting of the quadrennium, and will consequently be one of unusual importance. A full attendance is expected.

Nashville, Tenn.

CHURCH DEDICATION.

The Methodist Church in Shelby, Miss., will be dedicated April 12. Bishop James Atkins will preach the dedicatory sermon. The board of stewards and pastor cordially invite all former pastors to be present. Others who desire to come will be most heartily welcomed. We extend to you, Mr. Editor, a special invitation to attend.

T. M. BRADLEY, Pastor.
WM. CONNELL,
J. W. THOMAS,
DR. T. J. MAYERS,
Stewards.

CHANGE IN DATE OF MEETING.

The date of the annual meeting of the Woman's Missionary Society of the Louisiana Conference, which is to convene at Rayville, has been changed from March 23-25 to March 31 and April 1 and 2. The Rayville Society is making extensive plans, and it is earnestly hoped that every Auxiliary in the State will send a delegate. All delegates will please notify Mrs. J. C. Cathoun, Rayville, La., at the earliest possible date.

INFORMATION WANTED.

I was born in New Orleans, La., and was a twin. My father's name was Adams. My parents died when I was four years old, and my sister, whose name was Mandy Adams, and I were left. We were sent to Keachie, La., and there we were separated. I was raised by a Mr. Fullilove, and I do not know who took my sister; but it was some one near New Orleans. I heard she married a Mr. Jones, and had a blind son who is preaching. If anybody knows of her whereabouts, please let me hear from you at once, and oblige

BAPTIDZO AND THE GREEK PREPOSITIONS IN THE NEW TESTAMENT.

(Dr. Swartz expected this communication to appear at the same time that his personal statement did, which was printed last week. This is one of the three articles that he referred to therein—a winding-up, not a renewal, of his discussion).

Dear Brother Meek: In my two former articles which appeared in the Advocate under date of Feb. 19 and 26 I showed by copious citations from Greek literature that the word "baptidzo" is used everywhere in classic Greek in a sense other than "to dip." I desire in this article to bring into review some of the cases in the New Testament where "bapto" occurs, to discuss the construction of the clauses and the prepositional phrases pendent from that verb, and to show that, as indicated in the last paragraph of my article of Feb. 26, that not a single ecclesiastical dogma can properly be drawn, much less maintained, from the facts as exhibited in the original Greek of our New Testament text.

I am not now, however, any more than I was in the past, animated by a desire to make converts among those of another faith. I simply desire to present facts as they are so that all who read may know the truth. This whole question of the mode of baptism is at best of so little spiritual significance that time and energy would both be illy spent in seeking to change any one's attitude of mind with respect to it. Baptism and its mode become important only because of the insistent emphasis put upon it and the prominence given it by our brethren of other names. Because of this emphasis, however, it becomes every now and then opportune and right for those nurtured in a different belief to have shown to them the textual evidence upon which their faith rests so that they may be fortified in that faith and not be led into strange creeds by the importunate—I had almost said unfortunate—zeal of those otherwise minded.

I have had it in mind for the past two or three months to discuss in the columns of the Advocate the New Testament use of "baptidzo." In view of my recent articles on the use of that word in classic Greek it is particularly apropos that I should do so at this time. For I have been urged by both friend and foe (I use this word only in a rhetorical sense) to appeal the case from classic to Hellenistic literature. The Baptist Record also in its recent issue of Feb. 26 while utterly, though unintentionally perhaps, misrepresenting me, exhorts me to come over to the forum of the Bible with the issue, fraternally assuring me that if I will come "with open mind" it will receive me "with open arms and heart." Thus urged on all sides, I come, but I come with an exhortation on my part that my foes (again rhetorical) bring with them not only open mind but also an open eye, so that in commenting upon my article they may not, as the Record does, put into my mouth words which were never there or attribute to me thoughts which were never mine. For a wide open eye could never have found in my former articles the least trace of a suggestion that our case "is hopeless" when studied from the sacred text. Quite the reverse is true as we shall see.

Before proceeding let us state the present proposition clearly. It is this: The New Testament text offers little, if any, philological grounds for the doctrine of baptism by immersion; such evidence as there is, is rather in favor of some other mode; what that mode was is philologically indeterminate.

We must fix well in our minds at the outset a few fundamental grammatical principles which we shall have need of in the discussion. By lettering them we shall make reference to them easier. They are as follows:

(a) "En" with the dative (or the dative without "en") is used in Greek as one of the leading ways to express the means by which a thing is done. For example, "By means of thy seed shall all the nations of the earth be blessed" is written (Acts 3:25) "en to spermati sou eulogethesontai."

(b) "Eis" with the accusative case expresses change of place, that is, motion from one place to (into) another. For example, "He goes into the water" is expressed (Acts 8:36) by "eis to hydor."

(c) "Apo" with the genitive case expresses separation from near (not out of) a place or thing. For example, "He goes away from (near) the water," is written (Math. 3:16) "apo tou hydatos."

(d) "Ek" with the genitive case expresses separation from (out of) a place or thing. For example, "He goes out of the water" is expressed (Mark 1:10) "ek tou hydatos."

Any one the least conversant with Greek will acknowledge without question the truth of "(b)," "(c)," and "(d)." With respect to the statement in "(a)" that "en" with the dative is used everywhere in Greek as one of the leading ways to express the means by which a thing is done, superficial Greek scholars may take exception. It is incumbent upon us therefore, since proof of this fact is of the utmost importance in our discussion, to pause here for a moment and to demonstrate beyond doubt, by citation of Greek examples from both the classic and the Bible authors, that "(a)" states a universal truth when it says that "en" with the dative case is used to express the means whereby a thing is done or sought to be done. And I emphasize the need of getting this point clear because it is from this that the misapprehension of the mode of baptism has largely found its way into the thoughts of honest and of serious men. And it is surprising too how many so called Greek scholars of the present day are adumbrant in mind with respect to this point. They seem to think—and they certainly teach—that "en" with the dative case expresses place only. So that when they read "ebaptiste en hydati"—he was baptized in water—they say that he was immersed into the water. They forget first, that such a relation must be expressed by "eis" with the accusative case (see "(b)" above), and secondly, that "en" with the dative case expresses with a verb of action, means whereby and not place where.

In Homer, book 22, line 61, Priam says, when exhorting Hector not to fight Achilles, that Kronides will destroy him on the threshold of old age with a terrible fate (en argalee aise).

The scholiast of Aristophanes Nubae (line 418) says of the tongue that it is the tool of the orator and that he conquers the enemy with it (en aute).

In Plato (Menexenus, 8) we read, "our ancestors were nourished by means of a good government (en kale politela).

And so on in the classic Greek authors ad libitum.

What is true of the classic writers is likewise true of Hellenistic Greek. "En" with the dative usually expresses means. "For with what judgment (en ho krimati) ye judge, ye shall be judged. (Matthew 7:1). "Do not throw your pearls before swine lest they trample them with their feet" (en tois posin) (Mat. 7:6). "He shall speak words to you by means of which (en hois) ye shall be saved" (Acts 11:14). "Promising by means of Jesus (en to Iesou) resurrection from the dead" (Acts 4:2). "There is no name given under heaven whereby (en ho) we must be saved, etc." (Acts 4:12). "Do not swear by heaven (en to ourano) * * nor by the earth," etc., (en te ge) (Math. 5:35). "But they, measuring themselves by themselves" (en heautois), etc., (2 Cor. 10:12). "I fear lest in some way just as the serpent deceived Eve by his craftiness" (en te panourgia), etc. (2 Cor. 11:3).

Now these examples taken at random from classic and Hellenistic literature abundantly prove the truth of "(a)" that "en" with the dative is used everywhere in Greek as one of the leading ways of expressing the means whereby a thing is done or sought to be done. If, however, any one is not yet wholly convinced of the truth of "(a)," I take this opportunity of saying to him that I will be glad to send him a list of the numerous examples covering this point which I have collected in my reading and which I have at this present moment before me, if he will but let me know that he wants them.

Having now conclusively proven (or at least having indicated my willingness and ability to prove) to everyone with an open mind and also an open eye (this latter is of course very essential), that "en" with the dative is everywhere used in Greek to express the means by which a thing is done, let's turn to some of the places in the New Testament where "baptidzo" is used and see what we find there.

In Math. 3:11 we read that John the Baptist says (mark you he is speaking of his own baptism and he ought to be fully qualified to speak on this subject), when indicating the difference between his baptism and that of Christ's: "I baptize you en hydati," that is, by means of water, "but he will baptize you en pneumatii hagio kai puri," that is, by means of the Holy Ghost and fire.

In John 1:26, where the people ask the Baptist (mark you it is the latter again who is to speak) why he baptizes at all if he is not the Christ, he replies: "I baptize en hydati," by means of water. And again in verse 26, he says: "I come baptizing en hydati," by means of water.

In Luke 3:15 he uses under the same circumstances the parallel construction of the simple dative without "en," "I baptize hydati (by means of water); but a stronger than I is coming—he will baptize you en pneumatii hagio kai puri"—with the Holy Ghost and with fire. In the last clause he returns to his more usual "en" with the dative.

In Acts 1:5 Jesus says in speaking of John's baptism: "John baptized you hydati (by means of water), but you shall be baptized en pneumatii hagio (by means of the Holy Ghost)."

Peter likewise (Acts 11:16), in making his defense before the brethren for his baptism of Cornelius, says of John's baptism: "John baptized hydati, by means of water."

In all these passages and in countless others this is the construction with "baptidzo," "en," with the dative (or the simple dative) expressing the means, that is, with water, by which baptism was performed. There is not, there can not be, any reference whatsoever to the place where or the element into which baptism was effected. If such a relation were desired to be expressed (as for example, dipping or immersing into water), the Greek would have used, according to "(b)" above "eis" with the accusative case. This construction is, however, rarely used. The vast preponderance of examples show "en" with the dative or the simple dative.

"Eis" with the accusative, however, does occur. In Mark 1:9 we read that Jesus was baptized "eis Iordanen"—into the Jordan. We likewise read in Mark 1:10 that as Jesus was coming "ek tou hydatos"—up out of the water—he saw the heavens open. According to "(d)" above this means that he was in the water and that he came up out of it. Verses 9 and 10 of Mark 1 furnish, therefore, a perfect proof of all the Baptists claim. But let them not rejoice too soon. For Math. 3:16, describing exactly the same occurrence, says: "And Jesus went forthwith ("euthus"—"immediately" and not, as some of our friends often claim, "in a straight way") "apo tou hydatos." This means, according to "(c)" above, away from (near), not out of the water. According to Mark therefore Jesus was dipped into

MY GRANDPA.

My grandpa says that he was once
A little boy like me.
I s'pose he was, and yet it does Seem queer to think that he Could ever get my jacket on,
Or shoes, or like to play
With games and toys and race with Duke,
As I do every day.

He's come to visit us, you see,
Nurse says I must be good
And mind my manners, as a child
With such a grandpa should,
For grandpa's very straight and tall
And very dignified;
He knows most all there is to know
And other things beside.

So, though my grandpa knows so much,
I thought that maybe boys
Were things he hadn't studied—
They make such an awful noise.
But at our dinner, when I begged
Another piece of pie,
I thought I saw a twinkle
In the corner of his eye.

So yesterday, when they went out,
And left us two alone,
I was not very much surprised
To find how nice he'd grown.
You should have seen us romp and run;
My! now I almost see
That p'raps he was, long, long ago
A little boy like me.

GIVING LIBERTY OF CONSCIENCE.

A little son of a Baptist minister was one morning in church when he saw for the first time the rite of baptism by immersion. He was greatly interested in it, and the next morning proceeded to baptize his three cats—in the bath tub.

The kitten bore it very well, and so did the young cat, but the old family cat rebelled. It struggled with him, clawed and tore him, and got away.

With considerable effort he caught it again and proceeded with the ceremony. But she acted worse than ever, clawed at him, spit, and scratched his face and hands. Finally he threw her on the floor in disgust, and said: "Well, be a Methodist if you want to!"—Lippincott's.

THE GINGER-CAKE MAN.

"Mollie," called her mamma from the kitchen door.

"Yes'm," answered Mollie from behind the wood-pile, where she was building bark huts for her dolls.

"Come here, dear."

This time Mollie did not answer her mother; but she said, setting her largest doll, Miss Cynthia Bly, down so hard on a bark bench that she fell over backwards, "I expect, if folk's mothers were little girls, they wouldn't like to be 'coming here' all the time." But Cynthia, who must have been shocked into silence by this very naughty speech, made no reply; and Mollie picked her up and seated her more gently, so that this time she was able to keep her balance.

Presently the call sounded again.

"Mollie, I want you."

"In a minute, mamma," said Mollie, fretfully.

Mollie built up the side walls of another hut, put on the roof, placed her timest doll, little Peg, inside, and then, rising slowly, walked toward the house dragging one foot after the other.

Mamma was not in the kitchen, so Mollie went on to the sitting-room, and there she found her sewing by the window.

She did not look up as Mollie entered, or take any notice of her whatever as she came and stood beside her chair.

"What do you want, mamma?" she asked finally, in rather a low voice.

"Nothing, Mollie," she answered, without looking at her.

"But you called me, mamma, and said that you wanted me."

"And so I did, ten or fifteen minutes ago; but I do not want you now."

Now, though Mollie had not cared what her mother wanted her for when she called her, she immediately became very curious, and so she said:

"Would you mind telling me what you wanted me for, mamma?"

"No," answered her mother, looking up at her this time. "I wanted to give you a ginger-cake man that I baked for you."

"Oh!" cried Mollie, her eyes shining, for dearly she loved ginger-cake men. It was such fun to play with them and then eat them up.

"May I have him, please, mamma?"

"No, Mollie," answered her mother, "I called you twice; and then I gave him to little Jack, who came with some parcels from the store."

"O mamma!" and, with a wail of anguish, Mollie flung herself on the floor, with her head in her mother's lap. "O mamma! mamma, why didn't you tell me? I do so love a ginger-cake man!"

"Yes," said mamma, sadly, "I know you do, and that is the reason I made him for you. I did not tell you what I wanted you for because it is right to obey instantly, and not for the sake of the ginger-cake man."

Her mother lifted Mollie into her lap, and smoothed the golden curls tenderly.

"Cynthia," said Mollie an hour later, when she had gone back to her play behind the wood-pile—and even then there was the sound of tears in her voice—"O Cynthia! if I had minded mamma when she called, there might have been just the loveliest ginger-cake man leaning up against your bark bench that you ever saw!"—Tennessee Methodist.

BAPTIDZO IN THE NEW TESTAMENT.

the water and came up out of it; while according to Matthew he was not in the water at all but only near it when he was baptized.

It is perfectly useless, I infer, to continue quoting examples. The phenomena noted above occur everywhere in the Greek text of the New Testament. The vast majority of cases where "baptidzo occurs show a dative of means whereby baptism was performed. The relative position of the subject to be baptized and the means of baptism, that is, the water, does not enter into the Greek text at all. Now and then, however, an example can be found (the proportion is about one to every forty cases) when the Greek text wholly sustains those who claim immersion. But a proof based upon one example in favor of it to forty against it is hardly any proof at all.

In conclusion, may we not merely repeat, and let it go at that, the proposition which we set before us in the beginning to discuss? We said then, and we again declare, that the New Testament offers little, if any, philological grounds for the doctrine of baptism by immersion; such evidence as there is is rather in favor of some other mode; what that mode was, is philologically indeterminate.

And if we turn from the textual to the probable evidence we find the same thing. The circumstances under which some were baptized, as for example, the Eunuch, make immersion possible; those under which others were baptized, as for example, Saul, make some other mode almost a necessity. How, therefore, can we dogmatize in the face of such conflicting probability?

SUNDAY SCHOOL FIELD WORKERS' CONFERENCE, HOT SPRINGS, ARK.

By Miss Elizabeth Kilpatrick.

The Field Workers' Conference at Hot Springs, Ark., Feb. 15 to 19, marked another milestone in Sunday school progress. Dr. E. B. Chapell, our great Sunday school leader and editor, presided over the deliberations, and by his eloquent addresses and skilled leadership directed the meeting along progressive and forward-looking lines. Dr. Chapell's new book on this great subject will be eagerly welcomed by the hosts of his Sunday school constituency. The Conference was unusually favored by the presence and counsel of Bishop James Atkins, who for so many years filled so successfully the chair of Sunday School Editor.

Bishop Atkins called the Sunday school "the vanguard of the Lord of Hosts," and emphasized the keynote of the Conference—trained leaders, efficiency in work, a broader vision and well-made and thoughtful plans for church-wide Sunday school progress and organization. Dr. Charles D. Bulla, our fine A. B. Class leader, made interesting speeches and was at his best assisting in all lines of the great work. Dr. Beatty lent his years of experience and deep interest to the all-important subject. Mr. E. E. French made some illuminating statements about the Sunday school leaflets and publications. It is always a great pleasure and profit to meet this body of men who are the power behind the throne in Nashville. The Conference caught an all-too-passing glimpse of Dr. Monk, who came in for a morning half-hour.

All phases of the work were discussed. Twenty-eight Conferences were represented; Rev. J. W. Workman, of Little Rock, made an ideal secretary.

To make a pen picture of all these Sunday school leaders of our great and growing Church would be a work of pleasure, but space forbids. Their one effort was that the work should go on, that rural and city problems should receive specific attention, and that the goal for every year should broaden and deepen.

One afternoon was spent in suggestive General Conference legislation, with this result: The Committee on Sunday school legislation, appointed two years ago, submitted a carefully prepared report, outlining proposed General Conference legislation. With clear vision and striking unanimity, the official leaders in the Sunday school work of our several Annual Conferences registered their convictions relative to Sunday school enlargement. Among the more important provisions of the report are: (1) a large and representative General Sunday School Board; (2) an adequate corps of Field Secretaries; and (3) a fund sufficient for the support of this greater work.

Some of the statistics presented were full of interest and enlightenment. With a full number of Field Secretaries under the General Sunday School Board, the Northern Methodist Church has had a gain of 400,000 Sunday school pupils within the year. The South Carolina Conference of our Church, under a broad and liberal, as well as a co-operating, plan gained 15,000; Florida, 20,000, and North Carolina between 20,000 and 30,000. This fully indicates the great possibilities ahead in the Sunday school work.
